3 1430 02937386 9
a31430029373869b
UNIV. OF MD. COLLEGE PARK
LSC
3.33.17.1

U. OF MID. LIBRARY

173 141

JANUARY MAGAZINE NUMBER

The Union Signal.

Vol. XXIX. No. 1.

Chicago, Jan. 1, 1903.

MCK
HV
5285
.O71
vol. 29
folio

ISSUED WEEKLY
PRICE $1.50 PER YEAR, IN ADVANCE.

1767985

Would You Like to Attend The National Convention?

We have a plan whereby you may obtain a round trip ticket without an outlay of one cent, provided you are willing to work and secure new subscribers to The UNION SIGNAL. You will be greatly interested in our proposition, and we will be glad to communicate with you, giving full details of our plans. The work should begin at once.

Circulation Department, UNION SIGNAL
184 La Salle Street, CHICAGO

SENT ON 3 DAYS' TRIAL

TWO-THIRDS ACTUAL SIZE.

FREE!

THE CO-RO-NA MEDICATOR

Cures Catarrh

Head-Colds, Pains and Roaring in the Head, Partial Deafness, Sore Throat, HEADACHE, La Grippe, and all Diseases of the air passages by inhalation. The most perfect appliance ever offered.

SPECIAL OFFER.

For a short time I will mail to any reader naming this paper, one of my new improved CO-RO-NA MEDICATORS, charged with medicines for a quick home cure on 3 days' trial FREE. If it gives perfect satisfaction, send me $1.00, (half price), if not, return it at the expired time, which will cost you only 3 cts. postage. Could any proposition be fairer?

E. J. WORST,
101 Elmore Block, ASHLAND, OHIO.
AGENTS WANTED.

Special Announcement.

We have the very great pleasure to announce that we have secured for immediate publication that most unusual literary commodity, a good serial story, that deals in a live and forcible manner with the cigaret habit and its inevitable consequences. The author, Miss Kate Anderson, is a young Canadian writer who has the remarkable gift of creating real characters to live out facts, instead of manufacturing wooden ones upon which to hang morals and statistics. The name of the story is "A FIGHT AGAINST ODDS," and no one can read it without being deeply impressed by the terrible insidiousness of the cigaret curse, the almost hopelessly demoralizing effect upon young boys of the least indulgence in the habit.

The style of writing is simple, natural and dramatic. The interest is well sustained to the logical climax and end. No one will begin this story without following the fortunes of the Kilgour family to the close.

THE Overland Limited THE NORTH-WESTERN LINE

California

Leaves Chicago 8.00 p.m. daily through to San Francisco and Portland. It is the most luxurious train on the American Continent. Private compartment, observation, drawing-room, dining and buffet-library cars, barber, bath, private reading lamps, telephone (for use at terminals). Less than three days en route.

ELECTRIC LIGHTED THROUGHOUT.

Two other fast trains leave Chicago 10 a. m. and 11.30 p.m. daily, with through service to San Francisco, Los Angeles and Portland via the

Chicago & North-Western Union Pacific and Southern Pacific Railways

Write for particulars to
W. B. KNISKERN,
PASSENGER TRAFFIC MANAGER,
CHICAGO.

Extension of Time Limit

For Club Raisers

In response to urgent solicitation the time in which clubs of ten or more subscriptions at the rate of $1.00 per year will be received, is extended to January 31st. This extra month should give ample time for club raisers to complete their clubs. The demand for this club concession has been so general that, owing to the diversion of the holidays, it has seemed best to enable every Union desiring it to send in their members as a club.

This Offer Positively Closes With January

Union Signal
CHICAGO

FOR GOD AND HOME AND EVERY LAND.

The UNION SIGNAL

AND WORLD'S WHITE RIBBON

NATIONAL and WORLD'S WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION

Entered at Chicago Postoffice as Second-class Matter.

"Thou hast given a banner to them that fear thee: that it may be displayed because of the truth."

Vol. XXIX.—No. 1. Issued Weekly. | CHICAGO, JANUARY 1, 1903. | Price, $1.50 Per Year in Advance.

Notice.

THE UNION SIGNAL for one year to a club of ten, $10. This offer is extended to January 31, 1903.

Convention Number, Union Signal, 24 pages, 5 cts. a copy.

Contents of This Number.

CURRENT TEMPERANCE NEWS 4

CONTRIBUTED:
The Apollos Union. What Redeemed Men are Doing to Help Others. By Jane A. Stewart 5
Food Economics. By Louise C. Purington, M. D.—Mrs. Fields' Work in Mexico. By Mrs. Kate Waller Barrett.. 6
New Year's Drinking Customs in Scotland. By Amelia Johnston—Mrs. Luella F. McWhirter. By Katie Wert-Holler—A Raveling. By Fannie B. Damon..... 7
The Patent Medicine Enemy. By Martha M. Allen — The Canteen from the Soldier's Standpoint..... 8
"In Old Virginny." By Elizabeth P. Gordon — The Hour-Hand and the Minute-Hand in the Reformer's New Year. By Rev. Wilbur F. Crafts, Ph. D..... 9
Under the White Ribbon By Mary Henry-Rossiter..... 10
The Bells of San Gabriel. By Julia Mills Dunn..... 11

THE LOCAL UNION:
Demonstration Night, October 20, 1902—Parliamentary Difficulties. Answered by Mrs. A. S. Benjamin..... 12

CHILDREN'S COZY CORNER:
The Old Year's Farewell. By Julia F. Deane — A Happy New Year —"Du Bist Wie Eine Blume."— The Firm of Grumble Brothers — Puzzlers' Packet..... 13

EDITORIAL:
A Factor Worth Considering—The Latest Thing in Philanthropy — The Abstemiousness of the Wine Expert — A Compromise with Evil—Monthly Bible Reading. Topic: Prayer. By Rev. Frances E. Townsley 14, 15

EVANGELISTIC ECHOES 15
OFFICIAL COMMUNICATIONS..... 16
NEWS FROM THE FIELD 17, 18
NUTSHELL NEWS 18
HINTS ON HOME NURSING..... 19
AMONG THE NEW BOOKS..... 20
PRACTICAL TALKS WITH HOUSEKEEPERS 21
THE FALL OF THE GREAT INDUSTRIAL STATES IN THE SCALE OF THE STATES 22
THE OPTIMISTS' CLUB 22
SIGNAL NOTES..... 23

Red-Letter Days.

MOTHERS' DAY, JANUARY 3.

BIRTHDAY OF MADAM WILLARD.

News of the Week.

Discovery of race of negro Jews in Australia announced by Sidney Klein in "Jewish Chronicle" of London.

Mrs. U. S. Grant's will, filed for probate, disposes of an estate worth about $250,000. It is left in equal shares to her four children. General F. D. Grant is named as executor.

Acting Governor Northcott, of Illinois, instructs Sheriff Barrett, of Cook county, to see that law regarding prize fights is enforced. Blow aimed at Chicago Athletic Club exhibitions.

United Mine Workers' Journal says miners expect an advance in wages during the present year, and intimates that the question will be brought up at the national convention at Indianapolis Jan. 19.

Dr. D. K. Pearsons, of Chicago, makes New Year's gifts of $175,000 each to Illinois college, Jacksonville; Fargo college, North Dakota; West Virginia seminary, Buchanan; and Fairmount college, Wichita, Kas.

Attorney General Hamlin, of Illinois, announces that he will make rigid inquiry into causes of coal famine in Chicago. Railroad companies charged with keeping loaded cars on outskirts of city to force raise in prices.

Deaths of noted people: The Most Rev. Frederick Temple, Archbishop of Canterbury and primate of England, December 24, aged eighty-two years. Mrs. Jessie Benton Fremont, of California, widow of Gen. John C. Fremont, the famous "Pathfinder," December 21. Mrs. Mary Hartwell Catherwood, of Chicago, noted novelist, December 26.

Allied powers practically agree to accept The Hague tribunal for arbitration of Venezuelan dispute. Blockade will be continued during arbitration, according to special arrangement between Italy, Germany, and Great Britain; Washington officials will try to have order rescinded because of bad effect on trade. German demands modified; guarantee that claims will be paid, instead of immediate settlement, now declared sufficient.

The Human Family Coming Together. The Hague Court of Arbitration has already a vast amount of work on its hands. No fewer than sixteen cases are now before it, and its course is found to be by no means all plain sailing. Not the least of the difficulties this tribunal is meeting with is that of language. Its sessions in the "Pious Fund" case were, it seems, modern reproductions of the confusion of tongues. "Never," says a Paris paper, "was more clearly shown the need of a uniform language. The multiplicity of tongues was not the outcome of any principle, but resulted merely from the fact that judges, advocates and the representatives of the several governments had no common language." It is evident that this judicial and the sure-to-come legislative court of the world are destined to draw the human race still closer together through the bond of international court language.

The Drink and the Bite. "The free lunch," it is sometimes said, "is the redeeming feature of the saloon." Hear what Mrs. Chauncey Depew says about it: "The free lunch is largely responsible for the enslavement of young men to drink. As sure as a man eats a free lunch, just so sure will he be a drinking man, unless he is possessed of rare self-control. A man takes a drink and a bite. The bite makes him thirsty and the drink makes him hungry, and many a man who would leave a saloon after having imbibed one drink, will stick all day as long as the free lunch is there. It isn't the drink that keeps him, but the ingenious make-up of the free lunch, and that's why I say it's a blotch on civilization and should be wiped out." We don't believe in the free lunch business, either, but we would wipe it out by wiping out the saloon business. It is the drink, not the bite, that is a blotch upon civilization, and the same power that can enforce the prohibition of the one can enforce the prohibition of the other.

Law an Expression of Love. "You can't legislate morality into people; love, and not force, must save the world from the fearful curse of intemperance." Thus a ministerial friend, whose grievance against the W. C. T. U. is that they want the ballot. Now, we white-ribboners know—as do all who have realized the deeper truths of religion and of science—that Love IS force; that it is the "greatest thing in the world," the supreme vitalizing, sustaining energy of the universe. "God fufils Himself in many ways;" love works in many directions, uses many weapons, and the ballot in these latter days is one of the most potent and practical agencies for the advancement of the Kingdom of Heaven upon earth. While the ballot cannot be called exactly a spiritual weapon, still it is a much less carnal weapon than the sword. And, as once, in the more primitive stages of human existence, the sword was the symbol of progress, so in this more advanced but still transitional era, the ballot is the lever which moves the world. In the age of brute force, it is the sword; in the age of brain force (which recognizes the equality of the sexes), the ballot. And law-legislation is one aspect of that love which would save men from themselves, would make it as easy as possible to do right and as hard as possible to do wrong, would be their schoolmaster.

American Nations to the Front. The Pan-American Sanitary Conference recently held in Washington, D. C., is a cheering sign of the times. The next meeting of such conference is to be in Chili, March, 1905. The world is getting on.

Requirements of Modern Warfare. No less an authority than Benjamin Ward Richardson advised athletes to abstain from alcohol, because, he said, "it will undermine all the qualities on which you depend for success, will injure your precision, your decision, your presence of mind and your endurance." No one will dispute the statement that of all men the soldiers, officers and privates of the United States army, need these qualities, and need them to the fullest extent. Says President Roosevelt in his message to Congress: "In the circumstances of modern warfare the man must act far more on his own individual responsibility than ever before, and the high efficiency of the unit is of the utmost importance. Every effort must be made to develop every workmanlike and soldierly quality in both the officers and the enlisted men." Taking this last sentence as our first premise, and Dr. Richardson's statement as our second, it follows logically and common-sensibly that all officers and all enlisted men to be efficient as such must be total abstainers. If the administrators of this government really want the highest workmanlike and soldierly qualities they will—for they can—banish alcohol in every form, not only from the military posts, but from the territory adjacent to them.

Arbitration of the Venezuelan Difficulty. As the result of negotiations conducted by the United States, the Venezuelan controversy will be referred to The Hague tribunal. The allied powers and Venezuela have so agreed, provided an amicable understanding as to preliminaries can be reached. While the trial of the case before the Hague court will doubtless consume more time than arbitration by the President would have done, this course commends itself to the popular mind as the best and wisest way of settling the difficulty. In the first place international differences should be adjusted by an international court, and the Hague court is established for just such purpose. In the second place, arbitration by the President would be construed by the powers to mean an indirect guarantee of the payment of the sum awarded—a situation which might give rise to unpleasant complications. An encouraging feature of the Venezuelan question is the fact that both sides of the controversy stand squarely for the principle of arbitration. Condemn as we may (and must) the action of two great nations in pouncing upon a little one when it is down and rent with internal dissensions and virtually bankrupt—we can but admire the attitude of these same two nations who, with powerful forces on land and sea to back their claims, are not saying, "We have nothing to arbitrate. We are collecting our just debts and it is nobody's business but our's. Hands off!" On the contrary, they are declaring themselves willing to abide by the decision of the arbitrator, be it the President of the United States or the Hague Court, provided the other side will do the same. This is an instance of "civilized warfare." The result of the Venezuelan dispute and its settlement is bound to strengthen the cause of international arbitration and of universal peace.

Current Temperance News.

Texas Jottings.

(Special Correspondence.)

Fort Worth, Texas, Dec. 27.—A prohibition election held in King county, December 9, in Precinct No. 1, went dry with a large majority.

At a meeting of the city council in Denton recently the city marshal sent in a letter stating that since prohibition had gone into effect the fees in his office had amounted to nothing. He requested that body to make some provision for his salary. The Denton "Monitor" says, "this means that nobody is getting drunk, shooting in the town, and doing all sorts of mischief."

A call is expected to be made on the legislature to enact a law enabling the people to vote in congressional districts. This law will apply to Dallas and Fort Worth and stop them from shipping liquors to prohibition districts.

The courageous mayor of a local option city in Texas arrested his own brother for a violation of the local option law. He loaned some whisky to a sick person, and when it was paid back the law against "barter" was broken, and this truly brave mayor had the brother arrested. Let justice be done if the sky fall. A few more such mayors as this and prohibition will certainly prohibit.

Dallas saloons are now closed every Sunday. The chief of police told the patrolmen if they could not keep them closed, there are men who can and will. The present force has discovered that they can enforce the law.

Carson county has just gone dry by a majority of forty-two.

Senator Davidson, of Cuero, the author of the poll tax amendment to the Texas constitution, recently adopted, has discovered a flaw in the bill. He has found that additional legislation is necessary to put the law into operation. He considers it in good shape with this exception. If a voter's ballot is challenged and he says he has paid his poll tax in another county, but cannot produce a receipt, in order to ascertain this fact the authorities will have to investigate the records of every county in the state to discover in which county it has been paid. This is the only way to convict the illegal voter. The way it now stands the voter does not have to say in which county he paid it. To remedy this defect Senator Davidson has another bill to present to the legislature, which convenes in January, which will seek to make it a prima facie case against the voter if he cannot produce his poll tax receipt, and the records disclose that he has not paid the tax in the county in which he voted. The burden of proof will be for such voter to show in which county he has paid the tax.

Precinct No. 5 in Hardin county held an election, which resulted in 211 votes for and thirty against local option.

On December 13th the school district including Goldthwaite, in the midst of much excitement, held an election, and the prohibitionists carried with a majority of twelve votes.

The local option election in Denville resulted as follows: For prohibition, sixty-five; against, twenty-two; majority, forty-three.

There are two kinds of people in Denton. One class says "the town is dead." To these it is. Their seven saloons are closed up, and there are no drunks, no fights and all is peaceful and quiet, save the sounds of the hammer and saw, and the voices of little children, and the congratulations of friends and the prophecies of what the future will bring of prosperity and peace. Denton has men in office, not tailor-made men, but men whom God has made, men who can and do enforce the laws.

Never in the history of Texas since the day Henry Stevenson stood beneath the old oak tree in Nacogdoches and preached the first Protestant sermon has the church of Christ presented so courageous and united a front, and marched so solidly against her worst enemy, the liquor traffic, as she does to-day. At every conference, association, synod, all kinds of church meetings, prohibition comes up and resolutions are passed against whisky in all its horrid forms.

Major F. C. Vincent, of Chicago, while visiting Fort Worth a few days ago, in the interests of the National Retail Druggists' Association, with headquarters in Chicago and branch offices in every state and in Canada, said that this association had practically made the vending of alcohol, opium and cocaine and other stimulants a thing of the past. A grand banquet was tendered this gentleman, and looking over the menu we failed to see a single kind of wine served.

At a Baptist Association meeting recently held in Nacogdoches the committee on temperance reported that the church withdrew fellowship from all its members who were social dram drinkers, and that pastors of the Baptist church preach oftener on the subject. The association pledged itself to support the cause of prohibition.

Mrs. Maude Hardwicke, W. C. T. U. press superintendent, says in the "Texas Sun": "The druggists of the state are besieging State Revenue Agent J. D. Cunningham with inquiries as to whether they will be compelled to pay a liquor tax on medicated bitters capable of producing intoxication. Judge Bell says, that if this particular medicine, or any similar product, is capable of producing intoxication, the selling of it is subject to the occupation tax imposed by the statute. In a second letter to Mr. Cunningham on the same subject, Judge Bell, referring to the assertion of the former, that a certain patent medicine is an intoxicant, says: "These are matters concerning which I had no information until I had received your communication, but since it is as you state, there can be no possible question but that any person who sells the commodity in the state of Texas is liable for the occupation tax imposed on the sale of liquors capable of producing intoxication; and there can, of course, be no question but that it is the duty of the officers to enforce the law which imposes such a tax."

Austin city council has ordered the saloons to remove all slot machines.

Those who attended the Fort Worth National Convention last year will be glad to hear that there is one little corner "dry." Riverside held an election and forty-one votes were cast, forty for prohibition, one against. The war on the liquor traffic in our city will be long and fierce.

All persons traveling on the Cotton Belt Railroad from Forth Worth to Texarkana, a distance of 215 miles, must take their whisky with them or do without, as not a drop can be bought. All the intermediate towns and precincts are local option.

In Montague county the officers have recently destroyed a moonshiner's outfit.

The line between the liquor men and the prohibitionists is being drawn tighter each day. The churches are taking tremendous strides and even the most skeptical begin to see the morning light of sobriety breaking upon Texas. The trains are crowded with home-seekers, and over a million acres of land in Texas and Louisiana have been sold in the last few weeks. Applications for dates are being received for W. C. T. U. workers to lecture, but these must be indorsed by state or National. It is a difficult matter to keep up with counties and precincts voting local option.

Victory in Mississippi.

(Special Correspondence.)

Fayette, Miss., Dec. 29.—Somebody has said: "A Browning notion of victory often means just keeping eternally at it, and realizing that surrender is the only defeat."

The above being true, Mississippi, "hot on the trail" again, should be in most joyous flush of conquest just now. The annual convention met October 9-12, at Oxford, where the State University is located. It was a significant session. Crowds always awaited the speakers. Mrs. Helen M. Stoddard, of Texas, charmed and led her audiences; Mrs. Mary Jewett Telford made one of the finest addresses ever heard on a W. C. T. U. platform; B. G. Lowrey, the noted president of the great college at Blue Mountain, gave a memorable and vividly practical address on "The Saloon, the Citizen and the State;" Miss Russell, state organizer, with equal distinction, filled an evening. On Sunday morning Rev. Walter G. Harbin's annual sermon, "The Vision of Christianity," far more than justified the faith of the state in this young "New Century Knight's" devotion to truth, his power of vision and rare eloquence of utterance. The faculty of the University were nearly unanimous in sympathy for our cause and were each one at some time heard on our platform. Miss Charlie Garner, state L. T. L. secretary, held a children's rally on Sunday afternoon and organized a Loyal Temperance Legion of seventy members. A large union and a Y were also formed at Oxford as a result of the convention. Immediately after Miss Russell organized five other unions roundabout.

Four other women's organizations were in fraternal representation—Mississippi Federation of Clubs, King's Daughters, Methodist Missionary Societies and Old Ladies' Home Association—in conference for concert of action respecting a bill against child labor to be submitted to the next legislature.

One afternoon was devoted to a conference of prohibitionists from all over the state, touching the conduct of a campaign, during the coming year, for a state prohibitory law. Many letters of advice and sympathy were read from influential men who could not attend.

A state prohibition committee was formed, with the president of the Mississippi W. C. T. U. as chairman, whose immediate duty should be to prepare and issue a call for a mass meeting of prohibitionists during the early year, at Jackson. This call has been made for February 17th. Its publication in the New Orleans and state papers caused a mighty stir. In the main the press has treated the fact seriously, and concedes that the issue is upon us; and candidates on the state ticket recognize the necessity of declaring themselves for or against.

The annual conferences, representing 85,000,000 white Methodists, have just adjourned, both declaring in favor of state prohibition, which makes the Christian sentiment of the state pratically unanimous, the Baptists and others having already put themselves on record. The fight now will be as to method, to reconcile the opposing camps of prohibition as to statutory or constitutional mode of routing the liquor traffic. "Life's business being just the terrible choice," it is easy to foresee this will not be a minor struggle. So let me end as I began—with a little of the "Browning tonic:"

"When the fight begins within himself
A man's worth something."

May it so prove with our prohibition host!

Fight for Local Option.

Dover, Del., Dec. 19.—The new State Temperance Alliance, formed yesterday upon the adjournment of the State Local Option Convention, has already begun its work. President Vaughan S. Collins will order thousands of petitions for ministers and Christian workers in every voting precinct of the state and to be circulated among the residents, one petition being for the names of voters only, the other for all non-voters, including women and younger men. These are to be presented to the members of the General Assembly from the respective voting districts on the first day of the legislature's session and on every subsequent day until the constitutional provision giving to each district of the four named—Wilmington, city, rural New Castle county, Kent county and Sussex county—has been complied with.

Governor Hunn favors the local option movement and may do some effective work for it when the new temperance alliance gets it as far as the state house doors. The governor, when asked for his views today, said: "I cannot see how any accredited representative of the people can afford to refuse and stand out against referring a question to popular vote. After all, the people are the state, whom we represent, and whom we must not misrepresent."

Pledge Signing in Canada.

Toronto, Ontario, Dec. 22.—A pledge-signing campaign was inaugurated at Sunday afternoon's meeting of the Canadian Temperance League. Scores of young men proceeded from all parts of Massey Hall to the tables and signed their names to the league's total abstinence pledge. The president, J. S. Robertson, announced that a movement would be commenced preparatory to the social season that surrounds Christmas and New Year's and the coming of the closing of the bars.

The speaker of the day was Rev. F. H. Jacobs, of New York. Mr. Jacobs a few years ago succeeded Rev. Ira D. Sankey as chief gospel singer in the great Moody meetings in Northfield, but is at present superintendent of the famous Fulton street noonday prayer meeting in New York. His earnest address appealed to all, and there has been no gospel singer on the Massey Hall platform who has sung with such wonderful effect as he did yesterday.

Barrooms Must Close.

Augusta, Me., Dec. 22.—City Marshal Henry M. Breed, of Augusta, to-day notified all the alleged liquor dealers to immediately quit business. In the mandate, which emanates from police headquarters, no distinction is made between the first-class hotels and restaurants, leading drug stores and common barrooms. Although in the past in other cities in the state notification has been given the alleged dealers, this is the first instance of the kind in Augusta. There are thirty-seven places in the city holding United States licenses, which is prima facie evidence that the persons are engaged in the liquor business, although several hold only malt liquor licenses. Many of the dealers say that they will quit the business, while others state that they will dispense only beer below the requisite two per cent of alcohol, which is under the bane of the law.

Temperance Volunteers Active.

Three Rivers, Mich., Dec. 18.—The "Temperance Volunteers," recently organized here, have issued a statement of their aims. The constitution provides that a list of the names of all persons ten years of age and over shall be kept in each ward in cities, and in every township in counties, and that the society shall endeavor to induce them to become total abstainers. Schools, societies, trades, business houses and different nationalities shall be canvassed with the purpose of making them "Solid for Total Abstinence."

Want Prohibition Clause.

Guthrie, Okla., Dec. 20.—An organization has been formed for the purpose of devising methods and plans to secure a prohibition clause in the forthcoming Constitution of the State of Oklahoma.

The Prohibitionists are arranging to make a desperate fight on this question. In the recent election their nominee for Delegate to Congress polled 1,000 votes. They are enlisting the aid of the woman's clubs and all church and charitable organizations throughout the territory.

Whole Township Goes Dry.

Stroudsburg, Pa., Dec. 16.—The church-going people of Tunkhannock township have won a victory in that Reuben Keiper cannot have the liquor license originally granted him, the Superior Court having just reversed the lower decision. Tunkhannock township is now dry.

"Drys" Win at Mt. Olivet.

Mt. Olivet, Ky., Dec. 17.—In the local option election the "drys" polled seventy votes and the "wets" fifty votes, the "drys" carrying the day by twenty majority.

The Apollos Union.

WHAT REDEEMED MEN ARE DOING TO HELP OTHERS.

By Jane A. Stewart.

"Help your fallen brother rise
While the days are going by."

THE words of the familiar hymn, sung in loud stentorian tones, came clearly through the open doors as I entered the comfortable, homely structure of the Sunday Breakfast Association in the congested center of busy Philadelphia. It was Monday, the evening set apart for the meeting of the Apollos Union. The singers were mostly men, who were gathered in a spacious room approached directly from the street.

The visitor is at once impressed by the pleasant atmosphere of the place, its cleanliness and attractiveness, although the furnishings are of the simplest and plainest kind. Bright gas jets cast their radiance through the room and a dozen or more illuminated Scripture texts hang on the walls, cheering the eyes with such inspiring words as these: "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ and Thou Shalt be Saved"; "Looking Unto Jesus, the Author and Finisher of our Faith"; "Father, I have sinned against Heaven and before Thee."

A rather rough-looking man with a hearty bass voice stood in the rear of the room and performed the double duty of leading the singing and showing the men to their seats. A modest young Christian Endeavorer presided at the organ, which was placed on a platform near the leader's desk.

The first hymn was followed by others, evidently equal favorites:—"Rescue the Perishing," "I Need Thee Every Hour," "Jesus, Lover of My Soul," "There Comes to My Heart One Sweet Strain." During the singing there were constant arrivals of men, young and old, who were roughly and poorly clad, with faces that bore the indelible marks of dissipation. Yet all were clean, most of them had an air of self-respect and they were attentive and serious in demeanor. Here was a white-haired man, scarcely able to walk, and just behind him sat a young man, fresh-faced, with tense, drawn lips.

"These are the men," said one of the leaders to me, indicating the center section, "who have stood up in our public Sunday evening meetings, have asked for prayers, and are really seeking a changed life. Over there," indicating a group of a dozen or more respectable, well-dressed men, "are the redeemed men who have found God. I am one of them, too," he added. "God only knows how happy I am."

"The Apollos Union," he went on to say in answer to my query, "is an organization for mutual encouragement, formed among the redeemed men of the Sunday Breakfast Association, and it holds its meetings every Monday night. We have from five hundred to six hundred members, but they are now scattered and settled all over the land. Most of them are leading honest, useful lives. We often have as many as sixty at our meetings and there is great help and encouragement to keep right on in this blessed communion with Christ and exchange of spiritual experience which we enjoy here."

The voice of a redeemed man was heard in prayer: "We thank Thee that Thou wilt give us peace and that Thy love reachest out after us when we are erring. O, how great that love! Thou alone knowest how we are tempted. May Thy great love keep us from drifting. Anchor our souls in the haven of rest. Raise us up, we pray Thee, from the mire and clay and place our feet upon the rock of Thy salvation."

The Scripture lesson was the eleventh chapter of John. The joy of loving Jesus and of His loving friendship was earnestly dwelt upon. How keenly the speaker felt in his own heart's experience the truth of his message! "When drifting down the stream of destruction what a glad thing to have a friend like Jesus." How the listeners seemed to hang upon every word of hope, with eager, hungry eyes, pleading for a revelation and a realizing sense of the personal, saving power of the promise. "No matter how bad Satan breaks the face into a thousand pieces, yet God's image is on each one," he hopefully said, as he emphasized the indwelling power of God which had changed the whole course of his own erring life and set him free from the slavery of sin.

"There's a hand held out to you,
There's a hand held out to me,
There's a hand that will prove true,
Whatever our lot shall be,"

was sung fervently, suggesting the thought of the hundreds rescued here every year by "the hand held out" in this quiet, consecrated place. The sin-sick, discouraged souls, saved for eternity, become in turn Christian workers and leaders of the greatest power. In joy at their release, they devote themselves to directing others towards salvation. Going from individual to individual, the life history of the wanderers is often learned, with the cause of their present condition and the remedy applied for their restoration. As they pass along, these redeemed men speak kind words to their fallen brothers. They are heard in the Christian Endeavor meeting and the prayer meeting in earnest supplication for others and thankfulness to God for their redemption, or in testimonies and talks, making urgent and pathetic appeals to those in their presence to lead a new and righteous life. It is not easy, undoubtedly, for all to do this. But to help some one else to better living, they efface all thoughts of selfish reluctance. There is no lack of evidence that by their testimonies and the inspiration of their example, many others have been rescued and saved.

"I have found here all that makes life worth living," said one at a recent meeting. "Only sixteen months ago I knew what it was to want to drink,—the terrible craving. How many times I tried! But I couldn't stop,—neither can you—but Jesus Christ can take it all away."

The testimonies came thick and fast.

"About three weeks ago I was as low as a man could get through drinking. Now I have a good position; have only worked a week and have had my salary increased. I ask an interest in your prayers that I may be kept faithful."

"About a fortnight ago, I fell from grace for four days. They were the most miserable of my life. I couldn't rest till I made it right with my Saviour. Pray for me."

"Every man must obey some power," said a redeemed man of high spiritual and intellectual power, who has become a wonderful evangelizing factor. "No slave in the darkest ages is more miserable than the man who can't say NO to his evil passions. The question is, shall we accept the highest and best or some mean, ignoble power to govern us? The sympathy of the Christian worker went out to me when I came here, a poor, homeless fellow, a criminal in the eyes of the law, but Jesus saved me. How do I know? Because I don't want whisky any more; nor to swear; nor to steal. I pray now to be forgiven for all the ignominy I've cast on the saving grace of God."

Assembly Room of Apollos Union.

The work of the Apollos Union must continue to thrive. It is well planted, earnestly and hopefully watered, and God has given and continues to give the promised increase. Of the successive groups of erring men brought in humble petition before God in its meetings, at least two-thirds are safely won and kept for the Master.

Philadelphia, Pa.

FOOD ECONOMICS.

By Louise C. Purington, M. D.

PART II.

PART First, of Food Economics called out the following letter, which I give entire that the answer may be better understood.

"In The Union Signal, October 3, 1901, is an article by Doctor Purington on 'Food Economics.' It contains this statement: 'As to breads, graham and entire wheat flour are more laxative, the standard white is more digestible and nutritious.' In the first place, I think it is a misprint; in the second place, I don't believe it; in the third place I want to know the absolute scientific truth about the flours, and in the fourth place, it cannot fail to have a bad influence to have one set of our W. C. T. U. workers plead for the use of the whole wheat and another class claim that the white flour is more nourishing. It is on this fourth point that I want to sift the matter and to know the truth.

It is but fair to admit that experts abroad and in this country have been divided on this subject. Within a brief time the London Illustrated News opened its columns to a debate on the question, "White or brown bread, which?" This was the conclusion arrived at: The graham and the whole wheat (sometimes called "purified graham,") act more directly upon the digestive system itself—a laxative influence—while the white is more easily assimilated, its nutrient properties are taken up by the body in larger proportion, and greater nourishment is the result. It is no misnomer to say of white bread, as we always have said, it is the "staff of life"; and the old proverb, "Beware of the man who does not eat bread," is undoubtedly of white-bread origin. "The 'fayre white life' is a primal instinct."

Remember that in this article, as in general on health problems, we have reference to the average normal digestion in the living, acting, working, human being. If the argument as above is wrong, why is it that those who work hardest and who learn by experience the food that serves them best, prefer the white bread? They say, in a great majority, that it "stays by them better." The truth is that a hard-working, actively-exercising person, with a normal digestion, can eat almost anything good for food. The fuel supply for the flame of life must not be in excess.

For sedentary and for idle or lazy people undoubtedly the coarser preparations of flour have a special adaptation.

Even physicians speak of the "brown-bread delusion" and claim that their patients do not thrive so well on a diet containing an excess of whole meal compounds. The coarse bran may be too irritating, may even, in susceptible cases, cause gastritis or some other disease.

Our national government in this country is turning its attention to the question of food. The "Drosius Bill" is a "bill to prevent the adulteration, imitation, and misbranding of foods," and this is a remarkable advance in the annals of legislation. A result has been that a series of investigations have been carried on in this line and, among other things, to ascertain the value in nutrition of coarse-grain preparations, such as whole wheat. As in London, the conclusion reached was such as to contradict the superiority of these preparations in nutritive value.

So great has been the faith of many in whole wheat that there may be those, like the writer of the above letter, who will still say, "I don't believe it." If our friend and others will admit the distinction, it will be clearly understood that a value, a great value, to whole wheat flour is admitted; but it is not the flour which makes the brawn and nerve we work on, and the flesh and blood, also the fuel supply, the flame of which contributes to bring about the processes of nutrition; and all for the simple reason that the one, the brown bread, tends to relieve a torpid digestive system and is valuable in digestion by elimination or excretion, and the other, the white bread, takes more to the physiological process, digestion and assimilation, and thus adds to the strength and power of the body. One conclusion is that the average person may thrive best on both.

The food sceptic may still inquire, "Are not these investigators mistaken?" Perhaps so, but this was the process: Analyses were made, prolonged and thorough, of all kinds of flour—the graham, whole wheat, and the patent, from the first patent to the "red dog" flour, which is the lowest grade. Experiments were made also with human beings by artificial digestion, with samples of bread in a solution of pepsin. The results were exactly the same and as follows: The bread from the best patent flour was best digested, the entire wheat less, and the graham least of all.

Very many would regard Dr. J. H. Kellogg, at the head of Battle Creek Sanitarium, as authority in this matter. In an issue of Good Health magazine, occurs this statement: "White flour made by the best patent process is composed chiefly of the free, white starchy center of the kernel. This is removed and made into the so-called family flour in the patent process; the best flour being composed chiefly of the portion of the grain which lies just beneath the outer covering, which possesses the highest nutritive value of any single portion of the kernel."

Another authority is Professor Snyder, of the University of Minnesota, who says that by our modern process of milling 62 per cent to 70 per cent of the wheat is obtained. "The granular middlings are not lost, as many believe, but are reduced and recovered in the flour. Flour made from hard northwestern spring wheat is characteristically rich in protein and gluten compounds, not all starch, but containing twelve per cent or more of protein or muscle-making materials."

Food has become so much a commercial question in these days that in the exploiting of some varieties very absurd statements are made.

Then follows a menu—a series of them—including several courses, and in each one some preparation of the kind of food necessary to restore the impoverished (for lack of nourishment) American nation. Who has observed that Americans are a "gaunt, ill-fed people"?

Appetite, physiological needs, and common sense clamor for variety in the makeup of this wonderful instrument by which we move, manifest ourselves and have a being.

Nuts for Food.

Nuts are becoming more and more a food staple, and there is no question as to their dietetic value. The almond contains 21 per cent of protein, food for blood and muscle, 55 per cent fat, 17 per cent starch; English walnuts 17 per cent of protein, 6 per cent starch, 66 per cent of fat, and so on. In general, a pound of nuts furnishes about as much nourishment as a pound of wheat flour. These nuts mentioned and the pecans and peanuts, also cocoanuts, are most used, and they enter into many commercial products, such as oil, butter, soap, and flour. It is claimed of peanuts that a quart is equal for nutrition, to a pound of rump steak, the protein matter being 29 per cent, and fat 49 per cent. The chestnut, specially cultivated in France, has many uses for food. Unlike most nuts, it is composed chiefly of water, 50 per cent, and starch, 43 per cent. Filberts are not so much used in this country but are found in great quantities in England, the county of Kent alone producing 100,000 tons per annum. The butternut is specially the American nut and has good possibilities for food.

Convention Menus.

Shall we undertake to write upon this most difficult subject—the convention menu?—that is the question. If we do, it will not be to write down the ham and tongue, pickles, pork and beans—O, no! repetitious as they are, but simply for a few suggestions of nutritive value. In some of these I have the assistance of Mrs. Marvin A. McBride, a specialist in domestic science. Pie and cake, she says, would be all right, more hygienic, anyway, if beef lard were used for the shortening.

The Battle Creek Sanitarium foods are wholesome and nourishing and furnish a variety. Meat is eliminated, but there are good substitutes—nuts, grain preparations, and vegetables, the make-up.

Potatoes, beans, peas and nuts are flesh-creating, hence of special food value. The so-called fresh or green vegetables, such as tomatoes, asparagus, spinach, lettuce, celery, etc., furnish variety, and have healthful properties, also corn, fresh, or as cornmeal, yellow or white.

Breads, white and brown, including rye and oatmeal; cereal preparations, as rice, farina, shredded wheat—all have a vital food mission; and so of fruits of course, stewed and fresh.

Sandwiches with delicate chopped meat, sliced turkey or chicken are good, also with nuts and raisins chopped; yolks of hard-boiled eggs, celery lettuce, cucumbers; English walnuts chopped fine and mixed with cream-cheese and a little chopped celery or watercress; peanut butter; chestnuts or walnuts chopped fine and mixed with salad dressing and left over night, a good filling. If salad dressing is used in the preparation of any of these, lemon is a good substitute for vinegar.

Less substantial sandwiches may be made of sliced marshmallows with pecan nuts and of lady-fingers with marmalade.

Other preparations good for food are maccaroni baked with tomatoes and cheese, breadstick fillet with chicken, beef, or pork, dainty meat cakes, creamed hash on toast, cottage cheese and ground chestnuts, gingerbread and cheese.

For desserts, puddings are healthful: Orange, berry, rhubarb, pineapple, apricot, apple, prune, etc., also shredded wheat biscuit. Battle Creek and other flake preparations may be used with jam, strawberry or raspberry or other fruits. Cream added improves the dish.

The Morale of Diet.

The question of diet is a question of morals, and we are stupid not to think of it in this way. We pray, "Give us this day our daily bread," (unless we are very ungrateful), giving thanks for the supply, and that is all. Only a few study the adaptation of food to the highest mental, moral, and spiritual growth. W. Bramwell Booth, Chief of International Staff of the Salvation Army, pleads thus for a simple, natural diet:

Our eating, the waste and worse than waste from the overplus, and the diseases engendered tend to the undoing of nations. On this ground, I, a man, humbly devoted to the spread of the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ, plead for a reform in favor of a natural diet. It is a moral as well as a national question and has a bearing upon the life to come as well as that which now is; it is to be rightly classed among the greater problems which confront the church of God.

Dorchester, Mass.

Mrs. Fields' Work in Mexico.

By Mrs. Kate Waller Barrett.

AS is well known to most of the readers of The Union Signal, the World's W. C. T. U. sent one of its best workers to organize the W. C. T. U. in Cuba and in Mexico. The selection of the woman for this difficult position shows the astuteness and good judgment of the National Executive. Mrs. Addie Northam Fields, well known throughout the Union for her organizing ability, was selected. At that time Mrs. Fields did not known a word of the Spanish language, but with the spirit of patient courage and untiring energy, she set herself about accomplishing the difficult task of gaining a thorough acquaintance with the Spanish language. At first her work had to be done through an interpreter, but after a few months she had sufficiently mastered the language to be able to address cultivated Mexican audiences in their own languages. Señor Sierra, the Minister of Education, more than once in my presence complimented Mrs. Fields upon her beautiful Spanish.

The manner in which Mrs. Fields has approached the work in Mexico speaks volumes for her ability. She realized immediately that before she could hope to get the ear of the people, it was necessary to gain the support of the government. In order to accomplish this, she visited the governors of the different provinces, laying before them the plan of Scientific Temperance Instruction for the public schools, and receiving their hearty co-operation and interest. The superintendents, teachers, and pupils, as well as their families, were all delighted with the manner in which the instruction was given.

When I reached the City of Mexico, a short while after Mrs. Fields had begun her work in that cultivated, artistic metropolis, I found that her name was a household word.

To show in what high esteem the government holds her work, each morning one of the government officials would call for her and take her to the schools at which she was to speak. Each morning she speaks in from one to three of the public schools, being always accompanied by the inspector, who introduces her and escorts her from place to place. In an interview at which I was present, the superintendent of education told her that the board had decided to publish literature bearing upon the subject, which might be distributed by the tens of thousands, free.

An interesting incident will show the attitude of President Diaz on the subject of temperance. Quite a number of the officials were willing to have the children taught regarding the effect of the uses of liquor in too large quantities, but total abstinence seemed a little too advanced for them. One of the officials, in speaking to President Diaz on the subject said, "She is a little fanatical. I believe that it would be better not to attempt to teach total abstinence to the children; it is beyond their comprehension." President Diaz replied: "Let her alone; in order to help these people she must have a high ideal to hold up before them. Nothing was ever accomplished in the world except by fanatics."

Not only is Mrs. Fields respected by the Mexican government, in Mexico, but she is exceedingly popular with the English-speaking colony, having held a number of drawing rooms in the most fashionable houses in Mexico, and having, as officers and members of the union recently organized there, some of the most representative American and English people in the Republic.

While Mrs. Fields is untiring in her efforts for her temperance propaganda, she is ready to lend a helping hand to any enterprise for the good of the Mexican people, as is shown by her lively interest in the various mission schools, rescue work, and the work of the various evangelical bodies. No one could be wiser than she in the methods she has used, and no one has already reaped a richer reward for her untiring labors of love.

Washington, D. C.

New Year's Drinking Customs in Scotland

BY AMELIA JOHNSTON

"EDINA, Scotia's darling seat," does not usually look her best on New Year's eve, or "Hogmanay," the old Scotch name for the thirty-first of December, for the atmosphere at that season is seldom clear. Only when snow has fallen, followed by frost of sufficient density to retain it, while the wintry sun calls forth its iridescences, does "Modern Athens" rejoice in a glorious New Year's day.

As a child, I remember being taken out to see the shop windows on New Year's eve, but I must confess to being more impressed by the street criers with their peculiar calls—the men whose thin clothing always sent a shiver through me as I saw it flutter in the chill December wind, and watched them moving along slowly outside the curb, calling, "Al-manacks! New al-manacks. Belfast al-manacks for the new year!" Again, perhaps on both sides of the street, and trying to drown each other's voices. I would often see men in rags, with bloated faces, and to all appearance in decided need of a saving acquaintance with their own wares, as they would offer with hand and voice, "Drunk-ards' summon-ses for the new year!" I cannot remember seeing anyone buy these pamphlets, although, judging from the number of men—and even women—reeling along the street, under the impression that they were celebrating right royally, there was much need of reform.

Hogmanay, or New Year's eve, long ago was dear to children, from the fact that wherever they went on that day, they got their "cakes." First-footing was by many considered an essential accompaniment to the ushering in of the new year, particularly among young men who desired to be the first to enter the homes of their sweethearts. In cities, such as Edinburgh and Glasgow, groups would congregate at street corners, in the neighborhood of public buildings or churches, waiting for the announcement of the midnight hour. In smaller towns the public market-place was the rendezvous, and here with the last stroke of twelve o'clock would arise cheers and shouts of greeting to the new year. The "fun," however, did not end here, for most of the jovial crowd were provided with black bottles and glasses, which they at once handed to each other, the result being that in many cases they were in no condition to visit the homes to which they sought entrance. First-footing is now practically unknown among really respectable people, although a trace of the old habit still remains and is practiced by a very few of the working class.

On New Year's Day, and for at least a week afterwards, it was formerly considered a mark of great inhospitality to allow a visitor to depart without offering cake and wine or whisky. Later, as the temperance work began to tell upon the habits of the community, ginger cordial was introduced as a teetotal drink.

New Year's gifts have always been customary in Scotland, and in former years they were the only gifts of the season, Christmas being entirely ignored except as it appeared on the calendar. During the past forty years, however, a gradual change has been taking place in the manner of celebrating the New Year, until Christmas has really superseded it, being now observed almost as religiously in Scotland as in England.

Respectable persons have almost entirely renounced offering wine to their guests, and when New Year's calls are made, the season's "cakes" are usually accompanied by afternoon tea or some other harmless beverage.

Drinking practices are discountenanced by the church and by professing Christians generally. Indeed, to quote from a recent personal letter: "The temperance question is now, fortunately, so prevalent that the use of intoxicating beverages is not considered good form in respectable society." It, therefore, seems anomalous that according to statistics, drunkenness should be on the increase in Scotland. This increase, it is stated, appears most marked "in those classes whose social status places them in circumstances which render access to liquor exceptionally difficult and whose influence is exceedingly detrimental in society."

The Scotch are essentially a religious people, and the fact that drunkenness still abounds in the midst of so much Gospel light, is a deviation from rule hard of solution.

Long ago, as now, devout spirits, Bible in hand, awaited the advent of the new year in solemn silence, and as the hour struck, they opened the holy book, taking the first verse on which their eyes rested as a direct message from God; then they reverently besought his favor for the coming year. It is possible that this practice among a few has gradually led up to the holding of religious services at midnight, which now generally prevails.

May we not hope that the united prayers of those who lift their hearts to God on "Watch-Night" may be answered by the outpouring of his spirit on the temperance work and may effectually stem the tide of drink not only in Scotland but the wide world over?

Mrs. Luella F. McWhirter.
Ex-President of Indiana W. C. T. U.

I have no better wish for the readers of THE UNION SIGNAL than,

"A guid New Year to ane and a',
An' mony may ye see,
An' still through a' the years to come,
Oh! happy may ye be."

Austin, Ill.

Mrs. Luella F. McWhirter.

By Katie Wert-Holler.

WHEN history shall tell the story of the abolition of the liquor traffic, the name of Mrs. Luella F. McWhirter, of Indiana, will be among those who devoted heart and brain to the work of its destruction. Mrs. McWhirter, who was born in Vermillion county, Indiana, was reared under the most favorable Christian influences. Her father, the Rev. Hezekiah Smith, was a member of the Northwest Indiana Conference and her mother was a noble help-meet in Christian service. In the daughter there is happily blended her father's sunny temperament and her mother's independence and steadfastness of purpose. Thus it is that we find developed in her those traits of Christian character which have made her not only a leader among women, but one who is beloved by all who know her. While yet a child, her father's sight failed and she became his constant companion, reading to him every day from the Bible as well as from the current literature of the day, until she acquired a fund of religious, political, and general information possessed by few persons of her age. Thus the foundation for her future work was well laid. She was educated at East Tennessee and De Pauw universities. Fidelity to principle and love for her church caused her to unite with the Woman's Christian Temperance Union in its aggressive and potent influence against that church enemy—the rum traffic. In 1893 Mrs. McWhirter was elected treasurer of the Indiana W. C. T. U. and she served in that capacity for three years, during which time a large state debt of long standing was canceled.

In 1896 she was unanimously elected to the state presidency, serving for four years, when ill health compelled her to resign. During her term of office the state made marked advances along all lines and many new names were added to the membership roll. Mrs. McWhirter's talents are ever at the service of the W. C. T. U. She is now editor and business manager of the Indiana state paper, "The Message," and through its circulation makes her influence felt in every union throughout the state. She also edits the woman's page of "The Patriotic Phalanx." As a public speaker Mrs. McWhirter has few equals. Her eloquence and charming personality, together with the soft clear tones of her voice, seldom fail to captivate her audiences and lead many to espouse the temperance cause. As a presiding officer she is characterized by grace and dignity.

In all of her efforts in Christian and temperance work Mrs. McWhirter is nobly supported by her husband, Prof. F. T. McWhirter, who is himself an accomplished worker and speaker of national reputation in the temperance and prohibition cause.

Their home life in Indianapolis may be said to be ideal. In the training of three lovely daughters and a manly son is reflected the tender, true and unselfish devotion of the wife and mother and the kind and affectionate disposition of the husband and father.

South Bend, Ind.

A Raveling.

By Fannie B. Damon.

IF the fragments of conversation which were scattered about through the Convention crowd at the "Jefferson," under the spell of the intervening darkness and under the inspiration of unnumbered jewels of light, could have been gathered up and pieced together, what a magnificent crazyquilt might have been fashioned! What a subject for a presentation speech, or what a bonanza to sell at auction and turn into W. C. T. U. currency!

There were personal scraps and political scraps and religious scraps and scraps of jokes, plain, scrimpy bits and gorgeous, generous patches.

The Convention has been more fully reported, I believe, than any other W. C. T. U. meeting, but there is an immeasurably great side of it, a kaleidoscopic part of it, which is inherently unreportable.

They were waiting by the hundreds for the exercises to begin. People were talking back and forth and cross-wise all over the place.

"Is it true," one woman asked another, who sat just behind her, "that the Friends have given up the observance of the communion?"

"Why, you must know, my dear, that the Friends have never observed the Lord's Supper as you do. You would say that they have never observed it at all."

"But I wonder however they get round 'This do in remembrance of me?'"

"They believe in breaking the daily bread in remembrance of him. 'Whether, therefore, ye eat, or drink, or whatsoever ye do, do all to the glory of God.'"

The voices were low and serious and easily slipped into silence.

Now it chanced these two women were among the crowd that went over to Stroudwater and entered into the home of the President. They were not state officers. They were not delegates. Possibly they were intruders. Certainly they were the humblest of the white-ribbon laity. But they came with hearts full of love and reverence, and walked softly from room to room, conscious that they were treading in vanished footsteps.

One of them pilfered a half-burned bit of wood-coal from the hearth in Mrs. Stevens' den and slipped it into her handbag. To-day, splinters from this souvenir, centered on legend-bearing cards, are quite soberly and sacredly cherished by several members of a Maine union. The inscriptions run after this fashion:

"This coal has on the hearthstone glowed
Within a century-old abode.
By its spent light affection traces
A fireside group of haloed faces.
Eye hath not seen, ear hath not heard,
But spirit hath its sign and word.
Our leader's ingle is so wide
We all are sitting by her side."

The women passed out into the dining-room and sat down with others to a cup of chocolate and a piece of the historic cake. Their souls grew humid with the sense of association. What blessed hands had here extended hospitality to what blessed hands! Who had drank from these same cups, sitting in these very chairs, near to this very table?

One of the women—one of the two—leaned to the other and said softly: "This is the communion."

She meant it for one ear, only, but the hush in the room gave it away to all. Yet no one seemed to think the remark an eccentricity. As for the other woman, "You oughtn't to have said that to me now," she returned, with a sudden softening of her dark eyes.

When they came out into the walk, one white ribboner—and she wonders if this might not be said of every other woman there—tarried a little to lift her heart to God for a blessing upon her for whose sake the place was so peculiarly dear; that in her sojournings here, in her going and coming under these trees, she may always sojourn and go and come in the Divine Presence.

O leader loved! awake, asleep,
Jehovah bless, Jehovah keep.
Day unto day on thee and thine
His face in peace and beauty shine.

Dexter, Maine.

The Patent Medicine Enemy.

BY MARTHA M. ALLEN.

IN a recent issue of American Medicine the editor asks: "Why do not the temperance people fight the patent-medicine enemy?" He desires that some member of the W. C. T. U. will answer the question. The article following the question states that if the army canteen made drunkards, surely the patent medicine syndicates make a thousand times as many.

No one is ignorant of the fact that there are many million dollars worth of these alcoholic nostrums sold each year, and that thus multitudes of people secretly and ignorantly become drunkards. Think of a crusade against beer, which contains only from 2 per cent to 5 per cent of alcohol, while allowing the free sale of bitters containing ten times as much!

Had the W. C. T. U. of Pennsylvania been working the department of Non-Alcoholic Medication, this Philadelphia editor would probably not be so lacking in knowledge of what has been done by the W. C. T. U. in "fighting the patent medicine enemy." As they have recently taken up this work, they should feel greatly encouraged to have so powerful a medical journal ready and anxious to aid them.

Since there may be many other people who are unaware of what the W. C. T. U. has been doing, in this direction, it seems wise to give a brief resumé of its work.

At the Buffalo Convention, in 1897, in the writer's report as superintendent of Non-Alcoholic Medication, percentages of alcohol in some of the most widely-advertised patent medicines were given. This was the first attack upon this enemy, and the reporters of the daily press said they dared not mention it, as it would injure the advertising department of their papers! The following year two articles by the writer upon "The Danger and Harmfulness of Patent Medicines" apeared in The Christian Advocate of New York, and were then published in leaflet form. A copy was sent out to every local W. C. T. U. in the country, to be used as a study. These leaflets were entrusted to state superintendents and state presidents to forward to unions, and probably most of them reached their destination. The leaflet gave percentages of alcohol in many proprietary medicines, as examined by Massachusetts' Board of Health; showed the dangers of morphine in cough syrups and soothing syrups; of cocaine and coal-tar derivatives in headache powders, and of alcohol also in malt extracts.

Many unions were quick to see the great value of the information thus given, and the leaflet was read extensively at public meetings. Then several patent medicine firms threatened lawsuits against our women, and frightened many from further work in this direction; but as these firms saw that the women had the authority of state chemists behind them, they desisted from troubling. Their threats accomplished not a little, however, in retarding the great wave of interest which was sweeping over the W. C. T. U., and this influence has been hard to overcome.

The next step in opposition to this enemy was the publishing of a book for the department, "Alcohol a Dangerous and Unnecessary Medicine," one long chapter of which is devoted to Proprietary Medicines. Percentages of alcohol in about fifty different medicines are given here, together with an exposé of fraudulent testimonials and much other useful and interesting information. This book is being used for study in some hundreds of unions, and every such union becomes a center of intelligent opposition to the use of patent medicines, many of which are simply whisky flavored with cheap drugs. Indeed, it is now said that wood alcohol, an article much more dangerous than the ordinary ethyl alcohol, is being used in some of these medicines because of its cheapness.

When the W. C. T. U. through all its branches, shall have become well informed upon this subject, it is the purpose to seek the co-operation of medical societies and state boards of health in endeavoring to secure legislation which shall, to some extent, hinder the patent medicine syndicates from further depredations upon the health and the wealth of the people.

Too much cannot be said in condemnation of religious and temperance papers which, for greed of money, advertise these preparations of disguised whisky, morphine and cocaine. One set of remedies advertised in nearly all religious papers and some temperance papers as a sure cure for consumption, bears upon the label of one bottle of the set, "To be taken in half a wine glass of pure whisky after each meal." Nor do these papers sin ignorantly in admitting such advertisements, for some W. C. T. U. women have been faithful in sending information to editors of such journals.

To promote study of the evils of patent medicines, the department of Non-Alcoholic Medication for the National W. C. T. U. is now offering a prize of $12 for the best humorous article, suitable for recitation, showing the evils and absurdities of the use of these medicines, and $10 for the best oration upon the same subject. Conditions of these prizes may be obtained from the writer. A copy of the leaflet mentioned above will be sent to any one who has never seen it if address is sent.

Syracuse, N. Y.

The Canteen from the Soldier's Standpoint.

The readers of THE UNION SIGNAL will find interest in the testimony of two soldier boys regarding the Canteen.—Editors.

AS a soldier in the ranks, I wish to give my conviction upon the subject of inebriety in the army. I have read in the Army and Navy Register the reports of some of our officers, in which they invariably demand, or advise, the return of the army canteen, and they say that the soldiers desire it.

I do not desire it, and eighty-five per cent of the soldiers who drink to excess, instead of asking for the return of the saloon, cry, "I wish the curse were wiped out, so that I could not get it, for as long as I can get it, I will drink."

Far from asking for the canteen, these soldiers would be glad if the temptation were removed altogether.

Shall our government listen to the petty pleas of these officers, after hearing the prayers of the nation's mothers pleading for their sons, and when those boys themselves cry, "Away with the evil! May the temperance people win!"

If those officers who filed their report for the Army and Navy Register could exchange places with the "general prisoners," who are serving months, perhaps years, as the result of intemperance, they would understand the problem of court-martials and desertions, for, under my observation, at least seventy-five per cent of the court-martials and all of the desertions have been caused by liquor.

Let the mothers of America hold the ground won, in the abolishing of the canteen, and for the sake of the boys who wear the blue, let them try to do what army officials have failed to do. I wish that I might pour out my soul in supplication to the American people, to save the great army of America's youth, from the hor-rible reign of King Alcohol.

The following letter to a lady in Washington, D. C., was written by a soldier, now in the Philippines, who has acted in the capacity of Company Clerk for two years. He is, therefore, thoroughly familiar with the workings of the canteen, both before and since the passage of the anti-canteen law.

"I am sorry to learn that you are having so much trouble in getting started again at Fort Meyer. They won't even give you a chance to prove the right or the wrong of the case, and they keep harping on the same old string of 'how we have deprived the poor soldier of his interest in the profits of the canteen, and that the canteen cannot be run without the sale of beer.'

"This is not true, and it can be proved if put to a fair test. Why, here we are in Troop K. 5th Cavalry, running a small canteen of our own. We buy our soda water, chewing gum, syrups, etc., all in Manila, and handle nothing but temperance cold drinks, on a small scale, yet we managed to clear between three and four hundred dollars for the months of May and June, which is over one hundred dollars more than we would have received from the Fort Meyer canteen had we been there and they handling beer; besides having a large general store and restaurant. We never got over $100 a month, yet they sold all kinds of beer, had four troops, the band, hospital, and signal corps to deal with, besides civilian employes and visitors. Every soldier in the post could draw from $3 to $10 a month in checks, and the majority drew the allowance and spent it in the canteen, and they could only scrape up $100 profits for each troop, and a few drippings for the hospital, band, and signal corps; whereas, we have seventy-two at this post, and twenty-eight detached service—total one hundred, with a few civilian employes, not many visitors, sell nothing but "pop," sandwiches and tobacco, and manage to clear something over $150 a month for our troop fund.

"I hope the canteen law will stand for a long time to come, as it does to-day, and by and by necessity will compel some other expedient besides beer. I guess they will find there is as good profit in a temperance canteen.

"Things will come good our way some day, I am sure, and we will have a chance to prove the difference between right and wrong in this matter."

UNTIL we shall be able to make men rational and moral in the satisfaction of their two radical appetites,—nutrition and propagation—nothing else that we can do for them will be of effectual help.—Bishop Spalding.

"In Old Virginny."

By Elizabeth P. Gordon.

WHITE ribboners of the "Old Dominion" state deserve the highest praise. They exemplify Frances E. Willard's splendid motto: "Be good-natured as sunshine, steadfast as gravitation and as persistent as a Christian's faith."

One of the counties, "Carolina," is making a brave fight for "no license," and the vote comes January 8th. The county president, Mrs. Richard Ricks, nee Eliza Crenshaw, of Richmond, whose family first welcomed Frances Willard to the South, drove twenty-four miles in one day over a muddy, rough road to make my appointments. To meet these engagements in the course of a week I was driven fifty miles in a cold wind through red or black mud, and into gullies and again through creeks; and once narrowly escaped a serious accident, the horses stepping into a bad hole in the road concealed by muddy water.

Members of unions often live two, five or even eight miles from the church where the meetings are held. The president of one union I visited lives five miles from the church in one direction, and many of the members of her union live five miles in the other direction.

The Home of Mrs. Howard M. Hoge, President of the Virginia W. C. T. U.

In the days of slavery the wealth of Virginia was in the country. Here were the estates of the "F. F. V.'s," miles off the railroad. After the war, for lack of "hands" to cultivate it, the land was gradually divided, and some of it is now valuable timber land. It is still true, however, that most of the homes are far away from church and railroad, and this makes the work of a union exceedingly difficult. The president would far rather write her letters herself than drive several miles over a dusty or rough road to find her secretary.

What rare and charming hospitality one meets in the country. The state and county presidents can preside as well over a culinary feast—their own handiwork—as over a convention. Whoever tasted any hing lighter and more palatable than Mrs. Hoge's "soft corn pone" made of the sweet yellow meal!

A stage ride over the famous Blue Ridge mountains gave me an extended view of the scenery which so delights the summer visitors. In the midst of this is the "Evergreen Home" of Mr. and Mrs. Howard M. Hoge.

There was an old lady in the stage—a typical grandmother. Her face was shining with Christmas cheer. She begged the driver not to leave behind the full trunk which she "reckoned" had a "heap" of presents for the grandchildren.

Giving me a shrewd glance, she said vehemently, in a tone loud enough for all to hear: "Seems like this lady is certainly a Yankee from 'way up yonder in Massachusetts. I'm a Virginian! If I thought I had a drop of Yankee blood in me I'd cut it out! I've seen this valley in a blaze! After Sheridan had burned us out a crow crossing over had to carry provisions for three days!"

As the wrinkles in the motherly face had a good-natured turn, no one's feelings were hurt and the old lady herself joined heartily in the merry laugh that followed.

Wearers of the white ribbon are multiplying. There was a net gain of 384 last year. The "F. F. V.s" of to-day are those who take the "Fast Flying Virginian" to attend state and national conventions. We think they surely belong to the "first families of Virginia!"

Mr. and Mrs. Hoge are soon going out into the state to hold Institutes. They let no difficulties stand in the way. If they can successfully do this work in communities where they encounter not only opposition to temperance work, but prejudice against woman's speaking, surely Institute work can be done anywhere.

Educational work along the lines of our departments is sorely needed. To aid those who wish a simple program for Institute work, I append this excellent one, prepared by Mrs. Hoge:

W. C. T. U. Institute.

Conducted by Mr. and Mrs. Howard M. Hoge.

FIRST EVENING.

Address—Mrs. Hoge.
Short Address—Mr. Hoge.
Collection for state W. C. T. U.

MORNING SESSION.

10 a. m., Devotional Exercises—Arranged by the local union.
Branches—Paper on Y Branch, written by state Y secretary. Discussion.
Paper on L. T. L. Branch, written by state secretary. Discussion.
National and State Papers. Discussion and soliciting subscriptions.
Paper—"Necessity of Department Work."
Paper—"How To Become a Specialist."
Question Box.
Noontide prayer.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

2 p. m., devotional exercises, arranged by union.
Department Papers—Six to be selected by union; written by the state superintendents. Discussion after each.
Paper—"Importance and Use of Dues," written by the state treasurer. Discussion.
Paper—"Why Should Christian Women Be Interested in Temperance Work and How Can We Enlist Them in the W. C. T. U.?"
Miscellaneous business.

EVENING.

Address—Mr. Hoge.
Short Address—Mrs. Hoge.
Collection for state W. C. T. U.
Devotional exercises and music for each evening to be arranged for by local union.

Lincoln, Va.

The Hour-Hand and the Minute-Hand in the Reformer's New Year.

By Rev. Wilbur F. Crafts, Ph.D.

THE supreme reform is to enlist the church in reform. This should be the hour-hand in the work of every reformer. Something should be said about it in almost every reform speech and in almost every issue of reform periodicals, for there will be no decisive victory until the main army of the Church of God is brought up to the firing line, where at present a little band of skirmishers, hardly more than one per cent of the church membership, are winning victories out of proportion to their numbers, but making no real advance—scarcely more than protecting a slow retreat.

Unanswerable statistics show that in every large division of the world the liquor traffic is increasing, and wherever that increases every other evil is sure to increase with it. I believe that the time has come when by kindly argument the churches can be persuaded to do with moral reforms what they did one hundred years ago with missions—put them into their regular schedules of work and benevolence, on the ground that moral reforms are really a branch of missions, of home missions, of city missions, and now preeminently of foreign missions, when the greatest crusade before the world that has any promise of immediate success is the effort, which many nations are favoring, to suppress the sale of intoxicants and opium among all uncivilized races. This shows the way to the most strategic point to start this forward movement, namely, in the Woman's Missionary Societies of the churches.

The anti-polygamy movement has been led from the beginning by the woman's missionary societies. Why should not the defense of the family and of the Sabbath and home protection against the saloon be pressed for adoption officially by the churches, through resolutions and debates, in every body of the church officers, whether representing an individual church or a group of churches? The young people's societies have their "Christian Citizenship Committee," which is mostly a nominal appointment, but the time is ripe to ask that the governing body of each local church shall appoint such a committee to represent it in all moral movements for social welfare. Such an advance is more likely to begin in progressive local churches than in great conservative church courts, which will be reached from below when the local churches have made successful use of this new agency, that will help conversion before and after by creating a better social environment.

But what is the reformer's minute-hand, the next thing that can be done? Nationally, the best chance to secure definite action this winter is unquestionably on the prohibition of beer-selling at immigrant stations, to which let us all rally with utmost energy for this slice of prohibition, which has passed the House and has been favorably reported in the Senate, is in great danger from the brewers and their political allies. The most serious aspect of the case is that Secretary Shaw, a Christian member of the President's Cabinet, by whose permission, amounting really to a license, this beer-selling goes on at United States immigrant stations, is avowedly and aggressively fighting to retain this liquor-selling in government buildings, just as Secretary Root, with like aggressiveness, is working to restore beer-selling to the army. President Roosevelt has said nothing on either side in either case, but legally and morally what a cabinet officer does the President does, and it would seem that temperance Republicans ought to speak in loud protest.

The moral battles at Washington as to liquor-selling to immigrants and to soldiers, are but two glimpses of one battle against government beer-selling. Twice Congress has declared against government beer-selling, which has a strong bearing on the question of government ownership dispensaries and the theory that beer is relatively harmless. In the second anti-canteen law, after four years' consideration of the subject, Congress has declared that the sale of beer, even under government ownership, is bad for health and bad for order—and as General Carlin has said, if bad for health and bad for order in the army, bad everywhere. In my judgment, it is because of this tremendous implication of the canteen and immigration prohibitions that the brewers are making so stiff a fight and enlisting such powerful political allies. They see, what temperance people ought to see as clearly, that there is no ground on which restrictive legislation can stand consistent with this verdict of Congress. Surely even the sale of beer, much more of the harder liquors, ought not to be allowed anywhere, if it has proved itself harmful under the very eye of government officers, both at Ellis Island and in the army.

Let us then fight against the mighty forces that are seeking to restore beer to the army, and let us keep at Ellis Island the full force of Christian citizenship by petitions, letters, telegrams and deputations. The best weapon to use in most cases will be a ten-word telegram signed by ten people, paying ten cents each towards the expense, to say, in each case, to one or both of their Senators: "We favor immigration bill, especially provisions on illiteracy and liquors." Let us not be so narrow in our zeal for reform that we cannot see that the exclusion of illiterates is a moral question since it is from the illiterate immigrants that the buyers and sellers of liquors are largely recruited as well as the paupers and criminals generally. The whole country would be better off morally, politically and financially—especially the workingmen in eastern cities, where most of the illiterates remain—if these undesirable citizens were excluded from our shores.

But in any case, let not Uncle Sam welcome those who come with an official invitation to continue the drink habit or the liquor traffic. The immigration bill also forbids liquor-selling in the Capitol, another step towards the goal in sight, to which the McCumber bill might carry us even in this Congress if there were a sufficient uprising to carry it, the prohibition of liquor-selling in all government buildings.

Washington, D. C.

UNDER THE WHITE RIBBON.

BY MARY HENRY-ROSSITER.

BENEATH the little white bow that you wear on your breast, your heart is beating. The heart of your body and the heart of your life underlie that symbol. Both must be sound and strong if you are to further successfully the great principles for which the emblem stands.

The interdependence of the heart of the body and the heart of life, the soul, is not always sufficiently considered. We are only beginning to learn in a practical way that mind and body go together, that there is a physical basis of character, that health is an indivisible principle uniting the life of matter and spirit. In a general, vague, indeterminate sense we may have recognized and accepted this principle, about as we accept a handsome volume of Shakspeare and place it carefully and admiringly on the shelf. But we must do more than this before we shall see the progress we desire in reform.

Oliver Wendell Holmes, in speaking of intemperance in the "Autocrat of the Breakfast Table," compares this vice to the guinea worm that burrows into the naked feet of savages. He says: "Now the true way to deal with these obstinate animals, which are a dozen feet long, some of them, and no bigger than a horsehair, is to get a piece of silk around their heads, and pull them out very cautiously. If you only break them off, they grow worse than ever, and sometimes kill the person who has had the misfortune to harbor one of them. Whence it is plain that the first thing to do is to find out where the head lies. Just so of all the vices, and particularly of this vice of intemperance. What is the head of it, and where does it lie? I have heard an immense number of moral physicians lay down the treatment of moral guinea-worms, and the vast majority of them would always insist that the creature had no head at all, but was all body and tail."

The first time I read that it impressed me as having a peculiar application to modern methods of temperance work; not that we are paying too much attention to the body and tail of the monster, alcoholism, but as yet we have not been able to get a string strong enough and tenacious enough to twist round its vicious head and pull it out.

We can never decapitate the greatest evil of the ages by snipping at it with penknives however sharp. We must find out where the head lies and upon what the creature feeds. Then if we can not pull it out we must starve it out.

Upon what does this creature feed? Upon our boys and girls. As to this, we are all agreed. The head of the monster, then, lies in the home. Where do drunkards, and smokers, and lawbreakers, as well as all other classes of men and women, receive their first training?—In the home; if not in their own homes, then in other children's homes. The street is no worse home for many a boy than his mother's house. Why?—Because she does not teach right principles; because she does not illustrate right principles in her own life.

The child's first education is in physical habits. Before he can talk the baby has learned to gratify or to control appetite. The very young baby has but one appetite, and yet how fearfully he can be taught to abuse it, even before he has lived in the world one year! If these very wee ones learn the habit of self-indulgence, of eating to forget pain, of eating as a reward or a special favor, of eating things simply because they "taste good going down," of eating merely for the sake of eating—whose fault is it? If these same children in later years gratify the same appetites and seek to deaden other pains by drinking and smoking, whose fault is it then? The mother, the nurse, the teacher, has inculcated the principle. The child has made the logical application of it.

Children are the shrewdest of all observers. No preconceived notions or prejudices dim their vision, cramp their understanding. When they hear mama say that she knows coffee is not good for her but she can't resist it, it is hardly to be expected that they will see the immorality of over-indulgence in candy and pastries. It is of no use to expatiate upon the evils of smoking and then do it yourself. It is of no use to declare, "I will see to it that my child is brought up better than I was," and then yourself go on in the same old way because "grown people can not form new habits."

So it is of fundamental importance that white ribbon mothers in particular represent in their own personal life the highest ideals of the principles they believe, ideals of temperance in individual habits, ideals of physical as well as moral purity, ideals of total abstinence not only from intoxicating liquors, tobacco, and swearing—no effort at all for women—but from every injurious practice. As some writer has very sensibly remarked: "The most profoundly efficacious 'temperance man' is the temperate man. Not by mind-power, nor by water-power, but by power of example, he reforms others. His conduct is a moral prohibitory act. His practice preaches. His influence enforces constitutional amendments to the habits of his associates and observers."

Likewise the "poor parson of a town" described in the "Canterbury Tales," gave "this noble ensample" to his sheep:

"That first he wroghte, and afterward he taughte."

This is the keynote of all successful work—to practice first and preach afterward.

To represent truly the best ideals of manhood and womanhood, parents must study. They must progress. They must be ready at any time to make individual sacrifices for the sake of their children. They are responsible if the vices of the age creep into their homes.

It is not enough to provide the boys and girls with food and clothes, to send them to school and to church and Sunday-school, to forbid them from doing this and that. We have too many negative instead of positive influences. We deal too much in prohibitions instead of permissions. We proceed too often upon the stern principle, "Thou shalt not," instead of cultivating the all-persuasive "Thou shalt love" taught by Christ. So we must provide and lead our children to prefer good food and healthful clothes. We must see to it personally that they have the right kind of educational and religious instruction. We must see to it, above all, that the home atmosphere is wholesome and stimulating. We must choose for them helpful and interesting books to read and games to play. We must make the home the center of a beautiful, true, perfect circle within the circumference of which no child can enter without thereby becoming stronger and better.

Is this too much to ask of fathers and mothers?—Nothing is too much to ask. Fathers and mothers are responsible to their children, not their children to them. One can not reiterate this too often, for there is and always has been a general idea that children have a paramount duty to their parents. Be assured of this, if we do our duty by our children they will never fail in their duty to us.

True fathers and mothers look upon parenthood as the most sacred and beautiful opportunity. They see in their child a miniature world, a representative of the entire universe; of the one eternal and unfathomable mystery; the great controlling force that makes and remakes society; the mind that invents, the soul that feels, the spirit that creates. They understand that all other possible work, or business, or pleasure, is secondary to that—not of "bringing up" their children, but of helping them to grow. Never was there a greater misnomer than the expression "bringing up"—as if children could be brought up like an armful of wood and put where you pleased; as if they were houses to be built according to the plan of an architect or the whim of an owner.

Children are seeds. You may plant them, but if you do, you are bound to give them food and water, air and sunshine. Then, if you would have them thrive, let them alone. Let the seed develop. You can not make the pansy a rose or train the tulip to climb a wall. The trouble is, we do not always take pains to see that our children have pure food, pure water, pure air, and sunshine. This is true both literally and figuratively.

It is amazing that mothers, in this century, can be so indifferent to the important question of foods. They can not be ignorantly indifferent; too much is being written and said concerning the relation of diet to health and character. Our grandmothers did not know any better than to feed their families soggy pancakes and greasy doughnuts, but we do. To-day, every intelligent woman can learn what foods are best for health and strength, what foods should be combined to give the suitable and necessary variety, what foods are good for the sick, the convalescent, the dyspeptic. That woman who in the light of present knowledge continues to put upon her table the traditional assortment of highly seasoned, indigestible foods lacking in proper nutriment is herself responsible if her children grow up physically and morally susceptible to temptations. Says Holmes: "I think you will find it true that before any vice can fasten on a man, body, mind or moral nature must be debilitated. The mosses and fungi gather on sickly trees, not thriving ones; and the odious parasites which fasten on the human frame choose that which is already enfeebled."

We often neglect to see that our children get plenty of pure water, pure air, and sunshine. It is more important, we tacitly declare, that they study the effect of alcohol on the stomach than that they romp and play outdoors, and thereby acquire an appetite for wholesome food to build up the body and make it strong against temptation. It is more important, we think, that we bake pastry and sew trimmings on our children's clothes, than that we go outdoors with them, and breathe in oxygen and optimism, to be breathed out again in smiles and good cheer. In short, in our ordinary everyday life we are wont to ignore the basal principles of all healthy, happy existence.

Figuratively speaking, we often fail to provide our children with wholesome materials for growth. We give them intellectual indigestibles, traditional courses of incongruous mental food, careless and injurious preparations that cloy the appetite but do not satisfy the need. This is, however, because in all our habits of life we have neglected the fundamental principles of health. Said Montaigue, "Our work is not to train a soul by itself alone, nor a body by itself alone, but to train a man; and in man, soul and body can never be disunited."

So we are brought back to the beginning. As white ribbon women we must make sure that underneath the little white bow, emblem of purity and love and truth, beats a heart in unison with the one great principle running through all life and health, the principle of harmony with natural law. When every heart among us does so beat and when we have learned the one great primary lesson of Nature, we shall be strong enough and wise enough to vanquish our enemy forever.

Evanston, Ill.

The Bells of San Gabriel

By Julia Mills Dunn

THE evening mists, shot through and through by the golden arrows of sunset, lay like a soft, purple halo along the rim of the San Gabriel valley. In the distance, the tops of the Sierra Madre, snow-capped and solemn, melted softly into the pink and amethyst of the afterglow. Kathryn Connor, coming suddenly round the corner of the bell-tower, met, face to face, Miguel Sanchez, a Spanish corporal attached to the Mission, who was lounging in the yard, hoping, if truth must be told, to meet Kathryn in this very spot.

"Good evening, Miguel."

Her greeting, spoken in her pretty, broken Spanish, was in a tone of assumed carelessness that was belied by the heightened crimson in her cheeks.

Miguel bowed low with the exaggerated gallantry of his countrymen, then reached up and picked a flower from the climbing rose that clambered up the wall for thirty feet, wreathing the bell-tower with a mass of fragrant blossoms.

"Let me fasten this rose in your hair in the fashion that our Spanish girls wear them."

But Kathryn drew back and with a quick turn of her head evaded his outstretched hand.

"And you will not take my rose?"

Kathryn tried to speak, but the words came chokingly. "It has happened again, Miguel," she said sadly, "and we must part."

"O Kathryn! You will not marry me, because of a trifling thing like that."

"It is no trifle, Miguel. I can never make you or anybody understand the terror, the absolute horror that comes over me when I see an intoxicated person. As a child it made me ill, and I would lie in bed for hours trembling with a terror that I could not control. I cannot marry a man who gets drunk, Miguel; do not urge me—it will be useless."

"But I promise—" began the corporal.

"You promised before." Her tones were quiet, but there was a sadness in them that touched Miguel's really kind heart. "At the last sheep-shearing festival, again on last saint's day, and now—"

Miguel threw the rose to the ground and crushed it with his heel.

"This is no time for discussing my faults," he said dryly. "In an hour we may be separated, perhaps forever. A native runner has just brought the news that Bouchard is coming this way with a large force of men, intending evidently, to repeat the debauchery and plunder he indulged in at the mission of San Juan Capistrano, where he rioted for days, desecrating the church and destroying such valuables as he could not carry away. If he could—"

"Bouchard!" she faltered, with white lips. Well might all helpless women and children cower and turn pale at the name of the bold and cruel pirate who trampled upon all holy relics, destroyed altars, and drank blasphemous toasts from the communion cups. Well might they flee at the approach of this monster whose name was a terror to the whole coast and whose presence was a menace to life itself.

"Granny!" she faltered, "What will become of Granny? She is old. What can be done?"

There was a sound of footsteps falling hurriedly on the stone pavement of the court and two young Indians rushed forward, touching their foreheads by way of military salute. "Senor," said one, we are sent to tell you that Bouchard, the pirate, is making his way to the mission, with a large force, murdering and plundering as he goes. The women and children of Santa Barbara mission are fleeing to the mountains for safety."

He spoke thickly and with wild, emphatic gestures to aid his halting speech, for the Spanish tongue did not lend itself readily to his savage gutturals.

Miguel drew his pistol from his belt—the instincts of a soldier asserted itself even in the midst of his love-making.

"We must act at once. You will separate here; one of you will go to the winery and the other to the soap factory and the mill to warn the men to gather inside the stockade, armed ready for defence. I will confer with the padre regarding the women and children."

The young Indians again saluting, ran swiftly in opposite directions, while Kathryn stood speechless, with cheeks from which every vestige of color had fled.

"Kathryn," pleaded Miguel, "if you could trust me once more, dear, I swear that wine shall never pass my lips again."

As she struggled to reply, the bells of San Gabriel overhead rang out sharply, not the soft, musical chimes that call to matins or vespers, but the sharp clang, clang, known far and wide as a signal of danger.

At the sound, men in the winery, the forge, the factory and the mill, women from the looms and bakeries, even children, and one or two old women, with knitting in hand, all moved by a common impulse, swarmed towards the stockade which was walled about with growing cactus, impenetrable to man or horse.

Each Indian mother had hastily strapped on her back a cradle of rushes from the top of which was visible a baby's face, a little brown face with round, wondering eyes. Their stoical calmness was in strong contrast with the excited volubility of their Spanish sisters, who chattered, wept, and meanwhile murmured Ave Maries over their rosaries. Last of all came Granny Connor, an octagenarian with the feebleness of age joined to the alertness of brain and sharpness of tongue that had characterized her youth.

"An' its runnin' ye air from the ugly haythin—runnin', an' ye call yersilf a sojer."

Her remarks were addressed to Miguel, but her shrill cackle of derision seemed to include the whole gathering.

Her tones and gestures were partially comprehended, if her words were not, and Spanish and Indian alike pushed closer, frowning, weapon in hand.

But Miguel stretched his sword barring the way in front of her. "If any man offer discourtesy to her by so much as a look, it shall go hard with him. Gobo, you know well every trail in San Gabriel valley. Yours will be the task to guide or transport the women to a safe hiding place. Take as many native men as necessary, leaving not less than four hundred here for defence. Make ready, and go at once."

Surely so odd, so motley a procession, had never before fared forth from the gates of San Gabriel. The old and sick were furnished mules for conveyance, children too young to bear the fatigue of the march were loaded into huge basket paniers that were hung over the mules, jolting along to their unspeakable satisfaction. There were pack-mules loaded with provisions and blankets for a stay of uncertain length, and though the natives worked swiftly and silently, as was their wont, all was noise, bustle and confusion, until they were finally ready for the march.

At the last, Granny Connor flatly refused to become a part of the exodus.

"Folley that b'y?" she shrieked, "me, the widdy iv Dinnis Connor, an' him own cousin to a pound-keeper in Tipperary? Sure, ye cuddent ixpict an' illigant lady like meself to folley the lade iv the loikes iv that haythin."

Kathryn put her strong young arms about the old woman and pressed her fresh cool cheek coaxingly to the old, withered face. "Come, Granny! We must go, but we will go together by way of the sheep pasture, and join the rest at the mouth of the canyon."

Old residents of San Gabriel valley tell to this day the story of the raid of Bouchard, the pirate—how he and his wicked buccaneers prepared to raid the church before which four hundred Indians and ten Spanish soldiers under command of Corporal Sanchez and the good and gentle padre had ranged themselves for its defense, but hearing of the kegs of wine stored in the vaults of the winery, the pirates resolved to attack that first. Having glutted themselves with wine, which had been secretly drugged, they were soon helpless and fell an easy prey to the Indians who dispatched them with ease, while Bouchard and his chiefs were held for ransom.

Kathryn, taking, as she supposed, a short cut through the chapparal, with her rebellious grandmother, and being overtaken by the darkness, lost the trail. Half supporting Granny, they stumbled over and through mesquite bushes, and were scratched and torn with cactus thorns. Though quaking with fear, Kathryn tried to cheer her grandmother by assuring her that they must soon strike the trail and find their friends.

The night grew chilly, and later a dense fog wrapped the mountain from base to summit. At last, exhausted and hopeless, they sank to the ground. Occasionally the howl of a wolf broke the silence with a prolonged wail, and the bark of a coyote echoed near. Clasped in each other's arms the night wore on. They could only pray for daylight now, for with the coming of dawn perhaps they might find the trail.

"An' it's New Year the morn," wailed the old woman; "yer father'll be breakin' the heart in his bosom whin he finds us lost, an' all because he would come to this bastely counthry."

Sweet and clear through the break of day the bells of San Gabriel rang. Kathryn sprang to her feet and tried to lift the old woman from the ground.

"It's the signal to return, Granny! The pirates must be gone and the church safe. Listen to the bells, Granny!"

But when she started in the direction of the church Granny stubbornly insisted on taking an opposite direction.

"We're lost; ye'll not deny that, I'm thinkin'. Well, when ye're lost it's a rule to study out what ye want to do, an' thin go contrairy jist. It's the only sure way to be lost and found at the same time."

120 SAN GABRIEL MISSION

There was much rejoicing when the wanderers finally found their way to the mission, and Miguel, who was the first to greet them, took this opportunity to tell Kathryn that he had become a believer in total abstinence.

"When I saw those pirates besotted with drink and lying like dead I began to realize what sickening horror a wife might feel to see a man she loved changed to a beast. And so with the New Year the good God gives to-day, we will begin, sweetheart, our new life."

In due time the bells of San Gabriel rang their wedding chimes, a wedding, so tradition tells us, that neither ever regretted. And though they have slept for many, many years in the old cemetery behind the church the bells of San Gabriel still chime softly at matins and vespers their messages of peace to the living and the dead.

Moline, Ill.

THE LOCAL UNION.

Demonstration Night,

October 20, 1902.

IN response to urgent requests, we reproduce for THE UNION SIGNAL readers the representation of the Department of Scientific Temperance Instruction in the public schools as shown Demonstration Night at the late annual convention of the National Woman's Christian Temperance Union in Portland, Maine. For the benefit of those wishing to reproduce the exhibition some features are somewhat more fully developed here than was possible in the limited time in Portland.

Scene, Jefferson Theater, Portland, Maine.

The National superintendent of the Department of Scientific Temperance Instruction in schools and colleges came upon the large and beautifully decorated stage accompanied by a standard bearer carrying a banner on which was inscribed the name of the department. Immediately the large temperance education map of the United States, for the first time showing all the states in white because scientific temperance is now a mandatory study in all the public schools of the whole nation, slowly descended from the ceiling and hung just above the heads of the actors in full view of the audience.

STEPPING TO THE FRONT, THE SUPERINTENDENT SAID:

We now present to you a line of work through which we are educating all the children of this nation as found in its public schools, to intelligent obedience to the laws of health, including those that teach the physiological reasons for total abstinence from alcohol and narcotics.

The gravest incentives to Christian patriotism impel us to this effort. We are trying in this country a new and dangerous experiment. Other great nations are composed of one or at most two or three races, with similar tastes, tendencies and histories. The Gaul is represented in the modern Frenchman, the German is a Teuton, the Russian is a Slav, the Italian the descendant of the wolf-fed Romulus. The Englishman is a union of the Anglo-Saxon and Norman. But in the United States, a land with the boundless resources of all zones, God is evidently making a new race by blending the blood of all peoples into one new type. Only a superficial mind will attempt to explain God, but He explains Himself in the story of the centuries as they unfold their history. This continent, hidden beyond the mysterious seas, was unknown to civilized man until it was time to get it ready for freedom-loving, God-fearing men and women who could be depended on to brave the wilds of the new world, stay here and become the nucleus of a great free nation. When that time arrived, Columbus came and the Spaniard. Here comes a representative of Spain bearing the flag of his nation.

ENTER A BOY BEARING A SPANISH FLAG. HE COMES TO THE FRONT OF THE STAGE.

SUPERINTENDENT: The Spaniards, coming for gold and conquest, were out of harmony with the future destiny of this nation, which manifestly from the first was dedicated to liberty. The Spaniard left no permanent settlement in the United States and we recently invited them to retire from Cuba, so that now Spain does not own a foot of land on the western hemisphere.

ENTER GIRL BEARING THE FLAG OF HOLLAND. SHE STANDS BESIDE THE SPANIARD.

SUPERINTENDENT: First of all permanent settlers came the Dutchmen, Father Knickerbocker's ancestors, landing in this country even before the Pilgrims. Senator Depew says, "Holland, at a time when there was no light for man elsewhere in the world, preserved the principles of civil liberty. For a century Holland was the safe deposit company of the rights of men." Thus the Dutch had common ground with those who came next."

ENTER STANDING IN LINE WITH THE SPANIARD AND HOLLANDER, BOYS AND GIRLS BEARING ENGLISH FLAGS REPRESENTING ENGLAND, SCOTLAND AND WALES.

SUPERINTENDENT: This race brought with them the Bible, the fear of God, love of home, of fair play and therefore trial by jury and a genius for liberty. From the first they seem to have been divinely chosen to dominate the new world, not so much by might as by right and conscience.

ENTER AN AFRICAN BOY TAKING HIS PLACE IN THE RANKS WITHOUT A FLAG, THUS REPRESENTING A RACE WITHOUT AN ESTABLISHED GOVERNMENT OF ITS OWN WHEN ITS PEOPLE FIRST CAME TO OUR COUNTRY.

SUPERINTENDENT: Next came a people of whom Booker T. Washington said, "The African is the only race specially invited to this country with an irresistible invitation." The wrong of that "irresistible invitation" to a land dedicated to liberty meant four years of bloody war in which this country, as Lincoln said, "sank all the wealth piled up by the bondsman's two hundred and fifty years of unrequited toil in which every drop of blood drawn with the lash was paid for by another drawn by the sword." The history of nations as well as of individuals echoes down through the centuries the divine mandate, "Whatsoever ye sow that shall ye also reap."

ENTER, A BOY AND GIRL BEARING FRENCH FLAGS.

SUPERINTENDENT: In those long ago days when the destiny of this country was being shaped, Louis XIV. was determined that over it the lilies of France should float. But such was not the divine plan, and long and bloody wars drove the French legions farther north and decreed that our country should be New England, the home of English-speaking peoples, and not New France. The Huguenots stayed, giving something of French vivacity to the solemn strain of Puritan blood in the new race that is being evolved. We must not forget that later France bravely helped our struggle for national freedom.

ENTER, JOINING THE OTHERS, A BOY BEARING THE GREEN FLAG OF IRELAND.

SUPERINTENDENT: Here comes the Irishman. What this country could have done for policemen, ward politicians, political heelers, and aldermen and sometimes even mayors, if the failure of the potato had not driven the Irishman to our shores, who can tell?

ENTER BOYS AND GIRLS WITH GERMAN FLAGS.

SUPERINTENDENT: Now comes the German driven from the fatherland by revolution, bringing to us brain and brawn, and alas, beer.

Enter boys and girls bearing the flags of their respective nations as the names of their countries given below are called:

SUPERINTENDENT: As the years rolled by, the story of the wealth and liberty of this land beckoned great hosts from the revolutions and oppressions of the old world, and their people poured in upon us from Norway, Sweden, Denmark, Greece, Portugal, Belgium, Switzerland, Japan, China, Mexico, South America, Russia, Finland, Austria-Hungary, Italy, the Orient and from every other country under the sun. Six hundred thousand, a real invasion, are coming to us this year, and still they come.

Can this mixed multitude be so permanently united in one great self-governing nation that it will withstand the stress and strain of the time, is the burning question before us. Can we be so assured of the capacity for self-government of these many peoples from many lands, that we may reasonably expect our republic, growing in strength and virtue, will survive a thousand years and more if the world shall stand so long?

Not unless alcohol is banished from the habits and traffics of its people, for alcohol destroys the capacity of man for self-government. It is its nature to dethrone in the human being that kingly quality of self-control without which a government of the people must perish.

Can alcohol be thus abolished? Yes. We depend upon education for the perpetuity of our institutions. A republic has no power with which it can compel majorities. It can only educate them to right choice and then depend on results. This nation has provided for the necessary education on this subject. The white map over our heads tells the story of the laws of this land requiring the 22,000,000 children in all its public schools to be taught, with the laws of health, the evil nature and effects of alcoholic drinks and other narcotics. As this teaching goes faithfully on the power of alcohol is being weakened, and the drinking ideas brought from other lands are giving place to the teachings of the new world. The whilom immigrant rapidly becomes an American.

Turning to the ranks with their foreign flags the Superintendent said, "You are here, children, representing many nations. Are you now Spanish, Dutch, English, French, German, Irish, and so on? What are you?"

The children, dropping their foreign flags and each waving the stars and stripes, which heretofore they had held down at their sides, in loud and clear voices shouted altogether, "We are Americans!" Then led by the piano they all sang in strong voices, keeping time with their flags,

"My Country, 'tis of thee,
Sweet land of liberty,' etc.

At the close of the song, enter a tall figure dressed in star-bespangled coat and vest in blue, and pantaloons of striped red and white strapped under his feet, and a bell-crown hat with broad star-decorated band, a veritable reproduction of the supposed tutelar genius of the Republic, Uncle Sam.

(Continued on page 23.)

Parliamentary Difficulties.

Answered by Mrs. A. S. Benjamin.

QUESTION: (a) In our last meeting I was very emphatically "called down" for saying "Resolution Committee" instead of "Resolutions Committee," the critic alleging, too, that I always talk about the "Credential," instead of the "Credentials Committee." If I am right, be sure to commend me, or at least defend me in UNION SIGNAL. (b) Do you approve of a "critic"?

ANSWER: "Resolutions Committee" is correct. We sometimes state it this way: "The committee on resolutions," "the committee on credentials." When stating as above, we should say: "Resolutions committee," "credentials committee."

(b) A critic may, or may not, be "approved of." That depends largely on the critic and on the body to be criticized. Without question a "body" that desires to improve may receive incalculable benefit from a wise, tactful criticism. It is self-evident that an individual, or an organization, ignorant of even their lack of knowledge, will not become wiser without instruction of some sort, but if the members are super-sensitive, and the critic captious, better not, for inharmony and "bitterness of feeling" are worse even than ignorance.

QUESTION: In our last convention Mrs. C. moved that a certain committee be appointed, which motion was followed by another that said committee be appointed by the Chair. The president did not make Mrs. C. a member of the committee. She was much hurt, and the members took it up, and by some the president was severely criticised. When it reached her ears, she took the ground that she was under no parliamentary obligation whatever to place Mrs. C. on the committee. There is no way to make this right except through THE UNION SIGNAL. Please do it in the very next "Difficulties."

ANSWER: The president was entirely correct. Personally (unless comment should be made, and thus call my attention to the fact) I should never give the matter even a thought. Aforetime it was the custom to make the member who moved the committee, one of the number, and before it was understood that a committee has the right to elect its own chairman, was usually made the chairman, but that (I assume) was for the reason that the member who made the motion knew more about the matter and had in it a greater interest than the average, or perhaps any other. Today this does not hold. Often in a convention a matter comes up concerning which the majority know little, or nothing. Manifestly, it is far wiser to refer to a committee and let the few investigate, and then bring the conclusion of the whole matter before the body in such well-defined shape as to enable them to vote intelligently, at once, than to take the time of the whole convention to consider. Under such circumstances a wise member, when the matter was first presented, would promptly move to refer. Is she the best fitted to act as chairman of that committee? Certainly not. She moved to commit because she knew nothing about the matter and did not wish to, until it was in actionable shape. If a presiding officer is in the "habit" of making the mover of a committee one of the number, it might excite unfavorable comment if she failed to do it. A Chair may save herself much responsibility by declining, as a rule, to appoint committees. Let "the people" do their own work, and then when the majority approve there need be no fault-finding.

QUESTION: In "Difficulties" column of June 5th, you answered very clearly a lengthy question concerning the duties and privileges of an Executive committee, but it does not embody our "difficulty." Kindly answer the following so plainly as will forever settle a similar trouble, for it is a serious trouble, when an executive use their power to thwart the wishes and set aside the judgment of a majority of the members. (a) To begin with, what are the duties and the privileges of an executive? Is the committee supposed to go directly from the regular meeting to another room, and there take special action against a measure that nearly the whole union favored, and leave the members to find out what has happened through the public prints? Is such a course a privilege? Surely it cannot be a duty.

ANSWER: (a) The duties and privileges of an executive committee are whatever the Constitution defines them to be. Without question an executive, like any other committee, has the right to meet whenever the interests committed to them can be further by such meeting, the report of course to be acted upon by the union. As a rule, our white-ribboners are by far too right-minded to even think of "setting aside the wishes of the majority." If, instead of "discussing the matter at length" and then leaving it, a vote had been taken, this special trouble would have been avoided, but I am more and more of the opinion that the duties of officers severally and collectively as set forth in the average Constitution lack definiteness. This is proved by a half-dozen questions now in my possession pertaining to secretaries, as well as by the three very similar "difficulties" that I am now trying to answer. It is exceedingly difficult to settle a difficulty to the satisfaction of the aggrieved, with only the partial facts before the reader, and I must be pardoned for reiterating that I cannot write out pages and pages in this column. To make a "full statement" is impossible. Only points of general interest can be given place.

In our polity by a two-thirds vote a by-law may be enacted, or amended without previous notice. An organization should never strike the same rock a second time. When the duties of officers as set forth in the Constitution are so indefinite as to need interpretation, they need to be made clearer, and chief among the governing rules of the W. C. T. U. should be the Golden Rule.

Children's Cozy Corner.

The Old Year's Farewell. By Julia F. Deane.

WITH a shrill, sharp call rang the telephone,
And Teddy sprang to reply,
"Hello!" said a voice in a trembling tone,
"I've come to say 'Good-bye.'

"I must leave you all at twelve tonight,
I'm the old, old year, I'll explain;
This minute the New Year is on his flight
By the Limited Fast Mail Train.

"I've given to you the best I had,
But the New Year is richer still;
He has stores of brand-new wisdom, my lad,
Your youthful brain to fill.

"He knows whole volumes of secrets rare,
Which he'll gladly tell to you;
He will teach you how to do and dare,
To be brave and loyal and true."

And then the voice grew weak and old;
"Ring off," it gently said;
While the bells of the happy New Year told
That the good Old Year had fled.

A Happy New Year.

HAROLD Hyndman was alone in his room. It was the last morning of the old year. He was busy with a note book. At his feet lay his dog, who was his constant companion.

"Father said it was a good plan to straighten out accounts before New Year, so as to begin the year shipshape. That's a good idea, and I'm going to do it. I owe Roland ten cents, and mama five and papa twenty. I'll pay those this morning. Then I owe Grace a letter. I'll scratch her off one by and by. Wish she could have come home for the holidays. It's awful lonesome without her. Don't you say so, Hero?" The dog rose, came to his side, laid his head on his knee and looked at him lovingly.

A tap at his door announced a caller.

"Come in, mama; I'm squaring up and getting things shipshape for New Years. Here's the nickel you lent me. I'm ever so much obliged."

"And do not forget to have it all right between you and your great Father before the New Year comes."

Mama said this softly as she went out. She was gone by the time she had finished speaking, and there was no need for a reply.

Harold was quiet for a few moments. He was a very sincere little Christian and was ambitious to grow to be as good a man as papa was. He had gained many victories over his faults in the past, and was very honest in his dealings with himself as well as with others.

Now that he began to think of it quietly there were several things which he realized were not straight. His thoughts ran like this:

"There's Jack—I promised faithfully I'd go over to see him every week while he had to stay in the house, and—let me see—I've missed going three times. Once it stormed so that mama wouldn't let me go, and once I forgot, and once I had company. I don't feel just right about that time I forgot, and I told Jack I was too busy to get over. I must straighten that out.

Then I've never told mama how I lent money to Frank for him to buy cigarets, and that one day I smoked a few whiffs on one myself. That was pretty crooked, especially when a boy has promised his mother he would never touch one. I'll clear that up, too, to-day."

His thought grew more troubled as he touched the next subject. "I suppose if Harry was hateful to me in that examination, I need not be hateful. I haven't felt quite right toward him since he mussed up my composition so and the teacher marked me down. I suppose I must quit that hard feeling if I want to be right with God.

"I don't quite see how I can do it, for if that feeling gets into a fellow's heart it's as hard to pull out as rag weed. But papa says a boy can always do right if he only makes up his mind to do it and lets God help him.

"I'll fix it up with mother first, then I can feel that it is all right."

He ran down stairs with Hero at his heels and found mama in her cozy corner by the bay window. "I'm ready for your errands now, mama, only I want to tell you first that one day last week Frank and I were out together, and he said he wanted some cigarets and asked me to lend him ten cents. I couldn't be mean—and he'd lent me money—and I thought then 'twas none of my business what a fellow did with money after he'd borrowed it of me, but I wish now I'd coaxed him to do something else."

"Live and learn. Next time you will know just what to do," said mama, cheerily.

"I'm sorroy to tell you another thing, mama. There were a lot of us boys together one day and they were all smoking, and they began to tease me, and they stumped me to smoke.

"You've never been a boy, mama, and you cannot think how aggravating boys can be. They say anything they can think of to stir you all up and make fun of you, and a boy would rather be knocked down between the eyes than to be called a spooney and a coward. I said:

"'I'll show you that I can smoke or let it alone just as I choose, but that I CHOOSE to let it alone. I'm going to buy me a nice farm out of money you would waste in smoke.'

"And then, mama, I took Frank's cigaret and puffed a few puffs and walked off. I'm real sorry. It's made me feel ashamed ever since, but I think you ought to know I broke my promise to you, and I would like to have you let me begin over again."

For answer mama opened her arms and gave Harold a good, motherly hug.

"Then there's a little matter, mama, that I've got to make right with Jack about my forgetting to go to see him one week."

About sundown that night Harold and Hero were returning from Jack's. In the west the clouds were rose and gold color.

Harold stopped and looked with delight at them and at the flush on the pure snow. He thought:

"It's worth everything to have it all right between a boy and the One who made this lovely world.

"And how I will shout, 'Happy New Year,' tomorrow!"—Selected.

"Du Bist Wie Eine Blume."

(Translated from the German of Heine, by E. L. C.)

THOU'RT like unto a floweret,
So sweet and pure and fair;
When I behold thee, sadness
Comes to me unaware.

Fain would I lay my hand upon
Thy head and God entreat,
That he should keep thee ever
So fair, so pure, so sweet.

The Firm of Grumble Brothers.

"POSTSCRIPT edition!" shouted the newsboy at at the door, as the street car stopped for a moment. "Paper, sir?"

"Yes," said Alan's father, and was soon deeply engaged reading the latest news from China. Alan, thrown on his own resources, amused himself by looking out of the window. He was not familiar with that part of the city, and found much to interest him. Presently he broke into a low laugh. "What is it?" asked Mr. Peterson.

"Such a funny sign, father—'Grumble Brothers!' I wonder if they live up to their name?"

"I think not," said his father, smilingly, "or they would not be the successful men of business that they are. But there are some 'Grumble Brothers' who, unhappily, do live up to their name. I hope you will not enter into partnership."

The next morning was rainy. Alan came down to breakfast decidedly out of humor. "Why should it rain on Saturday? I do not care if it pours on school days. We were going to play ball in the park this afternoon. It doesn't seem fair for it to rain. Mother, what is the matter with this oatmeal? It is not a bit good."

"When did they take you in, Alan?" asked Mr. Peterson.

"Take me in?" asked the boy, in surprise. "What do you mean?"

"Do you think it will be a good investment?" continued his father.

"Beg pardon, father," said Alan, greatly mystified; "I do not see what you are aiming at."

"Oh, I thought by the tone of your remarks that you had been taken into the firm of 'Grumble Brothers,' that is all."

Alan blushed and looked undecided for a moment, and then gave a good-natured laugh. "You have the best of me, father."

"Well, the next time I find fault with anything just remind me, please, of those 'Brothers,' and I will try to pick up a little pleasantness."—Selected.

Puzzlers' Packet.

1—*Charade.

"I'm tired of living on the farm,"
Tom Jones declared one summer eve.
"A city ONE is easier far;
When hayin's done the farm I'll leave."

His aged father sitting by
Laid trembling hand upon his arm.
"I hope that in my TOTAL, boy,
You'll be content upon the farm."

"Forgive me, Father," cried the boy,
"My TWO henceforward I will use
In making you and Mother glad;
No happier mission could I choose."

ETHYL.

2—Anagram.

(A familiar quotation from a well-known poet.)
Mr. So is at Venice.

R. A. W.

3—*A Kind of Grain.

1. What grain is a fabled animal?
2. What grain was a noted general?
3. What grain is an angle?
4. What grain grows on a tall tree?
5. What grain is a geographical term?

R. H. E. T.

4—Skeleton Poetry.

T-e n-t s-l be f-d w-h m-c,
A-d t-l c-s t-t i-t t-e d-y
S-l f-d t-r t-s l-e t-e A-s
A-d as s-y s-l a-y.

L. W.

5—Omitted Terminals.

-ar- thought it too -ar- to ride to the busy -ar- in a -ar- to buy a -ar-, and did not -ar- to pay her -ar- on the -ar-. As she did not -ar- to pass the -ar- after -ar- for fear of -ar-, she tarried at home on the -ar-. As she sat eating a -ar- she heard the dog -ar- and soon her brothers -ar- and -ar- came in from the -ar- and told her they had shot a -ar- with a -ar-.

6—Numerical.

24 letters.
5 6 8 9 12 17 22 24 is part of the body.
11 13 17 21 is a refined woman.
14 15 19 23 18 is to gather.
20 10 7 is a passage.
1 4 5 2 is sage.
3 16 14 is a person of humor.
The whole is the greeting of the EDITORS.

(Answers in two weeks.)

Puzzles marked (*) are protected by copyright.

FOR GOD AND HOME AND EVERY LAND

The UNION SIGNAL AND WORLD'S WHITE RIBBON

NATIONAL and WORLD'S WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION

Official Organ of the WORLD'S AND NATIONAL WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION.

Published Weekly by the Woman's Temperance Publishing Association, Chicago.

EDITOR-IN-CHIEF, - - - - - - MRS. LILLIAN M. N. STEVENS.
CORRESPONDING EDITOR, - - - LADY HENRY SOMERSET.
MANAGING EDITOR - - - - - MRS. CORNELIA T. JEWETT.

CONTRIBUTING EDITORS:

MRS. SUSANNA M. D. FRY. MRS. KATHARINE L. STEVENSON.
MRS. CLARA C. CHAPIN. MRS. ISABELLA WEBB PARKS.

Address all letters and manuscript intended for the editors to, The Editorial Department, UNION SIGNAL. Unavailable manuscripts will be returned only when sufficient postage accompanies the request.

SUBSCRIPTIONS.

Subscriptions may commence with any issue.
The date on the label indicates when your subscription ends.
Papers will be discontinued unless otherwise ordered.
Remittances should always be made in the safest manner available to the remitter. Register cash remittances.
Change of Address.—Give both your old and your new address when you desire a change.
Change of Date.—It takes at least three weeks to change the date, after your subscription is renewed.

PRICE $1.50 PER YEAR IN ADVANCE.
FOREIGN POSTAGE $1.04 ADDITIONAL.

Address all Business Communications to
The UNION SIGNAL, 184 La Salle St., CHICAGO.....

Chicago, January 1, 1903.

"The women that publish the tidings are a great host."

A Factor Worth Considering.

SOME good people strongly object to the phrase, "substitutes for the saloon," on the ground that the saloon is altogether evil and that it is a misuse of terms to speak of a "substitute" for an institution of that character. An evil thing calls for no "substitute"; it needs simply to be annihilated.

This seems unanswerable, for the saloon, an institution of the evil one, has used its good features as simply decoys to allure its victims. Yet the phrase, "substitutes for the saloon," has clearly come to stay. Such expressions do not perpetuate themselves unless they are based upon some truth. Christ himself countenanced the idea in the parable of the house swept and garnished to which the evil spirit returned, bringing with him seven others worse than himself.

The saloon assumes good characteristics in order the more effectually to accomplish its evil purpose, but the good characteristics are nevertheless good, not evil, and because they meet real needs of humanity they call for "substitutes." Because the gilded saloon is brilliantly lighted with electricity is no reason why reputable institutions should return to the dim flicker of tallow dips. Rather, we should substitute brilliantly lighted, attractive rooms where young men may gather without the temptation of the social glass. Because the high-class saloon gives concerts of the highest order and hangs upon its walls the best paintings of the great masters, it does not follow that music is degrading and art a thing of evil, but rather it teaches us that free art galleries and concerts should be substituted for those by which the saloon seeks to entice men to their ruin.

We need not accept all of the conclusions of some who are investigating the problem of the saloon, but we shall be guilty of the stupid folly of the bigots who refused to look through Galileo's telescope lest they should see Jupiter's moons and the phases of Venus, if we do not avail ourselves of the information secured by these investigators.

The saloon furnishes meals at a much lower rate than the same quality is furnished elsewhere, yet at a rate which yields a fair profit to a firm furnishing meals on a large scale. With the possible exception of the "gilded saloon," it furnishes its own class of customers with a more comfortable place in which to eat their meals than they have at home and at a lower rate than they provide their own meals at home. A substitute in the way of a business firm furnishing meals equally good at equally low prices and in equally comfortable quarters, would be not only a good business investment but a most invaluable reform movement. The saloon furnishes without charge rooms for all kinds of public gatherings, whether social, political or educational. A "substitute" is one of the crying needs of the time. The saloon is a sort of free bureau of information through which many a man has secured a position. With this it often combines something of the features of a mutual assistance club where men are given meals and otherwise helped until they can secure employment. An association of the kind without the drunkard-making attachment would be a most important substitute for this function of the saloon. In many cities the saloon, and only the saloon, furnishes free bath and toilet rooms. Great service would be rendered humanity by providing a substitute for the saloon in this capacity by furnishing such accomodations without the temptation of the bar. The saloon provides drink for thirsty men. The public fountain often proves a most effective substitute. "Saloons must go!" Conversely, public fountains must come! "Saloons must go," but "substitutes" which shall perform honestly for humanity the service which the saloon now performs, not for humanity's sake but to accomplish its own wicked purposes, must come in their stead. The evil spirit must be cast out, but the room must not be left merely swept and garnished whither the evil spirit may return with seven others worse than himself to take up his abode.

Without dropping any of the work which we as white ribboners are pushing, we believe we should seriously consider whether the time has not come when we should take up vigorously the work of devising substitutes which shall effectually do the service for humanity now rendered by the saloons, that no excuse shall be left for the existence of these pitfalls of Satan.

Just how this is to be accomplished is a problem which must be solved by the different workers in their varying environment. It should be remembered by all such workers that movements of this kind will grow as they prove themselves worthy of support. Such movements would soon command public confidence and public support, and as they proved successful, it would become the fashion for millionaires to endow such institutions, as it is now the fashion to endow educational institutions and public libraries. Capital only needs a little illumining to see in institutions of this kind a place for profitable and philanthropic investment.

We have made so many propositions to our readers that we fear they may lose sight of the advantages offered. We offer the UNION SIGNAL in clubs of ten or more for One Dollar for each subscription. We offer the best magazines with the UNION SIGNAL for only a few cents more than the subscription rate of the magazines alone. We give valuable premiums to reward our readers for their time and work in behalf of the paper.

We at first asked for 25,000 new subscribers, but we wish to make this number 50,000. Have you done your part? If not will you not send us the subscriptions of your friends and neighbors? Don't depend upon some one else, but see to it yourself. If our various offers fail to interest you, will you not place them before members of your local Union whom you think they would attract? Can THE UNION SIGNAL depend on you as one of its strong friends who will do, in part, as much for it as it is trying to do for you?

The Latest Thing in Philanthropy.

THERE was a time when to be a philanthropist was to be unique. Originality in benevolence is growing rarer every day. Endowing chairs in universities and giving million-dollar gifts for libraries has become so commonplace that it has ceased to arouse in the public more than a mild degree of interest.

A Chicagoan of benevolent tendencies has varied the monotony by offering a cash prize to the boy or girl who shall exhibit within a given time the handsomest stray cat rescued from alley or highway and cared for until in fair condition, the animal to be placed upon exhibition at the cat show.

Without doubt the offer will stimulate the powers of observation of many children who never before considered a stray or alley cat as a matter of interest unless it had appended to it a tin can. It will encourage them to discover beneath the dusty and disheveled exterior, the marks of true feline gentility. It will, we trust, inculcate in them sentiments of pity and respect where only contempt has heretofore been felt and will enable them to see possibilities of development in many a "stray" if restored to its former cozy-corner privileges, with a saucer of cream three times a day. Not only the cats, but the children will be the better and happier for the experiment.

While it is to be regretted that patrician cats of aristocratic tendencies, boulevard cats and suburban cats, should ever retrograde and become, through evil associations, stray or alley cats, civilization might not come to a standstill if these evil things were to continue.

There seems an unparalleled opportunity for some great-hearted philanthropist to offer a reward for the discoverer of strays of another species, possessing possibilities of manhood or womanhood. It might bring about a revival of the Diogenes fashion—the going about seeking for men and women in embryo. It would, at least, bring to light the fact that oftentimes, through someone's misfortune or sin, the finest elements of manhood and womanhood are disguised in the alley child. One does not have to go far from the centers of our great cities to observe upon a puny, half-starved waif the ancestral mark of intellect stamped upon the broad, noble brow, or to note in some dweller of the dingy tenement the firm chin and clear, honest eyes that give evidence of pedigree of character.

It is true, one might be obliged to wait longer for proof positive as to results when dealing with human strays—cats develop somewhat more rapidly than children—but to many the interest in the subject would compensate for the delay. In the matter of cats, one could not hope to discover anything greater than an Angora or a Persian. In the matter of human strays there would be always a chance, justified by past history, of developing a great statesman, a big-hearted reformer, or a master poet, with a fair certainty, based upon statistics, that the result would be no less than an intelligent, useful citizen.

Such an object might, in a measure, justify the fashion of "slumming." Generosity and benevolence to the masses is the virtue of the age, but it is a somewhat cold-blooded virtue. The individual, personal touch is needed to make it Christlike.

The Abstemiousness of the Wine Expert.

IN what violent contrast to the life of the intemperate man is that of the temperate wine expert, whose vocation it is to create intemperance! To gain his livelihood in this capacity he must observe moderation in all things. His duty it is to test wines and liquors that the fashionable hotels and restaurants may serve their patrons with the finest and choicest beverages that can be procured.

That he may be infallible in his tests, he must deny himself every luxury of the table; he must not eat rich or highly seasoned foods; above all things, he must not touch wines! He must keep early hours; he must not indulge in tobacco in any form; he must forego the pleasure of idly dreaming at the point of a cigar—of building and again tearing down his air-castles of blue smoke. The veriest ascetic in his stone cell never employed greater rigor in his daily life than does the modern wine expert.

He works only on bright days, in a room flooded with God's glorious sunshine, and makes his test on an empty stomach through the clarified senses of sight, taste and smell. If two glasses of champagne are placed before him, he must be able to tell to what vintage they belong. In regard to whiskies and brandies, he must be able to detect at once whether they have been aged in glass or wood and to name the district in which they have been distilled. His work is better accomplished under the most favorable auspices and when his senses are at their best.

Full well the wine expert knows that if he were allowed the use of either tobacco or liquor, his senses of taste and smell would lose their delicacy of perception and their nicety of distinction.

As the musician's ear distinguishes the mazurka from the polka, the symphony from the sonata, and as the artist's eye detects the most subtle shades of color, blending them into perfect harmony, so do the supersensitive organs of the wine expert show acute and deft training. If all lives were spent with equal rigor, how speedily would the evil of intemperance be eradicated!

The moral training of the wine expert is one of the greatest of human travesties, and furnishes the superlative admission that men cannot have clear brains who are in any way addicted to intemperance.

A Compromise with Evil.

THERE will always be many persons to believe in doing evil that good may come, insisting that the end justifies the means. There will be others to make a compromise with evil for the same reason. In this category may be classed the Colorado Fuel and Iron Company.

The employes of this company number between 15,000 and 16,000, "representing a total population of about 75,000, scattered through forty communities and speaking twenty-seven different languages." These figures alone are sufficient to indicate the magnitude of the undertaking of this company in forming a sociological department and trying to carry it to a successful issue.

In the towns where these employes live, prohibitory laws have been winked at, and the result has been persistent drinking to the extent of incapacitating the men for work, upon one occasion even causing the mines to be shut down for several days.

The formation of kindergartens, cooking schools, sewing schools, reading rooms, gymnasiums, traveling libraries, etc., is a most praiseworthy effort, but if a place of social intercourse be provided for this community, where games and other innocent amusements may be entered into and enjoyed, it is surely unnecessary to make a compromise with these people by promising that if they become members of this club, they will be allowed to drink a moderate amount of what has proved to be their most bitter enemy. In seeking to reform the drunkard, why should we promise to give him drink?

It is claimed that here "liquors are sold of the best quality and at the lowest prices," but that "no man is encouraged to drink, no man is permitted to get drunk, and no treating is allowed."

Admitting that partial reformation is a step in the right direction, yet so long as liquor can be obtained by those who have been drunkards, radical reform will be an impossibility.

It is said that "these efforts to harmonize socially and to uplift groups so diverse is succeeding," and that "the success is most notable, perhaps, in dealing with the drink question." Briefly, they are adopting the homeopathic system, that "like cures like"—on the same principle as that of the establishing of the canteen in the army—and this great sociological department is monopolizing the drink traffic in so far as their own community is concerned.

Instead of a restricted supply of alcoholic drink, the sociological department of the Colorado Fuel and Iron Company should make a new departure and offer to their members harmless and refreshing beverages, seeing that they, too, are "of the best quality and at the lowest prices." The libraries and reading rooms would then prove truly enjoyable and useful, appealing to clear brains and sane judgment. Viewed in the light of "business policy," if drunkards are unreliable workmen, then surely no intoxicant will be vastly better for them than even a restricted amount.

Evangelistic Echoes.

HER mother was dead, her father was a drunkard, and she, the eldest, a girl of eighteen, was acting as housekeeper and mother of four younger children.

The local W. C. T. U. did much for the family and became deeply interested in this young woman who was more than ordinarily bright but had limited knowledge and observation. I was invited to conduct a series of gospel meetings, and this girl was present from the first. Her father became exasperated, and for several nights in succession he turned the key of the house door against her. Each day following she gathered her brothers and sisters round her and repeated, with marked accuracy, the address of the previous evening. The children passed it on to the father, and his opposition ceased.

A week or more elapsed when the young woman expressed a desire to accept the Saviour, but she was ignorant of the way to Him. At the close of an afternoon service I tarried with her and read and explained the parable of the good shepherd, the keynote being, "I am the door; by me if any man enter in he shall be saved, and go in and out and find pasture." Giving her a Testament I urged her to feed upon these precious words as coming from the Good Shepherd who never turned the key upon a soul that loved Him and sought entrance.

At the time of evening service she was among the first present. She came gliding down the aisle, her face radiant with joy, and stepping up close to me, in an undertone she exclaimed: "I've found him; I've found him!" "The Saviour?" I said. "Yes, yes. He is mine."

A blessed change came to her home. After three years I received a letter as follows:

"Dear Mrs. Palmer: You will not know me by the new name I have taken, but will remember Miss ——— living in ——— who became a Christian during your meetings. I am married to a Christian man and we are living in Dakota. I wanted you to know of this, and that, every morning at family prayers we read from the little Testament that you gave me. Our's is a Christian home and we are happy."

This incident is but one among hundreds that have occurred in connection with evangelistic temperance work, but it illustrates the character of the work and its blessed results. I have been much impressed with the recent declaration of one of our evangelists that "never in our history as now has there been such an opportunity for W. C. T. U. evangelistic work." The Woman's Christian Temperance Union has become a great and wonderful ministry. It has a message from God to the Church, to womanhood the world over, as well as to the sinful and erring. Gospel temperance is a seed of the church which sprang from Crusade soil, and, like the "grain of mustard seed," has become a plant of numerous branches towards which multitudes are flocking.

Gospel agencies and gospel methods are the only surety for meeting the needs of the age. Christ and the cross must be lifted up if this poor old world is to be saved from the bite of the serpent—strong drink—and the sting of the adder, both of which are sapping the moral life of the nation. Stealthily and unobserved on the part of many, these two leeches are drawing out the very life of the home, and of society. Well may we ask, Who is sufficient for these things? "Say not ye, there are yet four months and then cometh harvest. Lift up your eyes and look on the fields, for they are white already to harvest." May we, as evangelists become more and more an anointed band of reapers in the harvest field of Gospel Temperance.

ANNA M. PALMER.

Ames, Ia.

Monthly Bible Reading.

TOPIC: Prayer.

By Rev. Frances E. Townsley.

THESE references to the divine Word cover much of the ground: I. Heb. 11:6, "He that cometh to God must believe that He is."

"O," you say, "every non-atheistic one believes that." Does he? Really, solemnly, does he? There are different ways of believing a thing. I believe that the Green mountains are in Vermont, that the Yellowstone Park is in the United States; but this belief does not affect my life. The believing suggested by this text is very different. "God is God—the Heavenly One who lit the stars, and dug the ocean beds, and built the mountains, and made me.

The God of the Universe—ah, how I must realize my smallness and inability to come to Him unaided—yet, a God who made the lily grow, and the bird that sings, and reveals Himself to me as caring for my individual soul, my interests, my eternity. God is!

God "is a rewarder of those who diligently seek Him." Now I believe that we have gotten a wrong idea in very faithlessness; that is, that though every sincere prayer is answered in a way we are not to be certain about getting the things we ask. A woman prays for her husband, a man in the next county may be saved, and the poor woman must accept this as God's way of answering her cry. A neighboring town may be swept by revival waves, and the one village we pray for most may be left out. Guidance may be sought in one special and to us important matter, and we be left to stumble along with only our own poor judgment. Is that receiving a "reward" on the part of "those that diligently seek Him?" No!

Let us interpret Scripture by Scripture. There is no promise in the Bible where it is not assumed that the petitioner asks aright. John xiv:14.

"In my Name." This is a wonderful word implying oneness with the divine wish and purpose of Him who said it. Now, read Mark xi:22, and then go into your closet and pray that some mountain be removed, without any regard to whether it would honor God or not, and believe, if you can, that it will come to pass.

One thing is sure: If this Bible be true, God wishes to do the best for us. We have no right to consciously ask for anything less than the best. We may talk over all our needs with our Heavenly Father, telling him all our feelings and desires in any matter, but when it comes to demanding a definite thing, we must hold it up before God in Christ's name and first settle that it is worthy our pleading, and therefore in His will.

How this method will expurgate a great many selfish, silly, unnecessary things from our praying! O, how patient God has been with our demands! Bringing our petitions down to this simplicity, what holy things for ourselves and others we shall seek, and how definite we shall learn to be. Yes, let us winnow our petitions and mean what we say to God. In the Belearic Isles the mothers teach their little ones to shoot with bow and arrow, by tying their lunches up in packages and fastening them to a tree twig. The arrow must hit the twig and sever it from the tree ere the package falls for the hungry lad.

God is true. If once in all eternity He had falsified, not an angel in Heaven would know that He might not falsify again. He means His promises. O, for overcoming praying! O, for definite pleading! O, for Christian believing!

The devil's master stroke to-day is not the card-table, the dance, the theater, or strong drink. It is that subtle influence which permeates much preaching and more practice, the leaven of spiritual corruption which works its way through children of praying mothers and Christian professors everywhere, that God is only a mighty lawgiver, with no personal, affectionate yearnings towards His individual child and that prayer is simply an ethical habit worth cultivating, as one might gaze at the moon, or enjoy a glowing sunset, and be uplifted thereby. Christians, wake up! Take your Bibles and learn that its teachings on prayer are simple and clear and that the God who answered Jonah and Daniel and your mother and mine is the same yesterday, to-day and forever.

Plant your feet on a promise and obey the conditions of prayer made so plain in the Bible, and go to praying as never before. The time is short. Commune with God, though the club, or the dainty salad, or the fancy-work go—all of which are well enough if they do not crowd out your Lord. Even fifteen minutes of real prayer daily will make new men and women of all who practice it.

Vassar, Mich.

OFFICIAL COMMUNICATIONS

REST COTTAGE. THE WILLARD.

GENERAL OFFICERS:

President,
MRS. LILLIAN M. N. STEVENS, Portland, Me.
Vice-President-at-Large,
MISS ANNA A. GORDON, Evanston, Ill.
Corresponding Secretary,
MRS. SUSANNA M. D. FRY, Evanston, Ill.
Recording Secretary,
MRS. CLARA C. HOFFMAN, Kansas City, Mo.
Asst. Recording Secretary,
MRS. FRANCES E. BEAUCHAMP, Lexington, Ky.
Treasurer,
MRS. HELEN M. BARKER, Evanston, Ill.

Headquarters National W. C. T. U., Evanston, Ill.

Corresponding Secretary's Notes.

DEAR SISTERS:—Before this you have received the circular letter from the National officers concerning the bills at Washington in which we are interested. The enclosure of literature on the polygamy question was not large, but, we hope, sufficient to set each one to thinking and seeking more light on this important question.

The fact that the House Judiciary Committee voted seven to six not to present the constitutional amendment bill should not dampen the ardor of our workers. It only means that the campaign will probably have to be carried over into the next year. This is, therefore, the time to become educated on this subject. We are hoping the states will keep Mrs. Weed and Dr. Elliott busy speaking. To let in the light is most important. Whether these speakers will be available next year at the favorable terms of the present is uncertain. By taking them now, unions are responsible only for traveling expenses and entertainment. Their salaries are paid by the Interdenominational Council. They go into states by invitation of the state executive, who becomes responsible for their itineraries within the state.

It will not be possible for Mrs. Martin to send out literature as was announced some weeks ago.

One of the most important actions taken lately is that of asking the several states to take immediate steps to secure state legislation prohibiting saloons within four miles of United states forts, army posts and camps, and all premises used for military purposes by the United States. This will not apply, of course, to states already having prohibition laws. Such laws, well enforced, will remove temptation from the soldiers to a good degree, and it is hoped do away with many of the complaints of drunkenness and disorder.

Just before Mrs. Stevens and Miss Gordon went east a delightful little banquet was given in honor of Mrs. Stevens as editor-in-chief of THE UNION SIGNAL, at the Business Woman's Club, Chicago. Mrs. Jewett, the managing editor, Miss Alice M. Krimbill and Miss Julia H. Thayer, associate editors, and Miss Gilbert and Miss Austin, of the W. T. P. A., were hostesses. The social hour was most enjoyable, and gave opportunity not only for the renewal of old-time memories on the part of Mrs. Grow, Mrs. Fry and others, of the days when it was not an uncommon thing for an informal banquet "to happen" in the editorial rooms, but for a better acquaintance with Miss Thayer and Miss Krimbill, most genial and valued assistants on "THE SIG." Those so fortunate as to surround the home-like table will not soon forget the charm of the social time, or the feeling that the Business Woman's Club rooms must be just the nicest place in all Chicago for women traveling alone.

SUE M. D. FRY.

Superintendents.

Fairs and Open Air Meetings.

DEAR CO-WORKERS:—Looking backward over the work of last year I find much to commend, and looking forward, much to hope for in the future. Early in the year I sent out "Suggestions" and Annual Report to every state L. T. L. secretary, every superintendent, and to either the president or secretary of states not having a superintendent, and I have also sent out nearly 3,000 membership cards.

Words fail to express my appreciation of the faithful workers in thirty-two states and two territories, who all report greater interest in the work of this department, and many friends for the cause, at fairs and open air meetings.

New members, active and honorary, have been gained, and I regret that a record was not kept and the cards returned to me, so that the members gained might have been counted in the contest for the National Banner of the department and three cash prizes of five dollars each, in gold. Mrs. Adams, of Ohio, sent in the largest number of cards properly filled, and was awarded the National Banner. Indiana sent in the next largest number with a good report to open air meetings. Mrs. Phelps, of New York, sent in the best report of open air meetings, and gained the cash prize of five dollars in gold. I failed to receive a report of the number of honorary members gained by any state, or a report of work done by the L. T. L. at fairs and open air meeting, so these cash prizes could not be awarded.

Begin work now by supplying workers with department cards, and ask for a quarterly report, as increased membership will be the keynote of this department this year, and will be an important factor in the contest for the prizes offered. Appoint your committees at once so they will be prepared to wait on the fair directors in January. Early in the year secure a place on the program of the meetings to be held in the open air, then engage your speakers for the dates given you.

Organizations are rapidly multiplying in numbers; each one has its annual union, when thousands assemble. At such times your opportunity comes to interest the masses of the people in our work. Responsibility follows opportunity, and if you fail to send the message to these people, you lose the chance to sound a note of warning to a class you can reach in no other way. Organizers, lecturers, and evangelists say this is the only department where they are sure of a large audience, and where men are in the majority.

It is high time we put forth special effort to enlist greater numbers of men in our work, for we need their influnce and votes in legislative bodies, in the church, in state and local circles. Rally your forces and win the cash prizes offered for the largest number of honorary members gained this year.

Put forth special effort to have laws passed prohibiting the sale of intoxicants on fair grounds and in city parks. Spend more money for permanent buildings where Rest Rooms, Day Nurseries, Check Stands, and where a "Cozy Corner" can be fitted up for an Emergency Hospital. You can make such accommodations a source of revenue by charging the small sum of ten cents per hour for a cot or for the care of a child.

Look carefully after the illegal sale of liquor, gambling devices, and the sale or distribution of impure literature.

Interest the senior L. T. L. in your work; try to have a Children's Day, when Anti-Cigaret leagues, Junior L. T. L's., Bands of Mercy, Pledged Sunday-school children, and School Savings Bank children can march, the latter band singing Mrs. Oberholtzer's marching song, and when possible have a juvenile band.

Select a speaker who knows how to use her voice, one whose arguments and words are logical and convincing, so that people who are perishing for lack of knowledge may become interested in our work.

We should not forget the stranger within our gates. Immigrants of all nationalities are landing on our shores, whose ideas and habits are not American; and is it not our duty to reach them at these great gatherings, in their own language, and by the use of literature try to show them the better way. As this is a many sided department, you may apply to superintendents of all departments for such literature as locality and the special needs of a community seem to a superintendent to demand, and select carefully the subject to be discussed by the speaker.

Keep the banner of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union aloft; it should float from the daintiest and most attractive building at fairs and expositions, and at other great assemblies. When clouds appear, and your way seems hedged about, remember the passage in the first chapter of Joshua: "Be strong and of a good courage; be not afraid, neither be thou dismayed, for the Lord thy God is with thee whithersoever thou goest."

If fair directors fail to provide ice water, get up a petition signed by leading citizens, requesting them to provide ice water for their patrons, and they will not turn a deaf ear to such an appeal.

I appeal to every state president to urge the work of this department. Why should we delay? A year hence the presidential campaign will be on, and we cannot gain the ear of the people then as now, so I entreat you to begin work at once in every state and territory.

If new superintendents have been appointed, do not fail to notify us. Enlist more workers, appoint superintendents—state, county and local. Then supply them with plan of work, etc. It means hard work to carry out successfully this line of work, but it pays in the "good we all may do."

I wish to impress upon you that we want members. You can secure ten pledge signers with greater ease than one new member. Keep a record of the new members, report quarterly to your state superintendent, and return membership cards with report. In this way your work will count in the contest for prizes. Write to me for cards, suggestions and plan of work. The telegram of greeting sent by department workers from Portland was appreciated.

H. T. GUILD.
902 W. Broadway, Sedalia, Mo.

Social Meetings and Red Letter Days.

WE have received encouraging letters from the state superintendents during the past year. From the Atlantic to the Pacific, from Maine to Texas, in almost every state there has been an awakening to the possibilities involved in this department.

Our women are learning that in no other way can members be added to their unions so easily as in a social meeting. They also find that temperance truths can be disseminated by voice and through the printed page to persons in a home who would not attend a public lecture.

The different departments can be definitely explained in papers prepared by the superintendents, or addresses by our specialists. Scientific Temperance Instruction might be the subject for one afternoon or evening. Invite the superintendent of schools with his corps of teachers to participate in the discussion. A bond of sympathy would be promoted between the teachers and the union, and temperance instruction in the schools would be more effective. Meetings in the interest of franchise, mercy—in fact, each one of the departments—would result in doubling our members. A medal and a membership contest in each union during the year, followed by a social, would advance the temperance education of the masses and strengthen public sentiment in our favor. For gaining members, for circulating literature, for winning the conservative, for keeping our members, there is no department that can excel social meetings and Red Letter days. Try it this year, so that each state can take part in Benefit night. Try it so that you may win some of the banners. Send a two-cent stamp to my address for leaflets.

Thirty-eight states have reported 9,409 Social Meetings and Red Letter Days, 843 of which have been observed by the L. T. L.'s. We have gained 5,212 members. The L. T. L.'s of New York and Pennsylvania gained 369 of this number Unions generally observed Frances E. Willard's memorial day, and $272.34 were contributed to the fund. More has been given, but it was not reported to me. Seven hundred fifty-two thousand seven hundred eighty-three pages of literature have been distributed, and $9,152.13 collected at the Social Meetings and Red Letter Days.

New York has made the largest gain in membership. Pennsylvania, Ohio, Massachusetts, Illinois, Colorado, Iowa, New Jersey and Missouri deserve honorable mention.

While many of the states have gained a greater number of members, South Dakota and Delaware have made the greatest percentage in membership, and South Dakota will again take the banner which she took in 1897.

The L. T. L. banner returns to Pennsylvania.

MARY D. TOMLINSON.
212 La Grande Ave., Plainfield, N. J.

I Will Cure You of Rheumatism

Else No Money Is Wanted.

After 2,000 experiments, I have learned how to cure Rheumatism. Not to turn bony joints into flesh again; that is impossible. But I can cure the disease always, at any stage, and forever.

I ask for no money. Simply write me a postal and I will send you an order on your nearest druggist for six bottles Dr. Shoop's Rheumatic Cure, for every druggist keeps it. Use it for a month and, if it succeeds, the cost is only $5.50. If it fails, I will pay your druggist myself.

I have no samples, because any medicine that can affect Rheumatism quickly must be drugged to the verge of danger. I use no such drugs, and it is folly to take them. You must get the disease out of the blood.

My remedy does that, even in the most difficult, obstinate cases. No matter how impossible this seems to you, I know it and I take the risk. I have cured tens of thousands of cases in this way, and my records show that 39 out of 40 who get those six bottles pay gladly. I have learned that people in general are honest with a physician who cures them. That is all I ask. If I fail I don't expect a penny from you.

Simply write me a postal card or letter. I will send you my book about Rheumatism, and an order for the medicine. Take it for a month, as it won't harm you anyway. If it fails, it is free, and I leave the decision with you. Address Dr. Shoop Box 948, Racine, Wis.

Mild cases, not chronic, are often cured by one or two bottles. At all druggists.

News from the Field

WORLD'S W. C. T. U.

General Officers.

President—Lady Henry Somerset, Eastnor Castle, Ledbury, England.
Vice-President-at-Large—Mrs. L. M. N. Stevens, Portland, Maine, U. S. A.
Honorary Secretaries—Miss Agnes E. Slack, Ripley, Derbyshire, England; Miss Anna A. Gordon, Evanston, Ill., U. S. A.
Honorary Treasurer—Mrs. Mary E. Sanderson Danville, Quebec, Canada.
General Secretary Y Branch—Mrs. Frances J. Barnes, 126 W. 103d St., New York City.
General Secretary L. T. L. Branch—Miss Anna A. Gordon, Evanston, Ill., U. S. A.

Australia.

Our Promoted Comrade, Mrs. James Lyall.

THE subject of the following sketch was born in Edinburg, Scotland, on April 15th, 1832, and entered into rest on October 22nd, 1902. She was the second of three daughters of godly parents, only one of whom survives (the accomplished wife of the distinguished missionary Dr. J. G. Paton.)

Possessing a nature gentle and retiring, she was yet strong as basalt in the principles of faith and truth which formed the basis of her character. Reared in a Scottish home, in the historic city of Edinburg which teems with members of the Covenanters and their allegiance to God and the right, in some measure accounts for that conscientiousness which in a marked degree characterized her speech and action.

Mrs. Lyall possessed the pen of a ready writer and one cannot estimate the good she accomplished by its use. Only a stern sense of duty made her speak from the public platform, but the booklets she published showed her an able exponent of our temperance cause. This literary gift she inherited from her father, Mr. Whitecross being the author of several books of anecdotes illustrative of the Old and New Testaments and the shorter Catechism, works that were widely known a generation ago. From her mother she caught the spirit of ministry to the needy, the erring.

April 29, 1857, she was married to the Rev. J. Lyall, with whom she lived in most devoted fellowship for over forty-five years. Shortly after their marriage they came out to Adelaide, and Mr. Lyall was for over forty years the esteemed minister of Flinders Street Presbyterian Church. Mrs. Lyall was an ideal minister's wife, taking an affectionate interest in each member of the congregation, helping her husband in every way that was open to her and sustaining him by her sympathy and prayers. But still wider was her outlook, and her loving heart was moved with concern, with longing for the people who sit in darkness, and she established the Presbyterian Women's Missionary Union.

When Mrs. Clement Leavitt visited South Australia in 1886, the aims and object of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union appealed to Mrs. Lyall as work for God, for Home, and for Humanity never failed to do. On the formation of the first union in South Australia on April 8, 1886, she became a member and the records of the union tell of her deep interest in the work, an interest which was sustained till the end, for only a month before her home-going she, though far from well, attended the state convention.

It was a characteristic of our beloved sister to have hope in the salvation of the most degraded; no thought of the labor entailed ever kept her back from seeking the rescue of those whom others deemed hopeless. It is in keeping with this trait that the first department in the W. C. T. U. she took up was Public House Work. In 1896 she was appointed colonial superintendent of drawing room work which office she ably filled, and in 1897 she was elected colonial president by the unanimous vote of convention and held this position till 1900 when she refused re-election, to the great regret of the sisters. Having resigned her department of Drawing Room work on her election as president she was without a seat on the executive and the feeling was general that our council meetings would be materially helped by her wise words. She was then elected superintendent of Prison Work. Mrs. Barney, the World's superintendent of that department was entertained in the home of our sister when visiting our state, a visit Mrs. Lyall often referred to in warm terms of appreciation. Our sister was also Australasian superintendent of Work among Foreigners and Aborigines. Mrs. Lyall was one of the founders of the Y. W. C. A. For some years she had retired from active work in this organization, but just recently accepted a seat on its executive committee.

The last words of our promoted comrade, "Pray that His will may be mine," were the key-note of her life prayer—the seeking to do the will of the Lord Christ. Much more could be said about the life of her who has gone to be "the guest of God," a life whose fragrance will remain in that home circle which held her in tenderest love and esteem, in the wider circle of social life, among her co-workers in our white ribbon army, and yet further still, may we not believe that it will reach to those for whom she labored to bring them to better things and help them attain the goal she would they might reach, so that they, her dearest, her fellow-workers, and those for whom she labored may indeed realize that "she being dead yet speaketh." Let us rejoice as we think of her abundant entrance into the Kingdom, and may we who follow that way see to it that the like earnestness, the like whole-hearted consecration be ours, and one day we shall together rejoice over victories won, one day we shall together see the King in His beauty in the land that is not afar off.

"Vainly we weep and wrestle with our sorrow,
We cannot see His roads, they lie so broad.
But His eternal day knows no to-morrow
And life and death are all the same with God."

HELEN EDWARDS,
State Reporter.

National W. C. T. U.

Florida.

THOUGH the summer vacations are now over the W. C. T. U. people who have been resting get back into harness but slowly. There is great need, however, that they waken, for in several counties "wet" and "dry" elections are in prospect or have already taken place the last few weeks. We believe the temperance sentiment is strongest in the state, but the whisky men take no vacations and frequently score triumphs, as was the case in the Orange county election last week which went "wet," much to the disappointment of the temperance people.

At the recent State Fair held in Lake City, the W. C. T. U. had a Rest Cottage that was much appreciated. Mrs. Anthony and her assistants had prepared and handsomely decorated the booth used, and from it many thousand temperance leaflets were distributed. The Lake City union, organized last year by our president, Mrs. Brown, now numbers over fifty members and has an L. T. L. of about 200 boys and girls. On Temperance Day the Legion marched to the fair grounds and sang several fine songs, gave a drill, saluted the flag, and gave their yell with enthusiasm and fine effect. The union cleared a handsome sum by conducting a lunch stand during the four days of the fair; Mrs. C. Y. McCormick and her able assistants deserve credit for their success in this particular.

We are hoping for great things of Mrs. Bailey, National organizer, when she comes to Florida in the near future. She has done so much for other states we are encouraged to believe she can help us, also. We need that public sentiment should be educated against moderate drinking, for at this season, particularly, even sober church deacons think it no sin to plan for and indulge in their Christmas egg nogg.

NEVA C. CHILD,
State reporter, Arcadia.

Connecticut.

NEW HAVEN COUNTY.—The annual county convention was held in Meriden, December 2, and was largely attended. Reports of superintendents showed good work done in the departments of Evangelistic, Press, Franchise, Scientific Temperance Instruction, Flower Mission and Work for Soldiers and Sailors. Reports of secretary and treasurer were given, also from the unions in the county. Mrs. Helen Harford, state president of Oregon, was present and gave a Bible reading. The officers were re-elected

A 10 Per Cent Reduction

FOR JANUARY ONLY.

RALPH CONNOR'S BOOKS.

"Glengarry School Days."

Connor's Latest Work.

This new volume fittingly supplements "The Man from Glengarry" in that it deals with some of the same characters, but in a different period.
Cloth bound.
Illustrated.

Price, - $1.25
Net, postpaid, $1.12

"The Man from Glengarry."

A tale of the Ottawa.

Price, - - - - - - $1.50
Net, postpaid, $1.35.

"The Sky Pilot."

A tale of the foothills.

Price, - - - - - - $1.25
Net, postpaid, $1.12.

"Black Rock."

A tale of the Selkirks.

Price, - - - - - - $1.25
Net, postpaid, $1.12.

"Janet Ward."

Margaret E. Sangster.

A meritorious book for girls.

Price, - $1.50
Net, postpaid, $1.35.

"Alcohol a Dangerous and Unnecessary Medicine."

Mrs. M. M. Allen.

A book that should be in every household.

Price, - - - - - - $1.25
Net, postpaid, $1.12.

"The Little Green God."

Caroline Atwater Mason.

A story and study of o-day.

Price, - $1.00
Net, postpaid, 90 cents.

"Studies in Hearts."

Julia MacNair Wright.

A series of charming sketches. Illustrated.

Price, - - - - - - 75 cents
Net, postpaid, 67 cents.

"To the Third Generation."

Hope Daring.

A story of intemperance, showing the effects on the children and grandchildren of a man whom wine was not supposed to injure.

Price, - - - - - - $1.00
Net, postpaid, 90 cents.

COUPON

Please send to .....
Street .....
City .....
State .....

The books herein listed (attach list of books) upon which, by the use of this coupon I am entitled to 10 per cent discount if presented during December or January.

We solicit your orders for any and all books, assuring you that orders will be promptly filled. NO FURTHER DISCOUNT FROM THE NET PRICES.

Woman's Temperance Publishing Association,
184 LaSalle St., CHICAGO.

as follows: President, Mrs. Alta H. Downs; secretary, Mrs. Anna G. Ekmark; treasurer, Mrs. Frank Fowler, and vice-president, Mrs. C. A. Holmes and Mrs. R. Morril. Mrs. Grace C. Platt, state L. T. L. secretary, gave an interesting address. The L. T. L., Company A., of Meriden, took part in exercises which were much enjoyed, the little folks doing finely in their recitations and songs. Six of the boys and girls who were not absent from an L. T. L. meeting for one year were given rewards for their faithful attendance. The evening meeting was addressed by Mrs. Helen Harford.

Branford union reports that they are working all the time. Meetings are held twice a month at the homes of members. The Flower Mission work was continued until the middle of November. Several poor families were remembered with baskets of good things for Thanksgiving. The work among the boys is carried on again this winter. An entertainment and plant sale in October was very successful.

Litchfield County.—Morris union held their annual meeting and twelfth anniversary. The union organized with six members, three of whom were present at this meeting.

Windham County.—Central Village held their annual meeting lately, at which time the officers were all re-elected and also most of the superintendents. The union furnished a team to carry no-license voters to the election and the temperance element fought bravely, but failed and the town went for license. Some excellent literature has been put in a wall pocket at the railroad station. Willimantic union recently gave a reception to new and honorary members, at which the county president, Mrs. Lisa K. Fuller, gave a very interesting account of the National Convention at Portland. Miss Robbins gave her lecture on Manila to a large audience. The captain of the Spanish War Veterans was present and confirmed all she said. His experience was that the canteen was an evil. The soldiers were invited thereby to drink and then fined if they accepted and became drunk. The next afternoon Miss Robbins exhibited her curios to the school children at the expense of the union. The local papers have within two weeks printed twelve and one half columns furnished by the press superintendent.

Mrs. M. Josephine Lockrow,
State Reporter, Meriden.

Indian Territory.

The fifteenth annual convention of the Indian Territory W. C. T. U. met at Ardmore, September 17-19. The session was a pleasant one throughout. The people showed the true southern hospitality and made our stay enjoyable. The literary clubs of the city gave an informal reception at the close of the exercises on Welcome night. Next September the convention goes to Tahlequah, the capitol of the Cherokee nation, the birthplace of the Territorial W. C. T. U., the Athens of the tribe, an Indian city, not connected with the outside world by railroad until this fall.

Mrs. A. C. Zehner, Texas state lecturer, and Mrs. Keith, superintendent of railroad work in Massachusetts, added materially to the interest and helpfulness of the convention. Mrs. Zehner's evening lectures furnished some powerful arguments against the liquor business.

The best department work was done in Medal Contest, Scientific Temperance Instruction, and in jail work, the last named carrying off the department banner.

The Loyal Temperance Legion, of Wetumka, organized only last summer, won the Legion Banner, with a wide-awake membership of one hundred.

The officers for the year are: President, Mrs. Laura E. Harsha, Muskogee; vice-president, Mrs. K. L. E. Murrow, Atoka; corresponding secretary, Miss Martha Gilmore, Muskogee; recording secretary, Mrs. E. A. Griswold, Holdenville; treasurer, Mrs. Theresa Holman, Wetumka.

The work starts out very favorably this year. Mrs. A. P. McDonald, district president from Missouri, has been in this field since Oct. 13, and has organized new unions and Loyal Temperance Legions at Miami, Chelsea, Fairland, Tulsa, and a union at Sapulpa, making a gain of eighty-three in the membership of the unions and adding over 300 legioners to the ranks. She will remain with us until Dec. 15, and revisit a number of places, where she has already prepared the way, and will complete organizations on her return.

The territory is being more systematically organized this year than ever before. A president has been appointed for all of the four districts except one, and we hope that will be supplied soon. It is proposed to hold district conventions in the spring.

We are undertaking to publish a territorial paper, not so much because there is a large constituency demanding a means of communication, but because the needs are great, and we judged that the paper would be a real "Helper" in promoting the interests of the cause. If friends in the states will subscribe for the paper at twenty-five cents a year, or both The Union Signal and "Our Helper" for $1.50, they will learn much of interest concerning the territory, its work and its needs, and, at the same time, help in the work of claiming this country for God, and home and native land.

Martha Gilmore,
Territorial Reporter, Muskogee.

Idaho.

Annual Meeting.

The annual state convention of Idaho was held in the Congregational church, Weiser, Nov. 11-13. A goodly number of delegates were present and all were much encouraged by the many good papers that were read and the soul-inspiring talks that were made during convention.

We all joined heartily in singing "Praise God from whom all blessings flow" after the reading of the reports of our state secretary and treasurer which told us that our number had been more than doubled during the year.

There was only one delegate present from the northern part of the state and the convention decided that it was best to divide the state work into northern and southern Idaho.

Our state president, Mrs. Ora Oakes of Caldwell, inspired us all with more energy and ambition in the cause.

The business sessions were much enjoyed and the programs were interesting and varied.

The spirit of Christianity and spirituality were predominent in every meeting, and all enjoyed the devotional exercises, especially the noontide prayer service.

The convention was wonderfully blessed in the presence of the National organizer, Mrs. Mattie N. Graves, of Washington. Her lectures were grand and she was ever ready with helpful counsel and advice.

The old officers were all re-elected, namely, Mrs. Ora Oakes, president; Mrs. Sarah Mitchell, vice-president; Mrs. Quick, corresponding secretary, and Mrs. Bird, recording secretary; Mrs. Emma Fowler, treasurer.

The convention will meet at Boise next year.

Mrs. Julia M. Graybill,
State Supt. Press Work, Nampa.

Nutshell News

A portrait of Miss Willard has been presented to Amity College, Iowa, by the local union at College Springs.

"The Woman's Journal," official organ of the Canadian W. C. T. U., appears in a new guise after several months' suspension.

The W. C. T. U. of Denver, Colo., gave a "Crusade Social" December 18, at which all the invited guests were over sixty years of age.

The members of the W. C. T. U. of Johnson City, Tenn., are to open a night school for the benefit of young men who are employed during the day.

The Central Union of Sioux City, Iowa, is arranging for a series of gospel temperance meetings with Mr. and Mrs. A. J. McColl, of Des Moines, as leaders.

The union at Superior, Neb., has just given its annual reception to officials and teachers of the public schools. The ministers and editors of the city were also invited guests.

A Fine Kidney Remedy.

Mr. A. S. Hitchcock, East Hampton, Conn. (The Clothier), says if any sufferer from Kidney and Bladder Disease will write him he will direct them to the perfect home cure he used. He has nothing whatever to sell.

Mrs. Antoinette A. Hawley, state president of Colorado W. C. T. U., will go abroad in February to be absent six months. A reception in her honor will be given by Denver white ribboners January 20.

Mrs. L. E. Bailey reports a new Y of fifteen members in Sullivan county, N. Y. Mrs. Bailey has offered the young women a set of Florence Kingsley's books when they secured fifty paid members.

Seneca County, N. Y., secured the services of Mrs. Helen L. Bullock, National organizer, for one week, which was generously extended to nine days. As a result, three new unions were organized and eighty-one active and twenty-eight honorary members enrolled in the county.

The W. C. T. U. of Paragould, Ark., held a special Thanksgiving service at the M. E. church, after which a committee distributed the offerings of provisions and money. An interesting program was given by the local officers, and an impromptu number was an able speech by Mr. R. E. L. Johnston, a prominent lawyer, who called to leave a donation. If readers of The Union Signal wish to know how the W. C. T. U. of Paragould, Ark., caused the town to go "dry" at the last election, the information will be cheerfully furnished by Mrs. M. F. Collier, president.

The union at Mobile, Ala., made a public appeal to the merchants of the place to substitute something useful for the customary jug or bottle of Christmas whisky. Rev. (Mrs.) O. E. Stombaugh, who carries on a gospel temperance mission at this place, arranged for a Christmas entertainment by way of diverting the young people from the many temptations peculiar to the season in that locality. Mrs. Stombaugh wishes us to acknowledge for her the receipt of literature sent in response to a recent appeal in The Union Signal. She also asks the prayers of the white ribbon sisterhood for her work.

The Minneapolis (Minn.) "Journal" gives a very complimentary notice of the work of Mrs. I. F. McClure, of Hubbard, state superintendent of Work Among Indians. Mrs. McClure learned the name of every agent and every school teacher in the reservations and has studied a county map of the state for the location of its Indians. By corresponding with numerous schools on White Earth, Red Lake and Leech Lake reservations the crying need of temperance work among the Indians has been learned. One superintendent writes: "I have never in all my six years' Indian service seen evil to the extent it exists here as a result of drink; the women are almost as much given to the accursed habit as the men." The plan of work of the W. C. T. U. in Minnesota is to send organizers among the Indians who will instruct and organize unions, co-operating with the missionaries, who are eager to help, but whose labors are hindered. Unions near the reservations are expected to send workers among the Indians as well as to assist in raising funds by which organizing work can be done.

Crowned.

The union at De Moss Springs, Oregon, report the death of a beloved honorary member, Rev. C. B. Davis, who was called to his reward November 28, 1902. Resolutions of sympathy were sent to the bereaved family, and to various papers.

Mrs. Sophronia Cornelia Kinney, a long time member of the W. C. T. U. and a devoted Christian worker, passed from labor to reward December 12, 1902, at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Eva Kinney Miller, Peoria, Ill. The funeral service was held from the First Congregational Church, so recently the scene of a state convention, and Miss Brehm, state president, assisted.

New England Conservatory of Music

GEORGE W. CHADWICK, Director.

Our new buildings, costing nearly $1,000,000 to erect and equip, are now finished. We offer greater facilities, master teachers and more thorough instruction, than elsewhere to be had, here or abroad.

Our present enlarged facilities and magnificent resources should lead you to send for our year-book, which we mail free.

FRANK W. HALE, General Manager, Boston, Mass.

INDIVIDUAL CUP COMMUNION SERVICE Should be used by every church. Complete outfit sent for trial upon request. THOMAS COMMUNION SERVICE CO., Box 75, Lima, O.

LADIES to do piecework at their homes. We furnish all material and pay from $7 to $12 weekly. Experience unnecessary. Send stamped envelope to ROYAL CO., Dept. U.S., 34 Monroe Street, Chicago, Ill.

New Leaflets.

Home Leaflets for Mothers' Meetings.

No. 3 The New Century for Mothers, Mrs. Nettie B. Fernald.
No. 13 Why a Mothers' Meeting? Mrs. J. H. Myers.
Price, 3c. each; 50, 50c.; 100, 75c.

Mothers' Meetings, Purity Leaflets.

No. 3 Safeguard the Home, Mrs. Emma W. Shores.
Price 2c. each; 100, 50c.

National Leaflets.

No. 2 Suggestions for Treasurers. Mrs. Helen M. Barker.
No. 31 The Philosophy of Fashion —What Shall We Wear? Louise C. Purington, M. D.
No. 94 American Liberty — Will Alcohol Help the Soldier Maintain It? Mrs. Mary H. Hunt.
No. 95 A Double Jury on Woman Suffrage. Amos Wells.
No. 96 A Lesson in Finance. Mrs. Helen M. Barker.
Price, 3c. each; 50, 50c.; 100, 75c.

Department Leaflets.

Y. W. C. T. U.
No. 56 The Ideal Y. Member. Miss Laura Smith.
L. T. L.
No. 182 A Study in L. T. L. Methods. Mrs. Helen G. Rice.
School Savings Banks.
No. 222 How School Savings Banks are Run. Mrs. S. L. Oberholtzer.
Parlor Meetings.
No. 242 How to Win. Mrs. Mary D. Tomlinson.
Narcotics.
No. 47 Why is the Cigaret more harmful than Tobacco used in other ways?
Price, 50, 15c.; 100, 25c.

Total Abstinence Leaflet.

No. 18 Experience: The Schoolmaster.
Signal Lights.
No. 4 How Can I Win New Members? Mrs. M. B. Platt.
Price, 25c. per 100.

Woman's Temperance Publishing Ass'n,
184 La Salle St., - - Chicago.

The Value of Charcoal.

Few People Know How Useful it is in Preserving Health and Beauty.

Nearly everybody knows that charcoal is the safest and most efficient disinfectant and purifier in nature, but few realize its value when taken into the human system for the same cleansing purpose.

Charcoal is a remedy that the more you take of it the better; it is not a drug at all, but simply absorbs the gases and impurities always present in the stomach and intestines and carries them out of the system.

Charcoal sweetens the breath after smoking, drinking, or after eating onions and other odorous vegetables.

Charcoal effectually clears and improves the complexion, it whitens the teeth and further acts as a natural and eminently safe cathartic.

It absorbs the injurious gases which collect in the stomach and bowels; it disinfects the mouth and throat from the poison of catarrh.

All druggists sell charcoal in one form or another, but probably the best charcoal and the most for the money is in Stuart's Absorbent Lozenges; they are composed of the finest powdered Willow charcoal, and other harmless antiseptics in tablet form, or rather in the form of large, pleasant tasting lonzenges, the charcoal being mixed with honey.

The daily use of these lozenges will soon tell in a much improved condition of the general health, better complexion, sweeter breath and purer blood, and the beauty of it is, that no possible harm can result from their continued use, but, on the contrary, great benefit.

A Buffalo physician in speaking of the benefits of charcoal, says: "I advise Stuart's Absorbent Lozenges to all patients suffering from gas in stomach and bowels, and to clear the complexion and purify the breath, mouth and throat; I also believe the liver is greatly benefited by the daily use of them; they cost but twenty-five cents a box at drug stores, and although in some sense a patent preparation, yet I believe I get more and better charcoal in Stuart's Absorbent Lozenges than in any of the ordinary charcoal tablets."

LARGE DIVIDENDS ASSURED.

Investors Guaranteed Against Loss.

Stock in the Honduras Investment and Plantation Co., owning a tropical plantation of 60,000 acres, is guaranteed by gold bonds. An Ideal Investment for large and small capitalists. No greater proposition in the market. For particulars, address

Honduras Investment and Plantation Co.
HENDRICKS, MINNESOTA.

KINDLY MENTION THE UNION SIGNAL WHEN WRITING ADVERTISERS.

Responsive Readings

Published Monthly.

Designed for the use of local unions and of great aid to workers, as they contain information wholly upon the work of the departments of the W. C. T. U.

SUBSCRIPTION PRICE:

Single Copies, per year	$ .10
13 Copies, per year, to one address	1.00
100 of this issue	.50

Subject for January Reading,

The Work for the Promotion of Purity in Literature and Art.

By Emilie D. Martin.

Woman's Temperance Publishing Association,
184 LA SALLE ST., CHICAGO, ILL.

HINTS ON HOME NURSING

By AMELIA E. GRAESSLE

Superintendent of the Training School for Nurses, Frances E. Willard National Temperance Hospital

THIS new feature of The UNION SIGNAL is intended for the benefit of mothers and home-keepers who cannot avail themselves of trained nurses in the sick room. The care of the invalid will be treated in the common-sense, rational way. Non-alcoholic remedies will be a special feature. The department is open to questions from mothers and all who are interested. These should be addressed to THE UNION SIGNAL.

Care of the Patient.

The most essential of the many things that should be observed in the care of the sick, are the proper ventilation and light of the sickroom. First and foremost, a sick room should always be on the sunny side or southern exposure and as far from the sitting-room and kitchen as possible, to avoid the noise of the house, and the odor of cooking. An ideal room would have two or three windows, a bed (iron preferred), a dresser, a few plain chairs and a plain table. The room should be thoroughly cleaned two or three times a week by scrubbing the floor, and woodwork. The furniture may be cleaned by making a suds of Ivory soap and using a soft cotton cloth or soft hair brush and then polishing with a cotton cloth or chamois skin. In sweeping the room, the raising of dust may be prevented by simply pinning a cloth round the broom. In dusting, use a damp cloth to prevent the dust from flying.

In making the bed, if it is necessary to use a rubber sheet, a draw-sheet should be placed over it, which is done by folding a sheet in the middle and tucking in on both sides. In case no rubber sheet is available, clean newspapers will answer the same purpose, and afterwards they may be destroyed. The linen should be changed on the sick bed every day, and the soiled linen and other wash material should at once be removed from the room. If the room is a large one, a constant current of fresh air may be obtained by lowering one of the windows from the top. If the room is small and communicates with another room by a door, throw open the window in the adjoining room, leaving the door open between. When there is only a small bedroom, the air may be kept pure by opening the window a little way and placing a screen before it. The patient should be well covered. A screen may be improvised by taking a sheet and throwing it over a clothes-rack or by simply opening an umbrella and placing it before the patient's face. Open the window wide, and air thoroughly. As the room becomes warm, remove the extra covering.

In ventilating the sick room great care must be taken to prevent the patient from taking cold, and draughts must be avoided.

Scarlet fever, diphtheria and pneumonia patients need plenty of fresh air. No greater mistake exists than to keep these patients in close, warm rooms.

The room must be supplied with a thermometer. In fever cases it should read 65 deg. F.; in lung diseases, 70 deg. F.

Ventilation and Care of the Sick Room.

The patient should be kept quiet, and all unpleasant subjects should be avoided. Visitors should be kept away from the patient, who, as a rule, would rather not see anyone. When visitors must be admitted to the room, do not tell them the condition of the patient or how sick he has been, but let the conversation drift upon other things.

After the patient's breakfast is over, say one hour after, it is well to give the daily bath, which should be a nice, warm, cleansing bath. Place the patient upon a blanket or a large bath towel, remove the top covers and put a blanket over the patient, then bathe and rub the back well with witch hazel. After the bath is finished put on a clean gown and comb the hair. A woman's hair should be plaited in two braids. The nails should receive attention and the mouth should be washed two or three times a day. In the morning it is well to use a tooth brush and thoroughly cleanse the mouth. With fever patients, wind a soft piece of cotton round the finger and cleanse the teeth in that way. If your patient is able to be moved, turn him upon one side, and change the linen throughout.

In putting on fresh linen, see that there are no wrinkles in the sheets to render the patient uncomfortable and leave red ridges on the body. These in time will form bed sores. When the red, inflamed spots form on the back, elbows, heels, or wherever the pressure is the greatest, a pad must be placed so as to give the injured part relief. This can easily be done by making a ring of cotton batting by wrapping a bandage round or by sewing cloth to form a smooth ring, the hole in the center to be placed over the injured part and putting the pressure on the sides. The inflamed parts should be rubbed well with witch hazel, then powdered well with boracic powder.

Changing the position will rest a patient. If too weak to lie upon the side, take a pad or a small pillow and by turning the patient a little, place it under the side. A roll under the knees is a great rest. Simply take a pillow, pin together tight, and slip under the raised knees.

Patients suffering from cold feet may easily be warmed by taking quart-bottles and filling two-thirds full of hot water. Put the stopper on tight and pin the bottle inside a flannel bag. Place at the feet, being careful not to burn the patient.

Nervous and sleepless patients can frequently be put to sleep by giving a warm sponge-bath at bedtime or by giving a hot footbath. Give also a cup of hot milk, cocoa or broth.

In feeding patients, a number of things are to be taken into consideration. Prepare the food daintily and take the food hot, as luke-warm food spoils an appetite. Give good, nourishing food, also feed the patient with the same regularity as in giving the medicine. Do not overfeed, for food given in smaller quantities and given at shorter intervals, will do far more good than larger quantities given at longer intervals. In preparing a tray, do not overload it, but take small quantities and prepare what the patient relishes. Never leave food or milk in a sick room. Should the patient care for anything more, get it fresh. This applies particularly to water, which after standing in a room, never tastes so good as when fresh. All water must be boiled. The vessel containing the water should be placed in a larger vessel and packed round with ice to keep cool.

Chicago.

The Strength of the coffee you buy adds to its value in the cup.

Lion Coffee

comes to you fresh and of full strength, always in sealed, air-tight packages. Bulk coffees lose their strength, deteriorate in flavor, and also gather dirt.

Uniformity, freshness and full strength are insured to users of Lion Coffee.

SKIN DISEASES CURED

MEXICAN PALMA SALVE will positively cure

Tetter, Erysipelas, Salt Rheum, ScaldHead, Itch, Ringworms, Ulcers, Burns, Scalps, Barber's Itch, Ulcers in the Ear, Pimples or Blotches on the Face, Sore Nose and Sore Eyelids, Corns, PILES and all Eruptions of the Skin.
It removes all Ugly Blotches, Pimples, Roughness and Redness of the Skin and effectually heals all Scaly, Tettery Eruptions, cooling the irritation and making the skin beautifully fair and smooth.

Chapped Hands
will be relieved with one or two applications, and made soft and white with two days' treatment.

Red and Rough Hands
made soft and white with two days' treatment, and will remain white with occasional applications of the salve.

Special Offer.
To introduce this excellent salve to the readers of the Union Signal, we will send our regular 25c. box for 12c. in stamps. Send NOW, to

LA PALMA PERFUMERY CO.
1106, 184 La Salle Street, Chicago, Ill.

$45 TOLMAN RANGES $21.75

Great Foundry Sale.

with reservoir and high closet. We ship range for examination without a cent in advance. If you like it, pay $21.75 and freight and take range for

30 Days FREE Trial.

If not satisfactory we agree to refund your money. Tolman Ranges are made of best wrought steel. Oven 17½x21 in. Six 8 in. holes. Best bakers and roasters on earth. Burn anything. Asbestos lined flues. Guaranteed 5 years. Will save their coast in fuel in One Year. Write to-day for our new Catalogue.

JUDSON A. TOLMAN COMPANY,
Dept. R. 106. 66 Lake Street, Chicago

CHIRON LUBRICATING PILE CONE

A small, hollow, perforated wooden cone, filled with the Chiron Ointment, especially prepared for the purpose. Perfect and continuous lubrication by soothing and healing ointment directly to the sore spots. Endorsed by physicians. Immediate relief and a certain cure for ALL KINDS OF PILES. By mail, securely sealed in plain wrapper, with extra box of ointment, $3, P. O. or Exp. Order.

The CHIRON Mfg. Co., Plainfield, N. J.

FALLING HAIR AND BALDNESS ABSOLUTELY CURED

There is but one way to tell the reason of baldness and falling hair, and that is by a microscopic examination of the hair itself. The particular disease with which your scalp is afflicted must be known before it can be intelligently treated. The use of dandruff cures and hair tonics, without knowing the specific cause of your disease, is like taking medicine without knowing what you are trying to cure. Send three fallen hairs from your combings, to Prof. J. H. Austin, the celebrated Bacteriologist, who will send you absolutely free a diagnosis of your case, a booklet on care of the hair and scalp, and a sample box of the remedy which he will prepare specially for you. Enclose 2c postage and write to-day.

PROF. J. H. AUSTIN, 409 McVicker's Bldg., Chicago, Ill.

Don't Pay Double.

We'll sell you a better hatcher for the money than any other incubator concern on earth. New improved regulator, that can't get out of order. Big book—200 illustrations free.

SURE HATCH INCUBATOR CO.,
Clay Center, Neb. or Columbus, Ohio.

TO INVESTORS.

Money invested in Sheep and Cattle in Montana is safe and pays 30 per cent. A small investment now grows into a large flock in few years. Over 300 men, women and children now have cattle and sheep on our ranches. Write for Annual Report, a most interesting document. MONTANA CO-OPERATIVE RANCH CO., Great Falls, Montana.

KINDLY MENTION THE UNION SIGNAL WHEN WRITING ADVERTISERS.

Among the New Books.

After reading Those Black Diamond Men, by William F. Gibbons, one wishes the author might have found a more expressive and compelling title, for having read the book as a matter of business you realize what you would have missed, had you passed by as a matter of choice the unattractive name and the unfamiliar theme.

You may—and must learn most valuable lessons from this simple story of the miner's rough life. The roughness, the dreariness, the danger, the heroism, the limitations, the pathos, the tragedy, the humor, the humanness of it are all there vividly and plainly set forth between black and brown covers. Some one has well called this tale "a many faceted story," for it is in fact a series of pictures, character sketches, incidents, flash lights in dark places, told without moralizing, criticism or preachment. You get the salient peculiarity or crisis of each man's life as he is made prominent. The chapter entitled "The One-Mule Man", is one of the most characteristic and comprehensive. There is a delicious humor in this as well as in the final "Plunge into Church Unity." By all means the W. C. T. U. women should become acquainted with "those black diamond men," their wives and children, their saloons and recreations, their point of view.

(New York, Chicago, Toronto: Fleming H. Revell Co. $1.50.)

In Merry Mood, by Nixon Waterman, is a book of "cheerful rhymes" that must appeal particularly to literary people. "Instead of a preface," the author puts you into fine humor for the clever blending of fun, experience and philosophy that follows. "Deacon Easy's Opinion" that "Hell's playin' out" concludes with:

"I'd ruther that the Lord 'd save us all among the blest,
Ner damn a soul—not even his who wants to damn the rest.
I'm glad the fire's dyin' out, jest awful glad, and yit
I s'pose fer them that want a hell that's what they ought to git."

Among other poems that make the book worth having are "The Garden's Message," "The Village Philosopher," who thinks:

"The things worth doin' has been done;
There's nothin' left for anyone";

"A Hobbled Pegasus," "The Triumph of Genius," "The Baby's Letter," "The Basis of Criticism"—I see I am almost making a list of the contents, but this is, in fact, one of the few books the reviewer himself determines to own.

(Boston: Forbes & Co. $1.25.)

Richard Gordon, by Alexander Black, is far more than it seems to be at the first glance. It is evident at once that it is a beautifully written, fascinating story of real life. If your conscience warns you that you are wasting time to be reading a novel just for entertainment of the story, your judgment answers that the new style of it and the charm of art make it worth while. Soon you divine that there is a problem, an important problem, but what it is you have not the least idea until it is disclosed. It would not be fair to spoil a plot so cleverly contrived by rudely telling it here, but the principle involved is one dear to the hearts of white ribbon women; and in this novel it has found strong and convincing expression. The illustrations as well as the character show the finished touch of the artist.

(Boston: Lothrop Pub. Co.)

The W. T. P. A. is about to issue a new edition of that remarkable booklet by Mrs. S. M. I. Henry, entitled, Children of the Church Go to Ruin. Unanswered Prayer or Why So Many This book was first published long ago before "child culture" and "modern methods" of child training had any vogue, but in looking it over again, after the lapse of years, we find that it was a veritable pioneer in the very field, so fully occupied today and that its teaching has even yet the force of an original and authoritative utterance. No one among all our women was ever more successful in just this line of evangelistic work, the arousing of parents to a sense of their responsibility, and this book is really the condensation of years of experience and thought bearing upon this subject.

Unanswered Prayer deals in the most forcible and striking manner with the causes of parental failure, assigning them usually to "little foxes" rather than giant evils, against which we are prepared. The booklet abounds in telling incidents and illustrations both of right ways and wrong ways of training.

Among the minor mistakes of parents are presented "the exposure of the child to the creatures of the dusk," the fixing of a "great gulf" between the children and the grown folks in the home, the building of artificial barriers between parent and child from a false sense of modesty, the unjust treatment of children in money matters, the lack of care as to the child's reading, the telling of "white lies" to secure obedience.

In all the intervening years, nothing has yet been written that can take the place of this helpful treatise.

Rollicking Rhymes For Youngsters, by Amos R. Wells, appeals quite as strongly to grown up children as to those who are still occupied more with rollicking than with moralizing. I should like to quote about half the book to show this, but you must read it for yourself and see.

Many of these poems are so humanly and humorously tender, so touched with the common, homely wisdom of life, that they must be read aloud and re-read to be wholly appreciated. And no matter how many times you read them they bring always the same refreshment.

The book is beautifully illustrated in colors, and is very attractively made.

(New York, Chicago, Toronto: Fleming H. Revell Co. $1.00.)

A helpful gift book is The Spiritual Life, by O. A. Kingsbury. The foreword expresses the entire tone of the volume:

"O living will that shall endure
When all that seems shall suffer shock,
Rise in the spiritual rock,
Flow through our deeds and make us pure."

The author considers four main elements that enter into the spiritual life: Worship, Morality, Science, Communion. Each of them is considered in a strong, stimulating manner. The book is attractively made and printed.

(New York: American Tract Society, 50 cents.)

A Cure for Asthma.

Asthma sufferers need no longer leave home and business in order to be cured. Nature has produced a vegetable remedy that will permanently cure Asthma and all diseases of the lungs and bronchial tubes. Having tested its wonderful curative powers in thousands of cases (with a record of 90 per cent. permanently cured) and desiring to relieve human suffering, I will send free of charge to all sufferers from Asthma, Consumption, Catarrh, Bronchitis and nervous diseases this recipe in German, French or English, with full directions for preparing and using. Sent by mail. Address with stamp, naming this paper, W. A. Noyes, 847 Powers Block, Rochester, N. Y.

In The Eagle's Talon, by Sheppard Stevens, is a romance of the Louisiana purchase. Napoleon is the "eagle," and the beautiful daughter of a French immigrant, caught by his fancy, divides the interest with Felicite, a charming and piquant maiden who remains at home in Louisiana while her lover is rescuing the fair Adrienne from the First Consul's dangerous attentions. The high moral principles not only of the heroines but of the gallant hero of the story suggest a woman author. As historical romances go, this is a very wholesome and readable book.

(Boston: Little, Brown & Co.)

William Butler, The Founder of Two Missions, by his daughter, is a wonderfully thrilling and inspiring account of the life and work of this great man. It is a book more interesting and far more profitable than the fictitious stories of adventure that crowd our tables. There is an introduction by Bishop McCabe, and the volume is profusely illustrated by Indian scenes, groups of natives, pictures of temples, with as frontispiece a fine portrait of Dr. Butler.

(New York: Eaton & Mains. $1.00 net; by mail $1.14.)

The Healing of Souls, by Rev. Louis Albert Banks, D. D., is a series of revival sermons containing the simple message of the gospel most forcefully and variously presented. These sermons were given with rich results last winter in New York City, and are printed to bring to the large audience in the home a touch of the same suggestion and inspiration that followed their oral preaching.

(New York: Eaton & Mains. $1.50.)

In An Old Garden, by Lady Henry Somerset, is a pretty booklet holding a tender and very touching story of love and sacrifice and peace. The quiet fragment of garden atmosphere therein leaves an impression that lingers and charms, and none the less because we fancy that the author has drawn the child from her own memories.

(London: Society for Promoting Christian Knowledge, Northumberland Ave., W. C.)

The Iron Hand, by Howard Dean, is an attempt to show the evils of the department store, and incidentally of trusts in general. The motif is not bad but a theme so stupendous needs a master pen and a sympathetic, broad mode of treatment. This it fails to get in the book in question. The design of the cover is exceedingly repellant.

(New York: The Abbey Press, $1.)

Sunday, 1903, is a very attractive volume of stories, poems, sketches and pictures for the young. The style of it is similar to "Chatterbox," but this book is especially prepared for Sunday reading, and all the stories contain some useful lesson. The frontispiece and the cover are in rich and handsome colors.

(New York: E. & J. B. Young & Co.)

The Gift of the Magic Staff, by Fannie E. Ostrander, is a very jolly fairy story with the advantage of good behavior emphasized throughout. The account of Paul's visit to Santa Claus and of the devices of that worthy for keeping in communication with papas and mammas, and for knowing all about boys and girls, is exceedingly ingenious and amusing.

(New York, Chicago, Toronto: Fleming H. Revell Co. $1.00.)

While The Cynic's Calendar of Revised Wisdom for 1903, by Oliver Herford and two others, is original and amusing, it is not worth 75 cents, the price. The sentiments "Many are called but few get up," "Silence gives contempt," "A church fair exchange is robbery," "As you sew so must you rip," "A word to the wise is resented," are the best.

(San Francisco: Elder & Shepard, $.75.)

Books Received.

Richard Gordon. By Alexander Black. (Boston: Lothrop Publishing Company.)

The Boy Puzzle: A Picture Book for Mothers. By Rev. Joseph F. Flint. (Oakland, Cal: Pacific Press.)

In the Eagle's Talons. By Sheppard Stevens. (Boston: Little, Brown and Company.)

Those Black Diamond Men: A Tale of the Anthrax Valley. (New York, Chicago, Toronto: F. H. Revell Co.)

The Saloon and Anarchy, the Two Worst Things in the World, versus The United States of America and Temperance and the Anti-Saloon League, two pamphlets by H. V. Crozier, are earnest, sensible, idealistic. The former is 25 cents, the latter 15 cents. (Nashville, Tenn: Barber and Smith.)

Ladies' Chatelain Watch

STERLING SILVER CASE, AMERICAN MOVEMENT, STEM WIND AND STEM SET. GUARANTEED IN EVERY PARTICULAR. POSTPAID.

For Eight New Subscribers, at $1.50 Each

The UNION SIGNAL
184 LA SALLE STREET
CHICAGO

A 10 Per Cent REDUCTION

For January Only.

"A Great Mother."

The life of Madam Willard.
A beautiful gift book.

Price, - - - - - $1.50
Net, postpaid, $1.35.

"The Beautiful Life of Frances E. Willard."

Anna A. Gordon.

The biography of Miss Willard, written by one most closely identified with her.

Price, - - - - - $2.00
Net, postpaid, $1.80.

"Aunt Abby's Neighbors"

Annie Trumbul Slosson.

A book of New England folk. Fully illustrated.

Price, - $1.00
Net, postpaid, 90 cents.

"Talks to Girls."
Eleanor A. Hunter.
"Talks to Boys."
Eleanor A. Hunter.

These books contain most convincing and earnest advice. Artistically bound in decorated covers.

Price, each, - - - 50 cents
Net, postpaid, 45 cents.

"Those Black Diamond Men."

William F. Gibbons.

A tale of the Anthrax Valley.

Price, - $1.50
Net, postpaid, $1.35.

"Nineteen Beautiful Years."

Frances E. Willard.

The story of the life of "Sister Mary."

Price, - 60 cents
Net, postpaid, 54 cents.

Woman's Temp. Pub. Ass'n
CHICAGO

Practical Talks with Housekeepers.

By Mrs. L. W. Mitchell.

IT is intended to make this department of THE UNION SIGNAL one of interest and profit to women, especially to the house-mother with her perpetually recurring conundrum: "What shall we have for dinner?"

Matters of state are dependent upon the matter of good or bad digestion. "Off with his head!" May not this mandate be a manifestation of outraged Nature, protesting, say, against an excess of pork and beans, instead of merely a vain tyrant's casual display of despotic powers? It is one of the foundation stones—a big one—of everyday existence. Your life and mine illustrate the potentialities of good or bad cooking.

Improperly prepared food is the incline down which many a well-disposed man slides to the saloon. Food flavored with alcoholic liquors by a thoughtless, even though a loving, hand, has given many a boy a taste for them which has wrecked his life on the rocks of intemperance. There are so many flavors, so many extracts, spices, and fruit juices, wholesome and palatable, that there is no need to resort to liquors in pudding sauces, preserves, fruit cake or mince meat. The treasured old recipe requiring them would better be altered. Cold coffee is an excellent substitute in fruit cake and mince meat, or for the latter, jelly which has been warmed, or the syrup from canned fruit or pickled peaches may be used.

The house-mother holds in her hands the physical, and through the physical the moral, well being of her family. Saints or sinners gather around her table largely the product of what has been assimilated therefrom. No woman should ever assume the responsibilities of married life without a practical understanding of the how, why and wherefore of this most important feature of domestic management. Maids and fortune are here today, gone tomorrow. A precise knowledge of how meals should be cooked and served proves a great coign of vantage to the mistress. Then should occasion arise for her, temporarily or otherwise, to don an apron and take Katy's place, she will not ask (like the bride in the story) for soap, when there is lettuce to be washed.

The recipes given in this department will be such as will appeal to the head of the average menage, and the method will be clearly indicated.

There exists a type of femininity which seems to be entirely lacking in the element of accuracy.

"O the little more, and how much it is," laments the poet. Perhaps he wa not thinking of soda at the time, but this particular type of woman puts in the little more or the little less than the recipe calls for, and she is the most surprised woman in the universe when her biscuits come out of the oven a startling pea-green or flat enough to make tolerable book-marks. Her confidence in her lucky star is great. She is the woman who, after a succession of failures, says with a sigh: "I believe I've lost my knack." I am sure you have met her—there are so many of her, more's the pity! To be sure, "failures are the stepping-stones to success," but why not, while mixing, "mix with brains," and try the short cut?

Oyster Short Cake.

INGREDIENTS: One quart oysters, one cup cream, one-half cup butter, one tablespoonful flour.

METHOD: Prepare as for creamed oysters. Make a short cake in the following proportions: One quart flour, one-half cup butter, one-half cup lard, three heaping teaspoons baking powder; salt, mix soft with milk, bake in quick oven, split, butter, and fill with the creamed oysters.

Veal Olive.

INGREDIENTS: One veal steak cut the thickness of two, and sliced partly through, one pint oysters, one-half cup bread crumbs, one teaspoon sage, one tablespoon butter; salt and pepper to taste.

METHOD: Lay the steak open and fill with the seasoned crumbs and drained oysters. Sew together, sprinkle with flour and bits of butter; bake, being careful to baste with melted butter, if it seems dry.

Ladies' Cabbage.

INGREDIENTS: One small, firm head cabbage, two eggs, one tablespoon butter, three tablespoons rich milk or cream; salt and pepper to taste.

METHOD: Boil the cabbage fifteen minutes, then change the water for more boiling water from the teakettle. When tender, drain and set aside until cool. Chop fine, and add the well-beaten eggs and seasoning. Stir all well together and bake in a buttered dish until brown. Eat very hot.

Asparagus Salad.

INGREDIENTS: One can white asparagus, curly lettuce, mayonnaise dressing.

METHOD: Have the ingredients thoroughly chilled. Lay a few of the asparagus stalks in a bed of the lettuce and mask with the dressing.

Tomato Jelly Salad.

INGREDIENTS: One-half box gelatine, one cup water, one quart can tomatoes, seasoning, lettuce.

METHOD: Soak the gelatine in water until soft, heat the tomatoes, and pour over the gelatine; season rather highly; strain and pour into individual fancy molds or small cups. Mayonnaise dressing.

Fruit Pudding.

INGREDIENTS: One cup chopped suet one cup raisins, one cup currants, one-fourth cup sliced citron, one-half cup New Orleans molasses, one-half cup sugar, three-fourths cup sour milk, two and one-half cups flour, one teaspoon soda, spices to taste; steam three hours. Sauce: Sweetened whipped cream, with one-half cup chopped walnuts stirred in.

The Right Thing.

A New CATARRH CURE, Which is Rapidly Coming to the Front.

For several years, Eucalyptol Guaiacol and Hydrastin have been recognized as standard remedies for catarrhal troubles, but they have always been given separately and only very recently an ingenious chemist succeeded in combining them, together with other antiseptics into a pleasant effective tablet.

Druggists sell the remedy under the name of Stuart's Catarrh Tablets and it has met with remarkable success in the cure of nasal catarrh, bronchial and throat catarrh and in catarrh of the stomach.

Mr. F. N. Benton, whose address is care of Clark House, Troy, N. Y., says: "When I run up against anything that is good I like to tell people of it. I have been troubled with catarrh more or less for some time. Last winter more than ever. Tried several so-called cures, but did not get any benefit from them. About six weeks ago I bought a 50 cent box of Stuart's Catarrh Tablets and am glad to say that they have done wonders for me and I do not hesitate to let all my friends know that Stuart's Catarrh Tablets are the right thing."

Mr. Geo. J. Casanova of hotel Griffon, West 9th street, New York City, writes: "I have commenced using Stuart's Catarrh Tablets and already they have given me better results than any catarrh cure I have eved tried."

A leading physician of Pittsburg advises the use of Stuart's Catarrh Tablets in preference to any other treatment for catarrh of the head, throat or stomach.

He claims they are far superior to inhalers, salves, lotions or powder, and are much more convenient and pleasant to take and are so harmless that little children take them with benefit as they contain no opiate, cocaine or any poisonous drugs.

All druggists sell Stuart's Catarrh Tablets at 50 cents for full size package and they are probably the safest and most reliable cure for any form of catarrh.

33% DIVIDEND

paid by the Mexican Plantation Association, 1602 Title and Trust Building, Chicago, Ill, Oldest of its kind in Mexico. ESTABLISHED 1897. Has 6,000 shares, or acres, planted to permanent crops, rubber, coffee and vanilla. The Association's contract is like an insurance policy—in case of death the money is refunded. 38 deaths have occured since 1897. These shares will now be resold. For full particulars, address as above.

IS YOUR HUSBAND, SON OR FATHER A

Drunkard

If so, send us your name and address with 4 cts. to cover postage, packing, etc., we will send you a package of our "Secret Cure" free, in a plain package with full directions how to give it secretly in tea, coffee, food, etc. It is odorless and tasteless and will cure this dreadful habit, quietly and permanently without the patient's knowledge or consent. It is a positive and permanent "Secret Cure" for the Drink Habit, and will cost you nothing to try it. Good for both sexes.
MOTO DRUG CO., Dept. 137 St. Louis, Mo.

LEARN PROOFREADING.

If you possess a fair education, why not utilize it at a genteel and uncrowded profession paying $15 to $35 weekly? Situations always obtainable. We are the original instructors by mail.
HOME CORRESPONDENCE SCHOOL, Philadelphia

25 CTS PISO'S CURE FOR 25 CTS
CURES WHERE ALL ELSE FAILS.
Best Cough Syrup. Tastes Good. Use in time. Sold by druggists.
CONSUMPTION

The Fall of the Great Industrial States in the Scale of the States.

By Florence Kelley,
Secretary National Consumers' League.

ONCE in ten years the Government of the United States publishes in the Census a table of the states graded according to the ability of the children in each state who are between the ages of ten and fourteen years to read and write. The newspapers have recently reproduced the latest of these tables, giving a comparison of the states in the years 1890 and 1900. It is here printed from advance sheets furnished by the Census Office:

Per Cent Able to Read and Write Among Persons 10 to 14 Years of Age.

	1900.		1890.
1.	Nebraska	99.66	Iowa	99.23.	1
2.	Iowa	99.63	Massachusetts	99.17.	2
3.	Oregon	99.58	Ohio	98.92.	3
4.	Ohio	99.51	Kansas	98.86.	4
5.	Kansas	99.48	Connecticut	98.79.	5
6.	Indiana	99.45	Illinois	98.75.	6
7.	Connecticut	99.43	Nebraska	98.75.	7
8.	Utah	99.34	New York	98.62.	8
9.	Massachusetts	99.33	Wisconsin	98.35.	9
10.	Michigan	99.30	Minnesota	98.21.	10
11.	Washington	99.30	Oregon	98.20.	11
12.	Minnesota	99.29	Michigan	98.17.	12
13.	Wisconsin	99.27	Indiana	98.00.	13
14.	New York	99.26	California	97.93.	14
15.	Illinois	99.18	New Jersey	97.86.	15
16.	Wyoming	99.08	Pennsylvania	97.82.	16
17.	Vermont	99.05	Washington	97.75.	17
18.	South Dakota	99.00	Maine	97.57.	18
19.	California	98.99	Vermont	97.57.	19
20.	Pennsylvania	98.99	South Dakota	97.55.	20
21.	New Jersey	98.81	Colorado	97.21.	21
22.	Idaho	98.77	New Hampshire	96.63.	22
23.	Colorado	98.48	Montana	96.47.	23
24.	New Hampshire	98.31	Utah	96.24.	24
25.	District of Columbia	98.25	Wyoming	96.23.	25
26.	Rhode Island	98.12	Idaho	96.18.	26
27.	Montana	98.07	Rhode Island	96.03.	27
28.	Maine	97.92	North Dakota	95.58.	28
29.	North Dakota	97.65	District of Columbia	94.61.	29
30.	Oklahoma	97.26	Missouri	94.48.	30
31.	Missouri	96.64	Nevada	92.83.	31
32.	Delaware	95.49	Oklahoma	91.81.	32
33.	Maryland	95.36	Delaware	90.96.	33
34.	West Virginia	94.74	Maryland	90.54.	34
35.	Nevada	91.88	West Virginia	89.16.	35
36.	Kentucky	91.56	Texas	85.55.	36
37.	Texas	90.74	Kentucky	85.17.	37
38.	Florida	86.24	Florida	82.43.	38
39.	Tennessee	85.08	Tennessee	80.94.	39
40.	Virginia	84.33	Arizona	79.62.	40
41.	Arkansas	83.80	Arkansas	77.89.	41
42.	New Mexico	80.07	Virginia	77.32.	42
43.	North Carolina	78.25	Mississippi	73.47.	43
44.	Arizona	77.79	New Mexico	72.04.	44
45.	Mississippi	77.62	North Carolina	69.38.	45
46.	Georgia	77.21	Georgia	66.73.	46
47.	Indian Territory	75.61	Alabama	64.50.	47
48.	Alabama	71.11	South Carolina	61.03.	48
49.	South Carolina	70.44	Louisiana	57.26.	49
50.	Louisiana	67.12

The vitally significant fact revealed by the table is the fall of the six great industrial states in the scale when measured by the percentage of literacy of their children between the ages of ten and fourteen years.

When measured by the value of their manufactures, New York, Pennsylvania, Illinois, Massachusetts, Ohio, and New Jersey stand at the head of the scale of the states in the order in which they are here printed. When measured by the ability of their children between the ages of ten and fourteen years to read and write, these states rank altogether differently. Thus New York, instead of being first, is fourteenth; Pennsylvania, instead of being second, is twentieth; Illinois, instead of being third, is fifteenth; the other three are Massachusetts, ninth; Ohio, fourth; and New Jersey, twenty-first. Nor is their position either stable or improving. On the contrary, all the six great industrial states have fallen from a better relative position during the ten years from 1890 to 1900. In 1890, New York occupied the eighth place, Pennsylvania the sixteenth, Illinois the fifth, Massachusetts the second, Ohio the third, and New Jersey the fifteenth. All alike have fallen, the only difference is in the height from which each fell and the depth to which each sank. Pennsylvania and New Jersey seem to have run an uncanny race for the place of dishonor at the foot of the list of the six great industrial states. Pennsylvania occupied that inglorious position in 1890, being then sixteenth in the scale of all the states, and sixth and last of all the great industrial states. In 1900, New Jersey had sunk from fifteenth to the twenty-first place, and now ranks one point below Pennsylvania, when measured by the per cent of her children between the ages of ten and fourteen years of age who are able to read and write.

It is most desirable to have the exact figures from which these interesting percentages were derived made public as soon as possible. We need to know just how many children between the ages of ten and fourteen years in each of the great industrial states were unable to read and write in 1890, and how many in 1900. Percentages are mystifying reading for the most intelligent; and for the uninstructed they are often wholly misleading.

The fall of Massachusets from the second to the ninth place in the scale may be due to several causes. The influx of French Canadian, Portuguese, Italian, Russian, and Syrian children of the ages between ten and fourteen years is large and would doubtless continue to impress the position of Massachusetts in the table under consideration. Moreover, Massachusetts was slow to raise the legal age of work to fourteen years, and to make the attendance of children at school compulsory through the full school year to the age of fourteen years. This latter measure was not enacted until after the close of the decade embraced in the table. It seems reasonable, therefore, to suppose that the recent stringent legislation which placed Massachusetts at the head of the list of states measured by her enlightened law for the education of all the children to the age of fourteen years may, during the present decade, arrest her downward progress.

Discouraging is the position of the four great Southern cotton manufacturing states in which large numbers of young children are employed in manufacture. In none of them are eighty per cent of the children between ten and fourteen years of age able to read and write. Of the four, North Carolina stands highest, as number forty-three; followed by Georgia, forty-six; Alabama, forty-eight and South Carolina, forty-nine. Lowest in the scale is Louisiana, fifty. Already at the foot of the ladder in 1890, these states could not well sink lower. Only one of them has risen. North Carolina, which stood forty-five in 1890, stands forty-three in 1900. (It has been suggested that this favorable change in the position of North Carolina may be due to the education of negro children, who have increasingly attended school, while the white children have flocked into the mills; but this remains conjectural until the figures for both races appear, together with the totals upon which these percentages are based.)

An interesting ray of light upon the child-labor problem shines from the table. The six great industrial states whose descent in the scale of the states it registers are exceptionally wealthy and progressive in all other respects, but they are the chosen home of child labor on a large scale. The factory inspectors report children at work in round numbers, as follows: Massachusetts, 9,000; New York, 16,000; Illinois, 20,000, and Pennsylvania, 35,000. The astonishing figures for Pennsylvania do not include the breaker-boys in the mining regions, but merely the children engaged in manufacture and commerce. In Illinois, the number of working children reported by the factory inspectors more than doubled in the five years betwen 1897 and 1901.

The table presented thus confirms the opinion that the child-labor problem, far from being a local one to be dealt with by a small group of Southern cotton manufacturing states, is a great and growing national problem. The four great manufacturing states of the South stand at the bottom of the scale of states, graded according to the ability of children between the ages of ten and fourteen years to read and write; and the six great industrial states of the North are filling in that scale simultaneously and conspicuously. Surely there is need of organized effort, national in its scope, to ascertain the cause of so sinister a phenomenon, and to remove that cause with the least possible loss of time.

Lace Curtains

I have used Pearline to-day for washing lace curtains and like it very much. Washed easier and cleaner than with any soap used before. I like it very much.

Mrs. Rev. J. D. E.

One of the Millions. 685

THE OPTIMISTS' CLUB

By JOHN F. COWAN, D. D.

WHEN I read the words of Mr. H. W. Mabie, of the Outlook, "Every day the sad things of this life are reported in the newspapers, all the best things are kept in the background," I said to myself "Why not have a new organization whose business it shall be to see that the race is not so terribly traduced?" Here it is. The only condition of membership is dragging one of the "best things" to which Mr. Mabie referred, from the background to the foreground. Now, our books are open; who will be the first to join?

Why, speaks up a man from Baltimore; there's a man in our town, Mr. Bernard N. Baker, president of the Atlantic Transport Line, who gave as a Christmas present to his employes $500,000 worth of stock. Employes who have to be dropped, owing to the merger of the company, will get the stock equivalent of two years' salary, and all retained receive one year's salary in stock. Good! The man from Baltimore becomes the first charter member of the Optimist's Club. Who is next?

A New Yorker. How did New York manage to keep still so long? The New Yorker tells this cheering story: Out of the children helped by the Children's Aid Society, of this city, one has become governor of a state, one of a territory, two members of Congress, two sheriffs, three district attorneys, three county commissioners, several members of state legislatures, twenty-six bankers, twenty-one clergymen, an equal number in the other professions, and over 1,000 have entered the army and navy. Who says it's of no use to help the submerged tenth? It's a whopper, in the face of these facts. Of course we'll admit the New Yorker. Next!

Well, here's a Y. M. C. A. fellow who wants us to believe that Christian young manhood is not namby-pamby. Looks as if he had made a touch-down, too; for he says that M. J. Gleason, the all-round champion of the Washington, D. C., Association, and one of the best boxers, does splendid work in leading Sunday meetings. Franz, the captain of the Harvard track team, is vice-president of the Christian Association. Marshall, the captain of Columbia's track team, and champion half-mile runner, is a leader in the Christian Association. John P. Gardiner, quarter-back and stroke of the University of Pennsylvania crew, has been president of the Christian Association, and also his brother, who is captain of the football team. Chadwick, Yale's football captain, leads in Yale's Christian work. Roy Clark, Brown's pitcher——but really we must cut this smiling Y. M. C. A. fellow off. He says he could mention a hundred more. We'll take him in on these.

Boston! Ah, I thought Boston would furnish an optimist. He says that, actually, the horrible system of sweating has been entirely done away in Boston. Except for a few Italian and Portuguese women, all the sewing is done in workshops, subject to factory inspection. The other members of the club please take the pattern home and try to cut your cities over by it.

Here's a new brand of optimist—a missionary optimist. He is fairly throwing up his hat, shouting that in the two months since the meeting of the American Board there has been an advance of $10,000 in receipts. Hurrah! Then he tells of a Miss Tula Ely, of St. Louis, who has inherited a million, and who relinquishes ease and luxury to do missionary work in Africa. Guess we can't blackball the missionary optimist.

A Minneapolis man has been holding up his hand, and even snapping his fingers to get a hearing. There's a big insurance office in his town, the secretary of which, Edgar A. P. Haynes, holds daily Bible meetings with his employes, and Christianity is the dominating influence in the office. Minneapolis may "jine."

Next comes a Lynn (Mass.) shoe factory that employs a social secretary who studies the home life of each girl, helps them individually and in classes and clubs, and tells the employers what they can do to make them comfortable and cheerful. We'll take Lynn.

Last, here comes Chautauqua—all our handkerchiefs out. Listen! Hereafter Chautauqua is to have a temperance week in its programme; just the strongest, broadest, most helpful programme that can be planned. That means lots. Thank you for the splendid alacrity with which you have brought the "backgrounds" to the "foreground." Shall the club meet again?

Signal Notes

The proprietor of the City Hotel at Williamsport, Pa., published a card early in December suggesting that hotel men of the city give a Christmas dinner to worthy children instead of giving drinks to men as Christmas presents.

The Englewood (Chicago) Prohibition Alliance gave the third annual New Year's reception and banquet at the Cumberland Presbyterian church, January 1. Miss Marie Brehm, president of Illinois W. C. T. U., was one of the speakers.

In response to Lord Milner's appeal for women emigrants to South Africa, the South African Expansion Committee has sent out in the last four months 500 girls from London, and this is only 40 per cent of those who have applied. All candidates must be passed as physically fit, not only by a local but by a government doctor, the standard of bodily health being that which would entitle the applicant to a first-class life insurance policy. The girls go to take positions as house servants and nursery governesses, the wages offered being a special inducement, to say nothing of the matrimonial possibilities involved.

Commissioner Yerkes of the internal revenue bureau has rendered a decision in which he rules that druggists and others who sell soda water drinks, claret soda or similar beverages to which distilled spirits, wine or any compounds thereof are added in any quantity, however small, are required to pay special tax for retail liquor dealers, under the internal revenue laws. Under the old rulings druggists and others were allowed to add to soda water and other soft drinks an inappreciable quantity of distilled spirits or wines for flavoring purposes. The former ruling is revoked, to take effect Jan. 1, 1903.

Demonstration Night.

(Continued from page 12.)

Approaching the front of the stage he shook hands with the superintendent, and turning to the children, said:

"These represent the children of my 75,000,000 people. They are my future men and women."

Then turning to the Superintendent and delegates he said:

"I want to thank you for helping me to get the order on my statute books requiring the millions of children in my public schools to have a temperance education. My people will make laws in favor of saloons until they are taught better, and if they are not taught better, the saloons will destroy my government of the people; so we must hurry up this temperance teaching. While I thank you Woman's Christian Temperance Union workers for scientific temperance, for what you have done, I bespeak your co-operation in keeping unweakened these laws on my statute books and in getting them well enforced, especially in the lower grades of my schools, because so many of my future men and women early leave school to go to work. So if you will drill temperance truths into the heads of my little folks and young people, we will keep the stars and stripes floating over this land for all time and make it truly 'the land of the free and the home of the brave.'"

THE SUPERINTENDENT TO UNCLE SAM: In behalf of the Scientific Temperance Instruction workers in the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, in this presence and in all of your great land from ocean to ocean, from the lakes to the gulf, and in your new possessions—for these workers are everywhere—we solemnly pledge you to work without ceasing for this education for all the children, and especially as you ask for those who early leave school to enter your workshops and fields, that thus, ere many more decades shall pass, your flag shall float over a land of people free from the alcohol bondage and without Saloons.

Then, taking Uncle Sam's proffered arm, they left the stage, followed by the children waving flags and singing the "Star-spangled Banner."

Patterns.

The patterns here shown are cut by one of the most reliable pattern houses in the country, and are of the very latest and newest design. These patterns retail at from 25 to 35 cents each, but by special arrangement with the manufacturers, we are enabled to supply them to readers for only 10 cents each prepaid.

Full directions, quantity of material required and illustration of garment with each pattern.

Order patterns by their numbers. Give bust measure for ladies' upper garments. Give waist measure for skirts. Give both age and breast measure for misses and children.

8870—House Dress.
32 to 44 in. bust.

8862—Kimono.
32, 36 and 40 in. bust.

8860—Monte Carlo Coat.
4 to 10 years.

Cut out and send this coupon.

UNION SIGNAL, CHICAGO, ILL.:

Enclosed find 10 cents for which send Pattern Number.....,

Waist measure..... Bust..... If child's pattern give age..... to

Name.....

Street.....

City..... State.....

We Solicit Your Order for

VISITING CARDS

Very Latest Styles.

WOMAN'S TEMPERANCE PUBLISHING ASSOCIATION,

CHICAGO, ILL.

Engraving plate in Script and 100 cards, name only	$2.25
Engraving plate in Script, name only	1.25
Engraving address, per line	.50
Engraving day, per line	.25
Engraving two names on one plate	2.25
Engraving plate, in Roman or Gothic letters, name only	2.00
Engraving address, in Roman or gothic letter, per line	1.00
Engraving day, in Roman or Gothic letters	.50
Engraving plate, in Shaded Old English	3.00
Engraving address, in Shaded Old English	1.25
Engraving day, in Shaded Old English	.75
Printing Cards, Mr., Mrs. or Miss, from plate, per 100	1.00
Printing Black Border Cards, from plate, per 100	1.50

Mr. Size Card. D

Miss Size Card. C

Mrs. Size Card B½

Mrs. Size Card. B

"FOR 34 YEARS A STANDARD PIANO"

THE WING PIANO

You need this book IF YOU INTEND TO BUY A PIANO. A BOOK—not a catalogue—that gives you all the information possessed by experts. It makes the selection of a piano easy. If read carefully, it will make you a judge of tone, action, workmanship, and finish; will tell you how to know good from bad. It describes the materials used; gives pictures of all the different parts, and tells how they should be made and put together. It is the only book of its kind ever published. It contains 116 large pages, and is named "The Book of Complete Information about Pianos." We send it free to any one wishing to buy a piano. Write for it.

Save from $100 to $200 We make the WING PIANO and sell it ourselves. It goes direct from our factory to your home. We do not employ any agents or salesmen. When you buy the WING PIANO you pay the actual cost of construction and our small wholesale profit. This profit is small because we sell thousands of pianos yearly. Most retail stores sell no more than twelve or twenty pianos yearly, and must charge from $100 to $200 profit on each. They can't help it.

1868—34th YEAR—1902

SENT ON TRIAL

We Pay Freight
No Money in Advance

We will send any WING PIANO to any part of the United States on trial. We pay freight in advance and do not ask for any advance payment or deposit. If the piano is not satisfactory after twenty days' trial in your home, we take it back entirely at our expense. You pay us nothing unless you keep the piano. There is absolutely no risk or expense to you.

Old instruments taken in exchange.

Easy Monthly Payments

Wing Organs

are just as carefully made as Wing Pianos. They have a sweet, powerful, lasting tone, easy action, very handsome appearance, need no tuning. Wing Organs are sold direct from the factory, sent on trial; are sold on easy monthy payments. For catalogue and prices write to

A Wing style—45 other styles to select from

This Piano is the handsomest style made in the United States. It is also the largest upright made—being our concert grand with longest strings, largest size of sound-board and most powerful action, giving the greatest volume and power of tone. It has 7⅓ octavos, with overstrung scale, copper-wound bass strings; three strings in the middle and treble registers; "built-up" wrest blanks, "dove-tailed" top and bottom frame; "built-up" end case construction; extra heavy metal plate; solid maple frame; Canadian spruce sound-board; noiseless pedal action; ivory and ebony keys highly polished; hammers treated by our special tone-regulating device, making them elastic and very durable; grand revolving fall-board; full duet music desk.

Case is made in Circassian walnut, figured mahogany, genuine quartered oak, and ebonized; ornamented with handsome carved mouldings and hand-carving on the music desk, trusses, pilasters, top and bottom frame.

In 34 Years 33,000 Pianos

We refer to over 33,000 satisfied purchasers in every part of the United States. WING PIANOS are guaranteed for twelve years against any defect in tone, action, workmanship, or material.

Instrumental Attachment

A special feature ot the Wing Piano; it imitates perfectly the tones of the mandolin, guitar, harp zither, and banjo. Music written for these instruments, with and without piano accompaniment, can be played just as perfectly by a single player on the piano as though rendered by an entire orchestra. The original instrumental attachment has been patented by us, and it cannot be had in any other piano, although there are several imitations of it.

WING & SON, 86 and 88 East 12th Street, New York

T. D. Crothers, M. D. Frances B. Callaway. Rev. Joseph F. Flint. Mrs. McVean Adams. Mary Jewett-Telford. Kate Lunden-Sunderlin. Amelia Johnston. Janet M. Whitman. Julia F. Deane. Ella Beecher Gittings.

An Unparalleled Offer

The UNION SIGNAL

Ten Weeks for Ten Cents

No such offer to Union Signal readers has ever before been made. 176 pages of reading matter covering the world's news in temperance and the forward policy of the W.C.T.U. of the world, giving household and other matter of interest to every home maker, and bringing to the home reading of a character to raise the highest ideals and aspirations of the growing members of the family. A genuine family magazine for every W. C. T. U. woman and friend of temperance and right living.

Harriet Crocker Leroy. Julia H. Thayer.
Lucinda B. Chandler. Mary E. Stuckenberg.
Rev. Joel Swartz, D. D. Lida Myra Keck.
Addie N. Fields. Amos R. Wells.
Harriet E. Orcutt. Elizabeth Cumings.
Mamie Paulson, M. D. Felix L. Oswald, M. D.
Julia Mills Dunn. Mrs. O. W. Scott.
Cordelia A. Greene, M. D. Rev. Simeon Gilbert.

Commencing with the January 8th number, a serial story of sustained interest will run for ten weeks. This story alone is worth many times the price of 10c. for the paper. Now is the time for officers of Unions to send in their entire list of membership. Just think of it, the Union Signal for 10 weeks for 10 cents. Send postage stamps or any convenient way, but do it at once, as this offer is open for acceptance during January only, and any received after February 1st will be returned. ACT PROMPTLY.

The Union Signal for Ten Weeks for Ten Cents

Tell all your friends, and see that the entire list of your Union is on our mailing list for the ten weeks.

Circulation Department,

The UNION SIGNAL
184 La Salle St., Chicago.

Coupon.

Enclosed please find 10 cents, for which send me the Union Signal 10 weeks.

Name, ...

Street, ...

City, ...

State, ...

This coupon WILL NOT be honored after January 31st, 1903.

Mrs. A. S. Benjamin. Julia Bedford Tomkinson. Mrs. Wilbur F. Crafts. Ella S. Stewart. Ellis Meredith. Mary Wood-Allen, M. D. Charlotte E. Joslin, M. A. Geo. May Powell. Mrs. Leonora M. Lake. David Paulson, M. D.

FOR GOD AND HOME AND EVERY LAND.

The UNION SIGNAL AND WORLD'S WHITE RIBBON

NATIONAL and WORLD'S WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION

Entered at Chicago Postoffice as Second-class Matter.

"Thou hast given a banner to them that fear thee: that it may be displayed because of the truth."

Vol. XXIX.—No. 2. Issued Weekly. | CHICAGO, JANUARY 8, 1903. | Price, $1.50 Per Year in Advance.

Notice.

THE UNION SIGNAL for one year to a club of ten, $10. This offer is extended to January 31, 1903.

Contents of This Number.

CURRENT TEMPERANCE NEWS 2, 3
CONTRIBUTED:
Soldiers Demand Substitute for Canteen—Conditions at Fort Washington, Md. By Ella M. Thacher—Soldiers' Reading Rooms at Portland, Maine. By Gertrude Stevens Leavitt—A Notable Interview. By Margaret Dye Ellis 4
The Wings of Love. By Joel Swartz—A Fight Against Odds. By Kate Anderson 5
Round the World Temperance Studies. By Mrs. Wilbur F. Crafts—How Shall Peace Be Secured? By Lucinda B. Chandler 6
CHILDREN'S COZY CORNER:
Scrap-Book Poetry—The Two Watches. By Adelbert F. Caldwell—Puzzler's Packet 7
EDITORIAL:
Wedded and Deserted—Society and Morality—The Hour's Demand—A Personality 8
Personal Mention—Devotional 9
EXPERIENCE CORNER 9
OFFICIAL COMMUNICATIONS 10
NEWS FROM THE FIELD 11, 12
WHAT TO DO WITH OUR HONORARIES—EDUCATION IN NEW MEXICO 13
HOW SHALL WE SOLVE THE PROBLEM OF THE DRINK EVIL 14
JANUARY MAGAZINES 15
SIGNAL NOTES—PUBLISHERS' NOTES 16

Red-Letter Day.

February 17,
FRANCES E. WILLARD THANKOFFERING DAY.
THE HEAVENLY BIRTHDAY OF MISS WILLARD.

News of the Week.

Tax on tea repealed Jan. 1 and 80,000,000 pounds released from United States bonded warehouses.

Nearly 7,000 people attended the President's annual New Year's reception at the White House.

Teachers of Iowa in state convention adopt a resolution favoring the use of the Bible in the public schools.

Edward VII. of England proclaimed emperor of India; 15,000 persons present in amphitheater at Delhi durbar.

General Grant's souvenirs of his trip around the world placed on exhibition in the National Museum at Washington.

Minister Leishman returns to Turkey with instructions to see the sultan and demand recognition of United States claims.

American Association for the Advancement of Science will petition President Roosevelt to appoint a physician on the isthmian canal board.

Pacific cable landed at Hawaiian islands Jan. 1 and first message sent by Gov. Dole to President Roosevelt via San Francisco; line was begun Dec. 14.

Annual report of Philippine commission declares organized insurrection at an end and recommends that Congress establish the gold standard in islands.

Special commissioner appointed in Missouri beef combine case makes report finding packers guilty of conspiring to fix and maintain prices. Firms may be driven from the state.

National School of Music for Teachers founded in Chicago, will open Jan. 9, under direction of William L. Tomlins. One hundred women teachers from the public schools will attend weekly sessions.

Bituminous coal miners throughout United States will demand 15 to 20 per cent wage increase before Jan. 19; $2,000,000 annually involved, but operators probably will make concessions; miners' defense fund likely.

New licensing act, which went into effect in London New Year's day, blacklists habitual drunkards and gives magistrates power to grant separations to husbands or wives whose partners have been repeatedly convicted.

Senator Hoar completes sweeping trust bill, appropriating $500,000 to aid in enforcement of law, providing for publicity of corporation affairs and forbidding under severe penalties discriminations in prices of products or in carrying charges.

Black Marks Erased. The 2,000 employes of the Cleveland, Ohio, Consolidated Railway Company are rejoicing over the erasure, on Christmas day, of all black marks remaining against their 1902 record. Although the system of giving employes these marks for infringement of the company's rules will be continued, this blotting out of past offenses will give fresh courage to the toilers and an opportunity to start anew. The company is to be commended for this kindly act.

A New Departure. With this issue we inaugurate a radical change in the system of reporting by states the work of the W. C. T. U. Hereafter this matter will be in fact what it has heretofore largely been in name only, NEWS, from the field. The movements of our lecturers and organizers, the accomplishments of local unions, every forward movement, will be chronicled weekly in brief, newsy fashion, suitably illustrated. With the assured co-operation of state presidents, and the faithful work of state reporters in the past as a guarantee of equally good service in the future, we believe the change will meet with general approbation.

How to Send Soldiers Reading Matter. The latest information about sending matter to the soldiers is that the packages must be addressed to the commanding officer of the post or company for which they are intended (not to any other individual) in care of the Depot Quartermaster, Army Building, Whitehall St., New York City, N. Y. The Quartermaster will then receive and forward them, providing all charges are prepaid to New York City and that the packages do not contain anything but reading matter. Out-of-date literature should not be sent. There is a fable that somebody once sent a bundle of twenty-five-year old agricultural papers to some soldier boys and that the Colonel paid seven dollars expressage on the same.

A Church Temperance Commission. Prompted thereto by the action of the Canadian M. E. Conference in electing a secretary of temperance work for the Dominion, a writer in the Epworth Herald suggests a plan looking to the appointment of a general temperance commission from the churches. 'Let," he says, "the great Methodist Episcopal church, at her next conference, appoint a commission of three or more of her greatest men and most influential leaders, not only in the temperance reform but in the church herself. Let those three men urgently request the other great denominations, at their general assemblies and conventions to unite in one great national temperance commission, to meet in convention and remain assembled until such plans have been matured and an appeal made to the Christian and moral people of our country, embodying the political, as well as the moral, features of the problem." The plan strikes us as being a step in the right direction, and feasible. Concerted, concentrated, consecrated effort on the part of the churches against the common foe would soon bring victory. Let the church of God with its moral power and all its mighty machinery come to the rescue!

Be Not Discouraged. The constructive thought of one generation does not become vital and dynamic until the next. The history of nations and of reforms prove the accuracy of this statement, and it is well for the pessimistically inclined to bear in mind this bit of philosophic truth. True reformers are far-seers.

A Greeting from Over the Sea. THE UNION SIGNAL acknowledges the receipt of a dainty Christmas calendar sent by Mrs. H. W. Carvosso, vice-president of the W. C. T. U. of Queensland, Australia. The contents of the blue-and-white booklet include Mrs. Stevenson's poem "The Christmas Greeting," a definition of the organization, the pledge, hints to local members, and many other valuable helps put into attractive and condensed form. Every white ribboner should carry with her just such a convenient little reference book.

Responsibility of Newspapers. "Yes," says a leading daily, "the newspapers are chronicling a great many savage assaults, robberies, poisonings and all sorts of horrible tragedies nowadays. They make shocking news which the papers would be glad to dispense with. It isn't their fault that their columns tell such tales. The people make the news and the newspapers must needs record it." But the people make other kinds of news also. Out of the multiplicity of happenings, pleasant and horrible, why not record more of the pleasant and less of the horrible? Good news, splendid achievement, there is in abundance but the idea seems to be firmly rooted in the journalistic mind that newspaper readers desire the shocking, that stories of depravity and savagery are more thrilling than stories of honor and chivalry, and "assignments" are made accordingly. The press is one of the mightiest forces of modern civilization in the formation of character, in directing impulses, stimulating tendencies, shaping events, and if the newspaper so willed we might have an epidemic of good deeds and humane, instead of an epidemic of assaults, poisonings and other criminal acts.

Remove the Cause. Speaking the other day upon "The Solution of the Liquor Problem," a socialistic leader declared that the causes of intemperance were incidental to the present capitalistic system. Put the idle rich to work, it was said, give the wage-earners fair pay, short hours and pleasant homes, and drunkenness with its attendant vices will disappear. "The efforts of so-called temperance people have heretofore, and are now, directed to effects, leaving causes untouched." The speaker evidently has not observed, or has failed to remember that the tendency of all present-day temperance effort is towards the removal of causes. If he will investigate, he will find, for instance, that the W. C. T. U., with its forty different departments, is directly and effectively aiming at causes; that it declares for a living wage, an eight-hour day, for the gospel of the Golden Rule; that its department of Temperance and Labor is working for the betterment of industrial conditions in line with these declarations. It should be remembered that intemperance was rife long before the present capitalistic system came into being (indeed, we had almost said that our socialistic friend had put the cart before the horse), and its prime cause is the liquor traffic itself. For the removal of this cause all sincere temperance people are working.

Anti-Canteen Law Not Responsible for Desertions.

Margaret Dye Ellis, Correspondent.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 5.—Adjutant General Corbin in his last annual report to the Secretary of War says: "The increase of desertions and of trials for infractions of discipline is, by those best informed, attributed to the abolition of the former privileges of the exchange."

The annual report of the inspector general to the secretary of war, for the year 1902, in referring to the number of desertions from the Presidio, California, says:

"A considerable number of the deserters in the Pacific states are supposed to have enlisted in the east with the intention of deserting after being taken to the coast by government transportation."

In this connection the following extracts from reports mentioning the subject of desertions are worthy of consideration: Major William E. Birkheimer, artillery corps, Presidio, California, presents the following view: "It is believed, and this belief is in conformity with the ideas of all officers and level headed enlisted men examined during the investigation, that one word covers the matter of desertions here inquired into, and that is 'recruit.' It is true that some old soldiers desert, but they are so few that the integrity and entire justness of this conclusion is not affected."

General Miles in his annual report declares: "In the Department of the Columbia three companies of artillery are in tents, and some of the officers living in huts not suitable to shelter public animals. Of course this is discouraging to our troops, injurious to the health of the garrisons, and no doubt is the cause of some desertions."

Colonel J. P. Sanger, Division of the Philippines, says: "Two hundred and ninety-two desertions have been reported, which is a small fraction over one per cent of the number of troops inspected. This is much less than one per company. Were the number of desertions much larger, and serious breaches of discipline frequent, it should occasion no surprise, as many of the companies have been without a captain and a very large number have been commanded by inexperienced lieutenants."

Colonel Garlington, Department of the Lakes, says: "The troops are now passing through the period following war, always a severe test to discipline, and at this particular time the difficulty is accentuated by the presence with troops of so many young officers of some active service, with rank superior to that now held, but untrained in many of the fundamental principles pertaining to the profession of arms."

Brigadier-General W. A. Kobbe, commanding the Department of Dakota, gives this common sense view: "Discipline and instruction are good, because, as a rule, officers are capable and painstaking. Generally speaking, the soldier is what his officer makes of him."

Major-General Bates, Department of Missouri, says: "Many desertions are undoubtedly due to home sickness on the part of the recruit, and because a considerable number of young men enlist with little knowledge of the life of a soldier, and without mature deliberation."

Major H. E. Tutherly, Eleventh Cavalry, acting inspector general, Department of the Columbia, says: "I am unable to attribute the large number of desertions to any particular cause; it is certainly not mistreatment of men, and the largest number is from posts whose location would lead to contentment. I would suggest as a remedy increased care in enlisting, more diligence in the pursuit of deserters, and severer punishments. I would also make garrisons more home-like for men by increasing and improving the facilities for amusement. Good post-exchange buildings, amusement halls, gymnasiums, and libraries should be provided by the government, and these places should be fitted up as such places are in civil life."

Major-General McArthur, commanding the Department of the Lakes, reports: "Libraries and reading rooms have been in operation at all the posts, but the supply of books is inadequate. For purposes of instructive reading a supply of military books is needed; for entertaining reading a good supply of works of fiction should be provided. The books now on hand are mainly old novels, which are being read, and re-read."

In the case at Fort Meyer, Va., just across from Washington, the government appropriates $40 annually for reading matter, but all that could be accounted for in a recent visit was two Washington dailies and two magazines.

Regarding the post exchange, Colonel Burton (Cuba) says: "The post exchange has been a great comfort to the troops, notwithstanding the adverse criticism of the change wrought by recent legislation in dispensing with the sale of beer."

Major Tutherly (Columbia) says: "I think it is being demonstrated that if the present exchange regulations are carried out with the same business energy that was exercised when the sale of beer was authorized, the exchange will serve a better purpose than the old regulation provided. Not only should the sale of intoxicants be prohibited on government reservations and transports, but also gambling."

Major Reynolds (Dakota) says: "I am inclined to the opinion that the abolition of the beer feature in post exchanges has not materially increased the number of trials by courts, nor called for other extra disciplinary measures. As for the post exchanges, they are fulfilling their purpose, and making money."

That there is a diversity of opinion as to opium smoking among the troops, witness the following testimony from two officers, both in the Philippines.

Major West (Fifth Separate Brigade, P. I.): "There is no opium smoking among soldiers of consequence."

Colonel Sanger (Division of the Philippines): "The habit of opium smoking among our soldiers has also been reported."

The action taken by the National officers of the W. C. T. U. requesting the "various states which do not have a state prohibitory law to take immediate steps to secure through their legislatures a law prohibiting saloons within four miles of U. S. forts, army posts, camps, and all premises used for military purposes by the United States," is most excellent. The same enthusiastic support along these lines that our women have accorded national legislation, will bring about wonderful results, and help greatly in solving a vexed problem.

Passed Prohibition Ordinance.

FLORENCE, Ala., Dec. 24.—The Board of Mayor and Aldermen at a called meeting on Monday night passed a very sweeping and stringent prohibition ordinance for the city of Florence which shall become operative on the first of January. The Legislature of 1900-01 passed a dispensary for the regulation of the sale of intoxicating liquors for this city and county. From July 1, 1901, to July 1, 1902, the dispensary continued in operation. Then it was discontinued by reason of a decision of the Supreme Court declaring the creating act unconstitutional. The high license upon saloons was then adopted by the city administration and such has been the policy for controlling and regulating the traffic for the past six months.

The dispensary question was the issue in the Legislative primary held last August, and the dispensary candidates were nominated and subsequently elected. The city administration, which is opposed to the dispensary, by passing a prohibition ordinance has forced what may prove an embarrassing situation to the supporters of the dispensary. In order that the dispensary may be established they will have to ask the Legislature to amend the city charter by depriving the city of the power to regulate the liquor traffic in whatever manner it may see fit—in other words in order that the dispensary may be established they must ask that a prohibition law be repealed.

Renews Fight on Liquor.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Dec. 27.—The old fight between the Illinois Anti-Saloon League and the Liquor Dealers' Association is to be renewed during the coming session of the legislature. This time the Anti-Saloon League will concentrate its efforts in one direction.

Local option is to be the battle cry of the organized enemies of the saloon—local option for every sort of political division known to the maps; local option for counties, for townships, for cities and villages, for wards and for precincts. Their bill on the subject is not a new one, but no measure of the sort has ever come into the general assembly with the backing this one is promised.

William H. Anderson, the superintendent and attorney for the Anti-Saloon League, is directing the fight for that organization. Ever since the close of the last general assembly he has been preparing for his campaign. He has enlisted many churches throughout the state and has procured indorsements from pastors and prominent church and temperance workers.

Colonel Holt in Oregon.

PORTLAND, Ore., Dec. 15.—Colonel Holt, of Chicago, has reorganized the Woman's Christian Temperance Union in Vancouver. The officers are: President, Mrs. Lonsberry; corresponding secretary, Mrs. C. C. Gridley; treasurer, Mrs. Wintler. The W. C. T. U. had ceased to take any active part in local temperance work. Its reorganization is the direct result of the temperance campaign now in progress.

Last night Colonel Holt addressed a crowded house on the subject, "Ten Dollars and Costs," which had to do with the large number of disorders ending in court as a result of the drink habit. The Colonel administered another slap to the local city government by declaring that its council grants licenses to saloons and at the same time enacts ordinances against drunkenness, which punish people for the evils they themselves create.

Many Take the Pledge.

TORONTO, Canada, Dec. 29.—Massey Hall was filled yesterday afternoon, when Dr. J. T. Gilmour, warden of the Central Prison, took the chair at the Canadian Temperance League meeting. The president, Mr. J. S. Robertson, said that the meeting would be of a special pledge-signing character, and pledge cards had been handed to each one as they entered the hall.

Miss Eva Booth, in her address, referring to the recent vote, said the friends of temperance had great reason to be encouraged at the large vote rolled up in favor of closing the bars. "The truth is," said Miss Booth, "we have made up our minds we won't have the drink." No reason, she continued, could be given in favor of the drink traffic. Nothing ever brought the same degree of ruin to a country as drink, neither conflagration, famine, epidemic nor war. Nothing manufactured more coffins than the drink. It killed children, wrecked homes and damned souls. Miss Booth's address closed by the reading of a letter that had been dictated to a Salvation Army worker by the widow of a drunkard, as she herself was about to die. It told how husband and son, and again another son, had been "damned by the drink."

The response to this special effort to pledge the Sunday's Massey Hall audience resulted in 1,216 persons signing the league pledge cards. The league have in contemplation a series of revival meetings on the line of their work of ten years ago, when Jos. Hess spoke at meetings for the league continuously for a month.

Catholics Wage War on Saloons.

PITTSBURG, Pa., Dec. 26.—At a reunion of the Total Abstinence Society of St. Patrick's Roman Catholic Church, last Sunday, it was decided to wage a war upon the liquor traffic in the parish and build up the membership of the society.

The Total Abstinence Society in St. Patrick's parish was organized about thirty years ago and has flourished despite the encroachments of the mills in the district. At present it has a membership of about 100 in good standing.

Speaking of the war to be waged, yesterday, the Rev. Father Graham stated that the primary idea was the increase of membership, but that could not be accomplished without aiming at the saloons. "We have many young men in our parish who are away from a home influence," said he, "and it is the intention of the society to keep them away from the saloons. There are many others who are older and we are going after them. Our parish is in a manufacturing district and most of the employes are drawing good wages. It is the intention of the society to keep them in good company and save them, both financially and morally.

Maine Sheriffs Will Enforce the Law.

PORTLAND, Me., Jan. 1.—The sheriffs of the sixteen counties of this state elected three months ago took office to-day, and much interest was taken in their attitude concerning the prohibition laws.

In Kennebec county Sheriff Frank J. Ham instructed his twenty deputies that the prohibitory law must be enforced. "I want every deputy," he said, "to notify all the dealers that between now and next Monday they must dispose of their goods and paraphernalia or suffer the consequences."

In Androscoggin county the sheriff is a minister, Rev. Charles S. Cummings. In anticipation of the beginning of his term the saloons of Lewiston, the largest city in the county, had been closed. The liquor business was at a standstill to-day.

Martin Lawlis, sheriff of Aroostook county, on assuming his duties to-day, notified all liquor dealres that they would be given until the 10th of this month to close up.

Work of Citizens' League.

The Citizens' League of Chicago in the year just closed prosecuted 492 saloon-keepers for selling liquor to minors or drunkards and in a majority of cases convictions were secured.

The largest number of cases handled in a single month was forty-five. The expenses of the organization for the year were $3,000. The mayor, chief of police, city law department and state and county attorneys' offices have given the league cordial support in carrying on its work. The justices of the peace and the judges of the criminal court have been firm in dealing with saloon-keepers who debauch minors or sell liquor to drunken parents.

The officers of the organization are: President, Harry Gordon; vice-president, Rev. F. M. Carson; secretary, S. J. Fickel; treasurer, A. L. Coe; general superintendent, Rev. M. M. Parkhurst.

Echo of a Saloon War.

LOGANSPORT, Ind., Dec. 25.—A gang of hoodlums, supposed to belong to the saloon element of Royal Center, egged the residences of Oliver Hand, editor of the Royal Center Record, and Nicholas Hall, a prominent citizen, who recently took a leading part in defeating the applications of three Royal Center saloonists.

Prohibitionists Win at Charco.

BERCLAIR, Tex., Dec. 23.—At the prohibition election held at Charco, in this county, last Friday, the prohibitionists won by a good majority.

The Bible in Nebraska Public Schools.

Medora D. Nickell, Correspondent.

BEATRICE, Neb., Jan. 5.—There is reason for strong hope that the case of the use of the Bible in the public schools, recently (Oct. 9, 1902), decided adversely to the defendants by the Supreme Court of Nebraska, may have a reversed decision in the very near future.

The syllabus is this: "Exercises by a teacher in a public school, in a school building, in school hours, and in the presence of the pupils, consisting of the reading passages from the Bible, and in the singing of songs and hymns, and offering prayer to the Deity in accordance with the doctrines, beliefs, customs and usages of sectarian churches, or religious organizations, is forbidden by the constitution of this state."

The teacher, Miss Edith Bucher, positively and specifically states, and the records bear her out, that at no time or place did she utter a word or syllable or sign that could be construed into sectarian teaching or comment on her part. On this basis, Judge E. O. Kretsinger, attorney for the defense, has prepared an exhaustive brief, touching all points of this notable case, citing constitutional authority, opinions of prominent jurists, and personal experiences of well known educators, as to what is or is not sectarian teaching. This brief is now in the hands of the judges of the Supreme Court of the state.

The plaintiff in the case is one Daniel Freeman, a man of about seventy years, who has a certain notoriety from being the first homesteader in the United States. That seems to be all, however, for which he might claim public attention, save this opposition to the Bible being used in the district school where his children attend. It is not merely that he wishes no sectarian teaching—he is opposed to the Bible. Consequently, when defeated in district court, he appealed to the Supreme Court. It was, and is, a matter of astonishment to everyone that he won his case there.

Judge Kretsinger is an able lawyer, strong, clear, and convincing in his arguments, a man of pronounced temperance views—having carried through successfully many cases against the nation's great curse—the liquor traffic. During the years of his mayoralty in Beatrice, where he has resided for over eighteen years, the council voted licenses and passed it over his veto, but he did not sign them, for, said Judge Kretsinger, "My name shall never hang in a saloon."

Judge Kretsinger.

The point in the Bible case is that the constitution forbids sectarian teaching in public schools, but the court failed to distinguish the difference between sectarian and religious teaching.

A Good Showing in New Jersey.

Emily Ruth Kirby, Correspondent.

WOODSTOWN, N. J., Jan. 5.—The twenty-one counties of New Jersey held annual conventions preceding the state convention, at three of which new presidents were chosen from the young women of the state. Mrs. I. H. Demarest was the speaker at five of these conventions, and also addressed two county Sunday school conventions on "Why total abstinence should be taught in the Sunday schools." Miss Belle Kearney, of Mississippi, and Miss Christine Tinling, of England, spoke at several of the conventions.

The state gathering at Cape May was the best of all the years; through its influence many young women are being attracted to this work. The state president's address was the best in her forty years of untiring service. The corresponding secretary's report showed a keener grasp of the work in all sections; 663 able speakers have been presented to audiences throughout the state during the year, 1,824 have signed the pledge, and 2,480 children have signed the triple pledge; 4,555 local meetings have been held and 1,416 public meetings. We have a membership of 8,015 (W's and Y's) and 1,131 honoraries. The treasurer's report showed a balance of $1,803.01 in the treasury to begin the year's work. Mrs. S. S. Fessenden, of Boston, and Miss Christine Tinling, our English comrade, were the evening speakers.

A Y was organized by Miss Tinling. The city council voted $200 to the Cape May local union to help defray the expenses of the convention. The delegates enjoyed the relaxation afforded by a reception given in their honor at the Columbia.

Miss Ada Butcher, the president of the Bridgeton Y, one of the widest awake local societies in the state, led her forces magnificently in the recent elections in that city. She, with several corps of workers, at a given time, tied badges of "Vote 'No Saloons'" on thousands of school children as they were leaving the school building to go to their homes. As a result the first party Prohibition councilman in the city's history was elected. The end is not yet. The council is now organized and the saloon men may well tremble.

The work throughout the state is in a healthy condition as we will try to prove from week to week during 1903.

Miss Phelps' Work in North Dakota.

Elizabeth Preston-Anderson, Correspondent.

DRAYTON, N. D., Dec. 30.—Miss Lillian M. Phelps, of St. Catharines, Ont., has just closed a three months' campaign in this state and has accomplished a remarkable work.

By her logic, fire and earnestness, she has greatly strengthened the cause of prohibition and has added members to our organization.

She has taken $200 in subscriptions for the state work and the W. C. T. U. Home. Her collections have paid her salary and expenses and put the snug little sum of $70 in the state treasury.

The general officers of North Dakota heartily commend Miss Phelps to any state desiring a high grade of work done.

Essays by School Children on Alcoholic Drinks.

(Special Correspondence.)

CASTILE, N. Y., Jan. 5.—Dr. Cordelia A. Greene and Elizabeth F. Gordon a few months since offered prizes for the best essays on alcoholic drinks. The subject of these essays was divided into four parts:

What effect do alcoholic liquors have upon the human body?

Is the appetite for them natural and healthy, or unnatural and diseased?

Is the saloon a school for education into virtue or vice?

Is it right for the national or state government to sustain it by law?

The children were requested to give, in their essays, notable examples of those who had suffered from the use of drink.

The effect of this offer was to get the boys and girls, as well as their parents and friends, to reading and thinking along these lines and so many books on temperance were never before taken from the library. Material showing the evil effects of alcohol and giving arguments for right, temperate living which never had been heard of before, were unearthed. Over twenty dollars was spent in prizes. Every one who even tried received a nice book and even the following brief lines received a suitable reward:

"The meaning of alcohol is devil, and it does the devil's work well, ever seeking to destroy soul and body, and bringing misery and want into thousands of happy homes."

The following is taken from a letter written by an L. T. L. girl to Miss Gordor and gives the children's point of view:

"I do not think any one who wrote is sorry they did. I am sure I am very glad. I wish something could be done that would wipe the terrible saloons from this world of ours. If some of the saloonkeepers could read some of the essays perhaps they would think differently than they do now."

Illinois Favors Immigration Act.

Mary E. Hopper, Correspondent.

CHICAGO, Jan. 5.—The state is just now working in the interest of the Immigration Bill that has passed the House and is pending in the Senate. The provisions of the bill are the exclusion of illiterates, the prohibition of liquor selling in immigrant stations, and in all United States Government buildings and the grounds appertaining thereto.

Blank petitions to be used as directed are being sent to each union. Men and women are expected to send ten-word telegrams to our senators, Messrs. Cullom and Mason, in words to this effect, "Undersigned favor immigration act, especially provisions about illiterates and liquors."

These telegrams may be signed by ten persons, each paying ten cents of the expense. This is thought to be our most effective method of bringing influence to bear. The state officers desire that this work be vigorously prosecuted.

No-License Victories in Louisiana.

N. E. Oliver, Correspondent.

ESTHERWOOD, La., Jan. 5.—We are rejoicing over a signal victory in Avoyelles Parish, a special election called by the advocates of license having resulted in an indorsement of the present system of no-license. We hope to inaugurate no-license campaigns in every parish in the state. Considerable sentiment in favor of such a campaign in Acadia Parish was created by the Parish Institute and convention held in December at Crowley.

Six localities were represented in the attendance, and eight or ten departments of work were presented and illustrated by readings and discussions. The Parish Union was organized with officers as follows: President, Mrs. Kate E. Wilkins, of Evangeline; vice-president, Mrs. Stella McCoy, Estherwood; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Nellie Nordyke, Iota; recording secretary, Mrs. Leora Cushing, Iota; treasurer, Mrs. Mary Welsh, Crowley.

Six new members were added to the Crowley Union. Ten subscriptions were taken for THE UNION SIGNAL and literature upon all the departments was distributed. I believe this is the only parish organization in the state at present.

We expect to have Mrs. Callie Howe and Mrs. Clara C. Hoffman with us, the former in February, the latter in March. As a sort of "preparing the way before," the corresponding secretary, who is also one of the state organizers, will make a tour of the state starting about the middle of January. She hopes to revive the work where it has grown cold and to organize in some new places as well as reorganize where unions are dead.

New Year Plans in Washington.

SPOKANE, Wash., Dec. 31.—A medal contest, a new state paper and Sunday afternoon temperance mass meetings are three things of importance which may soon appear in Spokane. These plans outlined if set in operation will make the year of 1903 a notable one in the history of the W. C. T. U.

The W. C. T. U. city federation met yesterday afternoon with a goodly number of delegates present. The ladies are preparing to hold a medal contest the latter part of January at the Blair Business College, to be participated in both by the Blair students and the Northwestern Business College.

The advisability of starting a state paper was also brought up and discussed, but no definite action was taken. The matter is creating considerable discussion and it is possible that Spokane may be the headquarters of such an organ in the near future.

The federation is greatly pleased with the progress made in the organization of the Law Enforcement League and it is stated it is receiving names and financial aid daily to help carry on the good work.

Along this line the federation is making plans to hold Sunday afternoon temperance mass meetings and it is expected the meetings may be started in the near future.

Annual Meeting in Iowa.

Clara P. White, Correspondent.

VOLGA, Iowa, Jan. 5.—The annual meeting held in Manchester was marked by large attendance and advanced plans inspired by the president's able address. The convention raised three hundred dollars for the state work, by pledges, by the blackboard plan.

The Dubuque Rescue Home was represented by Dr. Harvey M. Hill, president of the board of directors. This home takes the place of the Mother Benedict Home. Mrs. M. H. Dunham, Mrs. R. S. Lichtenwalter, Mrs. Satella Penman and Mrs. E. A. Armstrong were chosen delegates to the World's Convention. The old officers were re-elected: President, Mrs M. H. Dunham; vice-president, Mrs. J. B. Shesler; corresponding secretary, Miss Belle Mix; recording secretary, Mrs. L. D. Carhart; treasurer, Mrs. Carrie K. Godfrey.

Colorado Educators Interested.

Esther A. Gaymon, Correspondent.

DENVER, Colo., Jan. 5.—Mrs. A. A. Hawley, state president, was invited to speak on Scientific Temperance Instruction, before the Teacher's State Convention at Colorado Springs, Dec. 24. She was cordially received and her address will aid greatly the work of this important department in the state.

Mrs. M. A. Wier, former state vice-president, lately read a paper on "Morality in the Public Schools," at the Teachers' County Association held at Grand Junction. The association tendered her a vote of thanks and requested that her paper be published in the two leading newspapers of the city.

Thus our work is being recognized by the leading educators of the state.

Miss Stewart Afield.

WAHPETON, N. D., Jan. 2:—A crowded house greeted Miss Anne Rothwell Stewart at Lisbon. Twenty-one pledges were secured, and thirteen new members gained, nine of these being honoraries.

Soldiers Demand Substitute for Canteen—Conditions at Fort Washington, Md.

By Ella M. Thacher.

THE life of the soldier as found in the Marine and the Washington Barracks, Washington, D. C., is an interesting study. Some of these soldiers are boys indeed, ranging between the ages of twelve and sixteen years. Recently while visiting the barracks in company with Mrs. Randolph, district superintendent, in the name of the W. C. T. U., I distributed forty-five comfort bags to young buglers who will soon be sent to the uttermost parts of the earth. Some of the boys were not more than ten years old and so small that it made my heart ache to see them there, and I could but exclaim "Who will care for these little fellows? Oh, what dreadful experiences they will pass through!"

Three or four of the younger ones as they were dismissed came to me and said, "I have no mother, if I had I would not be here today." One little fellow said, "Oh, I am trying to be a good boy, but it is so hard; lady, pray for me." Another said, "I am so glad you came. I thought the W. C. T. U. hated us and saw no good in us, and took away the only place we had to have pleasure in." I tried to explain to him just what we want to do for the sailors and soldiers, and I spoke of the $500,000 appropriated by Congress for their benefit. "Yes," he said, "but who has got it? We hain't; we have not a place but the saloon and the theatre and houses where you would not want us to go." I assured him that we hoped soon to open the rooms planned for their comfort. "Yes, but where will we be?" "Did you ever think," another one said, "how we have not one thing to help us to be better? Who wants us in their homes? Why do you not open rooms for us if you are so good and want to help us?"

There should be national club rooms in Washington where the thousands of soldiers and sailors at the barracks would find a welcome and where light refreshments could be obtained. Once started, such an establishment would pay its own way. Why is this not done? Five dollars from each state in this Union would pay the rent of the building, and brave hearts at Washington would do the rest.

The outside saloons are fast making drunkards of these boys because there are no safe places of interest inside the camp, and yet some of the army officers are creating a disturbance by declaring "The canteen must go back, it is the only way."

Look in the Fort Myer reading room and the restaurant store of the post exchange—low, dingy, dirty rooms—and ask yourself the question, What is there attractive here? Then go to Fort Washington, examine the combination chapel and reading room, and ponder over the amusements furnished by the government. Fort Washington is miles away from any human habitation except the two saloon shacks where the soldier wards of this grand country spend their money and ruin their souls. With the canteen gone, and nothing to take its place, nowhere to go for amusement except the outside "shacks," do you wonder that drunkenness and the guard house are the inevitable result?

Colonel Roberts, the husband of our own Mrs. Roberts, whose work in Cuba was so blessed of God, is spoken of highly by the soldiers of Fort Washington. He declares that it is impossible to keep the men from drinking while the saloons are so near camp. "Now," said he, "get the state legislatures to remove these places. Forbid their coming within three miles of any government reservation, then you will have solved the canteen question. Then there will be no trouble about the canteen." We should begin this work at once. We are blamed for removing the canteen. Army officers everywhere demand, "Put something in its place and remove the shacks outside; women who can do one thing certainly can do the other."

I organized a union of forty-five noble boys at this fort, some of them Christians. They meet together every Monday night with their good chaplain. Mrs. B. K. Roberts, the commandant's wife, was made president, and Chaplain Springer, treasurer, with Private Roy E. Wagoner, Forty-fourth Coast Artillery, as corresponding secretary. Evangelistic (the foundation stone), Flower Mission and Social departments were adopted. These departments need encouragement. New literature, books and magazines (freight prepaid), flags, pictures, anything to make the reading rooms attractive, could be sent them.

To convince these boys in blue that we are in earnest I left with them four rocking chairs and eight easy chairs, paying for them myself, forty-five comfort bags, which took three days to put in order, and other articles needed., and all of our Frances E. Willard Soldiers' Union at Fort Washington were supplied with a Christmas gift, the first Christmas gift some of these soldiers had ever received. As no boxes of comfort bags can be sent to Cuba or Manila unless duty and freight are prepaid, we must more abundantly supply our "boys at home."

Let us live up to what our soldier boys rightly expect of us. The canteen must not be re-established, but we as W. C. T. U. women must supply a suitable substitute, and there must be no delay.

Florence, N. J.

Soldiers' Reading Rooms at Portland, Maine.

By Gertrude Stevens-Leavitt.

THOSE who attended the National Convention at Portland heard so much about the city and its surrounding towns, that to them it is unnecessary to say that so broad is our coast line, and so fine is our harbor, that we offer an excellent point of attack to an enemy in case of war. Therefore we are well fortified by Forts Williams and Preble, and Forts Leavitt and McKinley are in process of construction.

As soon as possible after her arrival, Mrs. Thacher was busy in arranging to visit Forts Williams and Preble and organize a union among the soldiers. This was made possible, and two live and lively unions resulted. Mrs. E. L. Burnham is the president of Fort Preble union and Mrs. Susan Graham Clark of Fort Williams. The enthusiasm of the "boys" is immense, and they display a most gratifying earnestness of purpose.

It soon became apparent that something ought to be done for these soldiers in a practical way, and a suggestion was made that the Portland union should provide a reading and entertainment room for the use of the soldiers when they are in town, as they so often are. Accordingly two pleasant rooms have been secured in Monument Square, near the terminus of the electric car line which brings the soldiers into the city. The formal opening of these rooms occurred Saturday evening, November 29.

As we have said, the rooms are conveniently located, and they are bright and attractive. On the walls are two fine flags, one the gift of Mrs. Thacher. There is also a portrait of Abraham Lincoln and one of Mrs. Thacher. Portland's mayor has given us two more fine pictures, which will soon be hung. Tables and chairs constitute the present furnishings, but we are hoping to have a piano and other useful and necessary things.

Mayor Boothby and Mrs. Boothby, who entertained Mrs. Thacher during the Convention, attended the opening of these rooms and the mayor gave pleasant words of greeting to the soldiers.

The executive committee of the Portland union was represented by Miss Cornelia Dow, Mrs. W. H. Hobbs and Mrs. Emma E. Thompson. Miss Dow presided over the exercises. A mandolin and guitar club furnished delightful music, and the soldiers themselves sang most acceptably. Rev. Mr. Ware represented the ministers of Portland in a telling little speech, which was applauded. A telegram of greeting from Mrs. Stevens was read, also regrets from officers of the forts expressing their inability to attend. Mrs. Boothby and Mrs. Leavitt said a few words, and after the singing of "America" the evening became one of social intercourse.

We must not forget to say that when Mrs. Thatcher's name was mentioned the boys applauded with vigor and proposed "Three cheers for Mrs. Thacher!" and they were given with so great heartiness that Miss Dow said, "I think they were heard by Mrs. Thacher in Florence, New Jersey!"

The rooms will be open every evening, and we hope they may prove a "homey" place where the boys may gather and be happy.

It is our purpose to supply plenty of good reading matter, which may be taken away, and to provide all kinds of games for the enjoyment of those who come to the rooms.

Great interest in this project is manifested by the outside public as well as by the white-ribboners, and we hope for abundant support in more ways than one.

Much credit is due to Mrs. Burnham, president of Fort Preble union, for she has worked untiringly in behalf of this measure, and she brings to the work a heart of love and a life of consecration.

Portland, Maine.

A Notable Interview.

By Margaret Dye Ellis.

IN the death of Hon. Thomas B. Reed, the world has lost one of its greatest statesmen, and the cause of woman a strong, brave, able defender.

It was my privilege to call on Mr. Reed at his office in New York several times during his speakership, and twice since he resigned his position in Congress, the last time being but three weeks before his fatal illness. It came about in this way:

While in attendance at the National Convention in Portland, Dr. S. J. Elliott, a deaconness in the Protestant Episcopal church, and representing the Interdenominational Council of Women, waited upon the National Executive committee, with the urgent request of that body that the W. C. T. U. should take off their hands the work of trying to secure an anti-polygamy amendment to the Federal Constitution, for the reason that the W. C. T. U. being a much older, larger society, could wield a greater influence than they. After discussion and due deliberation, it was decided that we should assist the Council in this endeavor. By some we were advised to work for the amendment through Congressional action, by others, to work through the state legislatures, two-thirds of whom may call for a Constitutional Convention. I was appealed to for advice, and feeling the need of wise counsel, I wrote to Mr. Reed asking for an interview. He immediately replied that he was at his office each morning and would be glad to see me at any time.

November 12, Doctor Elliot and I called on him and were at once shown to his private office. Although writing busily, he arose to greet us. After introductions, I said, "Mr. Reed, it may seem presumptious on our part to come to you for advice, but I represent the Legislative department of the National W. C. T. U. and I am looked to for guidance in these matters by about three hundred thousand women. I therefore realize the need of counsel from the very highest source possible, and so I have made bold to come to you. May I ask you a few questions?" Mr. Reed smiled and, responding kindly, gave us just the advice sought; sent for books, going over the different amendments to the Constitution with us. I ventured to question him on other matters of national import, viz.: the repeal of the anti-canteen law, and the seeming desire on the part of the War Department and others high in Army circles for a repeal of the law, and I asked what he would advise.

"Madam," he replied, "hold the law."

"But, Mr. Reed, how can we hold the law with such odds against us?"

"How did you get the law?"

"We fought for it."

"Then, Madam, hold it by the same means, BUT HOLD IT." This was declared with great earnestness.

Upon the matter of government permits being issued in prohibition territory, he went over the question patiently and carefully, pointing out the difficulties in the way. There was no hurry, no shoving one off; but kindly, willing, gentlemanly aid.

As I spoke of our National Convention so recently held in Portland, his face lighted up as he exclaimed:

"Oh, you've seen Portland; I hope you had good weather. Did you visit the Western Promenade, and did you ever see a more beautiful city?"

Upon our assuring him that there had been ideal weather, and that we had seen the various notable points, with real tenderness in his voice he said:

"Portland is the most beautiful spot on this round earth. My forefathers were born there, I was born there, and some day I expect to lie there." How soon it came to pass:

He talked earnestly with Doctor Elliott as to existing conditions in Utah, her residence of eight years in the state as a physician having given her a wide experience.

As he took my hand in parting, I again thanked him in behalf of our great organization, to which he responded:

"I am glad if I have been able to give you the help you wanted, but please do not quote me; I am out of public life now; my utterances would very likely be misconstrued or misunderstood; I have gladly given what you have asked, but this is for your personal guidance."

Now that he has passed into the life where there can be no misconstruing of words or motives, I feel free to tell what he said.

Doctor Elliott had never before seen him, and as we were walking down the corridor she exclaimed: "What a magnificent man in every way; physically so strong, so generous. Why, that interview was marvelous." In less than four weeks he had gone.

When I told a young lawyer, who frequently assists me, of our interview, and that Mr. Reed had given us a half-hour of his valuable time, with a laugh and a shrug of the shoulders he said:

"That's just like you women; any man in the country would have expected to pay a hundred dollars for that advice, but you coolly walk in, and at the close of the interview shake hands, and thank him."

The death of such a man is a national loss.

Washington, D. C.

The Wings of Love. By Joel Swartz.

SOMETIMES my fainting lips will say
(But not in moods of loftiest love),
"O, I am weary of my stay,
And would from sorrow fly away,
Had I the pinions of a dove!"

Yes; weary oft, I sigh for rest,
And for a home from labor free;
But still I feel when most opprest,
And when my heart is at its best,
Some work, undone, still waits for me.

For this, not wings, but hands I need,
And faith and patience, hope and cheer;
And so I pray for feet to speed
With haste to meet the crying need
Of loving service now and here.

Devon, Pa.

A Fight Against Odds

By Kate Anderson

CHAPTER I.

THE Kilgour family were seated around the dinner table. The dining room was a picture of cosy comfort, and the dinner of crisp bacon, mashed potatoes and early asparagus had evidently been enjoyed. As Mrs. Kilgour is dispensing the dessert of rhubarb pie she wonders aloud why Claude is so late.

Mr. Kilgour, leaning back in his chair, looks happy and satisfied. He wears the uniform of a railroad conductor. His train, the Wabash flier, starts east at 1:48 p. m., and he does not get home until 2:20 a. m., so this dinner is really his breakfast, for he does not rise until eleven o'clock. Mr. Kilgour is a portly, handsome man, with pleasant blue eyes, who looks almost as young as his eldest son, Ralph, seated at his left.

Ralph is a square-jawed, resolute, rather solemn-faced youth who appears several years older than his actual age—barely twenty-one. On a guess you might venture him to be either a Methodist theological student or a speculative devotee of philosophy, but in actual truth he is a rising sport—the pet, intimate and confidant of the racing and gambling set of a decidedly fast and sporty border town. Underneath his quiet and rather heavy-set exterior rests a dominant and peculiarly winning personality, which makes him a favorite with men of all classes, while a certain will power and strong common sense steer him clear of the pitfalls among which he daily treads. Strange to say, though in close and constant companionship with men addicted to all the vices of the "horsey" type, Ralph does not drink because "that sort of thing is so beastly disgusting, don't you know." He does not smoke because he cannot bear tobacco—"makes me sick as a dog." He does not gamble because he "can't afford it. It's the ruination of good sport, anyhow."

Perhaps Ralph Kilgour's example had done more to ruin certain of the soft-headed youth of Riverton than that of any ten weaker men, for in attempting to follow his dangerous leadership along the path that he trod with such robust confidence, they found, to their sorrow, that out of a thousand there was but one Kilgour.

Beside Ralph sits the daughter of the household, a winsome girl with chestnut hair, wonderful eyelashes shading lovely brown eyes, and a skin like a pink rose-petal. There is nothing remarkable about Alice save her dainty beauty and a yearning social ambition which has cost her many a heartache. How could she dream that there were keener pangs in store for her than the snubs of a banker's daughter or the cold recognition of lawyer Lireby's angular young wife?

Willie is a wiry, skinny, eel-like youth of seventeen, with a screwed-up face, twinkling brown eyes like his mother's and a certain sweet, engaging personality. He is just now very much in love with Dr. Meredith's daughter, an estimable young lady some eight years Willie's senior.

All eyes are turned as the hall door is banged open and a small boy dashes in, calling, "Is everything eaten up, mamma?"

Claude is well worth a second glance, for a handsomer, finer looking lad is seldom to be seen. His boyish young form is as straight as an arrow. Even at the immature age of twelve, his wonderful chest and shoulders, narrow hips, and tapering feet give promise of almost perfect manly symmetry. A noble head crowned with a wealth of short yellow curls (which Claude hates), a high forehead, great blue eyes with extreme beauty of feature and coloring, make Claude a mark whithersoever his handsome limbs may carry him. He is, indeed, known in his native town as the "Infant Apollo," a title bestowed upon him by a Detroit paper in describing his prowess at a small boy's international running-match held a few years earlier.

Claude is a good boy and a gifted boy, the ecstatic pride and joy of his own family, scarcely less so of his teachers and associates. He is head-boy in the second form of the collegiate. He is soprano soloist in the vested choir of Little Trinity. He is his Sabbath-school teacher's darling, and his boy-friends' hero.

The Kilgours are not a religious family, nor yet one of exalted moral ideals. They take pride in being square and upright in all their dealings, and in a respectability amounting to a certain style and position in their little city. The children have always attended Little Trinity Sunday-school, and the boys have all belonged, as a matter of course, to the Trinity Boys' Brigade, graduating as they grew old enough into the ranks of the Frontier Fusiliers. Ralph had been of the gallant Riverton Sixteen who had gone to South Africa with the first contingent, where he had distinguished himself for conspicuous bravery at Paardeburg, and since his return he had been granted the rank of lieutenant.

"Well, I must be off," remarked Mr. Kilgour, at last rising from the table.

"Take care of yourself, Will," said his wife, lovingly. "Have they dismissed that drunken engineer yet? Why don't you report him?"

"Come, now, Nellie, you wouldn't want me to be the means of firing the poor wretch?" laughed Kilgour as he kissed his wife's cheek and pressed it to his for a brief moment.

"Good-bye, Allie, dear," kissing his daughter, "I've got you that pass, and you can start on your jaunt as soon as Wednesday."

"Good-bye, my dear boys. Be good lads," and he shook hands with them each, running his fingers through Claude's bright locks.

What instinct was it that made them all, even to Ralph, follow their father to the porch, and kept them every one watching his gay footsteps till he disappeared round the corner of Brossoit avenue? They could not know that this was the last time they would ever see their bonny, noble-hearted protector alive.

Ere noon on the morrow the agonized wife and children were crouched around the closed coffin holding the mangled remains of what had once been husband and father.

In one other home in the little city, two old heart-broken parents and a stricken sister were weeping for the untimely taking away of an only son and brother. Walter Gray had been fireman on the ill-fated Number Five, and was the only support of aged parents and invalid sister.

In St. Thomas two other households were plunged into grief that can not be told.

And the cause of this woeful desolation?

"The engineer was intoxicated!"

It is but a fortnight later, and again we find the now sad-faced little group gathered about the dinner-table. As they try to swallow the appetizing fare before them, each thinks of the jolly feasts of by-gone days, and the food chokes them.

Finally Ralph pushes away his plate, and speaks: "It's like this, mother, the insurance, with what is in the bank, amounts in all to barely $4,000. The question is, shall we take $2,200 and pay off the mortgage at once or let it run on the remainder of the term, or sell out and rent elsewhere?"

"Don't let our home go!" they all spoke in chorus. "Dear father took such pride in the place."

"We're all agreed, I guess, on that point. Well, mother, shall we pay up at once, or let it run? We're paying Morton six per cent, and until we can see our way clear to a safe investment, that almost swallows up the bank interest on our entire resources."

"O Ralph, dear, it wrenches my very heart-strings to think of letting your father's home go, but don't you think it an undue extravagance for us to keep a handsome little property like this in our present circumstances? We could live very comfortably indeed in a much less pretentious house and neighborhood."

The boys gathered round their mother.

"No, indeed, mother darling, as long as we fellows live you'll never leave the home which father intended as a gift to you on your silver wedding."

The widow burst into tears, and Ralph threw his arm about her and continued in a forced, dry voice: "The remainder, when invested, will yield you a little income of about $100, with a free home and fine garden, and no rent or interest to pay. Then I can't afford to retain my clerkship at the ticket office with promotion a mere promise of the perhaps distant future. To be sure, I stand the chance to become city agent in time, but as matters are now I can't afford to wait on a salary of $300, so I accepted an offer from Cruickshank this morning as clerk with a good deal of the manager's work in his absence, at a salary of fifty dollars a month and board if I wish it. I think the job will suit me and I know I can give satisfaction."

A murmur of gratification rose from the little circle, "And I'm going to stop school at the end of the term and go to Model School, and teach for two or three years," announced Willie.

"You needn't do that, Billy," said Ralph kindly. "Stay right on till you get a first, and then you can boost yourself through college by teaching or anyway you like, but I'll stand you another year or two at home here."

Willie protested hotly, but was silenced by the unanimous vote of the family.

Allie had already been employed for some months as stenographer and clerk in Lawyer Lirely's office, and was earning a nice little salary of twenty-five dollars a month.

"You bet I'll earn money, too, mamma. I'll get a job in the holidays," spoke Claude eagerly, "and when I'm old enough Mr. O'Hara says he's going to take me into his office and make a famous editor of me."

All eyes turned with affectionate pride to their darling. Of course Claude would never make aught else than a great man, whatsoever calling he might choose in life.

A shadow loomed in the open doorway, and a very tall, very portly, handsome man was warmly greeted. Mr. Cruickshank was almost the richest man in Riverton. He was sole owner and proprietor of the immense hotel which rivaled in exclusiveness and magnificence some of the best houses in Detroit. Riverton was perhaps the only town of its size in the Dominion of Canada which could support such an enterprise. However, Riverton, being the centre, and adjacent to the great Republic, the hotel was extensively patronized by monied people on both sides the line. Mr. Cruickshank also owned miles of river and lake front, besides having other extensive business interests in Riverton. Mrs. Kilgour rose to greet him, thanking him warmly for his interest in Ralph.

"My Dear Madam, the favor is on Ralph's side; I am most fortunate in securing him for my manager. There is not a lad in five thousand to whom I should offer so much responsibility. Why, any other fellow I know couldn't be trusted to keep straight a year up there. And now, my dear Mrs. Kilgour, I called to ask you to let me know if there is anything I can do for you. Don't hesitate to call on an old friend."

Mrs. Kilgour again thanked him warmly for his kindness, protesting that he had already done too much.

"Nonsense, nonsense! Kilgour was my oldest friend, and the finest fellow that ever stepped. Many's the unselfish turn he's done me in our boyhood days. Well, Claude, my man, I suppose you will be wanting to earn money like other boys during the holidays. We'll find something for you up at the place where you'll be under Ralph's eye, eh? And, Billy Boy, I've got your job laid out. Ralph will want some help on the big ledger at once. My books are in a sad way since that drunken fool of a Stokes has been clerking it for me."

"Thank you, Mr. Cruickshank," said Willie, "but I had other plans."

"Eh, what's that?" said Cruickshank good-naturedly. "Perhaps I can help you out."

"Well, sir, I think I can get a job on the new tunnel-work during the holidays, or I am sure of work, for that matter, on the docks."

Willie was regarded by the family with open looks of disapproval and surprise, and Mr. Cruickshank laughed boisterously.

"Pretty good, Billy, but I'll do better than that for you." Willie thanked Mr. Cruickshank courteously and said no more.

However, to the chagrin of the family, when the time came, Wilile stuck to his resolution not to accept a position of any sort in the Palace Hostelry. Moreover, he urged Claude against taking the job of elevator-boy through the summer holidays.

When pressed for a reason, Willie, who like the rest of the family, was not a professing Christian, and held no pronounced views on temperance or prohibition questions, only shrugged his shoulders impatiently, exclaiming:

"Don't bother me; I just won't, and that's all. I'm no crank, but I have taken an idea that I'm never going to have anything to do with any business which is mixed up, in any way, with liquor."

"A person would imagine you had been called to act in the capacity of bar-boy in a third-rate tavern. What's the matter with you, Billy boy?" said Ralph, who seldom got irritated at anything, was inclined to let others mind their own business, and never argued with people or despised the principles or even the hobbies of others, though not sharing them himself.

Willie turned away with a petulant fling. He was the opposite in type to his calm-natured, strong-minded, even-tempered elder brother, possessing a highly nervous, imaginative and introspective temperament, deeply sensitive and easily touched in his affections and emotions.

In truth, the boy could not explain to himself his reasons for the stand he had taken. He could only feel with his intense, poetic, passionate nature that the father he adored was slain, cruelly, irretrievably, horribly sacrificed, because of rum. Were there no buying or selling of whiskey, his goodly young father would still be alive. He held no principles on the liquor question, had formed no hatred of the traffic as a business, but had only turned away with a vague personal shuddering from the very shadow of the thing which had indirectly wrought this awful woe, as one shrinks from an object, innocent in itself, perhaps, but which has been associated with some fearful grief or memory.

[To be continued.]

Round the World Temperance Studies.

By Mrs. Wilbur F. Crafts.

Mexico and South America.

Mexico.

"THERE were total abstainers, and drunkenness was severely punished among certain classes in Mexico ages before the Conquest (16th century)." But certain it is, that since Mexico has come in contact with modern civilization that the drink question has grown more serious, for large quantities of foreign liquors are brought in at Vera Cruz, at Pacific points and along the border—French and Spanish wines, cognac, English ales, German beers, and American beers and whiskies. It would seem that Mexican people had liquors enough of their own manufacture, such as pulque, mescal and aguardiente. The pulque is made from the maguey (century plant), This plant, which is so useful in furnishing fibre for cloth, bagging, rope, paper, brooms and brushes, is also a fountain of sorrow. By cutting off the blossom a sort of basin is made into which there flows about two quarts of sap each day for two or three months. This sap when fermented is called "pulque." We have milk trains in the United States, but in Mexico they have "pulque trains." Upwards of 400,000 quarts are brought into the City of Mexico alone each day.

But pulque drinkers soon crave something stronger, and this demand is met with the manufacture of mescal, which may be called the whisky of the country. Beyond this there is still a stronger drink, aguardiente, a kind of brandy. A brandy is also made from sugar-cane. These liquors are all so cheap as to be within the reach of the poorer classes.

There is no restriction by the government on the manufacture of liquors beyond a small tax of fifty cents per barrel. Those who sell liquors pay taxes according to the size of their establishments. A very small place must pay $5 a month, while a wholesale establishment must pay as much as $1,000 a year. Heavy duties are laid upon imported liquors. The penal code provides for the punishment of drunkards both by imprisonment and fines, which grow more severe after the first offense. Intoxication can never be pleaded as an excuse for any crime committed; but drunkenness has more than held its own in Mexico under these restrictions.

When Protestant missionaries went to Mexico they began aggressive temperance work, and the first temperance society was organized in January, 1874, by the Rev. J. L. Stephens.

In 1888 a Woman's Christian Temperance society was organized, but it did not flourish. A reorganization dates from 1894. A new impetus has been given to the work by the visit of Mrs. Addie Northam Fields. At the last World's Convention it was reported that the union in the City of Mexico was holding regular monthly meetings; that some unions were being organized in other places; that five Loyal Temperance Legions had been started, also one Young Woman's Christian Temperance Union; and that medal contests had been held in several places. At the last World's Sunday School Convention it was reported that Mexico and Central America together had 16,300 Sunday School scholars and teachers. As these schools are carried on by missionaries, temperance is faithfully taught.

South America.

If the famous Monroe doctrine had a temperance plank in it, the physical, moral and governmental condition of South America would be far better than it is today. There would be substantial governments instead of republics "good for this day only."

In Brazil the only restriction placed upon the traffic is that the liquor shall be pure, and anybody is free to make, buy or drink as much as he likes, as though alcohol were not the very worst of poisons. Total abstinence from principle causes the greatest surprise whenever it is found outside of missionary and evangelical church circles. The responsibility for this condition rests largely upon the official class represented by military leaders and consuls. Rev. James S. Dennis, D. D., in "Christian Missions and Social Progress," says, "The burden of evidence seems to indicate that none surpasses the South American continent, Central America, and Mexico in the excessive use of intoxicants. These are among the fields that our consuls are working in the interest of our brewers." This trade, as established with England, Germany, and the United States, is said "to form an important part of the business of most foreign commercial houses in Brazil, and as a corollary of this fact, most foreigners are drinkers and very bitter opponents of temperance". But the people do not depend upon imported liquors alone. Like deadly toadstools, distilleries and breweries have sprung up everywhere. In Paraguay almost every native home is said to have its still, and the class of liquors produced is so bad that the partakers become for the time being worse than drunk, and more like maniacs.

Native Mexican Woman and Child.

In Peru the government places no restriction on the manufacture of liquors, but imposes taxes upon its consumption, which are collected by a company that has secured the right by becoming the highest bidder at a public auction. This company at once becomes a propoganda to increase the number of drinkers in order that its income may be enlarged. In the Argentine Republic breweries and distilleries abound, and the use of liquor is universal, no meal being considered complete without wine or liquor in some form.

Group of Little Mexicans.

In Venezuela, distilleries have been taxed almost out of existence, consequently there is little drunkenness, but abstinence is not a moral question. Men, women and even children drink whenever they have the opportunity to do so.

Chili is in a better condition regarding the drink evil than any part of South America, having come directly under missionary influence. At the World's W. C. T. U. Convention of 1900 this report was made by the Chili W. C. T. U., established in 1889, Miss Adda Burch now president:

We have had a number of accessions to our membership outside the rank and file of missionaries. We have furnished press paragraphs, and forty-six special temperance sermons were preached throughout Chili at the request of the president of the W. C. T. U., also six sermons on purity. Four thousand papers and leaflets have been distributed through the mail. The Loyal Legion and the Junior League work have been inaugurated, and are doing well. Temperance teaching in the Sunday Schools has been established.

The W. C. T. U. work is also organized in Argentina, Miss Mary F. Swaney, of Rosario, president; in Uraguay, Miss Van Dornselar, of Montevideo, president; and in Brazil, Miss M. H. Watts, of Rio Janiero, president.

In almost every case there are ladies from the United States connected with missionary colleges. The organization of the W. C. T. U. work in South America is due to Mrs. Mary Clement Leavitt, who in the winter of 1891-2 visited the country for that purpose. Should not the "Pan American" fairs and conventions incite us not only to feel a deeper interest, but to impel us to a greater degree of helpfulness towards the people of South America? They are less known to us and have less of our thoughts than the people of India or China.

The Sunday School membership in South America is 153,000, embracing 350 schools in all. The life of any movement is in the breath of the children. Strenuous efforts should be put forth to reach with temperance principles the children of South America. Scientific temperance instruction is given in some of the mission schools of the Methodist Episcopal Church. The next step should be to get it into the public schools.

Washington, D. C.

How Shall Peace Be Secured?

By Lucinda B. Chandler.

THE following from the American Weekly is suggestive:

At Cripple Creek, Colo., Rev. G. W. Ray, Congregational pastor, is winning the boys by a stereopticon lecture once a week from "Pilgrim's Progress," preceded by a devotional service, and succeeded by a social hour in the room below. A military drill is to be arranged.

There are many anomalies in the practical ethics of civilization, but there are none so glaringly absurd and in direct violation of the gospel of "Peace on earth, good will to men," as the spirit and methods of militarism still maintained in the church claiming to be Christian.

That military drill promotes a sentiment which teaches youth that the wholesale killing of war is honorable and justifiable, and may be a patriotic duty, can hardly be disputed, nor that war is the most flagrant perversion of humane instincts and fraternal ideals.

It is, moreover, in direct antagonism to the teaching of Christ Jesus whom the church professes to follow and worship, "Resist not evil, but overcome evil with good." "If thy brother smite thee on one cheek, turn to him the other also." Nothing is more pronounced in the teaching of Jesus than the love-principle as the rule of human relations.

Why, after nineteen centuries of professed following of the Christ-life and teachings, should the church countenance and promote the methods of savagery? How much has the church advanced the higher ideals of humanity if it has not discovered a "discipline" as effective as military drill?

Is it possible to progress towards the international peace for which the professed Christian prays in form of words, while in both church and state fighting, industrially, commercially, and with all social forces by competition, is recognized as the normal condition of human relations?

The wholesale murder of warfare is but the extreme barbaric fruit of the same spirit that grasps and monopolizes the resources of nature and means of production, regardless of the well-being of the neighbor.

Till the spirit of co-operation and brotherhood shall make the interest of each the interest of all, killing will continue to be the policy of nations. Till militarism is divested of the glamor of glory and honor in boyhood's imagination, and military drill becomes obsolete, prayers for peace will be futile and savage instincts will continue to mar and deface the image of God in the human being.

Chicago.

Children's Cozy Corner.

SCRAP-BOOK POETRY.

The Sparrow's Friend.

By Emma W. Robinson.

"NOT a sparrow forgotten of God," He said,
As He taught on the mountain side,
Amid the gay lilies, so gloriously fair,
And wafting their fragrance so wide.

"And one of them never shall fall to the ground Without the All-Father above";
And He who cares for our brown-coated friend
Is the Father of life and of love.

As I scatter crumbs for His bird's "daily bread"
On the ice and the snow-bordered way,
I am thinking of Him, so gentle and good,
Who gave us this glad New Year's Day.

Kansas City, Mo.

"Drop a Word."

DROP a word:—
One little seed becomes a tree,
One drop will help to fill the sea,
One ray of light bids darkness flee.

Drop a Word:—
One little spark oft lights the fire,
One little book excites desire,
One little spot betrays the mire.

Drop a Word:—
One little star lights up the night,
One little speck will spoil the sight,
One little blow makes thousands fight.

Drop a Word:—
One little beam will show the sun,
One little word life's race has won,
And pearly gates when life is done.

Just Being Happy.

JUST being happy
Is a fine thing to do;
Looking on the bright side
Rather than the blue;
Sad or sunny musing
Is largely to the choosing,
And just being happy
Is brave work and true.

Just being happy
Helps other souls along:
Their burdens may be heavy
And they not strong,
And your own sky will lighten
If other skies you brighten
With a heart full of song.

—Ripley D. Saunders.

Go, make thy garden fair as thou canst,
Thou workest never alone;
Perchance he whose plot is next to thine
Will see it and mend his own.

—Robert Collyer.

They might not need me—
Yet they might—
I'll let my heart be
Just in sight.

A smile so small
As mine, might be Precisely their Necessity.

—Emily Dickinson.

The Two Watches.

By Adelbert F. Caldwell.

FRENCH KALLOCH had been Mrs. Townsend's "right hand man" since the day she had first moved into the Thomas neighborhood, now going on two years.

"I don't know what I should do without him," she had so often declared to herself, "coming here a perfect stranger. He's saved me more steps, and I certainly should have had to keep a horse if it hadn't been for his doing my errands, as he has, whenever he's gone to the village.

"I must use that chicken money, every cent of it, for—I'll keep it a profound secret," and she arose to carry away the few supper dishes on the table before her. "One who does what he has done for me, doesn't do it for nothing—that's not a Randolph's way, nor a Townsend's either, for that matter!"

Coming back from the kitchen, Mrs. Townsend opened the outside door.

"If it keeps this cool I'll kill and dress them to-morrow. There aren't finer fowls in Buxton than my Plymouth rock chickens, if I do say it!"

She stepped back and slowly closed the door, shutting out the cool evening air.

"To-day is Monday. French said he'd be going to the village Wednesday. S'pose he'll be heavily loaded. I doubt if I ought to impose upon him to take an extra twelve chickens, especially as large as those of mine are.

"But it's for—! I do like to surprise folks," and Mrs. Townsend smiled mysteriously, as she brushed with the corner of her apron the rounds of a straight-back chair, before placing it with characteristic precision against the brightly papered wall.

Amos Kalloch's comfortably stocked farm joined the old Cushman place, which, before Mrs. Townsend's coming, had been without a steady occupant for years.

"I'm glad some one's going to move in—to stay," declared Mrs. Kalloch, gratefully, upon hearing that the place was sold and that the purchaser intended to take possession as soon as some necessary improvements could be made. "I don't care how busy one is, it is lonesome without a steady neighbor. I'd as lief have none as a new one every six months."

As soon as Mrs. Townsend arrived, French, Mr. Kalloch's sixteen-year-old son, hurried over to see if there were any boys.

"There are none," to the looks of inquiry, on his return from the "boy hunt." He threw down his cap. "But she—Mrs. Townsend's a dandy; good company's a boy any time! I helped her unpack her dishes, and am going to do some errands for her to-morrow, when I go to Lewiston."

From that moment French zealously looked after the comfort of their new neighbor, they becoming, as his father put it, "jolly good chums."

"I tell you she knows how to cook, though—most good's you, mother!" French would declare, on coming in from the "Townsend's house," as 'twas now designated.

"I'm afraid she pays you too well for the errands you do— don't you think so?" cautioned Mrs. Kalloch. "Look out that you keep the debit and credit scales balanced—if anything, let it tip your way."

"My! those are good chickens!" declared French to himself, packing them, Wednesday morning, in the already heavily loaded cart. "They'll weigh two and a quarter—every one of them. Mrs. Townsend does have the best luck; she's a born—most everything," and he looked admiringly at the plump bag of doughnuts on the seat, that Mrs. Townsend had brought out.

"They'll keep you in good spirits, French," she explained, in her cheery, motherly way. "Nothing for preserving one's good nature like a bite to eat."

It seemed that he already felt a pressing need of toning up his boyish spirits.

"Get what you can for the chickens. I don't know what they's bringing a pound now—but a reasonably fair price I suspect. I'll need every cent they'll come to—something very important," added Mrs. Townsend gaily.

French had no difficulty in disposing of the fowls—could have sold an unlimited number, it seemed.

"I'll give you," said Mr. Hayes, promptly, one of the firm of Hayes, Strong & Co., "five cents a pound more for those chickens than I've paid any one else this fall. I'd like them for some special customers. My! they're beauties, though! Got any more of them? I'll take all you'll bring me at the same price."

French pocketed the money, with a feeling of pardonable pride—'twould be such an agreeable surprise to Mrs. Townsend.

"Real—genuine—watch! Only a dollar and a quarter—worth five anywhere! If 'tisn't just's I say—have your money back. Who'll take the next one?"

French stopped in the midst of the group of men and boys collected on the corner, before an improvised stand, upon which stood a jewel-bedecked individual, offering to the passer-by his wares.

"Real—genuine—watch! Any one examine it—best time-keeper in the world! Who'll take the next? Only a dollar and a quarter—one dollar and twenty-five cents! You?" and the watch was reached out towards French, who had pressed forward to the inner edge of the crowd.

"I'd like it,' thought French, hesitatingly. "It's what I've wanted for months, but I haven't the money."

He thrust his hand into his trousers' pocket.

"The—the extra money Mr. Hayes paid for the chickens—she'll never know! 'Twill more than do it!"

He pressed a trifle forward.

"Only one dollar—and a quarter! The chance of a lifetime! Have your money refunded if it isn't just as I represent!"

The man seemed talking directly to French.

French hesitatingly drew from his pocket a number of silver coins. He took a step nearer the stand.

"Never'll get another one so cheap. 'Twon't be cheating Mrs. Townsend," he was rapidly thinking. "She'll get all she expected—more, for 'twon't take quite all the extra!"

He turned intuitively to see if any one was watching him—any one whom he knew. Something attracted his attention on the post just to the right of him.

> "$500—REWARD—$500!!
> EMBEZZLER—PEOPLE'S—BANK!
> Misappropriating for private uses the funds placed under his control."

French read no more. Almost faint, he elbowed his way through the men and boys to the sidewalk.

"Only one dollar—and twenty-five cents! Who'll take the next?"

"And 'twas from her—I'd have taken it," whispered French, hurrying from the place—"from Mrs. Townsend!"

"It's just enough to get what I've been planning for," said Mrs. Townsend, happily, counting the money French had soberly put into her hand upon his return that afternoon. "Just enough—to a dollar, to get the watch I priced the last time I was in Lewiston."

"Whom do you suppose, French, it's—! And that's poor enough interest on the time somebody's taken to do my errands—the thousand and one a woman always has. But how did you happen to have this extra—I don't understand!"

"By—by not steal—yes; stealing it—" and the door slowly closed, leaving Mrs. Townsend and French alone.

Bloomington, Ill.

Puzzlers' Packet.

Puzzles marked (*) are protected by copyright. Contributors will please keep matter intended for this department distinct from other correspondence, and address same to PUZZLERS' PACKET, THE UNION SIGNAL, Chicago.

7.—Two-Word Charade.

To save the FIRST our boys in blue
Marched bravely to the fight,
And watched, upon the distant hills,
The SECOND fires by night.

The TOTAL bravely goes to war
'Gainst sin of every hue,—
A war as fierce as e'er was fought
By our brave boys in blue.

E. W. R.

8.—Letter Removals.

1. Remove a letter from a heavenly body, and leave a vegetable production.
2. Remove a letter from a fastening, and leave part of the face.
3. Remove a letter from part of a ship, and leave something on the floor.
4. Remove a letter from a part of the body, and leave an animal.

The removed letters form comfort.

FOR GOD AND HOME AND EVERY LAND

The UNION SIGNAL AND WORLD'S WHITE RIBBON

NATIONAL AND WORLD'S WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION

Official Organ of the WORLD'S AND NATIONAL WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION.

Published Weekly by the Woman's Temperance Publishing Association, Chicago.

EDITOR-IN-CHIEF, - - - - - - MRS. LILLIAN M. N. STEVENS.
CORRESPONDING EDITOR, - - - LADY HENRY SOMERSET.
MANAGING EDITOR - - - - - MRS. CORNELIA T. JEWETT.

CONTRIBUTING EDITORS:

MRS. SUSANNA M. D. FRY. MRS. KATHARINE L. STEVENSON.
MRS. CLARA C. CHAPIN. MRS. ISABELLA WEBB PARKS.

Address all letters and manuscript intended for the editors to, The Editorial Department, UNION SIGNAL. Unavailable manuscripts will be returned only when sufficient postage accompanies the request.

SUBSCRIPTIONS.

Subscriptions may commence with any issue.
The date on the label indicates when your subscription ends.
Papers will be discontinued unless otherwise ordered.
Remittances should always be made in the safest manner available to the remitter. Register cash remittances.
Change of Address.—Give both your old and your new address when you desire a change.
Change of Date.—It takes at least three weeks to change the date, after your subscription is renewed.

PRICE $1.50 PER YEAR IN ADVANCE.
FOREIGN POSTAGE $1.04 ADDITIONAL.

Address all Business Communications to
The UNION SIGNAL, 184 La Salle St., CHICAGO.....

Chicago, January 8, 1903.

"The women that publish the tidings are a great host."

Wedded and Deserted.

THE full meaning of the word, destitution, can only be known by practical experience. As we read of the condition to which multitudes of families are reduced by the desertion of the so-called "head," it is matter for congratulation that in New York "a recommendation that desertion be made a felony, instead of a misdemeanor, has been made by Frederick E. Bauer, Superintendent of the Bureau of Dependent Children, and submitted by him to Commissioner Folks, of the Department of Public Charity, for consideration and transmission to Mayor Low."

This is a step in the right direction and worthy of being followed by all holding similar offices in other communities.

It seems strange that such a number of the "lords of creation" should so soon tire of the exalted position to which they aspire. Is it that the prospective honor of being nominally head of a family casts so great a glamor over them that they fail to grasp the immense responsibility which the reality involves? If so, then the "New Woman," with all her up-to-date views as to her responsibility to herself and to posterity, cannot arrive one moment too soon.

If a man woo and win a woman under the sacred promise that he will protect and provide for her so long as they both shall live, and then coolly desert her and their offspring as soon as the hill "Difficulty" looms in sight, he is unworthy of the name of man created in the image of the great Father of all. The wife, ever designated as the "weaker vessel," ought to find in her husband a pillar of strength, but, alas, how often is this dream unrealized!

We look a very grave matter in the face when we confront the fact that "fifty per cent of the applications made in New York for the commitment of children to the care of institutions are due to the fact that men have deserted their families, leaving them to starve or to become a burden on the community," and that on charges of abandoning or threatening to abandon their families, last year no fewer than "1,456 persons were arrested and 637 convicted, an increase of more than 50 per cent over the arrests of ten years ago, and nearly 100 per cent over the convictions."

All classes are represented in this complaint of desertion, although all cases of desertion do not involve destitution, there being many cases of desertion where it is unnecessary for the mother to seek the commitment of her children to charitable institutions, but the principle in all cases is the same. Usually, however, those coming under the former category are families of the working or laboring classes. For such it may be contended that their advantages are few, that the homes of their youth have been the hotbeds in which have been developed the animal side of their natures, that of mental culture they have had none, and that religious influences have been equally meagre. Granting all this, should man be no better than the beasts that perish? We have only to go to the mountain and the forest to learn how the wild animal protects and cares for its mate and cubs. If, therefore, there are men incapable of realizing their responsibility to their families and to the community upon whom, failing them, the support of those families must devolve, it is full time that steps were taken to enlighten them as to their duty in this matter.

The question comes up, "What is the chief cause of desertion?" and the ready answer is "Drink and shiftlessness, and the one causes the other." Surely this is a direct call to those who desire the uplifting of the masses, to be up and doing in the cause of temperance and social reform; to storm the citadel of our legislature again and again, until in answer to the voice of suffering humanity, they close all saloons, so that working men may pass through our streets to their homes free from temptation to spend their earnings and dethrone their reason. This cause being removed, it remains only to deal with the lazy and the shiftless.

Unfortunately there are men of this class in all communities, and the law should deal with such irrespective of social position. If a man assume the responsibility of a husband and father, he is bound by the laws of God and man governing those relationships and he should be held amenable to those laws. If desertion be regarded as a felony, the punishment should be in accordance with the crime, and the man who will not work for his family should be compelled to do so behind the bars, his earnings there being applied to their support.

Were some such policy as the foregoing adopted, it is probable that the "lazy and shiftless" would soon assume a new character, preferring to provide for the family amid the comforts of the home.

Every Local W. C. T. U.,

Should have an active W. T. P. A. agent, and the President should arrange to have committees assist the agent in securing subscribers to THE UNION SIGNAL

Society and Morality.

IT is matter for congratulation that we learn of the organization of German women, members of the nobility, for the elevation and promotion of social morality. As this reform can only originate with women, it is to be hoped that the elite of society in all civilized countries, will follow the example of their German sisters. So organized, with the highest code of morality for their standard, women throughout the world would present a solid phalanx against immorality in high places.

In past times the influence of woman was expected to be felt rather than heard. It was supposed to work its way as a "little leaven." It was understood to form the minds of the children, that as men and women of a future generation they again should influence the world. This condition still remains, but in a broader and larger sense. The influence of woman is still first to be used in moulding the young minds of those whom God has more immediately committed to her care, but the higher education of the past and present centuries has given her the power to affect, by her voice and example, a much wider circle.

Thoughtful women of to-day are more than ever realizing that they "are not here to play, to dream, to drift," and by means of various organizations through which they work with method, more is being accomplished by them to-day than was ever dreamed of in the past. As educators, women are among the leaders in this great land. As philanthropists, missionaries of the Cross of Christ, lecturers and preachers, they take prominent places and in no field have they been more successful than in that of medicine; here woman, ministering to woman, has found her true vocation.

On the other hand, we hear much of the frivolity and pleasure-loving lives of society women, whose evenings are spent amidst a round of gaiety. Balls, operas and dinner parties are of nightly occurrence during the season, while the daily reaction, begotten of nightly dissipation, unfits them for intelligent usefulness in a world where the glory of true womanhood should raise them to be saviors of others.

There are, of course, myriads of society women whose influence for truth and right, beginning at home, reaches outward, permeating as it goes. Of such it is to be presumed are the German women to whom reference has been made.

When members of the nobility of any nation, begin to realize that "noblesse oblige," and that from the select circle in which they move should emanate the first great efforts towards elevating the condition of their less favored sisters, then, and only then, may we expect a higher standard of morality, not only among women, but also among men. Then will the example of those who consecrate themselves to the promotion of social morality, filter through the various social strata, extending in time, to all classes. Then will the millennium of purity come when women will demand of men as clean lives as men now demand of women.

The Hour's Demand—A Personality.

A RECENT writer in recording the passing of the girl with no other attraction than a pretty face, says: "The essential of the up-to-date girl and woman is a personality."

So change the fashions even in the make of a woman! How recently the elements of feminine popularity were mental flexibility, a willingness to conform to another's opinions, warranted to make no identations in one's neighbor's mentality. The twentieth century girl and woman may register a vote of gratitude for this change of thought, due, no doubt, to the repressed personalities of their grandmothers, who went about meekly clothed in quotation marks for fear of being accused of that unpardonable sin of "strong-mindedness." Being denied, by social usage, free expression of opinions, they sung them into lullabies and whispered them into baby ears.

The writer after defining at length a personality, urges, "If you haven't a personality, acquire one." Pass the word along, girls of 1903. Dispense with the newest style in furs, or wear a gown a season old, but neglect not this important requisite. Not to possess it, is to be a nonentity; to have it is to be a somebody. Dare to be somewhat lacking in beauty of face and form; dare to be without wealth or social standing, but remember your social equipment for the season will be sadly deficient if you fail to provide yourself with a personality. A personality must be essentially original. No counterfeit will at all answer the purpose. No poor imitation of another will suffice.

A personality has ideals for itself—and others. A personality has convictions, which may be had for the asking. It has ambitions and aspirations, and will often share them. A personality has a habit of setting standards for itself, also, occasionally, for its friends. When it enters a room, it is as the coming in of an invigorating breeze. Like the breeze, it frequently displaces things.

A personality does not always vote; it frequently wishes it had the chance. It invariably moulds opinion. Indeed, it has been discovered that the uncertain, intangible thing we call public opinion is a composition made up of many personalities.

To be much in the company of a personality is to be obliged to think, is to have the cobwebs swept from one's conscience-chamber, is to feel a revival of responsibility. As it thinks in no uncertain fashion, so it speaks with refreshing positiveness. It is rarely verbose; it has little need to be. A few words from a personality have the force of paragraphs from others. It often unconsciously—sometimes consciously—infuses its superabundant vitality into the poor creatures who are without it. It has been known to stand upon platforms, and to dip into printer's ink, but it is equally effective in the home circle. Men are not so wont to offer to it direct compliments as to come to honor and respect it and crave its approval, occasionally to grow up to it and accept its moral standards.

The young women of the day ought to consider it a privilege to be able to follow the advice given: "Acquire a personality." The opportunity it affords to make the world their debtor is well worth their consideration. Great reforms have been long retarded because too many women were satisfied with "ready-made" apparel for mind as well as body. All that these great enterprises ask is the proper development of vigorous, wholesome personalities among women.

Make popular and fashionable, clear, unprejudiced thought upon the problems of the day, followed by intelligent, conscientious decisions, published in the true feminine language of enthusiasm, and the future is secure.

The Jubilee Thankoffering. That even church financiers think in millions these days is exemplified in the $20,000,000 thank-offering just completed by the Methodist church for the benefit of its various philanthropies and charities. Four years ago the movement to secure such a fund was inaugurated by the board of bishops in session at Trinity church, Springfield, Mass., and on the last day of the year 1902, at the watch-night service of that church, amid much enthusiasm, it was announced by Rev. Dr. Mills, secretary of the thank-offering commission, that the last dollar had been subscribed. The number of contributors to this fund may be imagined when it is stated that there are few gifts of very large sums, as the twentieth century counts largeness. The money is given by the rank and file of the church, the moderately well-to-do, and the hard-working, wage-earning members. And although, as has been pointed out, $20,000,000 is not so much to-day as $5,000,000 would have been fifty years ago, this is a remarkable achievement. Other denominations are also engaged in raising a "twentieth century jubilee fund," the aggregate amount being set at $50,000,000. The success has been so phenomenal that it looks as if the sum would go far beyond that when all are heard from. Considering the fact that this fund has in no way crippled the missionary enterprises and the running expenses of the churches, it may be regarded as gratifying proof that interest in evangelical religion is not, as some have declared, on the decline.

Personal Mention.

The omission of the Y page in this issue is due to the fact that our faithful Y secretary is temporarily laid aside by illness. The page will be forthcoming in two weeks, without fail.

Mrs. Louise S. Rounds, ex-president of Illinois W. C. T. U., in a letter dated December 31, 1902, says: "This is the last day of the old year, and as this is my last letter it gives me pleasure to think that it carries with it an order for THE UNION SIGNAL." Such a practical New Year's greeting is greatly appreciated by the editors and publishers of the official organ.

Mrs. Mary Read Goodale, the long time president, and now honorary president of Louisiana W. C. T. U., is in sorrow over the death of her aged mother, Mrs. Read. Miss May Walker, the newly elected state president, is at the bedside of her mother who has been in the valley of the shadow for weeks, while Mrs. Mae A. Davis, state recording secretary, is at El Paso, Texas, caring for her mother who is very ill; and Mrs. Lury Gould Baldwin, state reporter, is at the home of her brother in Berea, Ohio, recovering from a serious operation. The sympathy and prayers of all friends will be with these afflicted ones.

Experience Corner.

COMRADES AT WORK: Some months ago this Corner asked for copies of matter issued by state superintendents in the interest of their specialties. With the aroma of Christmas incense, some of these have just found me. Is it because only efficient workers heed such a request that these all contain model points? Or is the W. C. T. U. becoming universally skilled in the art of doing its work so that something is sure to happen?

I note definiteness. The cook's recipe, "Put in quite a good-sized piece of butter if you happen to have it," will never again do for our sort of folks.

And clearness. The way-faring woman doesn't have to adjust her spectacles twice to find whether it means this way or that way.

And system. Suggestions for inexperienced helpers in the states—helpers who, happily, are put into these places to complete their education—are listed under heads and sub-heads and divisions of the subject. The old-time ministers firstly and secondly may not be there, but continuity of thought and logical sequence are, though the framer may never have thought of these terms.

Then conciseness. Nearly all the state literature I have seen is boiled down so that the busy home-maker, who could never hope to study an elaborate or wordy essay, finds time to read and utilize. I trust I am pardoned in adding that these plans, in their concise diction, might be a model for many of us.

With few exceptions these state helps for district, county and local workers are eminently practical. They show thought, but it is the kind that incites action. The woman who goes wool-gathering is seldom among them.

It is hopeful, too, how everybody makes the best of things. No one scolds; no one is advised to scold. Careless local helpers are there? Helpers who even forget that the first requisite in common courtesy is to answer a letter? Ah, yes! But the only way they are reproved is in the sweet commendation to the woman who always does reply promptly.

It would seem that the gracious spirit of Frances Willard, who always found something good, is filtering into the hearts of most of the host that follow on, thank God!

Let me quote from a crisp message sent to her county helpers by the Literature superintendent in the state where National and state president are one:

"Why is it necessary for all W's and Y's to faithfully read the "Star in the East" and THE UNION SIGNAL?

Why? Because our work is just as important as any other kind of work.

Why do teachers read educational journals? Why do physicians read medical journals; farmers, farm journals; housekeepers, magazines published for housekeepers and home-makers? What would the dressmaker do without her several magazines?"

This superintendent does not fail to sign each document as "State Superintendent of Literature," including "Star in the East" and UNION SIGNAL. There's a point for us.

The state executive down among the pine trees asks every state superintendent to subscribe for the state paper, taking the sum from her appropriation, is she chooses. There's another point. No attempt at brick-making without straw in such a state!

At the first Christian Citizenship meeting held by the National Woman's Christian Temperance Union in Washington immediately after the adoption of the department by the Baltimore Convention, Mattie McClellan Brown said: "Much as the women of America have done for the cause of temperance, the cause has done infinitely more for women." This is gaining life by losing it—one of the heavenly compensations.

MOTHER EXPERIENCE.

Devotional.

Our dim eyes seek a beacon,
And our weary feet a guide,
And our hearts of all life's mystery
Seek a meaning and a key;
But a cross shines on our pathway,
On it hangs the Crucified,
And He answers all our longings
With the whisper, "Follow Me."

Life is a duty—dare it;
Life a burden—bear it;
Life is a thorn-crown—wear it;
Through it break thy heart in twain,
Though the burden bear thee down,
Close thy lips and stand the pain,
First the Cross, and then the Crown.
—Unknown.

***

Are we willing to give ourselves entirely to God; to let Him do with us whatever He pleases; to follow anywhere at His bidding; to renounce anything at His call; asking only, in return, that He will give us Himself, with all His infinite love, to be our's from this time forever? If we are thus willing, let us kneel down this moment and tell Him so. Alone with God, let us give Him ourselves, all we have and are and shall be, to be unreservedly His.—William R. Huntington.

***

As for thee,
That life thou hast is hidden from thine eyes;
And, when it yearns, thou—knowing not for what—
Wouldst fain appease it with one grand, deep joy,
One draught of passionate peace. But wilt thou know
The other name of joy, the better name
Of peace? It is thy Father's name! Thy life
Yearns to its source! The spirit thirsts for God,
Even the living God!
—Jean Ingelow.

***

The simple thought of a life which is to be the unfolding of a Divine plan is too beautiful, too captivating, to suffer one indifferent or heedless moment. Living in this manner, every turn of your experience will be a discovery to you of God, every change a token of His fatherly counsel. Whatever obscurity, darkness, trial, suffering, falls upon you; your defeats, losses, injuries; your outward state, employment, relations; what seems hard, unaccountable, severe, or, as nature might say, vexatious—all these you will see are parts or constitutive elements in God's beautiful and good plan for you, and, as such, are to be accepted with a smile. Take your burdens, and troubles, and losses, and wrongs, if come they must and will, as your opportunities, knowing that God has girded you for greater things than these.—Horace Bushnell.

***

The little sharp vexations,
And the briers that catch and fret,
Why not take all to the Helper
Who has never failed us yet?
Tell Him about the heart-ache,
And tell him the longings, too;
Tell him the baffled purpose,
When we scarce know what to do.
Then, leaving all our weakness
With the One divinely strong,
Forget that we bore the burden,
And carry away the song.
—Phillips Brooks.

***

We speak of the crosses of daily life, and forget that our very language is a witness against us; how meekly we ought to bear them, in the blessed steps of our holy Lord; how in "every cross and care" we ought not to acquiesce simply, but to take them cheerfully,—not cheerfully only but joyfully; yea, if they should even deserve the name of "tribulation," to "joy in tribulation' also, as seeing in them our Father's hand, our Saviour's cross.—E. B. Pusey.

***

You have trusted Him in a few things, and He has not failed you. Trust Him now for everything, and see if He does not do for you exceeding abundantly above all that you could ever have asked or thought, not according to your power or capacity, but according to His own mighty power, that will work in you all the good pleasure of His most blessed will. You find no difficulty in trusting the Lord with the management of the universe and all the outward creation, and can your case be any more complex or difficult than these, that you need to be anxious or troubled about His management of it?—Hannah Whitall Smith.

OFFICIAL COMMUNICATIONS

REST COTTAGE. THE WILLARD.

GENERAL OFFICERS:

President,
MRS. LILLIAN M. N. STEVENS, Portland, Me.
Vice-President-at-Large,
MISS ANNA A. GORDON, Evanston, Ill.
Corresponding Secretary,
MRS. SUSANNA M. D. FRY, Evanston, Ill.
Recording Secretary,
MRS. CLARA C. HOFFMAN, Kansas City, Mo.
Asst. Recording Secretary,
MRS. FRANCES E. BEAUCHAMP, Lexington, Ky.
Treasurer,
MRS. HELEN M. BARKER, Evanston, Ill.

Headquarters National W. C. T. U., Evanston, Ill.

Superintendents.

Sunday-School Work.

DEAR SUNDAY-SCHOOL WORKERS: The Quarterly Temperance Lessons selected by the International Sunday-School Lesson Committee for 1903 are as follows: Lesson 1, February 15; title, "Christian Self-Control"; lesson text, 1 Cor., 8:4-13. Lesson 2, April 19; title, "The Law of Love"; lesson text, Rom., 13:7-14. Lesson 3, September 20; title, "Abstinence from Evil"; lesson text, I Peter, 4:1-11. Lesson 4, World's Temperance Lesson, November 22; title, "The Curse of Strong Drink"; lesson text, Prov., 20-1; 23:20, 21, 29-35.

These lessons, together with the Golden Texts and the Temperance Topics suggested, are announced in a circular by the department. Workers would do well to distribute these circulars during the month of January in all Sunday-schools, sending them especially to pastors, teachers and officers. You will note that February 15 is the date of the first temperance lesson of the new year. Let us begin at once to plan for our union teachers' meetings for the study of the lesson, temperance programs for the Sunday-school hour, the circulation of the pledge and distribution of temperance literature.

The Quarterly Leaflet, in its improved form, has called forth words of commendation, and we believe will be still more helpful to teachers, who will welcome the setting forth of the temperance truths of the lesson, emphasized by questions and forceful applications. Distribute freely one week in advance of the temperance lesson and again on Temperance Sunday to the adult members of the school. Do not fail to give each Sunday-school superintendent a copy of our Blackboard Exercise, and try to have the Responsive Reading used in the opening exercise in all schools. Pledge-signing ought always to be done on Temperance Sunday, and all will be pleased with our new Frances Willard Pledge Card, which can be given to those who sign the red, white and blue cards.

Let me emphasize the fact that now, at the beginning of the year, is the time to introduce our Supplemental Temperance Lessons in the Sunday-schools. These are provided for each grade, and are pronounced most valuable. Remember, also, that by the use of our new Mercy Catechism and pledge we can emphasize the Christ principle of mercy.

State, district and county superintendents will find it a good plan to send out copies of the annual report blank early in the year, so that local workers may know just what they will be expected to report at the close of the year. Temperance secretaries and regular Sunday-school secretaries should receive the statistical blank at once. The statistical summary of the report of last year given at the Portland Convention is this year printed in circular form convenient for distribution. This will enable you to spread knowledge concerning our department, and answer the question so often asked, "What has been accomplished?" We recommend the distribution of the statistical summary with the following leaflets on the coming Temperance Sunday: "The Pledge. What is it? Why sign it?" "Why should I abstain?" "A Study of the Pledge for Primary Workers." "Scientific Temperance Truth and the Bible."

We urge our superintendents to do systematic work along departmental lines. It is not that we need new plans at the beginning of the year, but rather the need is to put into use some of the plans already tested and found most practical and successful. Our field, however, is constantly broadening and Sunday-school work is progressive, so that it seems essential at times to add to our plans of work. This year we feel the necessity of taking some advance steps, and these, with other points, will be outlined in our forthcoming circular, "Recommendations and Suggestions." All workers will want this circular.

For departmental meetings and institute work your superintendent is preparing a "Round Table Talk" on Sunday School Temperance Work which will be most interesting and helpful. The new catalogue will give a complete list of all department literature and supplies, which you will note have advanced a trifle in price, owing to the advance in material and printing. Beloved, will you not equip yourselves with all the above needed helps for the coming Temperance Sunday? They are indeed essential to successful work. I give the prices that all time possible may be saved for you. All circulars are 25 cents per 100; Quarterly Leaflet and all four-page leaflets, 30 cents per 100; Blackboard Exercise, 2 cents each, or 50 cents per 100; Supplemental Lesson Booklets, 3 cents each, or $2.50 per 100; Mercy Catechism, 2 cents each, or $1.25 per 100; Mercy Pledge Cards, and Frances Willard (illustrated) Pledge Cards, 50 cents per 100; red, white and Blue Pledge Cards, 30 cents per 100, postpaid.

Please remember that my address is now Riverside, California, and our bureau of supplies is under my personal supervision. Send all orders early.

Let us labor together earnestly, faithfully and prayerfully to the end that the seeds of gospel temperance truth shall be sown broadcast and that God's name may be glorified and His cause advanced.

Yours in loyal service,
(MRS.) STELLA B. IRVINE,
Riverside, Calif.

The American Soldier
in the frigid zone of Alaska or in the torrid zone of the Phillipines can enjoy the delicious flavor of Borden's Eagle Brand Condensed Milk in his coffee, tea or chocolate. Established in 1857 it has stood first for forty-five years.

Medal Contests.

THE work of this department was never in a more active condition at this season of the year than at present, and we are looking forward to its continuation through the winter months. Usually during the holidays there is such a diversity of entertainments that few contests are held. This year was an exception to the rule. There is no reason why temperance should not be presented to the people through this medium during the entire year, instead of the summer months only. You say the children are in school! Interest the teachers, as the local superintendent did in Clinton, Minn., and hold a contest once each month in the public school. You have young people who are through school; enlist their services. No contests have proven more profitable than Matrons' contests, and they are doing much good. Many mothers are brought into the work through these contests.

A new medal, the White Ribbon Cradle Roll, has been added to the list of department medals. Mothers' meetings and parlor meetings offer an excellent opportunity for holding these contests. Superintendents of several different departments in a local union can increase the interest in their work by holding contests, each using recitations on this one phase of the work. We never held so many high-grade contests as during the past year, and reports show that we never held so many at county, district and state conventions. All reports received emphasize this one fact: "We have the largest attendance on contest night of any evening during the entire convention." The department is becoming more and more popular. It is recognized as a great power for good.

The arguments presented by the contestants serve to fortify them against the evils of intemperance, and sustain them in the principles we so strongly advocate. The money obtained from admission fees goes to purchasing literature, securing lecturers, etc., so the work is promoted in every sense.

The National banner was awarded the past year to the state of Illinois. The conditions of award were changed, making it possible for a state with a large membership to win it. This year the only condition will be the "largest increase in contests held over the previous year." Other prizes will be awarded as follows: A gold medal to the state superintendent whose state holds the largest number of high-grade contests; a gold medal to the state superintendent who secures the largest number of local superintendents in proportion to the number of local unions; a gold medal to the individual who will hold the largest number of contests during the year.

We ask that special effort be made by state superintendents to hold contests at Chautauqua and summer assemblies. These are opportunities that we should not fail to improve. At one assembly the past year six thousand people attended the contest, and it was one of the largest audiences during the entire week.

Local workers should send to their state superintendents for supplies of all kinds. They want to make a complete report, and cannot do it otherwise. They will send you a supply of circulars and instructions, rules, etc., at small expense to you. A state superintendent of this department is at no little expense. The mailing of medals, hundreds of letters written, and extra postage for a reply to questions that are very important to local workers, but for which no stamp was inclosed, amounts to quite a sum of money during the year. Help your superintendent by inclosing stamps, and after a contest has been held and you report by sending in certificate correctly filled out, it is well to inclose 25 cents with the same (see circular). It is imperative that the selections in the authorized books and "The Contest Journal" be used exclusively in the series of contests, and much care should be taken in selecting recitations from other publications for special contests. We must see that they are in accord with our principles.

The oration, "Christian Patriotism," written by Mrs. Nelle Burger, was recited at five diamond medal contests, and three medals were won on it. The impetus given to the contest work in Illinois through receiving the National banner is very noticeable. More contests were held during the month of November than during the same month of any previous year.

"The Contest Journal" contains new selections each month, and we solicit suitable orations for publication in the same. They should not be more than twelve hundred words in length.

Several requests have reached us for orations on "Christian Patriotism," "Christian Citizenship" and "Christian Socialism." A prize will be given for the best oration on either of the above subjects.

We have back numbers of "The Contest Journal" which will be sent for two cents per copy.

ADELIA E. CARMAN,
291 Oakley boulevard, Chicago.

School Savings Banks.

THE School Savings Banks system was taken up during November in the public schools of Hopkins, Mo., Wilton, Me., Niatoze, Kan. and Endeavor, Pa. The cashier of the Wyoming Bank in Tunkhannock, Pa., where the savings system was placed in the public schools last year, has bought of me 2,000 of the Scholar's Cards and twenty-four of the Teacher's Roll Books which he offers to give to the country schools near Tunkhannock as the teachers and communities are ready to take up the savings system. Some of the schools have already availed themselves of his offer. There is great interest manifested by local unions of Ohio and Michigan in this live issue of temperance work.

Mr. J. Jones, Jr., principal of the Vermillion, S. D. public school writes me that one of his pupils has deposited to his bank account $50 that he earned as a waiter during the summer. Mr. Norvelle, principal of the Paducah, Ky., High School says, in a letter just received: "I would like to introduce the School Savings system here not later than Jan. 1st."

Please, dear state superintendents, do all you can in your different states to inform the people of the methods and benefits of saving the pennies for noble uses. The world is growing better and our standards higher, but we must not sit with folded hands; rather let our hands be beautiful with labor and our brows illuminated with the light of continual effort to help in the elevation.

S. L. OBERHOLTZER.
1905 Tioga St., Philadelphia.

Say—"Send Help"
And I'll Send It.

No money is wanted—just a postal. Tell me the book you need.

I will mail you an order—good at any drug store—for six bottles Dr. Shoop's Restorative. You may take it a month on trial. If it succeeds, the cost is $5.50. If it fails, I will pay the druggist myself—and your mere word shall decide it.

Don't think I can't cure because others have failed. I have a way that no other man knows. Let the remedy itself convince you.

At least you know this:—If I failed very often the offer would ruin me. No sick one need pay, if he cannot pay gladly; yet 39 out of each 40 pay.

If you need help, don't wrong yourself by waiting. My way is almost sure. It will certainly cure any case that is curable.

I have spent a lifetime in learning how to strengthen weak inside nerves. My Restorative brings back that power which alone operates the vital organs. I treat a weak organ as I would a weak engine, by giving it the power to act. My way always succeeds, save when a cause like cancer makes a cure impossible. And most of these chronic diseases cannot be cured without it.

You'll know this when you read my book.

Simply state which book you want, and address Dr. Shoop, Box 948, Racine, Wis.

Book No. 1 on Dyspepsia,
Book No. 2 on the Heart,
Book No. 3 on the Kidneys,
Book No. 4 for Women,
Book No. 5 for Men (sealed),
Book No. 6 on Rheumatism.

Mild cases, not chronic, are often cured by one or two bottles. At all druggists.

The Keystone of Good Health is pure food.

Lion Coffee

is all coffee—no glazing of eggs or glue to conceal defects and cheapen its quality.

Fresh and uniform, rich in flavor, because always in sealed packages—never in bulk.

KINDLY MENTION THE UNION SIGNAL WHEN WRITING ADVERTISERS.

New Leaflets.

Home Leaflets for Mothers' Meetings.

No. 3 The New Century for Mothers. Mrs. Nettie B. Fernald.

No. 13 Why a Mothers' Meeting? Mrs. J. H. Myers.

Price, 3c. each; 50, 50c.; 100, 75c.

Mothers' Meetings, Purity Leaflets.

No. 3 Safeguard the Home, Mrs. Emma W. Shores.

Price 2c. each; 100, 50c.

National Leaflets.

No. 2 Suggestions for Treasurers. Mrs. Helen M. Barker.

No. 31 The Philosophy of Fashion—What Shall We Wear? Louise C. Purington, M. D.

No. 94 American Liberty—Will Alcohol Help the Soldier Maintain It? Mrs. Mary H. Hunt.

No. 95 A Double Jury on Woman Suffrage. Amos Wells.

No. 96 A Lesson in Finance. Mrs. Helen M. Barker.

Price, 3c. each; 50, 50c.; 100, 75c.

Department Leaflets.

Y. W. C. T. U.

No. 56 The Ideal Y. Member. Miss Laura Smith.

L. T. L.

No. 182 A Study in L. T. L. Methods. Mrs. Helen G. Rice.

School Savings Banks.

No. 222 How School Savings Banks are Run. Mrs. S. L. Oberholtzer.

Parlor Meetings.

No. 242 How to Win. Mrs. Mary D. Tomlinson.

Narcotics.

No. 47 Why is the Cigaret more harmful than Tobacco used in other ways?

Price, 50, 15c.; 100, 25c.

Total Abstinence Leaflet.

No. 18 Experience: The Schoolmaster.

Signal Lights.

No. 4 How Can I Win New Members? Mrs. M. B. Platt.

Price, 25c. per 100.

Woman's Temperance Publishing Ass'n,

184 La Salle St., - - Chicago.

NEWS FROM THE FIELD.

World's W. C. T. U.

General Officers.

President—Lady Henry Somerset, Eastnor Castle, Ledbury, England.

Vice-President-at-Large—Mrs. L. M. N. Stevens, Portland, Maine, U. S. A.

Honorary Secretaries—Miss Agnes E. Slack, Ripley, Derbyshire, England; Miss Anna A. Gordon, Evanston, Ill., U. S. A.

Honorary Treasurer—Mrs. Mary E. Sanderson Danville, Quebec, Canada.

General Secretary Y Branch—Mrs. Frances J. Barnes, 126 W. 103d St., New York City.

General Secretary L. T. L. Branch—Miss Anna A. Gordon, Evanston, Ill., U. S. A.

World's Convention.

Geneva, June 9th and 11th.

AN influential committee has been organized in Geneva to make arrangements for our Convention. In order to make the committee far reaching in its influence each of the important women's societies in the city has appointed a representative as a member. Madame Ernest Dunant has been elected secretary. Madame Dunant writes that the religious press will give the Convention considerable notice. Melle Vidart, who is associated so closely with the leading philanthropic movements of Switzerland, writes most cheeringly to emphasize the fact that June is the most lovely month in the year for seeing Switzerland. We are in correspondence with temperance leaders in Zurich and other Swiss towns with a view to securing their co-operation. The Victoria Hall seats 1,850 people and is admirably arranged for the Convention.

I have never known the B. W. T. A. to take as deep an interest in a World's Convention as in the approaching one at Geneva. The opportunity of spreading white ribbon principles in a new country among entirely new surroundings, appeals largely to the great idea that every country in the world should "belong." I have received letters from the Woolwich Polytechnic and other societies, asking for dates of our Convention, so that parties they are planning for may attend the meetings.

Scotland.

Miss Ferguson (Partick, Glasgow), has been elected Y Superintendent in place of Miss White Millar, who resigned. A special party is being arranged in Scotland to go to Geneva.

Ireland.

The Coffee Van work started by the Athy W. C. T. U. is spreading. New vans have been started each side of Athy, and Mrs. Duncan (Fortbarrington, Athy), is giving information to several other towns.

Miss FitzPatrick (27, Upper Grand Canal street, Dublin), writes of the probability of a W. C. T. U. being organized specially for children of the upper classes.

Australasia.

February 17th, the anniversary of Miss Willard's passing away, will be a day of special prayer for the Triennial Convention to be held at Melbourne, beginning the 24th of April.

Western Australia.

At Midland Junction the Protestant churches are working in conjunction with the W. C. T. U. to protest against the granting of new licenses. The Perth Union is preparing plans for Mothers' Meetings. The Sailors' Rest at Freemantle is doing a good work.

Cape Colony.

The eleventh annual convention of the W. C. T. U. was held in Cape Town, September 29th to October 1st. Forty-five delegates were present from Port Elizabeth, Queenstown, Kei Road, Kimberley, and other places within this radius from sixteen unions. The report showed the following: Comforts sent to soldiers, licensing courts attended to present petitions and oppose licenses. It was decided to arrange for meetings for Misses Vincent and Cummings in South Africa, April, 1903, beginning in Cape Colony, but should openings occur in Orange River Colony, Transvaal and Rhodesia, that Cape Colony aid them to work there; and also the W. C. T. U. of Natal, be invited to co-operate. The report showed eighteen unions with 387 members, and sixteen "Y" unions with 346; total, 733. Delegates were nominated for the W. C. T. U. convention, Geneva. The convention will meet at Kimberley in July.

A banner, called the Alice Palmer Banner, was presented to the Graaf Reinet and Uitenhage Y's for having obtained the greatest increase of subscribers for "Y's and Otherwise" during the year.

Natal.

The secretary for Flower Mission work visits Grey Hospital every Sunday afternoon. During the summer months she is supplied with flowers from some of the Y members and friends outside the union, and in the winter flowers are bought with money from the Y funds. Each small bunch of flowers has a text attached.

On the first Thursday of every month the members bring pounds of groceries, which are taken by the secretary and given to the Mother of the Rescue Home. Several letters have been received from her stating what help the parcels are to that Home.

At all the afternoon meetings the members make garments for children, to be given to those who are in very poor circumstances. Several garments have already been given and, have been much appreciated.

The W. C. T. U. Rescue Home is proving a most heroic enterprise. Last year's report shows an expenditure of £515, and receipts £750. During this year white ribboners hope to pay off the £300 still remaining on the home.

Sierra Leone.

Mrs. Elwin (wife of Bishop Elwin) has written us how very glad they will be if we can send one of our missionaries, and urges that we should do so soon, as "drink seems to be largely on the increase." Mrs. Elwin has been visiting in England. She sailed for West Africa on December 6th.

India.

The following account from one of our white ribboners speaks for itself:—"A visit to the camp of Boers (prisoners of war), Bhim Tal, India.—My daughter (of the Flower Mission department), and I, who represent the department for Naini Tal union, planned to visit our Boer camp, eleven miles out, to "scatter seeds of kindness." The night before it had rained heavily, but this morning a cloudless sky, bright sunshine, and a cool day were given us. Suddenly there came a shock of earthquake, severe but of short duration; several buildings were cracked. I knew nothing about this. I was about my Master's business—making up bunches of flowers with scripture texts attached for the crowds at the camp. After four hours we arrived, having had various experiences on the road. At the camp of British soldiers we gave many good papers which pleased them.

The camp was prettily laid out. The Boers, under canvas, were busy making brooches out of their ration bones, horsehair watch chains, etc., for sale. They came forward with their goods, and I with mine, which they accepted eagerly. Beside the flowers, I had brought for them two cooly-loads of cakes, sweets, figs, and prunes. Many said they would take our little bouquets home to their mothers in Africa. My prayer is that along with the withered flowers may go the word of God on the cards pinned on, to sink deep into some poor hearts. They started at once to read the tracts, those who could not read English gathering to listen. Twelve officers and four hundred and ninety-one prisoners, including about a hundred boys

Is Cancer Hereditary?

DR. BYE, the Eminent Specialist, on the treatment of cancer, Kansas City, Mo., states that in his long years of extensive practice in the treatment of carcinoma has proven beyond a doubt that the disease is hereditary, having successfully treated as many as four or more members of one family suffering from the disease. The Doctor has printed a valuable book, profusely illustrated, which is sent free. Parties afflicted or having friends afflicted should write him. Address DR. W. O. BYE, Kansas City, Mo.

What Sulphur Does

For the Human Body in Health and Disease.

The mention of sulphur will recall to many of us the early days when our mothers and grandmothers gave us our daily dose of sulphur and molasses every spring and fall.

It was the universal spring and fall "blood purifier," tonic and cure-all, and mind you, this old-fashioned remedy was not without merit.

The idea was good, but the remedy was crude and unpalatable, and a large quantity had to be taken to get any effect.

Nowadays we get all the beneficial effects of sulphur in a palatable, concentrated form, so that a single grain is far more effective than a tablespoonful of the crude sulphur.

In recent years, research and experiment have proven that the best sulphur for medicinal use is that obtained from Calcium (Calcium Sulphide) and sold in drug stores under the name of Stuart's Calcium Wafers. They are small chocolate coated pellets and contain the active medicinal principle of sulphur in a highly concentrated, effective form.

Few people are aware of the value of this form of sulphur in restoring and maintaining bodily vigor and health: sulphur acts directly on the liver, the excretory organs and purifies and enriches the blood by the prompt elimination of waste material.

Our grandmothers knew this when they dosed us with sulphur and molasses every spring and fall, but the crudity and impurity of ordinary flowers of sulphur were often worse than the disease, and cannot compare with the modern concentrated preparations of sulphur, of which Stuart's Calcium Wafers is undoubtedly the best and most widely used.

They are the natural antidote for liver and kidney troubles and cure constipation and purify the blood in a way that often surprises patient and physician alike.

Dr. R. M. Wilkins, while experimenting with sulphur remedies, soon found that the sulphur from Calcium was superior to any other form. He says: "For liver, kidney and blood troubles, especially when resulting from constipation or malaria, I have been surprised at the results obtained from Stuart's Calcium Wafers. In patients suffering from boils and pimples and even deep-seated carbuncles, I have repeatedly seen them dry up and disappear in four or five days, leaving the skin clear and smooth. Although Stuart's Calcium Wafers is a proprietary article, and sold by druggists, and for that reason tabooed by many physicians, yet I know of nothing so safe and reliable for constipation, liver and kidney troubles, and especially in all forms of skin disease as this remedy."

At any rate people who are tired of pills, cathartics and so-called blood "purifiers," will find in Stuart's Calcium Wafers a far safer, more palatable and effective preparation.

PATENTED.
Copyright, 1902, by The J. L. Mott Iron Works.

DRINKING FOUNTAINS

FOR

MAN AND BEAST.

Catalogues mailed on request, and special prices given to all Charitable and Temperance Societies.

MANUFACTURED BY

THE J. L. MOTT IRON WORKS,

84-90 Beekman Street, NEW YORK.

FREE FACE BLEACH FOR COMPLEXION

I will send FREE trial bottle of my Face Bleach to any lady sending name and address.

Mme. A. RUPPERT, 6 E. 14th St., New York City

KINDLY MENTION THE UNION SIGNAL WHEN WRITING ADVERTISERS.

CHIRON LUBRICATING PILE CONE

A small, hollow, perforated wooden cone, filled with the Chiron Ointment, especially prepared for the purpose. Perfect and continuous lubrication by soothing and healing ointment directly to the sore spots. Endorsed by physicians. Immediate relief and a certain cure for ALL KINDS OF PILES. By mail, securely sealed in plain wrapper, with extra box of ointment, $3, P. O. or Exp. Order.

The CHIRON Mfg. Co., Plainfield, N. J.

ranging from ten to sixteen years of age, welcomed us, taking our papers, not in an off-hand manner, but with gratitude, surprised that we had come eleven miles to see them. An officer asked me to speak to an old man who was fretting about his wife and little ones far away. We arranged that the little boys were to have packets of cakes and sweets as we left the camp, and they cheered us with ringing voices as we started home by moonlight. Near midnight, Naini Tai was reached. I pray that our Heavenly Father may bless our feeble efforts to cheer the captives."

Mrs. Hoskins writes about the Durbar at Delhi. "I am doing all that I can to have our W. C. T. U. as helpful there as it has been in other ways. Coronation week will be the chief time for work, but some of our volunteer W. C. T. U. ladies will give as much time as is needed. I have some money and refreshments in plenty promised, workers arranged in instalments, and all seems in fair progress. Pray that we may be enabled to keep many from the great temptations, which are sure to attend such an immense Catup."

The Willard Memorial Inebriate Home is ready to be opened as soon as the right superintendent can be secured. Mrs. Hoskins has written asking me to see a lady in England for this position.

Burma.

Mrs. Beedham reports a most successful meeting at Rangoon on November 15th.

Palestine.

Miss Nuttall writes from Jerusalem of the pitiful havoc cholera is creating. She is winning recruits to the Band of Hope.

Great Britain.

A National executive committee meeting was held in London December 2nd. In addition to resolutions of sympathy with the family of the late Rev. Hugh Price Hughes, and with the officials of the city temple in the loss by death of Dr. Parker, the following were adopted:

That a special committee be instructed to obtain further information re the employment of barmaids, and to compile a pamphlet for the literature department, and later on to recommend what action should be taken by the association.

That the department for Work Among Young Women employed in bars, restaurants, and refreshment rooms be retained, and that a new department regarding the employment of barmaids be recommended to the Council.

That, in view of the proposal of the government to entrust the control of education to county and borough councils, this committee urges the government to introduce without delay a Bill to amend the constitution of county and borough councils so as to enable women—married and single—to be elected to, and to serve on, those councils; further, that a memorial be sent to the Prime Minister.

Re Sunday Closing of Public Houses: That memorials should be sent to the Prime Minister, the Duke of Devonshire, Earl Spencer, and Sir H. Campbell-Bannerman, urging the immediate claims of Sunday closing upon the government, and that all branches of the B. W. T. A. be urged to send letters on this subject to their members of Parliament.

Re Temperance in the Army. That this Committee very heartily congratulates Earl Roberts and the Council of the Royal Army Temperance Association on the admirable work which they have done for the promotion of temperance in the army, and also on the arrangements being made for temperance rooms in the barracks now being built.

The Report of a Conference on the Department System was presented. The following recommendations were adopted:

That the department of Scientific Temperance Instruction in Schools be placed in care of the special committee on Temperance Examination Papers until a National superintendent for the department is appointed, that Mrs. David Richardson be added to the committee, and that the committee have power to add to their number.

That wherever possible a Conference on some phase of our work should be held immediately before or after the National executive Committee meeting.

That the next meeting of the National Executive shall be held in Manchester on February 17th.

Re Memorial Day. That this Committee earnestly urges all branches of our Association to observe February 17th (World's W. C. T. U. Frances Willard Memorial Day), as a World's W. C. T. U. Missionary Day, and as a special occasion for adding new members.

Re Council Arrangements. That a World's W. C. T. U. missionary meeting be held on Wednesday evening, May 27th, in connection with the Annual Council Meetings.

That the Sub-Committee shall meet on January 14th, and on March 11th.

That every effort be made to secure a large delegation to the World's Convention at Geneva in June.

Agnes E. Slack,
Hon. Secretary W. W. C. T. U.
Ripley, Derbyshire, England.

Condemns the Punch-bowl.

The Rev. Dr. Louis Albert Banks, in the prelude to his sermon December 21 in Grace M. E. Church, New York, discussed "The Christmas Punchbowl." He said in part:

"If there be anything more inconsistent than another, it is a woman of beauty and charming and gracious manner who, under the guidance of the sacred name of hospitality, presses upon a tempted man to drink what is his damnation. Many a young man, as well as an older one, who has been proof against the temptations of men, has fallen before the cup held by the hand of the woman he admired or loved. The beauty and charm of womankind should lead men upward and not downward. And when a beautiful woman sets herself in alliance with the dangerous punchbowl, to tempt men on the path of ruin, it is the saddest sight on earth."

Crowned.

We are in receipt of a communication announcing the death of Mrs. Elizabeth Lucas Donaldson, but name of town and state are omitted. Mrs. Donaldson was a Crusader, her husband is an honorary member of the W. C. T. U., and her three sons are prohibitionists, while her only daughter is the wife of a prohibition Methodist preacher.

An Old Railroader.

Thomas Dee, watchman at the Washington street railway crossing in Springfield, Ill., is the oldest employe, in point of continuous service, on the Alton Road. He helped build the Chicago & Alton from Alton to Springfield, into which city he rode on the pilot of the engine drawing the first train. Speaking of this old locomotive, he says: "It was av the size of ha mule, and jist as donkeyfied."

Dee is a man of great honesty, sobriety, and a hard worker. During the sixteen years he has guarded the crossing, not a single mishap has occurred. The old railroader has a wife and nine grown children, and that his home is happy is evidenced by his statement that the finest, most luxurious trains, not even the Alton Limited, can give the joy of staying by his own fireside. For over half a century this quaint old Irishman has not taken a railroad pleasure trip, although entitled to free transportation.

The crossing gates being controlled from a tower which rises some feet above the tracks, there is humor in his philosophic statement that he has risen high in the Alton's service.

Mrs. Howler—"Asbury, that was a most excellent sermon you preached on 'Vanity' this morning."

Rev. Howler—"Well, I think, my dear, that I can flatter myself that there are very few men in this universe who could have done better."—Puck.

A 10 Per Cent Reduction

FOR JANUARY ONLY.

RALPH CONNOR'S BOOKS.

"Glengarry School Days."

Connor's Latest Work.

This new volume fittingly supplements "The Man from Glengarry" in that it deals with some of the same characters, but in a different period. Cloth bound. Illustrated.

Price, - $1.25
Net, postpaid, $1.12

"The Man from Glengarry."

A tale of the Ottawa.

Price, - - - - - $1.50
Net, postpaid, $1.35.

"The Sky Pilot."

A tale of the foothills.

Price, - - - - - $1.25
Net, postpaid, $1.12.

"Black Rock."

A tale of the Selkirks.

Price, - - - - - $1.25
Net, postpaid, $1.12.

"Janet Ward."

Margaret E. Sangster.

A meritorious book for girls.

Price, - $1.50
Net, postpaid, $1.35.

"Alcohol a Dangerous and Unnecessary Medicine."

Mrs. M. M. Allen.

A book that should be in every household.

Price, - - - - - $1.25
Net, postpaid, $1.12.

"The Little Green God."

Caroline Atwater Mason.

A story and study of to-day.

Price, - $1.00
Net, postpaid, 90 cents.

"Studies in Hearts."

Julia MacNair Wright.

A series of charming sketches. Illustrated.

Price, - - - - - 75 cents
Net, postpaid, 67 cents.

"To the Third Generation."

Hope Daring.

A story of intemperance, showing the effects on the children and grandchildren of a man whom wine was not supposed to injure.

Price, - - - - - $1.00
Net, postpaid, 90 cents.

COUPON

Please send to.....
Street.....
City.....
State.....

The books herein listed (attach list of books) upon which, by the use of this coupon I am entitled to 10 per cent discount if presented during December or January.

We solicit your orders for any and all books, assuring you that orders will be promptly filled. NO FURTHER DISCOUNT FROM THE NET PRICES.

Woman's Temperance Publishing Association,
184 LaSalle St., CHICAGO.

What to Do With Our Honoraries?

THE above question has been agitated, more or less, by nearly every local union in an endeavor to make our good brothers "feel at home" in an organization that does not extend them the privilege of a vote. Decatur, Ill., has an honorary who has solved the problem very satisfactorily, and the union so fortunate as to claim his membership is the proud possessor of one of the most unique wall pockets in the country. The Decatur "Review" has this to say of the matter:

"Edward S. Coyle, station agent at Mt. Zion, has carved an elaborate wall pocket which he has presented to the W. C. T. U. of Decatur.

"It is a piece of hand-work, and would be considered good if made by a man who had two hands and all needed tools with which to work; but it is most remarkable when the fact is known that the work is that of a one-armed man.

"Some years ago Mr. Coyle lost his right arm. Previous to that time he was 'right-handed,' so he had to train his left hand to do the work that would otherwise have fallen to the right.

"The wall pocket is about three or four feet high and two or three feet wide. The work was done wholly with an ordinary jack-knife, a chisel and a wood file. There is not a particle of sawed work about it. The lettering, which is the motto of the W. C. T. U., was all done with the chisel and knife.

"Mr. Coyle has been working on it at odd times for the past year. Having but one hand, the work was naturally somewhat slow and tedious. He estimates that he has put in about $40 worth of time on it if his time was paid for at regular rates.

"This makes the sixth wall pocket that he has carved within the past six years, each of an entirely different design. One is in the Vandalia station at Effingham, one in the Illinois Central station at Newton and one each in the Big Four and Vandalia stations at Marshall. He carved two for Newton, the first one having been burned when the depot was destroyed, and the W. C. T. U. ladies paid him for making another. The material used is hard hickory and poplar.

"There is a place for a bible and another pocket for temperance literature. He has a design for a bracket which he hopes to finish in time for the World's Fair at St. Louis in 1904, but he does not know that he will be able to get it done in time. He says it will eclipse anything he has ever before attempted.

"Mr. Coyle brought the wall pocket to Decatur Saturday evening. The W. C. T. U. held a meeting at the home of Mrs. C. E. Akers, 607 West Main street, and there Mr. Coyle presented the finished work to the union. He made a little talk to the ladies about his work. There was a neat response by Mrs. Larrick, president of the union, and then Mr. Coyle was given a rising vote of thanks. The ladies will make an effort to get the wall pocket placed in the Illinois Central passenger station. There is already one box there and if another is objected to it will be placed at the Wabash station."

In a letter to the editor, Mr. Coyle says: "My wife has been an active member of the W. C. T. U. for the past fifteen years, and it was through her Christian influence that I became an honorary member of this noble organization and that I take such an interest in its work. It makes a man's life sweeter and purer to come in touch with this great body of Christian workers, and I often wonder why it is that a greater number of men do not belong."

Education in New Mexico.

By Rev. James H. Ross.

SECRETARY E. S. TEAD, of the Congregational Education Society, says that New Mexico, which is seeking admission as a state, and which he has just visited, presents many of the features of a foreign country. It is more like Egypt than anything in the United States. The scenery, he says, is totally unlike that of other portions of our country.

The people, being Spanish-speaking Mexicans, have ideas and customs at variance with those of the average American citizen. One feels, when down there, that he is not in the United States. The population is 195,000, two-thirds of whom are Mexicans. These present a distinct race problem as clearly defined as that presented by the negro of the South or the Chinese of the Pacific coast.

The negro always had the advantage of living among the white Anglo-Saxon population, and this has kept him in touch with the white man's civilization, but the Mexican has for years lived in his little canyon settlement far from the larger cities in the southwest, of which there are a few, only recently coming into contact with Anglo-Saxon ideas and habits of life.

He is slow and unresponsive to new ideas. He is a poor mechanic, he cannot build a straight wall, and his adobe hut is never plumb. His windows and doors hang far out of the perpendicular. He lives in a hut made of bricks of the mud of the street, mingled with the straw of his field—for all the world like those made by the Israelites in the time of their bondage in Egypt. These rude bricks are dried in the sun and when sufficiently baked are piled up to the height of from eight to ten feet. Logs are stretched across the top and these are covered with rough boards, and then mud is spread thick on the top. The thickness of this roof diminishes gradually as the wind carries away the dirt. The floors of this hut are made of the same mud as of the roof and are as hard as cement. These adobe huts are pleasant and comfortable. The Mexican succeeds in raising grain and vegetables, but the great scarcity of water in that region prevents him from being a farmer. Irrigation is too expensive at the present time for the successful cultivation of land, although the Pueblo Indians, who are sometimes his neighbors, far excel him in farming.

In many villages there are no schools, public or mission, and no churches of any kind, and "when we drove into one village," says Mr. Tead, "three or four of the leading citizens of the place gathered round our carriage to learn our errand. The missionary who was personally conducting Mrs. Tead and myself, and who was very ready with the Spanish language, informed them what my errand was. They were aroused at once and asked if I could not promise a school immediately. Their earnestness was pathetic. They promised to dig the mud for the brick, and their wives and daughters would plaster the outside. They could get the commissioners holding the common land to give a lot; they would send their children, and could the secretary tell them when a school could be given?" Here were fathers and brothers who had never sat in a day-school, and some of them had never seen a school house, and they could not bear to think of their children growing up in such mental poverty. The children of the village gathered about and listened to the conversation and began eager questioning of the men as to when the school would open.

We were repeatedly informed—but we cannot vouch for the truth of the statement—that public schools are only opened in the villages where saloons exist, as the money from the license fee pays the teacher's salary, but where there are no saloons there can be no schools. One can hardly believe that the United States government has entered into any such partnership as this.

Even if this arrangement is a fact, we are doubtful if the Interior Department at Washington is aware of it. It may be a local device. At any rate, this is a statement freely made in New Mexico.

It will be seen, then, that the public school, as we know it in Massachusetts, will be late in coming into New Mexico. In their religion the Mexicans are strongly Roman Catholic, therefore it might be supposed that the schools of a Protestant denomination would be looked upon with great suspicion. I was agreeably surprised, however, to find that the people welcomed them most cordially and supported them by their attendance.

The Education Society, if the funds were in its hands, would open an Industrial School after the style of Tuskegee and Hampton. The Mexicans themselves, aware of their deficiencies along this line, are asking for such an institution. This last fall a man brought his two sons 280 miles, eighty of which were in a wagon, to the Presbyterian School at Albuquerque, but was unable to secure an entrance for them as the school was overcrowded. The principal stated that he had already turned away 163 young men and women. The Education Society has put this matter into the hands of a special committee, who are to report in the future.

Boston, Mass.

AN OBJECT LESSON

In a Restaurant.

A physician puts the query: "Have you never noticed in any large restaurant at lunch or dinner time the large number of hearty, vigorous old men at the tables; men whose ages run from 60 to 80 years; many of them bald and all perhaps gray, but none of them feeble or senile?"

Perhaps the spectacle is so common as to have escaped your observation or comment, but nevertheless it is an object lesson which means something.

If you will notice what these hearty old fellows are eating you will observe that they are not munching bran crackers nor gingerly picking their way through a menu card of new fangled health foods; on the contrary they seem to prefer a juicy roast of beef, a properly turned loin of mutton, and even the deadly broiled lobster is not altogether ignored.

The point of all this is that a vigorous old age depends upon good digestion and plenty of wholesome food and not upon dieting and an endeavor to live upon bran crackers.

There is a certain class of food cranks who seem to believe that meat, coffee and many other good things are rank poisons, but these cadaverous, sickly looking individuals are a walking condemnation of their own theories.

The matter in a nutshell is that if the stomach secretes the natural digestive juices in sufficient quantity any wholesome food will be promptly digested; if the stomach does not do so, and certain foods cause distress one or two of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets after each meal will remove all difficulty because they supply just what every weak stomach lacks, pepsin, hydrochloric acid, diastase and nux.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets do not act upon the bowels and, in fact, are not strictly a medicine as they act almost entirely upon the food eaten, digesting it thoroughly and thus gives a much needed rest and giving an appetite for the next meal.

Of people who travel nine out of ten use Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets, knowing them to be perfectly safe to use at any time, and also having found out by experience that they are a safeguard against indigestion in any form, and eating as they have to, at all hours and all kinds of food, the travelling public for years have pinned their faith to Stuart's Tablets.

All druggists sell them at 50 cents for full-sized packages and any druggist from Maine to California, if his opinion were asked, will say that Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets is the most popular and successful remedy for any stomach trouble.

33% DIVIDEND

paid by the Mexican Plantation Association, 1602 Title and Trust Building, Chicago, Ill, Oldest of its kind in Mexico. ESTABLISHED 1897. Has 6,000 shares, or acres, planted to permanent crops, rubber, coffee and vanilla. The Association's contract is like an insurance policy—in case of death the money is refunded. 38 deaths have occured since 1897. These shares will now be resold. For full particulars, address as above.

These trade-mark crisscross lines on every package.

GLUTEN FLOUR For DYSPEPSIA.

SPECIAL DIABETIC FLOUR.

K. C. WHOLE WHEAT FLOUR.

Unlike all other goods. Ask Grocers.

For book or sample write

Farwell & Rhines, Watertown, N. Y., U.S.A.

An Unparalleled Offer

The UNION SIGNAL

Ten Weeks for Ten Cents.

No such offer to Union Signal readers has ever before been made. 176 pages of reading matter covering the world's news in temperance and the forward policy of the W.C.T.U. of the world, giving household and other matter of interest to every home maker, and bringing to the home reading of a character to raise the highest ideals and aspirations of the growing members of the family. A genuine family magazine for every W. C. T. U. woman and friend of temperance and right living.

Commencing with the January 8th number, a serial story of sustained interest will run for ten weeks. This story alone is worth many times the price of 10c. for the paper. Now is the time for officers of Unions to send in their entire list of membership. Just think of it, the Union Signal for 10 weeks for 10 cents. Send postage stamps or any convenient way, but do it at once, as this offer is open for acceptance during January only, and any received after February 1st will be returned. ACT PROMPTLY.

The Union Signal for Ten Weeks for Ten Cents

Tell all your friends, and see that the entire list of your Union is on our mailing list for the ten weeks.

Circulation Department,

The UNION SIGNAL

184 La Salle St., Chicago.

Coupon.

Enclosed please find 10 cents, for which send me the Union Signal 10 weeks.

Name, ...

Street, ...

City, ...

State, ...

This coupon WILL NOT be honored after January 31st, 1903.

How Shall We Solve the Problem of the Drink Evil?

By Theodore L. Cuyler, D.D., LL.D.

THERE is a current story that a Quaker once discovered a thief in his house, and, taking down his grandfather's fowling-piece, he quietly said: "Friend, thee had better get out of the way, for I intend to fire this gun right where thee stands."

With the same considerate spirit we warn certain good people that they had better take the decanter off their table, for we intend to aim a Bible truth right where that decanter stands.

It is in the wrong place. It has no more business to be there at all than the thief had to be in an honest Quaker's house. We are not surprised to find a decanter of alcoholic poison on the counter of a dram shop whose keeper is licensed to sell death by measure, but we are surprised to find it on the table or the sideboard of one who professes to be guided by the spirit and the teachings of God's Word.

That bottle stands right in the range of the following inspired utterance of St. Paul: "It is good neither to eat flesh, nor to drink wine, nor anything whereby your brother stumbleth."

This text must either go out of the Christian's Bible or the bottle go off the Christian's table. The text will not move, and the bottle must.

The passage itself is so clear that it can hardly admit of a cavil or a doubt. It teaches the lofty and benevolent principle—that abstinence from things that are necessarily hurtful to others is a Christian expediency that has the grip of a moral duty.

This sounds at first like a very radical doctrine, but so conservative an expounder as Professor Hodge of Princeton has defined the text as teaching that things which are not always wrong per se are to be given up for the sake of others.

He says that the legal liberty of a good man is never to be exercised where a moral evil will necessarily flow from it. We are never to put stumbling blocks in the way of others. Good men are bound to sacrifice anything and everything that is counter to the glory of God and destructive of the best interests of humanity.

It would be easy to prove unanswerably that alcoholic beverages are injurious to those who use them. The famous athlete, Tom Sayers, was once asked by a gentleman: "Well, Thomas, I suppose that when you are training you use plenty of beefsteaks, and London porter and pale ale?"

The boxer replied: "In my time I have drunk more than was good for me, but when I have 'business' to do there is nothing like water and the dumbbells." After retiring from "business" he took to drink and died a sot.

Cold water made him a Samson, alcohol laid him in his grave. As a matter of personal health and long life, "it is good not to drink wine;" as an example to others, total abstinence is a Christian virtue.

The inherent wrong of using intoxicating drinks is two-fold: It exposes to danger the man who tampers with it, for no man was ever positively assured by his Creator that he could play with the adder that lies coiled up in a wine cup without being stung by it, and it puts a stumbling block in the way of him whom we are commanded to love as ourselves.

We lay down, then, the proposition that no man has a moral right to do anything the influence of which is certainly and inevitably hurtful to his neighbor. I have a legal right to do many things which as a Christian I cannot do.

I have a legal right to swallow arsenic or strychnine, but I have no moral right to commit this self-destruction.

Now, on the same principle (not of self-preservation merely, but of avoiding what is dangerous to others), what right have I to sustain those fountain-heads of death from which the drink poison is sold?

What right have I to advocate their license, to patronize the traffic, or even in any way to abet the whole system of drinking alcoholic stimulants at home or abroad?

If a glass of wine on my table will entrap into dissipation some young man or some one who is inclined to stimulants, then am I thoughtlessly setting a trap for his life.

I am his tempter.

I give the usage of my sanction, and to him the direct inducement to partake of the bottled demon that sparkles so seductively before him.

If the contents of that sparkling glass make my brother to stumble, he stumbles over me.

If he goes away from my table and commits some outrage under the effects of that stimulant, I am to a certain degree guilty of that outrage.

I have a partnership in every blow he strikes, or in every oath he may utter, or in every bitter wound he may inflict on the hearts of those he loves, while under the spell of my glass of "Cognac" or "Burgundy."

I gave him the incentive to do what otherwise he might have left undone.

The man who puts the bottle to his neighbor's lips is acountable for what comes from those lips under the influence of the dram, and is accountable, too, for every outrage that the maddened victim of the cup may perpetrate during his temporary insanity.

In this view of the question, is it too much to ask of every professed Christian and every lover of his kind that he will wholly abstain from everything that will intoxicate?

For the sake of your children, do it, for the sake of a brother, a husband, a friend, for the sake of those who will plead your example, for the sake of frail tempted ones who cannot say "no," for your fellow-travelers' sake to God's bar and to the eternal world, touch not the bottled devil under whose shining scales damnation hides its adder sting.

It is old-fashioned total abstinence that we are pleading for. We ask it, as Paul did, for the sake of those who stumble. Oh, those stumblers! those stumblers!

We dare not speak of them. It would touch many of us too tenderly. It would reveal too many wrecks—wrecks that angels have wept over.

It would open tombs whose charitable green turf hides out of sight what many a survivor would love to have forgotten. It would recall to me many a college friend who went down at midday into blackness of darkness.

And to-day I see this social curse coming back into our house, into our daily usages of life with redoubled power.

Would that every parent were a prohibitory law to his family! Would that every pulpit and every platform would take up the work and thunder forth the old warning cry: "Look not on the wine when it is red, when it giveth its color in the cup, for at the last it biteth like a serpent and stingeth like an adder."

At the last! At the last!

But who can tell when that last shall ever end? When will the victim's last groan be heard? When will the last horror seize upon his wretched soul?

This great Twentieth Century Crusade should call forth a healthy response from every man, every woman interested in the progress and welfare of humanity, and the outlook for an unheard of success is very bright.

Copper Cures Consumption

New Treatment for Consumption Indorsed by Members of British Tuberculosis Congress--Hope for All, No Matter How Bad Off.

Benefits Congressman Dingley's Son and Cures Hundreds of Others in Their Home—Any One Can Receive FREE Books Which Explain Exhaustively the Cure and Prevention of Consumption.

O. K. BUCKHOUT.

Chairman Kalamazoo Tuberculosis Remedy Co., (Ltd.) Member of British Tuberculosis Congress; Member International Association for the Prevention of Tuberculosis.

Consumptives need not worry about their future any more, as the long-looked-for cure for consumption has at last been found. Write to Mr. O. K. Buckhout, Chairman, 294 Main St., Kalamazoo, Mich., a noted member of the British Tuberculosis Congress and also of the International Association for the Prevention of Tuberculosis, composed of world-famous men who have made consumption—its cure and prevention—a life study. This cure is something entirely new and is called "Antidotum Tuberculose," or the Copper Cure. It is the only discovery that absolutely kills all tuberculosis germs which cause consumption. As the name of the remedy tells, its chief ingredient is copper, which metal has at last been found to be the deadly enemy of the consumption germ.

You can tell if you have consumption by the coughing and hawking, by continually spitting, especially in the morning, when you raise yellow and black matter, by bleeding from the lungs, night sweats, flat chest, fever, weak voice, peculiar flushed complexion, pain in chest, wasting away of the flesh, etc. Find out how the Copper Cure kills the germs, then builds up the lungs, strengthens the heart, puts flesh on the body and muscles on the bones, until the consumption is all gone and you are again a strong, healthy, robust man or woman.

Don't doubt this, for the very same discovery benefited A. H. Dingley, a son of Congressman Dingley of Dingley Tariff Bill fame.

If you have consumption or fear you are predisposed to it, write to-night to Mr. O. K. Buckhout, Chairman, 294 Main Street, Kalamazoo, Mich., and he will send you illustrated and scholarly books free of charge telling you fully how the Copper Cure will cure you in your own home in a very short time.

KINDLY MENTION THE UNION SIGNAL WHEN WRITING ADVERTISERS.

TIMELY TRACTS

BY

JOSIAH W. LEEDS.

The Place of Progressive Euchre. He Mastered the Cigarette. The Smoker and His Resolute Will. The Cigarette. Silver Track Dramways. Relation of Press and Stage to Purity. Need of Faithful Testimony Against Impurity. Concerning Women's Preaching. Dress Parade at West Point. Ought Christians to Engage in War? Simplicity of Attire as Related to Promotion of Social Purity. Examen of the Boy's Job of Train Derailment. Our Free Institutes for the Promotion of Brutality and Burglary. Some Quiet Ways of Dealing with Pernicious Prints. The Pernicious in Libraries.

About 8 pages for 1 cent. Sample set, 15 cents.

BOOKLETS.—The Theatre: An Essay on the Non-Accordancy of Stage Plays with the Christian Profession, 15 cts. Horse-Racing, the Beginnings of Gambling, the Lottery, 10 cts. The Case of a Friend of a Friend of the Commonwealth vs. The Sunday Newspaper, 8 cts. Suppression of the Anti-War Views of John Wiclif, 8 cts.

Cut this out. 528 Walnut St., Philadelphia, Pa

KINDLY MENTION THE UNION SIGNAL WHEN WRITING ADVERTISERS.

OIL--SMELTER--MINES.

Dividend-Paying Mining, Oil and Smelter Stocks, Listed and Unlisted, our Specialty.

DOUGLAS, LACEY & CO.,

Bankers & Brokers, Fiscal Agents,

Members N. Y. Consolidated Stock Exchange.

66 BROADWAY & 17 NEW ST., NEW YORK.

Booklets giving our successful plan for realizing the large interest and profits of legitimate mining, oil and smelter investments, sub. blanks, full particulars, etc., sent free on application.

KINDLY MENTION THE UNION SIGNAL WHEN WRITING ADVERTISERS.

25 CTS. PISO'S CURE FOR 25 CTS.

CURES WHERE ALL ELSE FAILS. Best Cough Syrup. Tastes Good. Use in time. Sold by druggists.

CONSUMPTION

KINDLY MENTION THE UNION SIGNAL WHEN WRITING ADVERTISERS.

A REDUCTION
OF 10 PER CENT
FOR JANUARY ONLY

"The Opportunity Circle."

Faye Huntington.

A story of good deeds accomplished by young earnest hearts.

Price, 50 cents

Net, postpaid, 45 cents.

"Winsome Woman-hood."

Margaret E. Sangster.

Familiar talks on life and conduct.

Price, - - $1.25

Net, postpaid, $1.12.

"White Ribbon Birthday Book."

Anna A. Gordon.

A book composed of quotations from noted women.

Price, - - - - - - $1.00

Net, postpaid, 90 cents.

"David Douglas and His Wife."

Mrs. O. W. Scott.

A practical prohibition story.

Price, - - - - - - 50 cents

Net, postpaid, 45 cents.

"Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch."

Alice Caldwell Hegan.

A wonderful mingling of pathos and humor, "a sure cure for the blues."

Price, - $1.00

Net, postpaid, 90 cents.

"Six of Them."

Mrs. S. M. Perkins.

A cleverly told temperance tale.

Price, - - - - - 75 cents

Net, postpaid, 67 cents.

WOMAN'S TEMPERANCE PUBLISHING ASSOCIATION
CHICAGO

Responsive Readings

Published Monthly.

Designed for the use of local unions and of great aid to workers, as they contain information wholly upon the work of the departments of the W. C. T. U.

SUBSCRIPTION PRICE:

Single Copies, per year ..... $.10
13 Copies, per year, to one address 1.00
100 of this issue ..... .50

Subject for January Reading,

The Work for the Promotion of Purity in Literature and Art.

By Emilie D. Martin.

Woman's Temperance Publishing Association,

184 LA SALLE ST., CHICAGO, ILL.

January Magazines.

Although the magazines have put off the gorgeous color-effects of the holidays and come to us in the neutral tints of their accustomed attire, there is no diminution of interesting contents. The CENTURY offers a goodly variety from the weightier article to the lighter sketch and brighter fiction. "Trusts" forms the theme of several able and timely contributions. Dr. Albert Shaw in his analytical paper, "The President and the Trusts," thus defines the position of the President: "Of two things, he has at the very outset of these subjects been convinced: first, that the trusts and great corporations should be made to do business in an open, public way, for the protection of not only the people at large, but of their own stockholders as well; and second, that these corporations should be kept in clear subjection to the laws of the land and to the sovereignty of the state." Franklin Clarkin writes of "The So-Called Sugar Trust," especially emphasizing its relation to labor and over capitalization. The editor, in "The Better Way as to Labor," cites some specific instances of good fellowship between workmen and employer, showing that human sympathy is fast becoming a recognized factor in the "labor market." "The other day," he says, "we asked a highly successful manufacturer how it was that he had got along so well, and so many years, with his great crowd of employes and labor-union allies. 'We beat them,' he said, 'with kindness.'" Of the "other half" of the magazine we should not care to miss the "find" concerning Edgar Allen Poe, the genial defence of the spinster in the first of Lillie Hamilton French's series, "My Old Maid's Corner," nor the story of Miss Hazy of the "Cabbage-Patch", who forgot to heed her wise mother's injunction, "Don't fool with widowers, grass or sod."

This month's ATLANTIC is a delight to the reader. He is at once introduced by the editor into the sacred, century-old "Number 4 Park Street, the spacious sunny room on a level with the elm-tops", where he sits entranced while this same editor in the cleverest, most whimsical and charming manner wishes him a Happy New Year and shows him the very treasurers of the sanctum, all the while relating the most fascinating and romatic story that could be told concerning a magazine. It is only when he reminds you, in this assumed role of toastmaster, that "it is time to push back the coffee-cups, settle the chairs at a more comfortable angle, and listen to the other voices," that you realize that the "feast" is not yet come to an end. Arthur Sherburne Hardy gives the first chapter of his serial, "His Daughter First"; J. T. Trowbridge has been persuaded to drop the imaginary for a time to tell his Own Story. There are discussions concerning "The War Against Disease," and "The Future of Orchestral Music." The sketches include "Mammy," a Southern tale, and there are literary talks on "Dickens as a Man of Letters," and "The Latest Novels of Howells and James." Poetry and a brilliant Contributor's Club complete a most generous New Year's entertainment.

McCLURE'S gives a detailed account of the wonderful accomplishment of the Austrian surgeon, Dr. Adolf Lorenz, with a full page illustration of the doctor at work. Ida M. Tarbell vividly pictures "The Oil War of 1872," concluding this chapter of the history of the Standard Oil Company, with "Mr. Rockefeller's Opinions and Character." Mr. Rockefeller's portrait forms the frontispiece of the magazine. Ray Stannard Baker gives from personal observation the tragic story of the non-striking miners, which he accompanies by photographs of characteristic types of these miners, their families and their homes. George W. Smalley's Personal Recollections include Mr. Rudyard Kipling, Mrs. Humphery Ward, Anthony Trollope, Du Maurier, Thomas Hardy, and W. S. Gilbert.

The CHAUTAUQUAN gives space to some remarkable examples of civic progress in the United States. George C. Sikes describes the workings of Chicago's Municipal Voters' League in its regeneration of the city's council; J. Horace McFarland tells the story of "The Harrisburg Achievement,"—a ten-months' accomplishment in public improvements and an efficient non-partisan administration; and Mrs. Louis Marion McCall recites the story of the St. Louis Civic Improvement League, having a membership of 1,300 and built upon an exceptionally effective business basis. The Round Table presents detailed "Civic Progress Programs" for the use of clubs. The editorial comment of THE CHAUTAUQUAN furnishes one of the brightest and most comprehensive of the news summaries of the month.

THE WOMAN'S HOME COMPANION has an attractive winter cover, and the contents fairly teem with holiday features. The magazine announces three new distinct departments for the coming year which will attract the attention of every American household: "An Art Feature Extraordinary," a series of paintings depicting the twelve most picturesque events in American history; "Great Movements which are Making the World Better," and "Romances of Famous Americans." In "The American Girl," Ada C. Sweet writes the first of a series of articles on "Meat Makes Her the Most Popular Girl in the World,"—"Why Every American Girl Should Earn Her Own Living." The children's department and "Just for Fun" will engage the attention of many readers.

The New Year's ST. NICHOLAS makes one pity the boy or girl who does not have it to read. Can you imagine anything merrier in prospect than a string of contributors such as these: Edwin L. Sabin, Louise M. Alcott, Howard Pyle, Clara Morris, Malcolm Douglas, Harriet Prescott Spofford, Roy Benson Richardson, Virginia Woodward Cloud, Zitella Cocke, John Bennett, Clifford Howard, Sarah M. B. Piatt, Albert Bigelow Paine, and Carolyn Wells. And this list really contains only a part of the writers and artists who make the boys and girls laugh and cry by turn, and who conjure them into making the very best resolutions for the New Year and for always. As you turn the pages of this number it is difficult to decide just which is the brightest one.

SUCCESS is full of inspiration for the new year. There is a good industrial story by Joseph Blethen entitled "Peadee's Toothpicks," and an article by William Stead, Jr., giving Ruskin's selected list of books. "The Power of Twelve Senators," by Walter Wellman, gives an insight into the characters of some of the most conspicuous members of the United States. Josiah Strong in his first of "Uncle Sam's Talks on Our Country," tells of America's place among the nations, and reveals the greatness of our land. Dainty recipes for a New Year's breakfast are given by Christine Terhune Herrick, in the fourth of her articles on "How Betty Entertained."

Free to Everyone.

A Priceless Book Sent Free For the Asking.

Piles Cured Without Cutting, Danger, or Detention From Work, by a Simple Home Remedy.

Pyramid Pile Cure gives instant relief and never fails to cure every form of this most troublesome disease. For sale by all druggists at 50c. a package. Thousands have been quickly cured. Ask your druggist for a package of Pyramid Pile Cure, or write for our little book which tells all about the cause and cure of piles. Write your name and address plainly on a postal card, mail to the Pyramid Drug Co., Marshall, Mich., and you will receive the book by return mail.

FREE SUPERFLUOUS HAIR DESTROYER
We will send free package of our KILL-ALL-HAIR to any lady sending name & address.
BELL TOILET Co., 60-59 Ave., New York City.

LADIES to do piecework at their homes. We furnish all material and pay from $7 to $12 weekly. Experience unnecessary. Send stamped envelope to ROYAL CO., Dept. U.S., 34 Monroe Street, Chicago, Ill.

LEARN PROOFREADING.
If you possess a fair education, why not utilize it at a genteel and uncrowded profession paying $15 to $35 weekly? Situations always obtainable. We are the original instructors by mail.
HOME CORRESPONDENCE SCHOOL, Philadelphia

THE METHODIST MAGAZINE AND REVIEW, the oldest Canadian magazine, begins its fifty-seventh volume with an especially strong number. A marked feature is its pronounced patriotic character, with prominence given to Canada. There are beautifully illustrated articles on "Paris the Beautiful," "The Wild Welsh Coast," and "The Canadian Lumberman." Character studies, with portraits, are given of the great non-conformist leaders, Hugh Price and Joseph Parker. There are fine articles, an amusing sketch of that "Famous Fop," Beau Brummell, and several stories and pieces of verse by well-known writers.

Venezuela is very much at the front in the REVIEW OF REVIEWS, there being a full editorial exposition of the situation besides a presentation of the case of the powers against the South American state, as set forth by the well-informed Washington journalist, Mr. A. Maurice Low. There is also important discussion of the topics now engaging the attention of Congress. The illustrated character sketches include Minister to Venezuela, Herbert W. Bowen, the late Thomas B. Reed, and the late Thomas Nast. Mr. W. T. Stead writes of "The British Education Bill."

The New Year's number of LIPPINCOTT'S is a mine of fiction, containing, in addition to its regular complete novel, nine short stories. There are also several timely papers, some choice verse, and fun galore. The paper on "Franklin in Germany," by J. G. Rosengarten, will make a wide appeal at at the present time. "English Wives and American Housekeeping," by Mrs. M. E. Leicester, shows a pleasing familiarity with her subject.

In THE PILGRIM appears the first installment of "The Pilgrim's Patriotic Calendar," in which will appear, with each issue, the life of some famous American, written in brief and illustrated. Another page-feature of this issue shows views of "An Artist's Florida Home." Three new departments are added to the many that have already made THE PILGRIM famous for its readable contents.

AINSLEE'S has 160 pages of clever fiction, article and verse, with such writers as Elia W. Peattie, Frank Norris, Dorothy Dix, George Hibbard and others. The novel is by E. W. Hornung, and is entitled "No Hero." There are about 34 contributions, including excellent poems by Albert Bigelow Paine, Paul Lawrence Dunbar and Harold MacGrath.

Signal Notes

A telling address on the cigaret as "an enemy of the school" was lately given by one of the teachers before the State Association of Colored Teachers at Clarksville, Tenn.

A prolonged drought in New Guinea has caused a famine, and thousands of the inhabitants are starving. Some are subsisting on roots, grubs, and vermin, while others have resorted to cannibalism.

A press despatch from Pekin, China, says that another Boxer uprising is imminent and the missionaries in the Sian Fu region have been officially notified to be prepared to leave if necessary. It is recommended that the women and children be sent to safe ports.

A meeting is to be held at the Chicago Commons, January 7-8, to formulate plans for a national or international co-operative congress, to be held early next spring or summer in Chicago or some central point. All who wish to see the gospel of co-operation spread abroad in the land are cordially invited to attend.

An English coroner appended the following remark to his report on a recent case, where a man had fractured his skull while under the influence of liquor. "It makes you ill," he said; "it wastes your money; and it loses you your character. If we could stop this drinking my post would be a sinecure; we should be able very soon to shut up our workhouses; and we should have no trouble about old-age pensions."

County Judge Lindsey, of Denver, Col., who has fined a man $100 for selling five cents worth of tobacco to a child, has fined the Overland Cotton Mills Co. to the limit for employing child labor, and has decided against the wine room, is reminded by the State W. C. T. U. superintendent of Christian Citizenship and Law Enforcement that the women of that state take cognizance of his work and that they believe in it.

Any one thinking of moving south, who would like to be associated with others in building up a temperance, Christian community, with the advantages of an academy, will do well to write C. F. Cronk, Madison, Wis. Mr. Cronk was the Prohibition party candidate for Congress last fall. He has been a devoted temperance worker for years and hopes to find opportunity for his endeavors in this respect in the South, where ill health compels him to go.

The efforts to establish a Barmaids Association in Birmingham, England, are to be met by the local branch of the British Women's Temperance Association with a series of meetings, with the object of arousing public opinion in favor of the removal of women from service behind bars. The United Kingdom Alliance are co-operating, while the licensed victuallers express a determination to offer the strongest opposition to the suggested reform. So reports the "Star."

The International Reform Bureau, believing that the fundamental requisite to permanent moral reforms is an increased study of moral questions in schools and churches and reform societies, has secured the publication as a Senate document of its topic-a-month course in patriotic studies, in order that this outline may be supplied free to all who desire to inform themselves or to unite with others in patriotic clubs or other organizations. It is suggested that every church and religious organization shall devote one meeting, or at least a part of a meeting, every month to the topics here presented, on which information additional to the outline may be secured in other government documents to which reference is made in the course of study. This document gives a study outline on the following great subjects: Education, municipal reform, immigration, the Sabbath, labor, marriage and divorce, government, purity, gambling, penology, temperance, charity. Those desiring it should apply to their own Senators for a free copy. At the same time a new document prepared by the Anti-Saloon League, giving the latest word on the canteen, should be asked for.

Publishers' Notes.

January Young Crusader.

The January YOUNG CRUSADER is packed full of just the kind of reading to delight the girls and boys. Special features are two beautifully illustrated articles on childhood in Bermuda and in the North; live Anti-Cigaret pages with pictures of young boy workers, announcement of Anti-Cigaret Sunday and continued $5.00 Anti-Cigaret story prize with a full-page illustrated talk by Dr. David Paulson. There are interesting items for the Seniors, and the Juniors will be delighted with an account of the "Zoo" of Old Orchard L. T. L. and with the prize Picture-Stories. The beautiful cover-design suggestive of the glad New Year is a gem that cannot be spared from your collection of the Crusader's art covers. Are you a subscriber to this fine magazine? If not, send us your name and begin your subscription with this number. The subscription price is only 25 cents per year.

Books for Libraries.

There should be a greater effort on the part of all white ribboners to place temperance books in public libraries, Sunday school libraries and public school libraries, and above all in the home. I make special mention of the books written by Frances E. Willard, "The Beautiful Life of Frances E. Willard," by Miss Gordon, ($2.00); and in the line of story books, "A Singular Life," (50c or $1.25), and "Jack the Fisherman," (50c), by Elizabeth Stuart Phelps; "Black Rock," by Ralph Connor, (25c or $1.25); "The Darlingtons," by Elmore Eliott Peake, ($1.50); "The Stand By," by Edmund Dole, $1.25; "The Cry of the Two-Thirds," by S. R. Graham Clark, ($1.50).

"Who Killed Joe's Baby?" by Charles M. Sheldon, (10c), might with profit be read at W. C. T. U. meetings, in every school house and in every church in this country. The reading of it occupies about the same length of time as is usually devoted to an address, and it emphasizes in a very impressive way total abstinence and enforced prohibition.—Mrs. L. M. N. Stevens, in annual address.

Teachers Need It.

Temperance Helps for Primary Teachers. By L. Mabel Freese. An excellent book for kindergarten and primary teachers in teaching the principles of temperance and home. It is beautifully written and printed and contains two sketches of Frances E. Willard that cannot fail to inspire and beautify the lives of the little ones who hear them. Published by The Woman's Temperance Publishing Association, Chicago. Price 50 cents.—Ram's Horn

January Responsive Reading.

The Work for the Promotion of Purity in Literature and Art by the National superintendent, Mrs. Emilie D. Martin, is the subject of our January Responsive Reading and contains material sufficient for several W. C. T. U. meetings. We urge that each union consider this subject at an early date and circulate widely the knowledge contained in this Reading. Price 50 cents per 100.

WOMAN'S TEMPERANCE PUB. ASSN.,
184 La Salle St., Chicago.

The "Anti-Treating League of America," is a new organization founded at Buffalo, N. Y., by John A. Ronayne. The pledge reads: "We, the undersigned, are, on principle, opposed to the custom of treating in saloons and shall do what we reasonably can to discourage the practice." The badge is a button bearing the name of the organization.

PATTERNS.

The patterns here shown are cut by one of the most reliable pattern houses in the country, and are of the very latest and newest design. These patterns retail at from 25 to 35 cents each, but by special arrangement with the manufacturers, we are enabled to supply them to readers for only 10 cents each prepaid.

Full directions, quantity of material required and illustration of garment with each pattern.

Order patterns by their numbers. Give bust measure for ladies' upper garments. Give waist measure for skirts. Give both age and breast measure for misses and children.

8873—Five Gored Skirt with Box Plaited Flounce.
22 to 32 in. waist.

8881—Fancy Tucked Waist.
8883—Seven Gored Skirt.
Waist, 32 to 40 in. bust.
Skirt, 22 to 32 in. waist.

8872—Dress.
4 to 12 years.

Cut out and send this coupon.

UNION SIGNAL, CHICAGO, ILL.:

Enclosed find 10 cents for which send Pattern Number.....

Waist measure..... Bust..... If child's pattern give age..... to

Name.....

Street.....

City..... State.....

Would You Like to Attend The National Convention?

We have a plan whereby you may obtain a round trip ticket without an outlay of one cent, provided you are willing to work and secure new subscribers to The UNION SIGNAL. You will be greatly interested in our proposition, and we will be glad to communicate with you, giving full details of our plans. The work should begin at once.

Circulation Department,* UNION SIGNAL
184 La Salle Street, CHICAGO

Extension of Time Limit

For Club Raisers

In response to urgent solicitation the time in which clubs of ten or more subscriptions at the rate of $1.00 per year will be received, is extended to January 31st. This extra month should give ample time for club raisers to complete their clubs. The demand for this club concession has been so general that, owing to the diversion of the holidays, it has seemed best to enable every Union desiring it to send in their members as a club.

This Offer Positively Closes With January

Union Signal
CHICAGO

SPECIAL OFFER: The Union Signal Ten Weeks for Ten Cents.

FOR GOD AND HOME AND EVERY LAND.

The UNION SIGNAL AND WORLD'S WHITE RIBBON

NATIONAL and WORLD'S WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION

Entered at Chicago Postoffice as Second-class Matter.

"Thou hast given a banner to them that fear thee: that it may be displayed because of the truth."

Vol. XXIX.—No. 3. Issued Weekly. | CHICAGO, JANUARY 15, 1903. | Price, $1.50 Per Year in Advance.

Notice.

THE UNION SIGNAL for one year to a club of ten, $10. This offer is extended to January 31, 1903.

Contents of This Number.

CURRENT TEMPERANCE NEWS 2, 3
CONTRIBUTED:
The Fundamental Need of Humane Education. By Mary F. Lovell—The Danger of Moderate Drinking. By Cordelia A. Greene, M. D. 4
The Twenty-ninth Crusade Anniversary. By Mrs. Cotton Mather 5
Answer. By Isabella Howe Fiske—A Fight Against Odds. By Kate Anderson 6
THE SENIOR L. T. L.:
Notes—Ohio—Willard Memorial Fund—Suggestions for Peace Work 7
EDITORIAL:
The Frances E. Willard Memorial Fund—London Shocked by Its Drunkenness—The Proposed Anti-Polygamy Amendment—A Thought 8
Personal Mention—The Editor's Question Box 9
GREETING FROM OUR WORLD'S PRESIDENT 9
OFFICIAL COMMUNICATIONS 10
NEWS FROM THE FIELD—W. C. T. U. NOTES 12
THE OPTIMISTS CLUB—THE SOLDIER'S HANDBOOK—A CURIO 13
A CAMPAIGN AGAINST THE ANTI-CANTEEN LAW 14
ABOUT WOMEN—PUBLISHERS' NOTES 15
SIGNAL NOTES 16

Red-Letter Day.

February 17, Frances E. Willard Thankoffering Day.

THE HEAVENLY BIRTHDAY OF MISS WILLARD.

News of the Week.

House passes the general army bill, creating a new staff to advise with the president.

Don Luis Felipe Carbo, minister of Ecuador to the United States, has been recalled. His successor will be Alfredo Baquerizo.

Abram Stevens Hewitt, former mayor of New York and distinguished as a philanthropist, a politician and student, reported dying.

Germany offers to buy Panama canal company's rights for $40,000,000 if United States does not exercise option expiring March 4, according to London Daily News.

Standing committee of the Detroit coal conference calls a national convention in Washington to urge the president to take immediate action to end the fuel famine.

Great Britain has sent a strong protest to Turkey against allowing Russian torpedo boats to pass the Dardanelles, saying that it will reserve the right to demand the same privilege.

Andrew Carnegie offered $1,500,000 to Philadelphia free public library for construction of thirty district branches; buildings must cost $50,000 each and city or individuals provide sites.

Much suffering and three deaths attributed to lack of coal in Chicago. Special grand jury sworn in to inquire into the charges of illegal combination between coal operators and dealers.

Citizens of Arcola, Ill., confiscated sixteen car loads of coal bound for Chicago, in order to relieve dire distress. Strict account kept of all deliveries and payment will be offered the railroad company.

German budget appropriating $375,000 for St. Louis fair exhibit preliminaries introduced in reichstag; total requirement placed at $625,000; exhibit declared necessary, as France and England will be represented.

Ex-Premier Sagasta of Spain died at Madrid of heart failure. Was seventy-six years old, had led both revolutionists and monarchists, been exiled to England, and was blamed by Americans for Virginius massacre.

United States Minister Bowen will return to Washington immediately to assist Venezuela in preparing for the arbitration of the European powers' claims. Minister Bowen states that considerable distress is felt in Venezuela because of the cutting off of food supplies by the blockade.

As Oil to Fire. "One might as well advocate the use of kerosene in fighting fire as the use of alcoholic drink in fighting intemperance," pertinently remarks a writer in "The Chicago Daily News." It would put the fire out about as quick as government beer would make a good, sober private soldier.

When all the People Speak. Local option is better than no option at all. In many localities it means prohibition, and as time and the campaign of temperance education go on, and especially when the question is optional with ALL the people, it will mean more and more territory won for prohibition.

A Downward Road. As between the "respectable" saloon and the groggery reform effort should be directed against the former. Without the "respectable" saloon the basement dive could not do business. The former is the feeder of the latter. The saloon at the top makes possible the saloon at the bottom. The drinker's road is down, not up.

Public Sentiment in Maine. It will not be denied, even by the most rabid of anti-prohibitionists, that Governor Hill of Maine is good and reliable authority concerning public sentiment in his own state. The people of Maine, he says in his inaugural address, demand not repeal, but "a more complete and vigorous enforcement of the prohibitory law. In nearly all country towns the law is respected and obeyed. It is in the cities and larger villages that it has been most frequently and persistently violated. Officers whose duty it is to see that law is observed have no option in the matter, if they respect their official obligation and are true to their official oath."

An Education Fund. The St. Louis Fair Association has placed $150,000 at the disposal of the advisory board of congresses and conventions to pay the expenses of an educational congress. This board, elected by the Association of American Universities at its recent meeting in New York, is composed of four college presidents and the librarian of congress. A committee of educators was also appointed to formulate a plan for the organization of these assemblies and the efficient expenditure of the fund. In thus recognizing by a special appropriation the work of the schools and colleges, the Louisiana Purchase Exposition takes an advance step. The Columbian Exposition in '93 gave no money towards the expenses of educational congresses.

The Anti-Polygamy Amendment. Many of our women are expressing themselves as somewhat discouraged because the House Judiciary voted adversely on the anti-polygamy amendment. Our superintendent of legislation and other workers at the front point out that this action is to be regarded as a gain rather than a loss. The fact that it was defeated in the committee by a majority of only one proves that the tide of sentiment is rising and gives hope of victory at the next session of Congress. The delay will afford opportunity to carry on the agitation and education necessary to secure the passage by the amendment in both Houses after the committees have reported favorably. So let us rejoice for progress made and go on making and strengthening public sentiment in this direction.

No Bachelors Need Apply. The management of the Norfolk, Portsmouth and Newport News Railway has just announced a new rule, viz., that hereafter no unmarried men will be employed on that line. This has been commented on as a "humane and praiseworthy action." That depends upon the point of view.

Pennsylvania to the Front. Mrs. H. H. Forrest, of Allegheny, Pa., vice president of the state and superintendent of literature in her local union, went to a recent meeting armed with the latest special offer for THE UNION SIGNAL and secured the name of every woman present who was not already a subscriber! Such prompt, effective service by individual workers is perhaps the secret of Pennsylvania's standing in the National. We shall be glad to hear from other literature superintendents in like fashion.

Brewers' Contest in a Church. A certain liquor firm in Oklahoma City recently donated to a church fair a silk hat and cane to be given to the most popular brewer's agent. Hundreds of votes were pledged and the contest is said to have been a lively one. Each vote bought a brick for the "grand new Gothic church" on a prominent street. One of the dailies of the city argued that these agents are "workers in the cause of temperance," statistics showing that "those nations that use malt liquors as a household beverage are the most temperate." Comment is unnecessary.

Women and Legislation. Women sometimes like to know what the newspapers say about them, and sometimes it is well that they should know. So we pass on this editorial comment concerning "petticoat government" in Washington, D. C.: "There are many congressmen's wives who have ideas of their own on legislative subjects, and who, as their husbands' closest intimates, are able to influence votes in the House. The women were 'dead sot' against the army canteen, and lo! that institution, against the unanimous wish of the military authorities, was abolished. The war department is anxious to have it restored, but in all probability the women will prevent it. Indeed, it is a mistake to suppose that women, because they do not sit in Congress, have nothing to do with the legislation it makes."

The Anti-Canteen Law Threatened. On Jan. 6 a telegram was received at National W. C. T. U. Headquarters saying that a bill to repeal the Anti-Canteen Law had been introduced into the House at Washington, and referred to the military committee, of which John A. T. Hull is chairman. The next mail carried letters to every state president asking that letters and telegrams be sent protesting against the proposed repeal. It now remains for the American people to act instantly and show Congress and the Liquor Dealers' Association, as well as the drink-loving officers of the army, what they think about the United States government selling liquors to the army. Every church and every assembly should voice their sentiments and send at once to the chairman of the military committee and to their Congressmen. Every union should set forces to work without delay to secure protests against the consummation of this wicked thing. Let such a volume of protests be rolled in as has never before been voiced—such a pronounced one that it will never have to be repeated. Act at once.

The Battle Is On at Washington.

Women Inspectors to be Appointed for New York Harbor.

Margaret Dye Ellis, Correspondent.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 12.—On January 5, Representative Parker, of New Jersey, introduced the following: "That fermented malt beverages, and light wines, but no ardent spirits may be sold in post exchanges and on transports under regulations to be prescribed by the Secretary of War." This was referred to the House committee on Military Affairs.

January 8th, Representative Bartholdt, of Missouri, submitted a resolution requesting the Secretary of War to transmit to Congress the various reports received by his department on the practical operation of the anti-canteen law.

It has been a source of wonderment to many, as to the non-use of the $500,000 appropriated June 30th, 1902, to be expended in the discretion and under the direction of the Secretary of War, for the "construction and equipment and maintenance of suitable buildings" for the betterment of the soldier.

An article in another column gives a record of what has been undertaken. Fort Meyer probably has more visitors than any other post in the country, being within a short distance from Washington, and should be a model post in all its equipments. The balance of the appropriation, less $65,000, was divided among ten posts, but when it is realized that eighty-nine are unprovided for, it is self-evident that a larger appropriation is indispensable. Uncle Samuel will have to go still deeper in his pockets to care for his boys, and keep them out of mischief!

We can scarcely believe that so intelligent and sensible a body of men as is found in the National Congress, would pass a bill at two consecutive sessions, which was each time signed by the president and became a law, and after appropriating $500,000 to make army posts or garrisons more attractive and helpful, at the next session undo it all by a repeal of the law, and that without opportunity being given to test the law in its entirety, or to note the beneficial results of this generous thought on the part of Congress. Surely our national legislators are wiser in their day and generation than this.

We are inquired of frequently as to petitions; we believe in them, they are worthy weapons, we cannot have too many, but to be most effective they should show independence of thought, and not appear as having originated from one brain and hand; hence we have not issued petition blanks for any of our bills. Members of Congress have said to me, "Yes, you write it out, and any one will sign it." They receive these blank petitions in every mail, the same words over, and over, and over, and one can readily see how they necessarily lose their force. But a few words just asking for what you want in the simplest manner TELLS.

The chairman of one of the prominent committees told me this week, he had received 225 letters in less than a month from our folks, and said, "I am almost driven to death by the demands of the people." Short letters, showing interest and desire, from individuals, churches and societies other than our own, must tell, do tell. KEEP IT UP! Letters, resolutions, protests, or petitions, should flood congress now for our measures, for the month of January is far better than is February, when the appropriation bills take all time and attention.

First—Against the repeal of the anti-canteen law.

Second—To prohibit liquor selling in immigrant stations.

Third—To prohibit liquor selling in all government buildings.

Fourth—To forever prohibit polygamy in the United States.

Every church, every society that believes in righteousness, and morality, should either pass a resolution, or write a letter, or petition embodying all of the above, or part as they may desire, and forward AT ONCE to the senators from their state, and to their representative. If you do not know who he is, make inquiry. Remember, there must be two of each, one for the senator, and one for the representative, place in separate envelopes, and address them to Washington, D. C. Let us make such a showing on these important questions, that they must heed the cry.

I have been trying to secure the appointment of women inspectors in New York harbor, to meet and care for unprotected girls coming over in the first and second cabins and landing at the steamers' docks uncared for. Senator Penrose, of Pennsylvania, received my suggestions most heartily, and gave me a letter of introduction and endorsement to Commissioner Williams at Ellis Island. The commissioner general also approved, but noted several hindrances in the way. Yesterday I was fortunate in being able to secure an audience with President Roosevelt, who, when the matter was laid before him responded immediately, and in my presence dictated a letter to the Secretary of the Treasury to have women appointed as inspectors as soon as possible, to meet and care for these girls.

Upon my thanking him for his promptness and willingness to help, he replied, "No, I thank you for calling my attention to the subject, and giving me an opportunity to do something practical."

The New Canteen Bill.

57TH CONGRESS. 2d Session. H. R. 16328.

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

JANUARY 5, 1903.

Mr. PARKER introduced the following bill, which was referred to the Committee on Military Affairs and ordered to be printed.

A BILL

To restore the sale of fermented malt beverages and light wines to soldiers on army transports and in post exchanges under regulations to be prescribed by the Secretary of War.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That section seventeen of the Act entitled "An Act for increasing the efficiency of the Army of the United States, and for other purposes," approved March second, eighteen hundred and ninety-nine, and section thirty-eight of an Act entitled "An Act to increase the efficiency of the permanent military establishment of the United States," approved February second, nineteen hundred and one, be, and the same are hereby, repealed.

SEC. 2. That fermented malt beverages and light wines, but no ardent spirits, may be sold in post exchanges and on transports under regulations to be prescribed by the Secretary of War.

Improvements in the Canteen.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 12.—Under the army appropriation act, approved June 30, 1902, there was appropriated, "For the construction, equipment and maintenance of suitable buildings at military posts and stations for the conduct of the post exchange, school, library, reading, lunch, amusement rooms and gymnasium, to be expended in the discretion and under the direction of the Secretary of War, five hundred thousand dollars."

Inasmuch as there are over one hundred military posts and stations at which a building of the character described is needed, and as a very few such buildings could be erected with the sum appropriated, the War Department found itself confronted with a serious problem in the determination of which of these hundred or more posts should be selected. Accordingly the department commanders were called upon for reports as to the comparative needs of the posts in their respective departments, and it was not until about the 1st of November that all department commanders had reported. On the 12th of November a board of officers consisting of Maj. Gen. Young, Brig. Gen. Carter and Maj. John T. French, Jr., of the quartermaster's department was appointed by the Secretary of War to examine these reports and recommendations of department commanders and recommend the posts at which these buildings should be constructed, and the amount to be allotted to the construction of each.

Although the total of the amount asked was double the amount of the appropriation, Gen. Young's board has carefully considered the more pressing needs of the larger posts, and has made its recommendations accordingly. The secretary of war has approved the report. It has recommended an allotment of $125,000 to establish at Fort Myer, Va., a gymnasium, comprising a gymnasium proper, shooting gallery, bowling alleys, swimming pool, shower baths, toilet rooms, lockers and rooms for instructors, for use as offices and examining rooms; the structure to be of brick and to conform in style to that of other important buildings of the post.

Among other items of allotment are: Twenty-five thousand dollars for Plattsburg barracks, New York; $20,000 for Fort Thomas, Kentucky; $25,000 for Columbus barracks, Ohio; $50,000 for the Presidio, San Francisco; $40,000 for Fort Leavenworth, Kansas; $25,000 for Fort Riley, Kansas; $50,000 for Vancouver barracks, Washington; $25,000 for Fort Snelling, Minnesota; $50,000 for Fort Logan, Colorado, and $20,000 for Fort Clark, Texas. Of the total appropriation $65,000 remains, which probably will be expended in buildings at Fort Hancock and Fort Monroe, under plans drawn by the Young Men's Christian Association.

New Administrations in Maine.

Gertrude Stevens Leavitt, Correspondent.

PORTLAND, Me., Jan. 12.—As the New Year comes in much interest is felt on all sides as to the future enforcement of the prohibitory law, as at this time new sheriffs in each county enter upon their duties. Of the sixteen men who begin the work of sheriff ten are new incumbents.

Sheriff Lawlis, of Aroostook county, has given notice to the liquor men of his determination to enforce the law against their business. Sheriff Ham, of Kennebec county, has likewise declared himself, saying that during the campaign preceding election he promised to enforce all laws, with special reference to prohibition.

Sheriff Whitcomb, of Hancock, from whom the temperance folk had little to expect, is falling into line, and Bar Harbor and Ellsworth are said to be "dryer" than for years before.

Rev. Sheriff Cummings, of Androscoggin, was elected on a strict enforcement issue, so we know what to expect from him, likewise Sheriff Lang, of Somerset.

As is generally known, Cumberland county's enforcement candidate was defeated and William Pennell chosen in his place.

Mr. Pennell has been very quiet in his manner and careful in his utterances, and has thereby earned the name of "William the Silent," but the predictions that rum shops in Portland would open on Jan. 1 are not as yet verified, whatever may be the case later.

Ruin Homes in Saloon War.

LA GRANGE, Ind., Jan. 7.—Assassination, wrecking of homes with dynamite, assaults by mobs and a general reign of terror have followed the victorious war of the Anti-Saloon League against the saloons of the town of Winslow. Arthur White of Princeton, a prominent league worker, was assassinated while changing cars at Hazleton. A hidden foe shot him five times as he stood on the station platform.

John McConnell's residence, which was partly destroyed by dynamite last Wednesday, was blown up last night. McConnell was assaulted this morning by a drunken mob and Lawrence Goff, the town marshal, was seriously injured by unidentified assailants while he was trying to make an arrest.

F. J. Fenton's drug store has been blown up with dynamite. The explosion was so heavy that all surrounding buildings were partly wrecked.

Through the efforts of the Anti-Saloon League all the dramshops have been driven out of the township. The saloon-keepers and a portion of the residents want to restore the saloons, but the league and its friends are preventing the issuance of licenses. Meanwhile the reign of terror continues. The marshal has sworn in a large number of deputies, but he finds it difficult to keep order. Citizens who are promiennt in the work of the league have surrounded their homes with armed guards, who remain on duty night and day.

To Wipe Out All Saloons.

BRAZIL, Ind., Jan. 1.—A desperate fight is being waged in Perry township, this county, between the Anti-Saloon League and the liquor element, and the affair is being fought out before the county commissioners here this week. The league filed a blanket remonstrance against every saloon in Perry township, and the remonstrance contained sufficient signatures to wipe out all saloons in that township. When the remonstrance was called for a few days ago it was missing. The league charges that its opponents stole the paper. It put forces in the field and to-day filed a new and larger remonstrance than the one that is missing.

"Drys" Expect Easy Victory.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, Jan. 6.—An election under the Beal law will be held in Nottingham, January 29.

A petition asking for the election came before the village council, Monday night. There were 120 names attached to the petition, though but 92 were needed.

Three of the members voted to have the election January 22. The other three wanted it a week later. Mayor John Austin finally broke the tie by voting for January 29.

There were 230 votes cast in Nottingham at the last election. The "drys" expect to win with a number of votes to spare.

Prohibition Fight in Grayson.

SHERMAN, Texas, Jan. 3.—At a meeting of the Pastors' Association of Sherman to-day that body unanimously voted off services at all churches tomorrow evening, and instead will participate in a union prohibition service. The prohibition campaign is now in full swing. A regular speaker has begun the canvass of the county and has already made several speeches in Sherman. The election is called for February.

Closes Beer Gardens.

Mayor Harrison, of Chicago, has revoked the liquor licenses of the Edelweiss Gardens, Wollschlag, Griesbach and Goedcke, all of which have saloons connected with them in the vicinity of Cottage Grove avenue and Fifty-first street. This action of the city executive temporarily settles the controversy between the saloon element and the Hyde Park Protective Association.

Resubmission Talk in Kansas.

Mrs. Sena Hartzell Wallace, Correspondent.

KANSAS CITY, Kans., Jan. 12.—All the temperance forces of the state are being arrayed against the threatened attack on the prohibitory law.

There is no doubt of the loyalty of the people of Kansas, but we fear the influence of men and money from abroad, of the brewers and their ilk, who tell us that "Prohibition don't prohibit." Under prohibition more than one-half the jails and poor houses are practically without any inmates during a considerable portion of the year!

If prohibition does not prohibit, why such secrecy as the restaurant keeper of Ottawa practiced. When his restaurant was raided Dec. 30 the officers found bottles of whisky hidden in bed springs. In this same city lately a beautiful and intelligent girl 15 years old entered one of the churches in an intoxicated condition. The members of the church are determined to find the parties who are furnishing liquors to boys and girls in that neighborhood.

Mr. William Atkins, of this city, is interesting himself in the passage of a parole bill by the legislature.

The State Teachers Association, which met in Topeka last week, passed the following resolution:

"Resolved, that the time has not come for Kansas to take any backward step in the temperance movement. We believe that the interests of the school, the home and of society in general, demand that the saloon should be entirely suppressed."

In Coffeyville an Anti-Joint League has been organized, which leads the South Kansas Tribune to say: "If the citizens of any town in the state make up their minds to close the joints they can do it."

There now seems to be a prospect of a grand jury for Kansas City. Great indignation is expressed by citizens because of the franchise that the city council allowed the Metropolitan Street Railway Company. About two years ago the council, under the leadership of ex-Mayor Marshman, was prevented from passing a less objectionable ordinance than the one just passed, by citizens crowding into the council chamber whenever the council would convene. When this last ordinance came before the council, the chamber was so filled that there was no room for the citizen and taxpayer.

Perhaps you wonder what all this has to do with temperance reform? Only this: So incensed are the people that many who were opposed to the grand jury are now ready to work and vote for it. And Judge Fischer, of the District Court, who has twice turned down a petition secured by the prohibition element, on some technicality, now says that he will grant the petition.

A Forward Movement.

Mrs. Jennie M Kemp, Correspondent.

LE LOUP, Kan., Jan. 12.—The Kansas W. C. T. U. is engaged in one of the most skilfully planned and energetically carried out forward movements of its history. Through the daily press the recently elected Democratic representative of the rum-cursed county and city of Atchison has given notice that, on the opening day of the state legislature, which convenes Jan. 12, he will introduce a resubmission resolution.

Mrs. E. P. Hutchinson.

The W. C. T. U. is the largest and most thoroughly organized temperance society in the state. The general officers have sent a ringing letter to each local union, asking for the immediate circulation of anti-resubmission petitions It is the intention to meet the introduction of the resubmission resolution in the legislature by the anti-resubmission petitions with 20,000 or more signatures.

The pastors throughout the state are being invited to preach sermons urging better law enforcement. After the sermon a rising vote is asked of those who favor prohibition and its strict enforcement. The methods employed in Hutchinson, the home union of our state president, Mrs. E. P. Hutchinson, are typical of the thorough work being carried on all over the state. This union has hired two men to canvass the city for signatures to the petition. It will present the matter in the churches; the Y. is appealing to each of the young people's societies.

Mrs. S. H. Wallace, state lecturer and organizer, is just commencing a month's campaign in the Sixth district. Mrs. Wallace is an energetic worker, and new unions and members are reported whenever she is afield.

California's New Year Blessings.

Lou M. Young, Correspondent.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Jan. 5:—Since the National Convention, the state president has done effective work in Santa Barbara and Los Angeles counties, and the field secretary, Mrs. Mary G. Tangier, has helped sixteen counties in northern California. We have many encouragements for the new year. A new Y of sixty members at Gardent. A down-town rest-room opened by the Santa Ana union. Central Y of Los Angeles has new headquarters at 316½ S.Broadway. A course of motherhood lectures for the San Jacinto women by Dr. Strosser. A new union at Lompoc with fifty-three active and ten honorary members.

As a result of the recent vote of Los Angeles county, 31 out of 54 election precincts voted prohibition.

At Los Angeles city election these two important amendments to city charter were carried by large majorities: First, if the council refuses to pass a law which the majority of the people desire, the voters take the matter into their own hands and secure its adoption at the polls.

Second—Employes of the city are to be selected for fitness and capacity to do the work instead of the present spoils system.

The N. Pasadena social club was found guilty of illegally selling liquor; a great victory for the temperance element. This club was composed of 180 members. The jury only took ten minutes, and one ballot to reach a verdict, but four days was needed to hear the evidence. All this is due to District Attorney Fredericks and Constable Wallace. Maine is not the only state that has officials who respect their oath of office. Attorney Fredericks said in his plea, "On Hallowe'en night sixteen boys in their teens chipped in about $1 to buy booze. When they drank it they smashed the bottles." The broken "dead soldiers" were used as evidence. Only bits of broken glass, "but what do these bits of broken glass mean? They mean the downfall of at least one of those sixteen youths who took his first glass of whisky that night. It is your duty, gentlemen, to make the social clubs look like that glass."

The principal fight at the charter election, centered around the clause, granting hotels the right to serve liquors to guests; only 229 votes were cast in favor and 408 opposed.

Prohibition increases population in Southern California. San Bernardino (license) increased in population in ten years (one-half of which is due to extension of city limits) 2,000.

Redlands and Riverside (prohibition), 3,000 and 3,300 respectively. People want to raise their children where they are safe. Arrests for drunkenness: San Bernardino, 400; Redlands, 47; Riverside, 52. The arrests in the latter were largely men who came from other towns and brought their liquor with them.

Signs of Activity in Delaware.

Lila Wilson Aron, Correspondent.

WYOMING Del., Jan. 10.—The union at Hockessin has had several of the National workers in the field and they feel that it has been the cause of extra effort on the part of their members. They have taken up seven departments of work and each superintendent is interested.

Madam Barakat visited North-End union, gave a delightful lecture and gained for them thirteen new members. She also spoke at Townsend to the largest audience they have had for years and gained two new members.

Madam Barakat is spending a week in Smyrna, from which they are expecting a rich harvest.

World's Temperance Sunday was observed in Camden and Wyoming, also in Milton, and I presume by most of the unions in the state, although they have not reported. A temperance rally meeting was held in Farmington M. E. church with a good audience, chiefly composed of men.

A temperance convention was held in Dover, December 18, at which time "The State Temperance Alliance' was formed. It is a non-partisan organization, the W. C. T. U. having a part, whose purpose it is to get sufficient signers to petition the legislature for a right to let voters say whether we shall have license or not.

The Situation in Vermont.

Mary S. Morgan, Correspondent.

WILMINGTON, Vt., Jan. 12.—The temperance people of this long-time prohibition state, who want to see the high license, local option bill defeated by the referendum vote on February 3 are now entering upon the work of a well-planned campaign. The Anti-Saloon League is sending speakers through the state and doubtless other temperance organizations are in the field. The W. C. T. U. is diligently at work. Mrs. Ida H. Read, state president, was expecting to speak in some of the towns, but the serious illness of a sister has called her away temporarily. Mrs. A. F. Smith, president of Bennington county, is filling some of her appointments.

The National W. C. T. U. is sending five of its best speakers to assist in the campaign. Mrs. Hoffman, of Missouri, is now doing valiant work in the northern counties. Mrs. L. M. N. Stevens and Miss Gordon set aside other pressing work to come to our aid during this month. Mrs. Katharine L. Stevenson, of Massachusetts, leaves her own state work and will assist in the southern counties, and Mrs. Callie H. Howe returns from her home in Missouri to help the right to win. Bennington county and part of Windham county will be favored in having her as speaker. Many mass meetings are to be held throughout the state and written invitations are extended to voters to attend. Special effort will be made to reach the people in the rural districts. Plans are laid to influence every voter, either by public addresses, personal visitation, or written communication. The W. C. T. U. of one town in the southern part of the state is sending written appeals to the voters to come to the center of the town February 3 and vote "No" on the referendum.

Apostle Smoot Not Wanted.

The following protest against the election of Mr. Reed Smoot, the Mormon Apostle to the United States Senate, has been sent to the members of the Utah Legislature by the National Woman's Christian Temperance Union:

National W. C. T. U. Headquarters,
The Willard. Evanston. Ill.,
Jan. 10, 1903.

To the Members of the Legislature of Utah:

We, the National Woman's Christian Temperance Union, representing 300,000 women, protest against the election of Apostle Smoot to the United States Senate, not because he belongs to the Mormon church, but

FIRST—Because he is the candidate of the church and under its control. The fact that he could not become a candidate without the consent of the quorum of Apostles leads us to believe that he would not be free to act on vital matters of legislation contrary to their wishes and dictation.

SECOND—We believe that his official connection in the church will make him unacceptable to the United States Senate and to the people in general, and we appeal to the members of the Legislature of Utah to see that their state is represented in the Federal government by a legislator who will adequately represent the whole state, rather than one particular church.

We offer this protest in the interests of good government and for the honor of the growing state of Utah.

For and in behalf of the National W. C. T. U.

LILLIAN M. N. STEVENS,
President National W. C. T. U.
SUSANNA M. D. FRY,
Corresponding Secretary W. C. T. U.

The above is quite conservative in comparison with some of the reasons published by the Ministerial Association of Utah. In their protest they say, in part:

"We protest against the election of a man as our representative who belongs to the quorum of Twelve Mormon High Priests, whose unanimous vote must be accepted by their co-religionists as the voice of God.

"We protest against this endeavor to elect Apostle Smoot to the United States Senate as an endeavor to force upon the citizens of Utah a union of the Church and the State. As a consistent member of the Mormon Apostolate Apostle Smoot cannot make an important move without getting permission or taking counsel of the quorum of Mormon High Priests to which he belongs. By virtue of his apostolic vows he must act first as a Mormon Apostle, and second or third as a citizen of Utah and patriotic American.

"We protest against the proposed election of Apostle Smoot to the United States Senate because the majority of the Mormon Apostolate to which he belongs and with which he works in harmony, are living in polygamous relation, in violation of convenants made to the people of the United States, as well as in violation of the criminal statutes of Utah. The two or three Apostles who may be living monogamous lives, are obliged to defend the righteousness of the polygamous system of marriage, and to wink at the law-breaking polygamous relations of their Apostles. The Mormon Apostolate stands as one man before this community, as directly or indirectly encouraging or conniving at the continuance of polygamous relations through the Mormon church. The vigorous and rigorous execution of a law like the Edmunds-Tucker law, in this state would drive the president of the Mormon church and the majority of his Apostles into exile or throw them into prison within twelve months; and Apostle Smoot dare not oppose such polygamous conditions."

Discuss City's Vice.

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah, Jan. 1.—The committee of citizens organized by the Woman's Christian Temperance union to arrange a mass meeting of citizens for the purpose of protesting against the criminal and immoral conditions that exist in Salt Lake held a meeting yesterday afternoon in the office of Manager H. G. Whitney of the Deseret News. The situation was carefully discussed, and after being in session for about one hour the committee adjourned until Saturday morning at 10:30. Nothing was given out as to what took place at the meeting, but it was announced that representatives of the Ministerial Association will be invited to attend the committee meeting Saturday, and at that time a date will be definitely fixed for the citizens' mass meeting.

The movement for a special grand jury to investigate conditions will gain an impetus to-day, with the return of E. B. Critchlow from an out of town trip. Mr. Critchlow will circulate the petition among prominent citizens to-morrow and rush the matter into court at as early a date as possible.

The Fundamental Need of Humane Education.

By Mary F. Lovell.

THOUGH there is much philanthropy which does not anticipate, dealing only with results, there is encouragement in the fact that thinkers upon social problems are searching for what produces them, and that they begin to realize the unprofitableness of the merely unbenevolent as well as that of the criminal; that even passive selfishness works its proportion of evil, and that the same causes which produce the unbenevolent individual, may, under slightly altered conditions, produce the criminal.

Education which trains the intellect while neglecting the cultivation of the sensibilities, is coming to be regarded as crude, and deficient in the vital element. The initial steps in the development of the sensibilities are so obvious that the humane idea is gaining a settled and permanent place. Several of the United States have already passed laws prescribing humane teaching in their public schools. There is reason to think that the trend of public opinion is towards approval of the general endorsement of such laws, but it must be the congenial task of the lovers of reform to secure this legislation and make of it a living force.

Those who give the subject of humane education only superficial attention are prone to consider but one of its aspects—that of the kind treatment of animals. Kind treatment of them is a sure result, but the serious thinker on the great human problem foresees and presently observes another and greater result: a reaction on the character such as the originators of the idea perhaps but dimly presaged. To point out to a child that because animals, like ourselves, can suffer, they, like ourselves, should be spared as much suffering as possible, is to furnish him with an analogy and a principle of action which he can widely and constantly apply. To show him that the mental limitations of the animal give another reason why a being gifted with reflective power should exercise patience in dealing with other beings less favored, is also to teach him to reason inductively—though it may be unconsciously—on the same basis in his future dealings with defective humanity. To show him that the uncertainty which shrouds the future of the animal is a reason, though it be not the chief one, for making its earthly span as little of a curse as may be, is to present to the child a rule of conduct much excelling that of those who do not "regard the life of the beast" because they deem it so ephemeral.

To omit to instill into the child, through his contact with the animal world, the principles of justice, mercy, and love, is to lose the golden opportunity. A friend of the writer one day saw from her window several children tormenting a kitten. For a consideration she secured its transfer to her keeping and invited the children to call on her in a week and see how the kitten would then look. They came, were given a little treat, and were so impressed by the kitten's changed appearance on that occasion and on subsequent visits that they became as active in kindness as they had formerly been in cruelty. One judicious act thus served to give a new motive to these children's lives.

A teacher in charge of some rough and cruel youths in a public school in San Francisco, in her perplexity organized in the school a Band of Mercy, which she induced the boys to join. In due time a marked change was noticed. The former torturers of animals were now their protectors from the cruelty of others, and were found to be devising plans to assist a needy man.

A lady employed for the purpose by the Women's Pennsylvania S. P. C. A., in Philadelphia, formed a Band of Mercy in one of the worst districts of that city. At first disorder reigned, but the wise instructress, after exercising much tact with the ringleader, a quite notorious youth, was rewarded by seeing him converted into a stanch and faithful helper.

A boy in a school in West Washington, who, in the previous term in another school had been set down as incorrigible, became attentive and courteous to his teacher and kindly and helpful among his playmates after he had been trained only two weeks in friendly study of animal life. Hundreds of similar illustrations could be given to prove the value and need of humane education. The writer, with opportunities for information extending over many years, has yet to hear of a lack of good results when faithful, patient work is done.

But the standard of instruction must be high in every sense. Nothing shocking to the sensibilities should ever be told to a child. Enlarge to any extent on the kindly virtues and ways of exercising them, but never on their opposite vices. All that is revolting should be carefully excluded. It is not even necessary, the knowledge being unimportant, to describe in detail, as is so often done, the ways in which man turns to account the different parts of the animal carcass. The living animal, his needs and characteristics, his relation to man and man's responsibility towards him, are right topics. The value of the innumerable services rendered by beasts, birds, etc., should often be mentioned and the right inference suggested, thus fostering the virtue of gratitude.

Mrs. Rachel Fox of Denver, Colo., a Mercy Prize Winner.

This teaching need not take much of the time usually given to other topics, but can be given largely through reading lessons and as a part of the periodical miscellaneous exercises common in schools, but it should be given with certainty and regularity. It will not fail to interest the pupils. Nature study, directed by a humane teacher, also affords opportunities; but care should be taken that it may not foster cruelty and disregard of life.

There are few vices or crimes which do not contain the element of cruelty. To teach the law of kindness is, therefore, to weaken the tendency to vice and crime in general, and never can it be done so effectively as in early youth. It should begin in infancy, for even an infant can unconsciously inflict much suffering, and not unfrequently death, on the creatures given for its amusement by a fond and unthinking mother. Such thoughtlessness is as culpable as it is common, for wrong habits become in time vicious characteristics.

Humane education has been tried long enough and extensively enough both here and in Europe to place its benefits beyond the uncertainty of theory or surmise. As the world's enlightenment increases, compulsory education grows more and more in favor. How can we afford to dispense with humane education which cultivates the higher sensibilities, and is a known and tried preventive of crime?

As a stimulus to effort, let us figure to ourselves some of the changes in social conditions which will ensue when among civilized nations common education is compulsory and humane teaching an inevitable part of every child's training. The practice of kindness to every living creature results in gentler conduct, less thought for self, more thought for others, more general obedience to rule; in short, in improved conduct in all the relations of life. The natural outcome is philanthropy, the fullest development of the altruistic spirit. The conflict between capital and labor is a great problem, and nothing but the growth of the altruistic spirit will solve it.

It is the crimes of cruelty perpetually committed which make the hideous places of the earth and which darken the lives of those who labor for their extinction. Such a crime is the betrayal of women. An early training in the exercise of justice and compassion is the reasonable and obvious preventive.

The haggard wife and starving children of the drunkard tell a tale of cruelty if ever one were told. But will the man who was specially and systematically trained in his early years to "be kind to every living creature" be the one who afterward decides to get his very living by injuring many? The great crime of murder is a crime of cruelty, and humane education is the sovereign remedy. Murders will cease as humane education advances. Investigation shows that most deliberate murderers begin their evil careers by cruelty to animals.

The growth of altruism is already such as to make war seem a strange and horrible anachronism. But the signs of its cessation are not even now altogether wanting. How surely would the prevalence of humane education bring the era of peace!

Atrocities are committed in the name of medical science not only upon animals, but upon poor and defenseless patients in hospitals. Humane education will never enlighten the minds and soften the hearts of those who have sunk to the depth of doing these deeds, but it can and will so touch other hearts that strong public sentiment, if not law, will eventually put an end to such works of darkness.

Let us imagine if we can, the elimination of these and other crimes of cruelty—some of them are too hideous for our thought or mention—and we can then see the possibility that this world might become the scene of serene and simple happiness, not the sad arena of conflict, suffering and fear. For love can transform all life. Why not will to make the dream a truth? Nothing good is impossible. Our Utopian visions fail only because we fail in the effort to materialize them. Much is said and written now of the power of thought. Let us think high thoughts, altruistic thoughts, and then patiently plod the lowly, simple, prosaic path which leads to their realization. So shall we find our little world of peace, in which the higher self, the Immortal Thinker, may forever dwell; and, laboring not for reward, yet always find it, for the lowly path leads upward, even to the dwelling-place of God.

Glenside, Pa.

Special Offer: The Union Signal for ten weeks for ten cent.

The Danger of Moderate Drinking.

By Cordelia A. Greene, M. D.

IN a medical experience which has extended over more than a half century, I have never known one instance where harm has come to man or woman as a consequence of total abstinence from alcoholics. I have known the diseases, unnatural desire for alcoholics fixed for life upon the brain in many cases of noble men and beautiful women by the very moderate extended use of the purest wines, whisky, brandies, and ales. I have never known an instance where after a few months even of the moderate use of the purest alcoholics the nervous system and the tissues of the body did not become less healthful and deteriorated in quality of structure and action.

The man or woman using the purest fermented wines and alcoholics with the belief that he or she is benefited by such use is mistaken; seriously, dangerously so. The diseased alcohol habit is always fixed before the subject is at all aware of it, and it is even more subtle, binding and harmful than the desire for opium, morphine, cocaine or hashesh.

Castile, N. Y.

THE TWENTY-NINTH CRUSADE ANNIVERSARY

BY MRS. COTTON MATHER.

AN oriental legend relates that a prince brought a tent to his father in a walnut shell. The king took it out and began to unfold it. It covered the king and his counselors; it covered the royal household; it covered the general and his army; it covered the kingdom; it covered the whole world. It was Christianity; God was the Father, and the prince was Jesus Christ. The kingdoms of this world shall become the kingdoms of our Lord.

This fancy is fitly typical of the great W. C. T. U. movement, the outgrowth of the little band of praying women, the seventy who in a spirit of love, devotion and self-sacrifice went forth that December morning twenty-nine years ago. Less than a generation has passed since this great movement had its birth, and lo, what hath God wrought! The W. C. T. U. white-ribboners encircle the globe.

These seventy who builded better than they knew, and

"Organized for doing good
The world's united womanhood," represent the divine endeavor of Christian women to rescue the tempted and perishing.

On Tuesday afternoon, December 23, 1902, the local W. C. T. U., with a few friends, assembled in the Crusade Memorial Rooms in the beautiful new Presbyterian church of Hillsboro, O., to celebrate the twenty-ninth anniversary of the Crusade and witness the unveiling of the portrait of Mrs. Eliza Jane Trimble Thompson, "the Crusade Mother," so finely executed by her gifted daughter, Mrs. Mary McArthur Tuttle.

The president of the day, Mrs. E. L. Ferris, the granddaughter of the Crusade vice-president, Mrs. Sallie McDowell, and Mrs. Rebecca Arthur, the faithful secretary, were in the official chairs.

After Scripture reading by Mrs. Ferris the Rev. R. D. Lichlider, of the Baptist church, offered a fervent prayer, the keynote of which was "Courageous hearts and loyalty to duty."

A beautiful trio, violin, flute and piano, was then executed by Mrs. Rives, Miss Detwiler and Mr. Thompson. Then followed the presentation of the portrait of "Mother" Thompson, the gift of the National W. C. T. U. to the Crusade Memorial Room. National and state officers, national superintendents, organizers, lecturers and evangelists contributed.

Rev. S. O. Royal, D. D., of the Methodist Episcopal church, who made the presentation, said in part:

SISTERS, FRIENDS AND MOTHERS OF THE WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION:—He would be a stoic indeed who would fail to appreciate the honor and take no pride in performing the office now appointed me. At this shrine and at this moment of anniversary, speech seems well nigh a desecration, and thoughtful silence more becoming. At the Bethlehem of an impulse which called a nation's womanhood away from patient tears to heroic action; at the birthplace of a movement destined to be world-wide in its reach, deep as the centuries in its influence and broad as human suffering in its sympathies, our voices are subdued by a holy awe, which stifles rather than assists utterance. Were not this task placed upon me by others, I should yield to an impulse to beg pardon for disturbing your meditations and the recollections which gush forth spontaneously in this memorial room.

Surrounded by mementoes of value and meaning, we are now to add another more precious than them all. Veiled at this moment from our view is a portrait of Mrs. Eliza J. Thompson, "Mother of the Crusade." Concerning it let me say two or three things.

Who that has eyes to see and a mind to think can escape the spell of a master-painter's witchery? By the deft placing of vari-colored pigments a plain surface receives depth here and prominence there; by a cunning arrangement of lights and shadows a meaningless canvas is made to speak, to smile, to follow you with intelligent gaze. No wonder that "in the elder days of art" painters wrought with reverent care; that some of them knelt while they worked; that their most frequent themes were devout; nor that the masterpieces of genius are housed in the temples of a world's worship. Here you shall presently see a canvas to whose value time shall render a compound interest. And this value will be forever enhanced by the fact that each stroke was placed by a daughter's loving hand as well as by an artist's careful skill.

"Mother" Thompson.

Here, too, will you see a portraiture of character. To one who has mind-sight added to eye-sight here is a pictured biography. Intelligence and courage, firmness and tact, patience and a large sense of humor, a charity for men and faith in God, are as plainly visible as if a Dickens or a Boswell had taken a thousand pages to describe them. Here is an open book on grandeur of character which later generations can read after she and we have vanished from sight.

Here, too, is an epic of achievement. The finest monuments of the past are not the statues which men carve, not the bronzes which bear their epitaphs, but the deeds which they have done. The elements bite away the granite monolith and fires melt the brass memorial. Earth's finest temples are now in ruins, and others are crumbling, but the deeds of heroes are living stones built into immortal temples. Hoary wrong that with defiant hardihood rises ever and anon to oppose only adds strength and glory to the achievements of heroes. This portrait will tell not merely who once lived here and how one of the brave band of "Crusaders" looked, but more eloquently will it recount what was here done. It will record no short-lived victory, greeted with the shoutings of a capricious populace. It will tell rather of a triumph at the first doubtful, tardy, partial; of its progress, slow as the glacier, but as resistless; and if I may be prophetic, it will tell how it grew to an avalanche, until by the weight of woman's prayers, of woman's intelligence, and of woman's will, it swept the world's greatest wrong into oblivion.

Rev. Henry N. Faulconer.

Rev. S. O. Royal.

In the name of the officers of the National Woman's Christian Temperance Union this work of art, this story of beautiful character and brave leadership, this epic in color of a vast moral movement, I present to the custody of this church for a place among the furnishings and memorials of this historic room.

The unveiling by Rev. S. O. Royal followed, and we looked upon the beautiful face, so exquisitely reproduced by loving fingers, the face of the gracious lady who shall be known in white ribbon annals through the long hereafter as "a noble type of good, heroic womanhood."

The legal deed of acceptance by the church officials was read by Rev. H. N. Faulconer, the pastor, who then felicitously and forcefully accepted the beautiful gift, and paid loyal homage to the Crusade Mother and her co-workers, the central thought being that God had entrusted to woman, a child of God, grown by His grace, a movement that will never die.

After the singing of the Crusade Psalm, "Give to the winds thy fears," friends near and familiar brought affection's immortelles, and broke the alabaster box of precious ointment in Crusade memories.

Mrs. Thompson was unable to be present, her elder daughter, Mrs. Marie T. Rives, of sweet and gentle mein, gave utterance to the following tender tribute:

"When the National president of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union and Miss Gordon were our guests last March, the first thing they observed in the parlor was the portrait of my mother, which they pronounced a perfect likeness and a beautiful piece of art. Today, by order of the National Woman's Christian Temperance Union—for every state has contributed—and by the courtesy of the pastor, Rev. H. N. Faulconer, and the official board, the picture is to hang upon the walls of the Crusade Memorial Room. We hope and believe that before many months another sweet face will look out from these walls—that of Mrs. General McDowell. These two workers must have looked earnestly into each other's faces in those early Crusade days, when they kneeled on the icy pavements of Hillsboro and gave to 'the winds their fears.' Now that Hillsboro stands upon the heights of answered prayer, let them look peacefully into each other's faces from these sacred walls!

"You cannot expect me to say much today. What can a child say of a loving, devoted mother, except on bended knee to thank God for her? When we think of what these leaders have done for the world we thank God for the wonderful growth of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, and what it has done for the uplifting of humanity,

"But, dear friends, I want to say something to you, today, sisters of the white ribbon, and dear Hillsboro friends. From the depths of my heart I thank you for your constant appreciation of my mother's work. Never a birthday or any anniversary passes but our home is fragrant with flowers and kind greetings; and now that mother is much in her room, every day comes some cheerful, kind message from many friends. So today let us thank God for the temperance work and victories, for this Memorial Room, built as firmly in stone as the principle it represents, and for the sacred treasures it contains.'

Mrs. Lizzie A. Harsha, whose loyalty to the temperance cause is unfaltering, with characteristic fervor spoke of the nearness of the anniversary dates of the birth of the movement and that of our Savior, alike for the uplifting of sinful and sorrowing humanity.

After prayer by Mrs. Moses Calvert, one stanza of the "Battle Hymn of the Republic" was sung from printed slips, the souvenir gift of Mrs. Thompson. A telegram from Miss Anna Gordon was read, and the doxology and the benediction by Rev. S. O. Royal followed.

Thus was marked the twenty-ninth milestone in Hillsboro, the "Cradle of the Crusade."

Hillsboro, Ohio.

Answer. By Isabella Howe Fiske.

I PRAYED: "Lord, make me strong on earth;
I would help the weak one's need."
He spoke: "Who art thou to be judged of worth?
Who art thou that thou shouldst succeed?
I will grant thee failure, make thee weak,
Conscious of sin." "And then?"
I asked, and heard His answer speak,
"Christ chiefly loved such men."

Wellesley Farms, Mass.

A Fight Against Odds

By Kate Anderson

(Copyright applied for.)

Chapter II.

SYNOPSIS OF CHAPTER I.

[Mr. Kilgour, a railway conductor, is killed in the wreck of his train caused by the blunder of a drunken engineer. His son Ralph takes a position as clerk in a hotel and the second son, Willie, is offered the place of assistant, but refuses from a nameless fear of having anything to do with the "thing" that caused his father's death. Claude is the youngest son, a fine boy of twelve, the pride of the family. Allie is the only daughter. All the children loyally consp re to keep the home for their mother.]

SOMEHOW it reached the ears of old Mrs. Wilson, a neighbor, that Willie Kilgour had refused a position offered him by the city magnate because of his temperance principles—which the reader knows was not a precisely correct account of the matter. However, this news gladdened the heart of the good old lady, who was prominent in the very struggling and little appreciated local W. C. T. U., and she lost no time in imparting the intelligence to several of her sisters in the work.

Thus it came around to the ears of the Methodist minister, and Willie suddenly found himself, without apparent cause, the subject of special friendliness and cordiality from the church members.

The Baptist minister's wife, who was president of the union, called on his mother, and cornered him while she talked sweetly and earnestly on many things. Mrs. Maxwell, wife of a prominent Presbyterian elder, and an enthusiastic temperance worker, stopped him on the street to shake hands with him and invite him to a young people's rally to be held at her home. Mr. Drake, the "pillar" among the Methodists, suddenly discovered that he needed a young man in his big furniture warerooms during the slack summer season, and engaged Willie at a good salary and a commission on all carpet sales.

Willie, with his quick sympathies and ardent nature, especially softened and responsive in his grief, soon found himself forming new friendships, new interests, new views of life far different from those of the careless past.

Need it be told that ere many weeks had passed the boy had found his Savior and was rejoicing in a wonder of divine bliss in sins forgiven and a heart cleansed?

In August a blow fell on the Kilgour family group. Claude the brilliant, Claude the seemingly invincible, had failed in his examination. In vain were the lists scanned for the missing name. It was not there.

"Some mistake," observed Ralph; "the kid never failed. Why, it was the easiest half of the two-part 'exam' which he took. He could almost have taken the entire course in a year if we had let him. No trouble for him to learn anything."

In one sense Claude's failure was not regarded as a serious matter. The child was barely thirteen years old and had plenty of time before him, but it was a sore shock to their confident pride in the boy.

However, the lists were confirmed by the principal, who called the next day with Claude's report, showing a wretched failure in arithmetic and physics, with very low marks on the other subjects.

Of course, Claude received nothing but love and sympathy from his family. It was true, as his mother said, that Claude had not been himself for several months. He had taken his father's death terribly hard; indeed, the boy had given way to an almost unnatural abandonment of grief. For a time it had seemed that his very mind would give way to a half-crazed frenzy of horror and despair. This caused the family much anxiety.

One night, about a week after the terrible event, while his mother was trying to soothe him from a troubled slumber into quiet sleep, he suddenly started up and threw his arms round her neck, sobbing:

"Oh, mamma, mamma, if I had only been a good boy! Oh, if I had only always been good—even a little bit good."

"Claude, darling, you have always been a good boy; your dear father always said so, and he was right. All boys are more or less naughty, but, dearie, you have nothing very bad to feel much remorse about. You never wilfully tried to grieve either papa or me, did you, dear—or deceive us in any way?"

Claude turned over with a heart-rending moan, and his mother kept her vigil by his bedside till morning.

After a fortnight the delirious violence of his grief subsided, but he was no more the old sunshiny Claude. He became moody and irritable, at odd times giving way to uncontrollable bursts of grief, or even temper. He would come down to breakfast with swollen eyes and puffy features, displaying little or no appetite for the dainties with which that excellent cook, his mother, endeavored to tempt his palate, and he appeared to lose much of the superabundant vitality which is a characteristic of mischievous, healthy boyhood.

Never had Claude been known to shirk a task. He had always been eager to do a double share in any little work about the house. It had been a common saying, "There is not a lazy hair in Claude's head." Now he forgot half his errands, and the slightest exertion seemed a dragging effort, while he complained constantly of pains in his bones.

Many of these changes crept on so insidiously that they escaped notice at the time, though they were afterwards recalled. Besides, Claude was growing very fast—springing up all at once, as so many lads do, and to this his mother, who had brought up two other boys, ascribed all his ills and vagaries.

Willie was talking with Mr. Fenwick, principal of the collegiate, one day during the summer holidays, concerning the coming term's work, and the subject of Claude's failure came up. To his great surprise, Willie learned that Claude's status in the classroom had been falling off almost from the very beginning of the winter term, while he had accomplished simply nothing since the Easter holidays. "It was not until about a month before the examination that several of the teachers began to complain to me of Claude's work," said Mr. Fenwick. "I had myself noticed a certain apathy in the boy, a seeming lack of concentration, but I was completely deceived as to his real standing and did not worry myself much, for I considered that even before Christmas Claude was abundantly prepared to pass in the four easy subjects required for the first part of his matriculation, and as for the other subjects, he could pull up in time the next year."

"It's my fault," said Willie. "I never thought of inquiring into the kid's status, as I was sure he was all right anyway, and I felt I had lots to worry over on my own hook; it's a wonder to me yet how I scraped through, but I'll look after him next year, never fear."

Soon after, Willie left the store and started home to supper. His pleasant, twinkling brown eyes were very good to look at, but not so good to look through, as the boy was very near-sighted. He fancied there was something familiar, yet in another sense unfamiliar, in the slouching, flinging saunter of a boy some yards ahead of him—something that reminded him of his young brother. Still he did not think of Claude. A few brisk steps brought him up behind the lad, who turned suddenly, as if startled, the next moment flinging away a half-smoked cigaret.

Willie joined him, remarking: "You don't want to smoke those things, Claude; they're no good for growing lads, and I've heard they form a habit that's hard to break. I didn't know you had ever smoked one."

Claude replied carelessly: "Neither have I, scarcely, except a few of those cubeb cigarets, which are good for catarrh. I hardly ever touch the others."

"Well, see that you don't touch anything of the kind, or I'll see to you, young man," replied Willie, severely, "If I ever catch you at it, I'll tell Ralph and mother, and you'll be dealt with. What would father have thought of this, Claude?"

Claude's face clouded, as he answered pettishly: "I wish you'd mind your own business; I never smoked half a dozen, and I'll never smoke another, if that will satisfy you. You needn't go making a fuss at home; mother has lots to worry her."

Willie's severe aspect at once changed. "All right; that's the way to talk, my boy; and I won't say anything this time."

Willie thought no more of the matter. In the first place, he had very little conception, except in a general way, of the evils of cigarets, and in the second place, Claude had given his word to leave them alone in the future, and Claude was the soul of honor.

"Ugh!" exclaimed Ralph a few evenings after; "you smell like a whole smoking car, Claude. Where have you been?" And Ralph, whom the smell of tobacco almost made ill, very unceremoniously kicked Claude off the immense sitting-room lounge, or settee, where all three brothers were sprawling good naturedly, shoving and elbowing one another.

Claude picked himself up and shied a pair of slippers, a pillow and a book of "Household Recipes" at the offending Ralph.

"I was in a caboose—Mr. Cruickshank sent me chasing across the river with an urgent message to a man up on West River avenue, and he'd just left for Delray. I caught a car and found him, and rode back on the railroad."

The following day the brothers attended the funeral of an old friend and comrade, whose health had been failing for two years. Herbert Lister's parents had taken him first to Florida, then to Colorado, in the hope of saving the life of an idolized and only son. The Listers were wealthy and had spared no expense on their one child. Every hospital and sanitarium which offered any hope of a cure had been tried, but a month before the young man had come home to die. Canon Marshall spoke most touchingly in the funeral sermon of the heartbreaking and untimely end of a singularly gifted and lovable youth, and as the good old man urged the boys present so to order their lives that, living or dying, they might be the Lord's, many eyes filled and many boyish hearts were stirred to new resolves, from the little choir boys in the gallery to the red-coated young fusiliers in the nave, who were to assist at the last sad rites of a departed comrade.

"Oh! oh!" half sobbed Clara Meredith that night, clinching her small, white hands together; "my cousin Herbert was murdered—murdered—murdered. Oh, surely God will punish those wicked men who legalize such wanton slaying of our boys."

"Why, what do you mean, Miss Meredith?" asked Willie, in surprise. "Poor Herb died of consumption."

"Yes," answered the girl, bitterly; consumption of poison."

"Wh—why," stammered Willie, greatly embarrassed. "Surely I—you don't mean—that is, I never dreamed that Herbert—drank."

"Willie," said Miss Meredith, gazing earnestly at her young adorer, "I'm going to tell you something that very few people knew about my poor cousin—and oh, I beg of you when you hear this sad story that you will make a vow as a Christian, as a good citizen, as a reformer, to fight and never cease fighting so long as you can breathe, this accursed cigaret which is killing and ruining our dearest and brightest boys. Willie, it was cigarets, and nothing else, that killed Herbert. I am telling you this because I have heard that Claude, in common with many others of our brightest boys, is beginning to use them."

"I caught him the other day," said Willie, "but he hasn't hurt himself as yet, and he has quit."

"No, he has not, for I saw him myself light one this very morning."

"Is that so? Well, he'll be seen after," replied Willie, with outward carelessness, though he felt himself turning hot and cold with emotion and amazement. He had never known Claude even to equivocate, much less deliberately lie. "I have heard they are harmful things if persisted in to any extent, but I know very little about their effects. Not one of our family, as it happens, has ever smoked anything. Tobacco makes Ralph sick—even the smell always had a peculiar effect on him; and anyhow, poor father would have lashed the life out of any of us kids if he had caught us smoking. Dear dad, with all his kindness and indulgence, could be very strict when necessary."

"Willie, have you any idea what per cent of reformatory lads trace their downfall to cigarets, and what per cent of youthful offenders are in the police court? I want you to take these home with you and read them every word"—placing a package of papers in his hand—"and remember that what you read in these gives but a faint picture of the evils that we may see just here in our own little city from the same cause—to say nothing of the big city across the river. My cousin Herbert formed the habit three years ago, though it was over a year before his people made the discovery that he was using cigarets at all, and it was another year before it was fully brought home to them the extent of the mischief they had done. First Herbert lost interest in his studies, and almost broke his parents' hearts by insisting upon leaving school to take a position. You will remember, he did not keep his clerkship in the Malsons' bank for more than six months, and in the following six months he tried as many as five different positions. He lost all ambition, all life and spirit, lost all his old ideals, and formed associates across the river of the lowest type. His former bright, alert mind went, and he became almost semi-idiotic. At the same time his health began to fail alarmingly. Even then, although uncle and auntie had learned of the awful effects of the deadly cigarets, the full realization of their horrors were not brought home to them until the last year, when every means under heaven was tried to break the habit. Oh, there are things too awful, too horrible to tell about!" exclaimed the girl, breaking off abruptly. "Herbert's family kept their skeleton from strangers' eyes, but something impelled me to tell you tonight, Willie. I know I can trust you with this sad story."

(To be continued.)

THE SENIOR L. T. L.

Conducted by Mrs. Helen G. Rice, General Secretary.

Notes.

ATTENTION is particularly called to the communication on this page from the National superintendent of Peace and Arbitration, and to the letter of Mrs. Minnie B. Horning concerning Press work in a recent number of THE YOUNG CRUSADER. The practical suggestions in both these articles should find ready response from our Seniors.

2. Seniors engaged in Junior work will find the book, "Verses for Little Citizens," by Mrs. Mary L. Wyatt, very attractive for a reward for faithful attendance or excellence in other directions. The price is sixty cents, and the book may be ordered from the Woman's Temperance Publishing Association.

3. In the line of Social Meetings and Red Letter Days, a new leaflet, "Do and Don't," by the National superintendent, abounds in practical suggestions, both for the W. C. T. U. and L. T. L. Every Senior Legion needs this leaflet, which can be ordered from Mrs. Mary D. Tomlinson, 212 La Grande avenue, Plainfield, N. J., at one cent each, or forty cents per 100 copies.

4. The addresses of Rev. C. Wesley Burns and Mr. Herbert C. Shattuck at the Portland Convention are to be issued in leaflet form by the W. T. P. A. at one cent each, or seventy-five cents per 100 copies.

5. The Y's of South Dakota did a very gracious thing in pledging a sum sufficient to send the general secretaries of both the Y and L. T. L. branches of their state to the National Convention at Portland.

6. The topic card of the Los Angeles W. C. T. U. contains, in addition to its programs for the various meetings of the year, announcements of the times and places of the regular meetings of its four Legions. We believe that the topic card of any union is incomplete without such an addition. This union also issues an invitation card to its L. T. L. meetings, having on one side the time and place, the words, "You are cordially invited to attend," and on the reverse side a few lines setting forth the object of the Legion.

7. The topic card for the current year of the Neal Dow L. T. L. Alumni of Reading Pa., includes the consideration of various departments, discussions on various phases of temperance work, parlor meetings, medal contests, a mock court trial, observance of Peace and Crusade Red Letter Days, public entertainment, "The Trial of Prince Nicotine," programs in commemoration of Miss Willard's earthly and heavenly birthdays and the birthday of Neal Dow. The high character of the Legion that has planned this remarkable list of programs for its weekly meetings gives assurance that they will all be well carried out.

8. The Legion of Dover, N. H., organized by the National secretary about one year ago, has made a fine record. A program of its recent entertainment and bazaar has been received, of which the local press says: "Of all the entertainments held in this community recently none have been more interesting or instructive than the one held at G. A. R. hall last evening."

9. New Hampshire L. T. L. secretary is conducting a Senior Legion composed of students of the high school of the town. Michigan's secretary has recently organized a very promising Senior Legion in Detroit, which has been named in her honor, the Rowley Legion.

10. The National superintendent of Fairs and Open Air Meetings writes: "I was disappointed last year, as I hoped some state would win the cash prizes for largest number of Senior Legioners who had engaged in Fair work. I offer the same prize this year. Will you not urge the Seniors to enter this contest? We need the young people in this line of work, and they need this opportunity to put in practice the truths they have been studying."

11. Through the meetings of Miss Annie Robbins in Illinois last year, the Seniors of that state were able to donate fifteen dollars to L. T. L. work in the Philippines.

12. Among the notices on the weekly calendar of the Goff Methodist Episcopal Church of Clarksburg, W. Va., is the following: "The International Senior Loyal Temperance Legion meets in the lecture room at 7:30 p. m. All young people invited." This is one of the most successful Legions to be found in any state, numbering fifty of the best young men and women of the town.

13. Miss Belle Kearney thus gives her impressions of the last state L. T. L. convention of Wisconsin: "The most inspiring and enthusiastic body of young people I ever beheld. The boys and girls were strongly in evidence, from the triumphant lad of twelve summers, receiving his seals and diplomas from the hands of dear Mrs. I. W. Black and her faithful assistant, Miss Money, on up to the energetic president, Mr. E. P. Hocking, who bore his twenty-three years and honored position with becoming dignity. What untold blessings and storage of fruitage for the coming years are missed by other states that fail to organize Loyal Temperance Legions, and have them blossom into these annual conventions."

14. The very attractive report of the eleventh annual convention of Pennsylvania Loyal Temperance Legion is filled with proof upon proof of the all-round, up-to-date, never-give-up activities of the Legioners of the great Keystone state, under the inspiration of the leader whom they all delight to follow, their beloved general secretary, Mrs. Elma M Preston.

Special Offer: The Union Signal ten weeks for ten cents.

Ohio.

State Motto:—"Make your record clean."
Rally Cry—Halloo! Halloo! O-hi-o!
Listen to the yell of the L. T. L.
Rah! Rah! Rah! Saloons—saloons—
Saloons must go!" (Clapping hands three times.)

SINCE by some unforeseen circumstance Ohio's L. T. L. secretary knew nothing of the L. T. L. number of THE UNION SIGNAL until the evening before the paper was issued, our National L. T. L. secretary kindly invited Ohio's secretary to occupy a place on the Senior L. T. L. page. Ohio Legioners are wide awake and pressing on to victory. The Juniors say, "We are coming," and the Seniors, pressing upward, cry, "Higher, Higher." There never was so intense an interest as now. The one great hindrance is lack of leaders. The aim of Ohio for 1903 will be, as in previous years, not one W. union without an L. T. L. under its special care. The ambition of Ohio this year, with its 100 graduates and a host of Seniors, will be the organization of a state Loyal Temperance Legion, in order to unite the L. T. L. graduates for more advanced temperance work. There is an increased interest in L. T. L. methods in Junior Church societies. I call special attention to one at Hillsboro, O., with an enrollment of 254 members, using the L. T. L. pledge cards, responsive exercises, mottoes, papers and leaflets. Cincinnati reports the largest membership in L. T. L.'s, and carried away the state banner for an increase of 489. The Honor Enrollment included 2,665 names.

MRS. H. B. WISNER,
State L. T. L. Secretary.

Special Offer: The Union Signal ten weeks for ten cents.

Willard Memorial Fund.

THE leader of the Legion of North Attleboro, Mass., under date of September 29, 1902, wrote: "I began my L. T. L. meetings yesterday for the season with a good attendance. We held a sweet little memorial service for Miss Willard, and voted to send two dollars to the memorial fund." I quote this action because I am so very desirous that our Legions everywhere, both Junior and Senior, shall follow this admirable example. I shall never be satisfied until our Legions generally have a part in helping to swell the amounts of this organizing fund, which is the one memorial to the dear leader whose memory is our most precious legacy. By vote of the last National convention, W. C. T. U. membership week has been changed from September to February, closing with the heavenly birthday of Miss Willard, February 17, instead of with her earthly birthday, as heretofore. Henceforward that sacred date, February 17, will be the great day of ingathering for the W. C. T. U., which includes the L. T. L.

Dear Legioners, begin at once to plan for raising or appropriating something for this purpose. Let your amount be $2, if convenient; if not, any sum that you can give, only let it be hallowed with your heart-interest in the W. C. T. U. work and your prayers that God will multiply it exceedingly through your gifts. Send all donations to the National treasurer of the W. C. T. U., Evanston, Ill., plainly marked for the Willard Memorial Fund, from your Legion, giving its name and location definitely, that due acknowledgement may be sent you.

HELEN G. RICE.

Special Offer: The Union Signal ten weeks for ten cents.

Suggestions for Peace Work.

Mrs. Hannah J. Bailey.

National Superintendent of the Department of Peace and Arbitration.

IT is sometimes almost impossible to reason with young children, but when the boys and girls are old enough to enter a Senior L. T. L. they are able to reason, and then is an opportune time to impress upon them the unreasonableness of warfare.

Let one of your sessions be devoted to the subject of "Peace and Arbitration." Suitable selections from "Voices of Peace" and "Gleanings," published by the Peace department of the W. C. T. U., or other peace books, could be read. Sing some of our peace songs, or the song entitled "Angel of Peace," in the White Ribbon Hymnal, and have a brief talk given on the subject of "Peace" or of "Arbitration."

There are some very interesting books that have a tendency to promulgate peace principles which could be obtained of the American Peace Society of Boston, or elsewhere, and loaned to the boys and girls to read.

It would be fine to have the young people write essays on the subject, and likewise to edit a Peace Manuscript Journal, contributing to it original articles and pen-and-ink drawings.

A committee might be appointed to place a box in some railroad or steamboat station and keep it well filled with peace literature.

A scrapbook containing peace articles could be made by the Legion, and loaned to people to read. A Peace Day program carried out in a public entertainment is very interesting. Also a mock Court of Arbitration could be held successfully.

Devote a session of the Senior L. T. L. to the Hague Conference, different members contributing papers giving an account of its history and aims. A history of the Peace movement from its earliest days could be given to advantage. A William Ladd evening, held in honor of the founder of the American Peace Society, might be made interesting.

The Fire Drill is a fine exercise used in some places to give a practical turn to the physical exercise made necessary by mental exertion in public schools. The Manual Training School of Cambridge, Mass., adopted this, and it has a complete set of fire apparatus, engine, trucks, ladders and hose carts.

Some Peace Conferences have by resolutions suggested Fire Brigades, and also Life Saving Companies and Emergency Relief Corps, to be used as substitutes for the objectionable Military Drills.

Winthrop Centre, Me.

Special Offer: The Union Signal ten weeks for ten cents.

FOR GOD AND HOME AND EVERY LAND. The UNION SIGNAL AND WORLD'S WHITE RIBBON. NATIONAL and WORLD'S WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION

Official Organ of the WORLD'S AND NATIONAL WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION.

Published Weekly by the Woman's Temperance Publishing Association, Chicago.

EDITOR-IN-CHIEF, - - - - - - MRS. LILLIAN M. N. STEVENS.
CORRESPONDING EDITOR, - - - LADY HENRY SOMERSET.
MANAGING EDITOR - - - - - MRS. CORNELIA T. JEWETT.

CONTRIBUTING EDITORS:

MRS. SUSANNA M. D. FRY. MRS. KATHARINE L. STEVENSON.
MRS. CLARA C. CHAPIN. MRS. ISABELLA WEBB PARKS.

Address all letters and manuscript intended for the editors to, The Editorial Department, UNION SIGNAL. Unavailable manuscripts will be returned only when sufficient postage accompanies the request.

SUBSCRIPTIONS.

Subscriptions may commence with any issue.
The date on the label indicates when your subscription ends.
Papers will be discontinued unless otherwise ordered.
Remittances should always be made in the safest manner available to the remitter. Register cash remittances.
Change of Address.—Give both your old and your new address when you desire a change.
Change of Date.—It takes at least three weeks to change the date, after your subscription is renewed.

PRICE $1.50 PER YEAR IN ADVANCE.
FOREIGN POSTAGE $1.04 ADDITIONAL.

Address all Business Communications to
The UNION SIGNAL, 184 La Salle St., CHICAGO.....

Chicago, January 15, 1903.

"The women that publish the tidings are a great host."

The Frances E. Willard Memorial Fund.

THE Frances E. Willard Memorial Fund was proposed by Mrs. Stevens at the St. Paul Convention, 1898, as a special offering in memory of the one who had given all of her mature life, her brilliant powers, her love, her most devoted efforts, to the building up of a new element in the progress of civilization—viz., the National Woman's Christian Temperance Union.

—Beautiful thought. What more grateful, more loving thing could the unions do than to hold a parlor or a public meeting to talk about the one they loved intensely and whose plans and purposes were so comprehensive and far reaching that they cannot be exhausted by many meetings. What a reflex influence of divine purpose comes into the hearts of those who thus commune together so that they long to carry the gospel of love and temperance to all!

Since the inception of this fund, four years ago, $14,582.49 has been contributed and twenty-eight states have been assisted, several of them more than once. This sum scarcely suggests the possibilities of the plan, for if each union would secure an offering of two dollars, more than this sum would be realized each year. What would we do with it? Build up the waste places and hasten the coming of Christ. Crying needs and great opportunities come almost daily, with nothing in the treasury with which to respond in any adequate degree.

The Anti-Saloon League reports that $250,000 is raised annually to meet expenses and salaries, and yet, the enemy and the public press being our judges, the larger degree of successful reform work is done by the W. C. T. U. What might we not accomplish with $250,000 a year, and why should we not have such a sum?

—It is hopeful that there has been a steady increase every year in the amount contributed, and it is most encouraging to know of the vast amount of good that is done by a careful expenditure in small sums, always for some special need and never for anything else but organizing and building up the work. During these years most of the western and southern states have been helped a little. They have seldom had more than one hundred dollars during any one year, and more frequently fifty, or even twenty-five dollars. These amounts have enabled them to bring in for a month a National organizer or other worker, and have always brought new courage to the state executive, which is often half the battle. Many of these states do not as yet have sufficient membership to render the dues equal to the expense of running the state machinery. Shall we abandon the western states, with their great influx of foreigners and their shifting population, or the southern states, with their large colored population and peculiar obstacles from which the northern states are almost entirely free? This would be to abandon the larger part of our territory and most magnificent opportunities. No one dreams of doing this. Let us increase our faith and enlarge our plans and purposes to meet these needs bravely and comprehensively and to a degree worthy of our organization.

Today Mississippi is conducting another prohibition campaign, which might be carried to a successful issue with a sufficient number of speakers and a flood of literature to offset that with which the Liquor Dealers' Association is deluging the state, but this calls for money. Today Texas is conducting the most brilliant campaign for county prohibition that has ever been known. With speakers and literature the whole state could be won. Today Vermont is in the midst of a resubmission campaign, wherein the prohibitory law may be lost for lack of speakers and literature. Today all of the Rocky Mountain states are fighting the flood of lawlessness which is ever present in new territory. Today the southern states are fighting against the dispensary and for prohibition by state or county, and both sections are in the battle almost without money enough to buy a sling with which to hurl a stone.

We boast that our organization covers the United States, but it is only in a general way. Even where our numbers are greatest, as in New York and Pennsylvania, there is still much territory untouched. Some of our states have as few as a half dozen unions, and in others there are counties unorganized and people unnumbered who have not so much as heard of the W. C. T. U.

—The Memorial Fund is blessed because it blesses both the giver and the receiver. It ought to become more and more a part of the February program of every union, and more and more we should ask largely of the public that we may fulfill the mission to which we are called. We have, as an organization, just begun our work. Let us have visions of a great, free literature yet to be; visions of more rescue homes and rescued girls, of industrial homes, of successful state and national campaigns for purity and prohibition; visions of triumphant success in all that enters into the principles of our forty different departments, and then let us strive to materialize our own visions. Let us answer our own prayers.

London Shocked by Its Drunkenness.

THE municipal authorities of London are at length shocked at the prevalence of drunkenness. The official reports of the increase in the number of convictions for drunkenness—more than 40,000 the past year—are startling, disgusting, pitiful, appalling. The situation is declared to be intolerable. Something must be done about it. Some heroic remedy or other has got to be resorted to in order to save the world's greatest city from its impending moral and social debacle. And what is it that official London proposes to do about it?

This is what London will do—if it can. It will not begin at the bottom, but first of all at the top. It is going to snip off the head, so to speak, of the poor drunkard. The conditions which foster drunkenness; the men whose business it is, largely if not mainly, to make drunkards; the licensed houses whose occupation and reason-to-be is to feed the furnace-fires of appetite and passion—these are to be let alone, at least as to all the more normal and consequential part of their business. But there's a limit. A line must, at last, be drawn somewhere. Draw it, then, at absolute drunkenness.

When a poor, miserable creature—it may be a man, almost as likely as not in these days in London, a woman—is found clear over the dam, let the policeman snap him up, and give him fair warning that if he shall be caught in that predicament two times more he will be outlawed so far as entering any grog-shop is concerned, blacklisted, have his picture taken—Heaven save the mark!—and posted in all the public-houses of the region; and every grog-shop notified that it must never sell a bit of liquor to him, on pain of heavy fines and imprisonment.

Here is prohibition with a vengeance. At one end of the line, at least, the principle of the right of prohibition is unmistakably admitted.

The new law went into effect the begining of the new year. The authorities appear to be in earnest in the matter. As every one knows who has lately been in Lodon, it is a grim situation, such as rightly calls for some sort of heroic treatment. How the new prohibition law will work will be earnestly watched, not only by the people of London, but by public minded men and women all round the horizon.

This kind of prohibition, the prohibition that begins at the tail end of the procession—or, to change the figure, at the bottom of the toboggan slide—is clearly good so far as it goes. It is to be hoped the London city authorities will carry it into effect honestly and thoroughly. It puts a brand of shame upon drunkenness, whether in the East End or West End, alike in high life and in low life. That is something, especially as this implies a deal of moral suasion as well as a wholesome fear. So far as it goes, it is a prohibition that, most properly, works both ways—confronting drinker and seller alike. It decrees a joint responsibility for the crime and the shame as attaching to both parties. This is important, and it means a long and decisive step forward.

Almost certainly the movement will not stop at this point. An awakened civic conscience, reinforced by the awakening social consciousness, will perforce come to see that as this new century goes on it will not do to set by, as if palsied and blind, and do nothing to the point in preventing the measureless crime and woe of the liquor business—the "Black Plague" of modern London.

The Proposed Anti-Polygamy Amendment.

THE important part of the joint resolution proposing an amendment to the Constitution of the United States is the following:

"No state shall legalize bigamy or polygamy or any contract for bigamous or polygamous association, nor authorize the descent or distribution of property at the death of any man to his children by any woman to whom he has or shall not have been joined in lawful wedlock."

The foregoing is what was presented to the House by the sub-committee and referred by the House back to the Judiciary committee. The chairman of that committee confesses that he has had no holiday vacation and is worn out over the demands of the people on this subject.

It is affirmed by those who ought to know that the members of the committee are a unit in their desire that something shall be done to crush out polygamy but that they are divided as to methods. A number would have Congress give the national government power to punish all offenders of this character, thus dividing the police power of the states, and here is thought to come the main difficulty. They do not wish to interfere with the police power of the states. No man can be punished twice for the same offense, and if the general government punishes, it takes the power from the states. Just how to overcome this difficulty is the problem. It might be well for some of the eminent jurists of the United States who are interested in this subject to put their legal minds to work devising ways and means whereby the difficulty can be overcome.

It is evident that many congressmen are deeply interested in the subject, especially those on the judiciary committee, and we believe that this problem will be solved satisfactorily either by this Congress or the fifty-eighth. In the meantime the people need education as a matter of self-defense, and churches and all other organizations should seek to disseminate information on this question.

A Thought.

"EVERY morn is a fresh beginning,
Every day is the world made new;
Ye who are weary of sorrow and sinning
Here is a beautiful thought for you
A thought for me and a thought for you."

—Susan Coolidge.

Pending Prohibition Measures. The Immigration bill now pending in Congress, as our readers are aware, prohibits liquor selling in immigrant stations, also in the capitol building at Washington. The McCumber bill prohibits liquor selling in all government buildings—in all buildings belonging to the people of the United States. The latter includes those features of the immigration bill which pertain to the prohibition of liquor and it is therefore the most important and far-reaching. We are working vigorously for the passage of both. While we may not be of the same mind as regards the wisdom—or the ethics—of some kinds of prohibition (the exclusion of illiterates for instance), we are all agreed that we cannot have too much prohibition of the liquor traffic. The House has voted almost unanimously to forbid the sale of liquor in immigrant stations and this provision has been favorably reported in the Senate. The House has twice forbidden its sale in the capitol and the Senate has obstructed the passage of such measure. But this time that method of killing a measure is not being resorted to, and with the proper amount of pressure from constituencies, the Senate will undoubtedly vote to abolish liquor both from immigrant stations and from the national capitol. Letters and telegrams from voters are needed at this critical juncture. As Mrs. Ellis reminds us, these count for more than petitions or letters from women. But women can influence voters, and we ask that white ribboners urge the voters to send letters or telegrams, or both, to their senators immediately, asking them to vote for the McCumber bill and for those provisions of the Immigration bill forbidding the sale of liquor in immigrant stations and the capitol.

⚜

Pernicious Exhibits at the World's Fair. Among the "attractions" at the St. Louis Fair are to be representations of Monte Carlo and other gambling establishments, the only difference from the actual reality being that no equivalent for money will be used by players. What will be the result? Novices will be taught and the opportunity will be offered for all to become adepts, while uneasy consciences will be quieted on the plea that there will not be any gambling for money. Those who have been actors at Monte Carlo will feel a return of the old temptation, the morbid desire to win money "by the turn of a card," while thousands, it may be, who never heard of Monte Carlo will be plunged into the vortex. First fed on the excitement, they will ever after feel a craving for it. A taste of this forbidden fruit will not be enough; the hunger will continue. The influence of such exhibits will entail incalculable evil, and it is to be hoped that they will not be suffered.

⚜

Appreciative Words. One of the ablest and best known lawyers in New York, Hon. John J. Gilbert, writes of our recent article on the Vermont referendum just now before the people of that state: "The UNION SIGNAL has expressed my sentiments on the Vermont 'crisis' much better than I could. I am one of those outside Vermonters who feel very deeply as to the outcome of this popular referendum. I wish this article might be read throughout the state. Can you not have more copies of it sent to papers and influential persons in all parts of the state? I think that ingenuous young fellow who, having killed his father and mother, stood before the court piteously begging clemency for himself as a 'poor orphan' hits the case of the larger towns and cities about as it is."

⚜

Personal Mention.

The friends of Mrs. Mary Jewett-Telford, and they are legion, will learn with regret that she has been very seriously ill at her home in McMinnville, Tenn. She is now convalescent, however, and hopes to soon be able to resume her work with voice and pen.

Mrs. Ida H. Read, state president of Vermont W. C. T. U., has been summoned from active duty in the field to watch by the side of a dearly beloved sister, who is critically ill. Mrs. Read has cancelled her dates for the referendum campaign, but her work will be carried on bravely by the National workers, who are on special duty in the state.

Dr. Mary Wood-Allen, of Ann Arbor, Mich., World's superintendent of the Purity Department, suffered a serious loss recently in the destruction by fire of the plates of her books, "Teaching Truth," "Almost a Man," "Almost a Woman," "Child Confidence Rewarded," "Birth Chamber," "Baby's Firsts," and "The Marvels of Our Bodily Dwelling." These plates were in the possession of the Review and Herald Publishing Company, of Battle Creek, whose entire plant was burned. The financial loss to Dr. Wood-Allen is about $3,000.

⚜ ⚜

Greeting From Our World's President.

MY DEAR COMRADES:—My letter to you must necessarily be very short, as it is written from a sick bed, but it will none the less take to you my warmest greetings and affectionate love.

Ever since my return from America I have been severely ill, and although convalescent, I am able to do but little. Nevertheless, I must at this season greet you and wish you all joy and blessing in your work and in your own hearts and lives.

It was good to look again into the faces of my comrades across the sea, to know that the work prospers, and that Mrs. Stevens is bravely carrying on the trust left to her by our sainted Frances Willard. I rejoice that the numbers increase and that the unions strengthen. I know of nothing more touching or more courageous than the way in which the women have put their shoulders to the wheel in order to give an impetus to the machinery of our great organization. I cannot but think that the guiding hand of its founder has been allowed to rest upon it from that world where she is endued with greater power and with the knowledge that was only in part given to her while here.

Let nothing deter us or dishearten us in the work for which we are joined, but let each one of us resolve that this year we will bind ourselves to endeavor to win more men and women, to take more pledges, to watch over the weak, and individually to work more diligently than we have ever done before. Herein will be the eventual triumph of the temperance cause, for I am persuaded that just in so far as each one does her work as though everything depended upon her effort, in her own circle, her own town, her own union, so will the work gain by leaps and bounds, until legislation will at last be influenced by the mighty but almost imperceptible change of the tide in public opinion.

There is only one power, however, that can enable us so to work. In Mr. Edison's laboratory a few weeks ago I saw an instrument for applying gold leaf to a metal cylinder. Inclosed in glass, above the metal, was a magnet, and this magnet revolved continually and turned the cylinder. At first you did not see why it moved, until you discovered that another and far more powerful magnet, which the smaller one followed, was revolving rapidly, and that as it moved the fine gold dust was set afloat in the glass globe and covered the metal with an exquisite golden cover, rendering it fit for valuable service—for only on that surface could the phonograph impress its delicate lines.

Now, here it seemed to me was a picture of our heavenly history. The little magnet of our life revolves with the years, but only as we follow the powerful attraction of Christ can our hearts be covered with that fine gold which makes them capable of receiving and transmitting the divine message to human ears. The magnet says, "Follow Me," and just in so far as the attraction is strong enough and the current is established, just so far that metal cylinder becomes of value to the world. May the attractive power of that Divine Lord draw us and keep us ever moving towards Him! So unconsciously shall the operation of grace work in us that we cannot fail to be of value to those brothers and sisters of our great human family whom Christ loves and for whom He would have us live.

Yours in our best of bonds,

Isabel Somerset.

Higham Hall, Woodford, Essex, Dec. 15, 1902.

The Editors' Question Box.

THE editors of THE UNION SIGNAL desire to know positively just what features of the paper are pleasing to its readers; whether or not it is meeting the needs of the great organization it represents. To this end we solicit definite answers to the list of questions appended herewith. We desire the suggestions, commendations, criticisms, complaints and requests of our subscribers, that we may be mutually benefited.

1. Which of the four numbers of THE UNION SIGNAL published in December did you like best, and which did you like least, and why?

2. Which article in these four numbers did you like best, and which did you like least, and why?

3. Which feature of the Magazine number, January 1, did you like best, and which did you like least, and why? Would you like to have the Monthly Magazine number continued?

4. What feature of THE UNION SIGNAL do you find most helpful, and what, if any, feature is not to your liking, and why?

5. Have you approved of the changes in the typographical appearance of THE UNION SIGNAL during the past six months, and do you wish to have it continued in its present form?

6. What suggestion can you make that, in your opinion, would improve THE UNION SIGNAL and make it more valuable to its readers?

7. Is every member of your Union a subscriber to THE UNION SIGNAL, and, if not, why not?

8. Has every member of your Union been asked to subscribe to THE UNION SIGNAL under the various special offers made? If not, why not?

9. Has every member of your Union seen a copy of THE UNION SIGNAL during the past six months? Sample copies may be had for the asking.

10. Have you, as an interested worker, made an effort to extend the influence of your National Official Organ, and if so, how? What plan would, in your opinion, be most effective in adding 50,000 new subscribers to our list?

To secure these replies promptly we make the following offers, good until February 15, 1903:

For the best answer to the set of ten questions, $5.00.

For the second best answer to the set of ten questions, $3.00.

For the third best answer to the set of ten questions, $2.00.

These answers will be carefully considered by a committee of three and the awards will be announced in our March Magazine number.

Answers received later than February 15, cannot be entered. Address all communications on this subject to Editor's Question Box, Union Signal Office, 184 La Salle St., Chicago.

OFFICIAL COMMUNICATIONS

REST COTTAGE. THE WILLARD.

GENERAL OFFICERS:

President,
MRS. LILLIAN M. N. STEVENS, Portland, Me.
Vice-President-at-Large,
MISS ANNA A. GORDON, Evanston, Ill.
Corresponding Secretary,
MRS. SUSANNA M. D. FRY, Evanston, Ill.
Recording Secretary,
MRS. CLARA C. HOFFMAN, Kansas City, Mo.
Asst. Recording Secretary,
MRS. FRANCES E. BEAUCHAMP, Lexington, Ky.
Treasurer,
MRS. HELEN M. BARKER, Evanston, Ill.

Headquarters National W. C. T. U., Evanston, Ill.

Corresponding Secretary's Notes.

DEAR SISTERS:—An honorary member from Westfield, Ind., sends a New Year's greeting to the W. C. T. U. which I can not do better than to pass on to the local unions. He says. "The spotless and invisible statesman of Nazareth, who is King of Kings and Lord of Lords, said in the majesty of His power, 'Every plant which My Heavenly Father hath not planted shall be rooted up' (Matthew, 15:13), and 'Fear not, little flock; for it is your Father's good pleasure to give you the kingdom' (Luke, 12:32). Read Romans, 8:31, 32, especially verses 31 and 39. Also 'Speak unto the children of Israel that they go forth,' (Exodus, 14:15)."

The year opens auspiciously for our work. All the organizers, so far as I know, are busy and states are inquiring for workers. Not so many as I had hoped, however, are arranging to take our speakers on anti-polygamy. I hope, now that the holidays are passed, more states will be inquiring, especially for Mrs. Weed in the west and middle states. The chance to secure her at the favorable terms already named will probably be past in a few months, and I am sure the unions will have lost a great opportunity.

I have many calls for literature on special topics or the work of the departments. We do not keep any literature at National Headquarters, and as the writers are generally in a hurry, they would save much time by sending direct to the W. T. P. A., 184 Lasalle St., Chicago, or to the National superintendent of the department of which they wish information. The new Annual Reports and Annual Leaflets are now completed and can be had by addressing the National treasurer here at Headquarters. Every union should have a number of Annual Leaflets each year, as there are many changes in the addresses and they are indispensable to all new unions. Price, one cent each, or 75 cents per hundred.

Pledge-signing has always been an important part of our work. The state reports to the National tell how many pledges have been secured in each state each year. The minds of some other organizations seemed to be turned in this direction at present, and concerted action in this particular is asked for that there may be a great, world-wide movement in pledge-signing. The W. T. P. A. will soon issue a new, beautiful pledge card, bearing the head of Miss Willard, which is designed especially for general use. It is hoped the unions will order thousands of these and put much emphasis upon this part of our work during the year.

A letter from Miss Garner, state Y secretary of Mississippi, incloses some of the literature with which that state is being deluged by the National Wholesale Liquor Dealers' Association, through what it calls its Protective Bureau. We have been hearing of this literature ever since early last summer. It is an effort to offset "the influence of the recent craze" for prohibition. These leaflets are full of the old arguments to the effect that prohibition does not prohibit; that there is more liquor sold in prohibition states than any others, etc., etc., and sets one to wondering why this great amount of money should be expended to print and send out this literature when prohibition from their own testimony is doing so much for the trade. Nevertheless, they may "fool some of the people a part of the time," and state and local unions would do well to antidote their pernicious influence.

Wishing you not only a happy New Year, but a most prosperous one in our blessed work, I am,

Yours cordially,
SUE M. D. FRY.

Superintendents.

Health and Heredity.

IT seemed to one superintendent at least, that the convention at Portland was one of the healthiest Nationals that we have ever experienced. There were late hours and nightly dissipation and prolonged daily sessions and much executive and many prayer meetings, but we are creatures of habit and even these things become crystallized after a week!

The end comes and we go home to take a long breath and get ready to begin again.

It is just at this point that the National superintendent hesitates. New thought, new plans, new momentum, to be given out to a waiting constituency of state, county and local workers, and there is really "nothing new under the sun."

If life only were more simple! (I write this on the verge of the Christmas bankruptcy, physical and financial), it would be healthier and more true. It remains for us, beloved comrades, to help usher in the more quiet and reticent life, and December 1 would be a good time to begin—at least a month before the "Day of Prayer."

We need one more department if we are to reform the world—an "Anti-Christmas Giving," except to the poor and those who are in need. "Anti", to our friends, to whom we may leisurely give our gifts, or express our appreciation, as birthdays and other occasions go on, and the spirit moves. If this department could centralize on this one thing, viz., reform the workers, it would be one of the most profitable years in the history of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union.

"Be still and know that I am God."
"Quiet, Lord, my froward heart,
Make me teachable and mild,
Upright, simple, free from art
Make me as a wearied child,
From distrust and envy free,
Pleased with all that pleases Thee."

We must stop. Incessant pressure and push and worry do not make for progress; they are not fruitful in great or even good results.

It is easy to preach; it is not so easy to practice; it is hardest of all to yield ourselves as instruments poised and harmonious in the divine.

Here is a Program for Health: For a healthy day, or for health study and meetings:

The Preparatory Service.
The Word: "My words they are life."
The Prayer: "Pray—and faint not."
The Life: its best expression from the food supply; the clothes worn; the well-ordered home; the outside calls.

There is enough in the above for the quarterly meetings in this department, subdividing the heading, "The Life."

In general we make our programs too long, and so, quite unhealthy. A few stay at home because this is the case; some that come get impatient and worried; and the larger number perhaps, do not come at all because the exercises drag—a missionary or temperance meeting lasting an hour, or hour and one-half is so much longer than the meeting of the Club; twice as long. Let us strive for the things which make for healthy growth in our work. We shall be gainers in the end if the meeting culminates at the highest point of interest; if it is one of power and gives the impulse to "think on these things"; if something remains to be said suggestive of very much more remaining to be done. Anyway, "Look up, and not down, forward and not back ,and lend a hand."

Yours for the highest life,
LOUISE C. PURINGTON, M. D.
23 Allston St., Dorchester, Mass.

Note.—The "Pure Food Bill" has passed the House and is likely to become a law.

Note 2.—"Food Economics," Parts I and II, "The Relation of Health to Temperance," etc. are among new leaflets to be issued by the department.

Flower Mission.

DEAR FRIENDS AND CO-WORKERS:—As you well know, a change has come about in the leadership of this blessed work, because of the ill-health of one who has so nobly and so faithfully served you during the past three or four years. To take up the threads of a department covering so much ground, having its various lines reaching out in many directions and its numberless workers in all parts of our country as well as in the islands of the sea, wherever our noble banner floats, seems to me an undertaking of great responsibility, and I beg the indulgence of each one for the new superintendent who will of necessity make many blunders and mistakes as she tries in her way to continue Miss Shrigley's well-planned work.

Let us each, dear comrade, do our best to help one another and to push and increase our activities in all directions. The work must grow constantly in order to make it a success, and if each one of our department workers does her best this coming year surely what we all heartily desire will be accomplished, an immense growth in the Flower Mission department of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union.

The new plan of work is now ready, and may I ask that each superintendent will endeavor to have it widely distributed as early in the year as possible?

With friendly greetings to each and every comrade in the work,

Yours most cordially,
LELLA M. SEWALL.
330 Massachusetts Ave., Boston, Mass.

Work Among Miners.

DEAR SUPERINTENDENTS:—I trust that amidst the hurry and rush and push in the business world you are wide awake and on the alert to give like energy and activity to the deepening and widening of the interest in our department. Never has the outlook for reaching these underground workmen been more full of promise, nor the open doors so plentiful as at present and never were their needs greater.

Their adverse environment, hazardous perils, great deprivations and almost constant exposure to the saloon power in many quarters, with little of good to counterweigh, have been brought face to face with the outside world till a strong sentiment has gone out from the people that the condition of the miner shall be bettered to an extent which will conserve to his highest good as a member of the great human family.

Therefore if each superintendent purposes to do her best there is every reason to believe that this department will measure up to its highest possibilities this year and be found in the foremost ranks of department work.

Every effort needs be exceedingly practical and intensely personal in order to count for good. Already encouraging news comes from Mrs. Walker, of Montana, (my associate of the far west), that the women are planning for large things this year and that new forces are being put into action.

The state superintendent sending the most complete report this year will be awarding the new banner and a special prize at the next National Convention, but said report must be sent within the given date.

MARY E. KUHL,
4602 Lake Ave., Chicago.

SPECIAL OFFER: The Union Signal ten weeks for TEN CENTS.

A Fine Kidney Remedy.

Mr. A. S. Hitchcock, East Hampton, Conn. (The Clothier), says if any sufferer from Kidney and Bladder Disease will write him he will direct them to the perfect home cure he used. He has nothing whatever to sell.

I Will Cure You of RHEUMATISM

Else No Money is Wanted.

Any honest person who suffers from Rheumatism is welcome to this offer.

I am a specialist in Rheumatism, and have treated more cases than any other physician, I think. For 16 years I made 2,000 experiments with different drugs, testing all known remedies while searching the world for something better. Nine years ago I found a costly chemical in Germany which, with my previous discoveries, gives me a certain cure.

I don't mean that it can turn bony joints into flesh again; but it can cure the disease at any stage, completely and forever. I have done it fully 100,000 times.

I know this so well that I will furnish my remedy on trial. Simply write me a postal for my book on Rheumatism, and I will mail you an order on your druggist for six bottles Dr. Shoop's Rheumatic Cure. Take it for a month at my risk. If it succeeds, the cost is only $5.50. If it fails, I will pay the druggist myself—and your mere word shall decide it.

I mean that exactly. If you say the results are not what I claim, I don't expect a penny from you.

I have no samples. Any mere sample that can affect chronic Rheumatism must be drugged to the verge of danger. I use no such drugs, and it is folly to take them. You must get the disease out of the blood.

My remedy does that even in the most difficult, obstinate cases. It has cured the oldest cases that I ever met. And in all my experience—in all my 2,000 tests—I never found another remedy that would cure one chronic case in ten.

Write me and I will send you the order. Try my remedy for a month, as it can't harm you anyway. If it fails it is free.

Address Dr. Shoop, Box 948, Racine, Wis.

Mild cases, not chronic, are often cured by one or two bottles. At all druggists.

It Doesn't Scare Folks
to be told the truth about
Lion Coffee
The scare-crow coffees are those that hide under a glazing of factory eggs, glue and such stuff.
Lion Coffee is pure, wholesome, unglazed, rich in flavor and uniform in strength. The air-tight, sealed package insures cleanliness, freshness and uniformity.

KINDLY MENTION THE UNION SIGNAL WHEN WRITING ADVERTISERS.

New Leaflets.

Home Leaflets for Mothers' Meetings.

No. 3 The New Century for Mothers. Mrs. Nettie B. Fernald.
No. 13 Why a Mothers' Meeting? Mrs. J. H. Myers.
Price, 3c. each; 50, 50c.; 100, 75c.

Mothers' Meetings, Purity Leaflets.

No. 3 Safeguard the Home, Mrs. Emma W. Shores.
Price 2c. each; 100, 50c.

National Leaflets.

No. 2 Suggestions for Treasurers. Mrs. Helen M. Barker.
No. 31 The Philosophy of Fashion—What Shall We Wear? Louise C. Purington, M. D.
No. 94 American Liberty—Will Alcohol Help the Soldier Maintain It? Mrs. Mary H. Hunt.
No. 95 A Double Jury on Woman Suffrage. Amos Wells.
No. 96 A Lesson in Finance. Mrs. Helen M. Barker.
Price, 3c. each; 50, 50c.; 100, 75c.

Department Leaflets.

Y. W. C. T. U.
No. 56 The Ideal Y. Member. Miss Laura Smith.
L. T. L.
No. 182 A Study in L. T. L. Methods. Mrs. Helen G. Rice.
School Savings Banks.
No. 222 How School Savings Banks are Run. Mrs. S. L. Oberholtzer.
Parlor Meetings.
No. 242 How to Win. Mrs. Mary D. Tomlinson.
Narcotics.
No. 47 Why is the Cigaret more harmful than Tobacco used in other ways?
Price, 50, 15c.; 100, 25c.

Total Abstinence Leaflet.

No. 18 Experience: The Schoolmaster.
Signal Lights.
No. 4 How Can I Win New Members? Mrs. M. B. Platt.
Price, 25c. per 100.

Woman's Temperance Publishing Ass'n,
184 La Salle St., - - Chicago.

Franchise Department.

THERE is unusual activity in the franchise department in several of the states this winter. In many others, where no immediate suffrage legislative work is planned, there is the activity of preparation for future campaigns.

Kansas, under the leadership of Mrs. Abbie A. Welch, of Cedarville, is making a strenuous effort to secure the presidential suffrage.

The vote for presidential electors would seem to be more easily obtained than full suffrage, because it would require no change of constitution. The constitution of the United States gives the legislatures of the various states the privilege of appointing presidential electors in any manner they may choose. This bill to allow women to vote for presidential electors passed one branch of the Kansas legislature at its last session and almost passed in the other. There are strong hopes that the bill may become a law this year, if all Kansas suffragists are sufficiently zealous in its interest.

The New Hampshire constitutional convention has startled the country by going so far as to submit the woman suffrage amendment to a vote of the people. The vote will be taken in March. If the question carries at this election it will become a part of the constitution. This gives an opportunity to generate much suffrage sentiment and lead to such a campaign of education that the cause will be greatly advanced. Montana and South Dakota are also in the midst of lively campaigns for the enfranchisement of women.

The Illinois W. C. T. U. will use its influence this year, as usual, to secure full suffrage. In case of the failure of this bill, we are co-operating with a number of other women's organizations to ask for the suffrage for taxpaying women on questions of taxation and for tax officials. Organizations representing forty thousand women have already indorsed this bill.

The National department has issued its annual leaflet giving full directions for work. The department is organized now with seven department lecturers, who should be kept busy. These are Mrs. Katherine Lente Stevenson, Boston; Mrs. Mary Seymour Howell, Mount Morris, N. Y.; Miss Elizabeth U. Yates, Worcester, Mass.; Mrs. Helen D. Harford, Newberg, Ore.; Mrs. Catharine Waugh McCulloch, Evanston, Ill.; Miss Marie C. Brehm, Chicago, and Mrs. Ella S. Stewart, Chicago.

I desire very much that state superintendents shall devote much atention this year to getting the department thoroughly organized, with superintendents of all districts, county and local unions.

There are four principal ways of educating public sentiment: (1) Through the press; (2) by lectures and public meetings; (3) by franchise literature; (4) by legislative work.

The most practical method of agitating the question and at the same time preparing for legislative work is to secure a permanent enrollment.

This plan is fairly well known and is being used in a number of states. It is fully outlined in the National leaflet, which unions may secure from the state or National superintendent.

A special feature of the year's work suggested is the holding of twelve Franchise parlor meetings. The topics proposed are as follows:

STATUS OF WOMEN IN ANCIENT TIMES.

(a) Hebrew women, (b) Heathen, (c) Women of Greece and Rome, (d) Women of the Middle Ages, etc.

WOMAN IN INDUSTRY.

(a) Primitive, (b) Domestic Industries, (c) Development of Industrial Opportunities, (d) Inventors and Manufacturers, etc.

WOMAN IN EDUCATION.

(a) Compare Present Opportunities with Former Restrictions, (b) In Public Schools, Colleges and Universities, (d) Co-education, etc.

WOMAN IN THE PROFESSIONS.

(a) Medicine, (b) Law, (c) The Ministry, (d) Journalism.

WOMAN IN BUSINESS.

(a) Clerical, (b) Independent Business, (c) Equal Pay for Equal Work.

WOMAN IN LITERATURE.

(a) Rapid Development, (b) Early Prejudice against, (c) Novelists, (d) Poets, etc.

WOMAN IN ART

(a) Painters, (b) Sculptors, (c) Musicians.

WOMAN IN PHILANTHROPY AND REFORM.

(a) In Anti-slavery Struggle, (b) Prison and Hospital, (c) Peace and Arbitration, Red Cross, (d) Temperanc

WOMAN AND CHRISTIANITY.

(a) Early Disciples, Martyrs, (b) Missionaries, (c) Practical Support of Church and Church Societies, (d) Her Rights and Privileges in Ecclesiastical Councils.

WOMAN AND THE HOME.

(a) Modern Scientific Housekeeping Compared with Ancient, (b) Study and Training of Children, (c) Rights in Home, (d) Home Protection.

THE LEGAL STATUS OF WOMEN.

(a) Property Rights, (b) Marriage and Divorce, (c) Right to Make Wills, etc., (d) Guardianship of Children.

WOMAN IN GOVERNMENT.

(a) Present Status, (b) Services to Country, (c) Woman's Equal Right to Vote.

This would prove a helpful and interesting course to every union in the United States, and I trust that hundreds of them will unite in this study.

While the year 1902 brought us no great gains in enfranchisement to the women of this country, it brought full suffrage to the women of New South Wales and full parliamentary suffrage to the 800,000 women of Federated Australia. A suffrage victory anywhere has an influence everywhere. So we are encouraged to press on and endeavor in 1903 to secure the privileges of citizenship for many of the women of America.

If you would put the axe to the root of the tree of the legalized saloon and other governmental evils, first get the axe. The axe is the ballot of an American citizen.

ELLA S. STEWART,
1518 Manhattan Bldg., Chicago, Ill.

SPECIAL OFFER: The Union Signal ten weeks for TEN CENTS.

BROWN'S BRONCHIAL TROCHES
Neglect of a Cough or Sore Throat may result in an Incurable Throat Trouble or Consumption. For relief use BROWN'S BRONCHIAL TROCHES. Nothing excels this simple remedy. Sold only in boxes.

The Right Thing.

A New CATARRH CURE, Which is Rapidly Coming to the Front.

For several years, Eucalyptol Guaiacol and Hydrastin have been recognized as standard remedies for catarrhal troubles, but they have always been given separately and only very recently an ingenious chemist succeeded in combining them, together with other antiseptics into a pleasant effective tablet.

Druggists sell the remedy under the name of Stuart's Catarrh Tablets and it has met with remarkable success in the cure of nasal catarrh, bronchial and throat catarrh and in catarrh of the stomach.

Mr. F. N. Benton, whose address is care of Clark House, Troy, N. Y., says: "When I run up against anything that is good I like to tell people of it. I have been troubled with catarrh more or less for some time. Last winter more than ever. Tried several so-called cures, but did not get any benefit from them. About six weeks ago I bought a 50 cent box of Stuart's Catarrh Tablets and am glad to say that they have done wonders for me and I do not hesitate to let all my friends know that Stuart's Catarrh Tablets are the right thing."

Mr. Geo. J. Casanova of hotel Griffon, West 9th street, New York City, writes: "I have commenced using Stuart's Catarrh Tablets and already they have given me better results than any catarrh cure I have eved tried."

A leading physician of Pittsburg advises the use of Stuart's Catarrh Tablets in preference to any other treatment for catarrh of the head, throat or stomach.

He claims they are far superior to inhalers, salves, lotions or powder, and are much more convenient and pleasant to take and are so harmless that little children take them with benefit as they contain no opiate, cocaine or any poisonous drugs.

All druggists sell Stuart's Catarrh Tablets at 50 cents for full size package and they are probably the safest and most reliable cure for any form of catarrh.

$45 TOLMAN RANGES $21.75

with reservoir and high closet. We ship range for examination without a cent in advance. If you like it, pay $21.75 and freight and take range for

30 Days FREE Trial.

If not satisfactory we agree to refund your money. Tolman Ranges are made of best wrought steel. Oven 17½x21 in. Six 8 in. holes. Best bakers and roasters on earth. Burn anything. Asbestos lined flues. Guaranteed 5 years. Will save their cost in fuel in One Year. Write to-day for our new Catalogue.

Great Foundry Sale.

JUDSON A. TOLMAN COMPANY,
Dept. R. 106. 66 Lake Street, Chicago

LEARN PROOFREADING.

If you possess a fair education, why not utilize it at a genteel and uncrowded profession paying $15 to $35 weekly? Situations always obtainable. We are the original instructors by mail.

HOME CORRESPONDENCE SCHOOL, Philadelphia

KINDLY MENTION THE UNION SIGNAL WHEN WRITING ADVERTISERS.

25 CTS. PISO'S CURE FOR 25 CTS.
CURES WHERE ALL ELSE FAILS.
Best Cough Syrup. Tastes Good. Use in time. Sold by druggists.
CONSUMPTION

News from the Field

WORLD'S W. C. T. U.

General Officers.

President—Lady Henry Somerset, Eastnor Castle, Ledbury, England.
Vice-President-at-Large—Mrs. L. M. N. Stevens, Portland, Maine, U. S. A.
Honorary Secretaries—Miss Agnes E. Slack, Ripley, Derbyshire, England; Miss Anna A. Gordon, Evanston, Ill., U. S. A.
Honorary Treasurer—Mrs. Mary E. Sanderson Danville, Quebec, Canada.
General Secretary Y Branch—Mrs. Frances J. Barnes, 126 W. 103d St., New York City.
General Secretary L. T. L. Branch—Miss Anna A. Gordon, Evanston, Ill., U. S. A.

Victoria, Australia.

THE fifteenth convention has come and gone, proving a time of great refreshing and stimulus. Monday, Oct. 29, a grand rally of members and friends filled the spacious city hall to overflowing, the estimated attendance being about four thousand.

The chair was taken by Archdeacon Tucker who at the outset gave a splendid keynote to the meeting by referring with gratitude to the fact that God had been with the women in their effort to uplift humanity.

He compared the widened outlook of women of the present day, with those of years gone by, which meant increased responsibility. Mrs. McLean in a splendid address gave a short account of the main work accomplished and spoke with great earnestness of the need of many more consecrated workers.

Mano Ramabai, our little sister from India, was accorded an enthusiastic reception. In beautiful and well chosen language she told of the work carried on by her revered mother for the child widows and orphans in India. She had taken this long journey to ask our prayers and interest in this great work; we pray that her mission to Australia may be greatly blessed.

Tuesday evening Captain and Mrs. Press very generously entertained the delegates and workers at a reception, which proved from every point of view a most enjoyable affair. Mr. and Mrs. Thurgood, who are on a visit from the United States were accorded a very hearty reception to Victoria by Mrs. Press. They both responded and expressed their great pleasure in once more meeting so many old friends. For Thursday evening a very successful Medal Contest was arranged, which passed off admirably.

The convention was called to order on Tuesday morning, the most important morning items being the president's address and the secretary's report. Over 300 new members had been gained, and on the whole there was every reason for thankfulness.

The department reports were of a most encouraging character. The Bible readings during convention were greatly appreciated. A model L. T. L. meeting was given, also an admirable address by Dr. Mary Itone, on the "Uselessness of Alcohol in Sickness." The same officers were re-elected, viz., Mrs. McLean, president; Mrs. Kirk, secretary; Mrs. Press, treasurer.

Convention Reporter.

W. C. T. U. Notes.

White-ribboners of Montana aided by the ministers of the state are endeavoring to have a bill passed by the legislature compelling all saloons to close their doors from 12 o'clock Saturday night until 7 o'clock Monday morning.

Mrs. M. W. Newton, National lecturer, gave a short address before the union Sunday school in her home city, Staunton, Va., and secured 216 signatures to the pledge. She has organized five new unions in Virginia this winter.

The Auburn, Me., W. C. T. U. decided not to put time and money into a Christmas tree this year, but bought presents of suitable character for poor children who were known to the police matron as needy and deserving. This plan resulted in making many little hearts happy.

The District of Columbia W. C. T. U. gave a large and elaborate reception on New Year's day which was attended by hundreds of men and women from all parts of the city. Mrs. Clinton Smith was at the head of the receiving line; and she was assisted by her district officers, also Mrs. Ellis, Mrs. Crafts, Mrs. M. L. Welles and many other prominent women.

The annual report of the corresponding secretary of Manchester, N. H., union makes interesting reading, and though lengthy was published in full in the local papers. Noticeable in the year's record is a membership contest at which thirty-three members were added, a meeting at which a man presented to the union his arguments for license, which were refuted by one of the members at the next meeting who spoke on the benefits of prohibition. The society closes the year with 148 active members.

The Lansing, Mich., W. C. T. U. has recently presented to the city a beautiful fountain bearing the name of "The Frances E. Willard Memorial Fountain." It is of light gray Barre granite, unpolished but hammered smooth. The top bowl is so high that horses may drink without unchecking, and at the bottom there is a dog-lap. At the presentation exercises eight boys and girls sang a poem composed for the occasion by Miss Gordon. The cost of this fountain was $377, which amount was raised by means of hard work, serving meals, lunches, etc. Just such fountains are needed in every city in the country to help offset saloon influences.

On Thursday evening, January 8, the Frances E. Willard National Temperance Hospital presented a scene of unusual interest, the occasion being the annual joint staff meeting when the staff physicians, the board of trustees and as many of the nurses as could be spared from active duty, met to confer regarding the best interests of the institution. In spite of the cold weather there was a large and representative attendance. A number of the ladies brought their husbands and some of the doctors brought their wives. Physicians present were Dr. Sarah Hackett-Stevenson, Dr. Mary Maxson, Dr. West, Dr. J. J. Thompson, Dr. Bates, Dr. Pierce, Dr. Chapman, Dr. Collins and Dr. Towne. A delightful collation, artistically prepared by the matron and her assistants, was served to the guests.

Crowned.

Friends of Rev. James G. Fernald, formerly pastor at Granville, Springfield, and other places in Ohio, and of Nettie B. Fernald will be grieved to learn of the sudden death at their home in West New Brighton, Staten Island, N. Y., of their oldest daughter, Mary G. She was a young woman of the highest promise and of the loveliest Christian character. She was a graduate of the art department of Pratt Institute, Brooklyn, and had been supervisor of art in the schools of Cedar Rapids, Iowa, where she won exceptional success, and had begun with the brightest prospects her work in a like situation in the schools of Westfield, N. J. Ambitious and deeply conscientious, she undertook an amount of work that overtaxed her strength, so that in spite of all that care and skill could do, the young life failed. A wide circle of loving friends sympathize with the surrowing family in their sad bereavement. But the beautiful Christian life of the earnest years sheds its light through the gloom, and cheers with the trust that the weary one has found rest in the infinite sheltering love of her Saviour and her God.

BOOKS! TEN PER CENT REDUCTION FOR JANUARY ONLY.

"A Great Mother."
The life of Madam Willard.
A beautiful gift book.
Price, - - - - - $1.50
Net, postpaid, $1.35.

"The Little Green God."
Caroline Atwater Mason.
A story and study of to-day.
Price, - $1.00
Net, postpaid, 90 cents.

"Talks to Girls."
Eleanor A. Hunter.
"Talks to Boys."
Eleanor A. Hunter.
These books contain most convincing and earnest advice. Artistically bound in decorated covers.
Price, each, - - - 50 cents
Net, postpaid, 45 cents.

"Those Black Diamond Men."
William F. Gibbons.
A tale of the Anthrax Valley.
Price, - $1.50
Net, postpaid, $1.35.

"Nineteen Beautiful Years."
Frances E. Willard.
The story of the life of "Sister Mary."
Price, - 60 cents
Net, postpaid, 54 cents.

"Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch."
Alice Caldwell Hegan.
A wonderful mingling of pathos and humor, "a sure cure for the blues."
Price, - $1.00
Net, postpaid, 90 cents.

"Alcohol a Dangerous and Unnecessary Medicine."
Mrs. M. M. Allen.
A book that should be in every household.
Price, - - - - - $1.25
Net, postpaid, $1.12.

"Janet Ward."
Margaret E. Sangster.
A meritorious book for girls.
Price, - $1.50
Net, postpaid, $1.35.

"Studies in Hearts."
Julia MacNair Wright.
A series of charming sketches. Illustrated.
Price, - - - - - 75 cents
Net, postpaid, 67 cents.

"The Opportunity Circle."

Faye Huntington.
A story of good deeds accomplished by young earnest hearts.
Price, 50 cents
Net, postpaid, 45 cents.

"To the Third Generation."
Hope Daring.
A story of intemperance, showing the effects on the children and grandchildren of a man whom wine was not supposed to injure.
Price, - - - - - $1.00
Net, postpaid, 90 cents.

"Aunt Abby's Neighbors"
Annie Trumbull Slosson.
A book of New England folk. Fully illustrated.
Price, - $1.00
Net, postpaid, 90 cents.

COUPON

Please send to.....
Street.....
City.....
State.....

The books herein listed (attach list of books) upon which, by the use of this coupon I am entitled to 10 per cent discount if presented during December or January.

We solicit your orders for any and all books, assuring you that orders will be promptly filled. NO FURTHER DISCOUNT FROM THE NET PRICES.

WOMAN'S TEMPERANCE PUBLISHING ASSOCIATION.
84 La Salle St., CHICAGO.

THE OPTIMISTS' CLUB

By JOHN F. COWAN, D. D.

WHEN the president had called the club to order with a rainbow gavel, and had put his rose-colored spec's on his nose, up arose the only pessimist in the meeting and wanted to know in a tone as doleful as a swamp croaker's, "What is to become of this country if we keep on taking in foreigners and do not Americanize them?"

Every one looked at the speaker, and —yes, sure enough, he was wearing blue spec's. "Why," answered a smiling member who writes articles for Scribner's, "the trouble is with your glasses. We are Americanizing the foreigners. Any observer on a transatlantic steamer cannot help noticing how the ship's crew bluff and cuff the unresisting passengers. But he must also notice that when these same immigrants make their first return visit to the fatherland, they will not submit to the old treatment. It is common talk below decks that steerage passengers going west and going east are not to be handled in the same way. The average immigrant soaks in enough of our national spirit to make him rate himself higher and expect others to do the same."

"Yes, Mr. President," broke in a man who knows about the West Branch mission, New York, "and the crews on the steamships will be a great deal more sympathetic if the grace of God keeps at work among them. Recently a fireman on the Campania was converted in the mission, and twenty-three of the men are now Christians. The Christian influences on the ship are so strong that the captain has put up a sign forbidding swearing. Isn't that almost a miracle, on an ocean liner?"

The pessimist had been rubbing his glasses and edging back towards the door, but he halted long enough to hear the next speaker. "And you don't wonder that we do make our impress on immigrants when you half know what good hearts the American people have. I know a lovely story of a group of society girls who wanted to help somewhere. They learned that there was need of entertainers in the hospitals, and so they agreed to take turns and two or three of them go every day to play games with the patients, sing songs and tell stories. Many a child about to undergo a dreaded operation has had its mind diverted from the worry by being delightfully amused during the waiting hour. Pretty good for—what do you call them, Mr. Pessimist?—'mere butterflies of fashion, eh?'"

The pessimist had his hand on the knob, and so he plucked up courage to retort, "That's better than you can say of most of the charitable and humane work that is done by agents paid good salaries to be unselfish."

"Hold him! Seize his coat-tails!" cried a member of the club who hastily arose. There was nothing else left of the pessimist in the room to lay hold of, but he was compelled to stay and listen. "Do you know Mr. George T. Angell, secretary of the Humane Society and editor of "Our Dumb Animals," Boston? Well, when he entered upon his humane work he had accumulated between $30,000 and $40,000 at the practice of law. For twenty years he gave his services without salary to the humane work, besides several thousands in cash. By a fortunate investment his property has increased, and at the death of himself and wife all of it will go to humane societies."

"But think how many needless religious sects there are," sputtered the man held by his coat-tails.

"That reminds me, Mr. President," spoke up another smiling member, "that the Methodists of Canada have invited the Presbyterians and Congregationalists to meet them to discuss union, and the Methodists, as we know, have swept their own doorstep clean by first uniting all their branches."

"But we are cursed by sordid millionaires and ——"

"But just think how we are blessed by public-spirited millionaires. Have you heard how John Jacob Astor gave to the public all his patents in marine turbines?"

"Yes, and have you heard how Mr. J. P. Phelps Stokes, a Yale graduate and physician, left his palace on Madison avenue, New York, to take up settlement work in the slums?"

"Yes, yes, yes, yes," broke in a chorus of the members. "Look at it right, and this old world is growing mellower and kinder."

"I—I—I don't know but there is something wrong with my spec's," grudgingly admitted the pessimist. "I read the yellow journals too much, maybe. I—I—I'm not sorry you held my coat-tails. May I come again?"

Boston.

THE SOLDIER'S HANDBOOK—A CURIO.

By Nemo.

THE "Soldier's Handbook," of the United States Army, furnishes some interesting and very useful instruction to the soldier-boy regarding the care of his health, and gives him some advice and warning as to alcoholic stimulants. From the edition of 1898, under the heading, "Take Care of Your Health," the following extracts are taken:

"Nothing is more certain to secure endurance and capability of long-continued effort than the avoidance of anything as a drink, except cold water (and coffee at breakfast).

After any sort of exhausting effort, a cup of coffee or tea, hot or cold, is an admirable sustainer of the strength until nature begins to recover herself.

If you will drink spirits, it is incomparably safer to do so after an effort than before, for it gives only transient strength, lasting but a few minutes. As it can never be known how long any given effort is to last—and, if longer than a few minutes, the body becomes more feeble than it would have been without the stimulus—it is clear that the use before an effort is hazardous and unwise."

There is nothing in the foregoing that advocates the use of liquor either as a beverage or as a stimulant, or that would indicate that a "beer canteen" is required at any army post or station. The edition of 1900 is still better, showing a more decided opinion in favor of temperance in the army, as will be seen from the following quotations:

"If the soldier comes into camp much exhausted, a cup of tea is the best restorative.

It should be unnecessary to speak of the danger from the use of intoxicating liquors, for every soldier knows something of this. The mind of a man under the influence of these liquors is so befogged that he is unable to protect himself from accidents and exposures. How many men have been passed from this world because of exposure during intoxication! How many have lost their health and strength and become wretched sufferers during the remainder of a shortened existence! Besides, for days after indulgence in liquor the system is broken down and the individual is less able to stand the fatigues, exposures or wounds of the campaign."

There is nothing truer than this last paragraph, from the 1900 handbook, and it applies to the soldiers stationed everywhere both in times of peace and of war. No soldier is a reliable and capable one who drinks. The "Soldier's Handbook" is prepared by direction of the Adjutant General of the Army, and is published by direction of the Secretary of War, at the Government Printing House, Washington, D. C. It is put into the hands of each individual soldier in the Army for his edification and guidance.

After going to all the trouble and expense of printing this book for the soldier, and telling him truths which, from personal experience, he sometimes knows to be facts, it would seem strange that a bill authorizing the restoration of the army canteen and the sale of beer and wine in it, could ever again be passed and become a law. It would seem that if the Commander-in-Chief does approve such a bill, should it pass the next Congress, he is preaching one thing to his soldiers and an entirely different one by the presence of beer and wine in the post exchange.

"A soldier should endeavor to be always at his best. He should avoid all exposures, not in the line of duty, which he knows would be likely to injure his health, for if he is from any cause below par, he is liable to break down under influences which otherwise might have had but little effect on him."

Very true, indeed, but how is the soldier-boy to be "at his best" if the temptation is put at his elbow and no help is given to better his condition or to lift him up to a higher plane of life?

Lieutenant-General Miles is reported to have said: "I don't believe the present law should be repealed until it has been given a fair trial." Yes, and could the fathers of the boys in the army take a peep at their children behind the scenes, they would say the same and would do everything in their power that the present law might receive a fair trial, and that other laws, which are now apparently dead letters, might be resuscitated and brought into force for the betterment of the soldier's welfare as well as for that of the son's.

To become a soldier in Uncle Sam's army, one has to be able-bodied, free from disease, of good character and temperate habits; in his application he has to answer the question, "Do you use intoxicating liquors; if so, to what extent?" and the enlisting officer has to certify upon honor that the party was absolutely sober when enlisted. But what is the use of all this precaution at the start if like precaution is not taken during the man's enlistment to enforce rules and regulations that are for his own good, as well as to keep all possible evil out of his reach?

I write about the soldier because I am one myself, and I have seen some of the terrible results of the drink habit, because I know to what it tends to bring a man; because I believe all the circumstances in connection with a soldier's life should be such as to make him proud of his vocation and that everything that does not help to build up character and make him a true man, should be put away from him. The officers of the army ought to be the very first to advocate temperance among the enlisted men and to help it all they can, for ninety per cent. of all the trouble that occurs is directly or indirectly due to drink. (The Summary Court and General Court Records will prove this to be true at any army post in the country.)

The Y. M. C. A. have what is called the "Army Temperance Union," which, no doubt, does good; and the W. C. T. U. also have a 'Christian Temperance Union" working among the boys wherever they can get in, and they do a great deal of good because they do not discriminate and are not afraid to speak the truth about this subject everywhere they go. These are both good works, and I believe they are the forerunners of what is to be when the officers and men awake and become alive to the truth that "Total abstinence is the producer of the finest soldiers."

An Army Temperance Union, organized by men in the Army, upheld and encouraged by the officers of the Army, and receiving the help that will always be given gladly by outside sympathetic organizations, is what is needed. Every army post or station should have its temperance room, and every encouragement should be given to the workers who are trying to do good in this way.

All mothers of daughters should write to Mrs. M. Summers, Notre Dame, Ind., for a free copy of her "Advice to Mothers." See ad. in this paper.

The Value of Charcoal.

Few People Know How Useful it is in Preserving Health and Beauty.

Nearly everybody knows that charcoal is the safest and most efficient disinfectant and purifier in nature, but few realize its value when taken into the human system for the same cleansing purpose.

Charcoal is a remedy that the more you take of it the better; it is not a drug at all, but simply absorbs the gases and impurities always present in the stomach and intestines and carries them out of the system.

Charcoal sweetens the breath after smoking, drinking, or after eating onions and other odorous vegetables.

Charcoal effectually clears and improves the complexion, it whitens the teeth and further acts as a natural and eminently safe cathartic.

It absorbs the injurious gases which collect in the stomach and bowels; it disinfects the mouth and throat from the poison of catarrh.

All druggists sell charcoal in one form or another, but probably the best charcoal and the most for the money is in Stuart's Absorbent Lozenges; they are composed of the finest powdered Willow charcoal, and other harmless antiseptics in tablet form, or rather in the form of large, pleasant tasting lonzenges, the charcoal being mixed with honey.

The daily use of these lozenges will soon tell in a much improved condition of the general health, better complexion, sweeter breath and purer blood, and the beauty of it is, that no possible harm can result from their continued use, but, on the contrary, great benefit.

A Buffalo physician in speaking of the benefits of charcoal, says: "I advise Stuart's Absorbent Lozenges to all patients suffering from gas in stomach and bowels, and to clear the complexion and purify the breath, mouth and throat; I also believe the liver is greatly benefited by the daily use of them; they cost but twenty-five cents a box at drug stores, and although in some sense a patent preparation, yet I believe I get more and better charcoal in Stuart's Absorbent Lozenges than in any of the ordinary charcoal tablets."

LADIES to do piecework at their homes. We furnish all material and pay from $7 to $12 weekly. Experience unnecessary. Send stamped envelope to ROYAL CO., Dept. U.S., 34 Monroe Street, Chicago, Ill.

33% DIVIDEND

paid by the Mexican Plantation Association, 1602 Title and Trust Building, Chicago, Ill. Oldest of its kind in Mexico. ESTABLISHED 1897. Has 6,000 shares, or acres, planted to permanent crops, rubber, coffee and vanilla. The Association's contract is like an insurance policy—in case of death the money is refunded. 38 deaths have occured since 1897. These shares will now be resold. For full particulars, address as above.

SKIN DISEASES CURED

MEXICAN PALMA SALVE will positively cure

Tetter, Erysipelas, Salt Rheum, ScaldHead, Itch, Ringworms, Ulcers, Burns, Scalps, Barber's Itch, Ulcers in the Ear, Pimples or Blotches on the Face, Sore Nose and Sore Eyelids, Corns, PILES and all Eruptions of the Skin.
It removes all Ugly Blotches, Pimples, Roughness and Redness of the Skin and effectually heals all Scaly, Tettery Eruptions, cooling the irritation and making the skin beautifully fair and smooth.

Chapped Hands

will be relieved with one or two applications, and made soft and white with two days' treatment.

Red and Rough Hands

made soft and white with two days' treatment, and will remain white with occasional applications of the salve.

Special Offer.

To introduce this excellent salve to the readers of the Union Signal, we will send our regular 25c. box for 12c. in stamps. Send NOW, to

LA PALMA PERFUMERY CO.
1106, 184 La Salle Street, Chicago, Ill.

Ladies' Hands

My experience with PEARLINE leads me to think it milder on the hands, and it takes less of it than of —— to soften hard water. I am pleased with results.

Mrs. Rev. S. E. V.

One of the Millions. 686

FALLING HAIR AND BALDNESS ABSOLUTELY CURED

There is but one way to tell the reason of baldness and falling hair, and that is by a microscopic examination of the hair itself. The particular disease with which your scalp is afflicted must be known before it can be intelligently treated. The use of dandruff cures and hair tonics, without knowing the specific cause of your disease, is like taking medicine without knowing what you are trying to cure. Send three fallen hairs from your combings, to Prof. J. H. Austin, the celebrated Bacteriologist, who will send you absolutely free a diagnosis of your case, a booklet on care of the hair and scalp, and a sample box of the remedy which he will prepare specially for you. Enclose 2c postage and write to-day.

PROF. J. H. AUSTIN, 409 McVicker's Bldg., Chicago, Ill.

KINDLY MENTION THE UNION SIGNAL WHEN WRITING ADVERTISERS.

CHIRON LUBRICATING PILE CONE

A small, hollow, perforated wooden cone, filled with the Chiron Ointment, especially prepared for the purpose. Perfect and continuous lubrication by soothing and healing ointment directly to the sore spots. Endorsed by physicians. Immediate relief and a certain cure for ALL KINDS OF PILES. By mail, securely sealed in plain wrapper, with extra box of ointment, $3, P. O. or Exp. Order.

The CHIRON Mfg. Co., Plainfield, N. J.

LADIES—STUDY AT HOME

TRAIN TO NURSE

Use leisure hours to become independent. Every woman inexperienced or experienced in nursing should receive a thorough course of theoretical training before assuming the responsibility of ministering to the sick. Our course universally endorsed by physicians and surgeons as practical and easy of comprehension. Our faculty, leading physicians and surgeons of Chicago. Our scholars enthusiastic in our support. Diploma. Catalogue free. American Cor. School for Nurses, O—167 Dearborn, Chicago.

KINDLY MENTION THE UNION SIGNAL WHEN WRITING ADVERTISERS.

The Sure Hatch's Latest

An automatic, direct acting regulator that surpasses any other improvement ever made in incubators. Send for new illustrated catalog and free trial offer.

80 Days FREE TRIAL

SURE HATCH INCUBATOR CO., Clay Center, Neb., or Columbus, Ohio.

KINDLY MENTION THE UNION SIGNAL WHEN WRITING ADVERTISERS.

INDIVISUAL CUP COMMUNION SERVICE Should be used by every church. Complete outfit sent for trial upon request. THOMAS COMMUNION SERVICE CO., Box 75, Lima, O.

KINDLY MENTION THE UNION SIGNAL WHEN WRITING ADVERTISERS.

$20 A WEEK Straight salary and expenses to men with rig to introduce our Poultry Mixture in country; year's contract; weekly pay. Address, with stamp, Monarch Mfg. Co., Box 1166, Springfield, Ill.

KINDLY MENTION THE UNION SIGNAL WHEN WRITING ADVERTISERS.

HOME WORK for everyone, $12 to $30 per week. No canvassing. Business conducted in your home, no matter where you live. 2c. stamp for particulars. N. M. C. Club, 171 E. 51st St., Chicago, Ill.

KINDLY MENTION THE UNION SIGNAL WHEN WRITING ADVERTISERS.

TO INVESTORS.

Money invested in Sheep and Cattle in Montana is safe and pays 30 per cent. A small investment now grows into a large flock in few years. Over 300 men, women and children now have cattle and sheep on our ranches. Write for Annual Report, a most interesting document. MONTANA CO-OPERATIVE RANCH CO., Great Falls, Montana.

KINDLY MENTION THE UNION SIGNAL WHEN WRITING ADVERTISERS

Responsive Readings

Published Monthly.

Designed for the use of local unions and of great aid to workers, as they contain information wholly upon the work of the departments of the W. C. T. U.

SUBSCRIPTION PRICE:

Single Copies, per year ..... $.10
13 Copies, per year, to one address 1.00
100 of this issue ..... .50

Subject for January Reading,

The Work for the Promotion of Purity in Literature and Art.

By Emilie D. Martin.

Woman's Temperance Publishing Association,

184 LA SALLE ST., CHICAGO, ILL.

A CAMPAIGN AGAINST THE ANTI-CANTEEN LAW.

THERE is apparently a systematic campaign being conducted against the anti-canteen law. The chief feature of this campaign is to exaggerate the amount of drinking by soldiers and the misconduct of drunken soldiers. Among the army posts concerning which stories are being widely circulated, is Fort Sheridan, located near Chicago. This is one of the largest army posts in the country. In order to ascertain the accuracy of certain reports concerning the conduct of soldiers connected with Fort Sheridan, the Chicago Methodist Preachers' meeting, a few weeks ago, appointed a committee to investigate. This committee reported to the Preachers' meeting last week as follows:

Your committee appointed to visit Highwood to ascertain the accuracy of sensational reports published in the secular press concerning the riotous conduct of drunken soldiers from Fort Sheridan in that village, begs leave to report.

We visited Highwood last Monday. We had clippings which stated that the grievances were so great that a campaign of prayers and tears by certain women residing in Highwood had been instituted against saloon-keepers; that women were unsafe from insult by soldiers who had become drunk in the saloons of the village; and that worshipers were very seriously disturbed on the Sabbath. Your committee called upon one of the women mentioned as laboring with saloon-keepers in the interests of good order. She denied the entire story. We called upon one of the saloon-keepers, who is president of the village board. He denied the report of the disorderly conduct of drunken soldiers in the village. He said the patronage of the saloons by the soldiers from Fort Sheridan was not five per cent. of their trade.

We visited two officers of the village, one the town clerk, an ex-soldier from the fort, and who was very emphatic in his denunciation of the "slanderous reports" which were published about drunken soldiers in the town.

An ex-officer of the village echoed his emphatic remarks and said that when the canteen was running in the fort, on pay-day they were obliged to arrest from eight to twelve soldiers for drunkenness and disorderly conduct. Now it is not so. He stated that the previous Friday afternoon was a pay-day and that not a single soldier was arrested.

Your committee found that the sensational reports appearing in the newspapers were fiction without a basis of fact.

M. M. Parkhurst,
H. G. Jackson,
T. R. Strobridge,
Committee.

Knowing the men who compose this committee, we have no hesitation in declaring that their report is an exact statement of the truth concerning the situation at Highwood, the village immediately adjoining Fort Sheridan. This report shows the utter unreliability of the statements sent broadcast concerning that post. If we did not know that the Chicago daily papers would not permit themselves to be used as the tools even of an organized liquor association, we might suspect that they were publishing matter furnished them by some brewers and distillers' bureau. That such matter is being furnished to some papers is evidenced by the following circular, which has been sent to a number of newspaper editors in at least one state:

Superintendent of Correspondence of the Brewers and Distillers' Association.
To the Editor of.....
.....

DEAR SIR:—The manner and methods of fighting the liquor business that have been adopted by the American Anti-Saloon League are begining to prove the most formidable foes the brewers and distillers, as well as saloon men in general, have yet had to meet; and if some vigorous steps to put down this movement are not taken immediately the liquor business is going to find itself up against one of the hardest propositions with which it has ever met. This A. S. L. is operating all over this country, and is costing the saloon men vast sums of money already, to say nothing of the trouble and annoyance. And they have just begun. Every day some new scheme that they have worked to get our men into trouble, and that costs us money, is reported.

In order, therefore, to protect ourselves and our business it is imperative that every means possible for self-protection be used.

Our best friend is the newspaper. This being the case, we are going to make it worth something to them to stand by us in this thing. I have recently been put in charge of this department of work with instructions to spare neither pains nor money in this, one of the hardest fights we have yet had to put up.

What will you charge us for the use of say one of your editorial columns per week, we to furnish material, you to publish it as editorial matter?

Of course we will have to be conservative in handling this organization except where we are sure of our grounds; then we will make every edge cut to serve our purpose. And this matter will have to be kept sub rosa. This is my instruction, and I have to make a confidant of you, and I can make it PAY you.

Please let me have your terms as soon as possible, money to accompany each article.

Your truly.....

This letter throws much light on the campaign for the abolition of the anti-canteen laws. Readers of papers in which such matter appears will be able to judge of its value and also of the character of the papers publishing it. United States senators and members of Congress may also be able to measure the value of such newspaper utterances.

The power of the liquor element, great as it is, is waning. The business men of the country themselves have revolted against the liquor power and are insisting that their employes must be total abstainers, in order that they may render their employers the most efficient service. The many business interests of the country are a greater political power than the single liquor interest, which has heretofore dominated politics to so large an extent, and shrewd politicians will recognize this fact. As business men are going to insist upon sober workmen, the country will before many years insist upon a sober army, which cannot be secured through the maintenance of the army saloon.

Both houses of Congress should not only maintain the anti-canteen law, but they should insist upon its rigid enforcement and should enact additional laws that will protect soldiers from outside saloons and punish saloon-keepers who sell liquor to soldiers in uniform. They should also enact laws prohibiting the use of intoxicating liquors by cadets at West Point or by officers in the army or navy. This may seem to them an extreme position to take, but it is the position which should be taken and which the country before many years will demand shall be taken. No other course is safe, for the officer or soldier whose brain is befuddled with liquor is a greater peril to the army which he commands than are the weapons of the enemy arraved against it.—Northwestern Christian Advocate.

Little Nina went to church with her grandmother, and for the first time put two pennies in the contribution plate. Leaning over, she whispered very audibly: "That's all right, grandma, I paid for two!"

An Unparalleled Offer

The UNION SIGNAL

Ten Weeks for Ten Cents.

No such offer to UNION SIGNAL readers has ever before been made. 176 pages of reading matter covering the world's news in temperance and the forward policy of the W.C.T.U. of the world, giving household and other matter of interest to every home maker, and bringing to the home reading of a character to raise the highest ideals and aspirations of the growing members of the family. A genuine family magazine for every W. C. T. U. woman and friend of temperance and right living.

Commencing with the January 8th number, a serial story of sustained interest will run for ten weeks. This story alone is worth many times the price of 10c. for the paper. Now is the time for officers of Unions to send in their entire list of membership. Just think of it, the UNION SIGNAL for 10 weeks for 10 cents. Send postage stamps or any convenient way, but do it at once, as this offer is open for acceptance during January only, and any received after February 1st will be returned. ACT PROMPTLY.

The Union Signal for Ten Weeks for Ten Cents

Tell all your friends, and see that the entire list of your Union is on our mailing list for the ten weeks.

Circulation Department,

The UNION SIGNAL

184 La Salle St., Chicago.

Coupon.

Enclosed please find 10 cents, for which send me the UNION SIGNAL 10 weeks.

Name,.....

Street,.....

City,.....

State,.....

This coupon WILL NOT be honored after January 31st, 1903.

A REDUCTION
OF 10 PER CENT
FOR JANUARY ONLY

"Winsome Womanhood."
Margaret E. Sangster.
Familiar talks on life and conduct.
Price, - $1.25
Net, postpaid, $1.12.

"White Ribbon Birthday Book."
Anna A. Gordon.
A book composed of quotations from noted women.
Price, - - - - - - $1.00
Net, postpaid, 90 cents.

"David Douglas and His Wife."
Mrs. O. W. Scott.
A practical prohibition story.
Price, - - - - - - 50 cents
Net, postpaid, 45 cents.

"Six of Them."
Mrs. S. M. Perkins.
A cleverly told temperance tale.
Price, - - - - - 75 cents
Net, postpaid, 67 cents.

"The Beautiful Life of Frances E. Willard."
Anna A. Gordon.
The biography of Miss Willard, written by one most closely identified with her.
Price, - - - - - - $2.00
Net, postpaid, $1.80.

RALPH CONNOR'S BOOKS.

"Glengarry School Days."
Connor's Latest Work.
This new volume fittingly supplements "The Man from Glengarry" in that it deals with some of the same characters, but in a different period. Cloth bound. Illustrated.
Price, - $1.25
Net, postpaid, $1.12

"Black Rock."
A tale of the Selkirks.
Price, - - - - - - $1.25
Net, postpaid, $1.12.

"The Sky Pilot."
A tale of the foothills.
Price, - - - - - - $1.25
Net, postpaid, $1.12.

"The Man from Glengarry."
A tale of the Ottawa.
Price, - - - - - - $1.50
Net, postpaid, $1.35.

WOMAN'S TEMPERANCE PUBLISHING ASSOCIATION
CHICAGO

About Women

Mrs. J. M. Flower has accepted re-election as president of the Illinois Training School for Nurses.

The Countess of Aberdeen has accepted the nomination by the Canadian and other national councils of women as president of the International Council to succeed Mrs. May Wright Sewall.

At the final state examinations for women, which have just been held for the first time in St. Petersburg, 111 candidates have obtained their medical degree. So Russia is to have its women physicians.

Mrs. Hattie McCall Travis is so far the only woman midway concessionaire of the World's Fair. With untiring energy, she has prepared to handle two exhibits. One of these is the reproduction of the streets of Seville.

Suffrage headquarters have been opened at the Lindell hotel, Lincoln, Neb., as the first step in the campaign for the bill on the property rights of women which will be brought to the attention of the state legislature.

Five traveling libraries are kept circulating in Cook county as a result of the efforts of the Englewood, Ill., Woman's Club. The club also maintains and carries on an industrial school for teaching young girls practical sewing and housekeeping.

Governor La Follette of Wisconsin has appointed Mrs. E. Ray Stevens as the woman member of the board of normal regents. Mrs. Stevens was formerly county superintendent of Dane county and was afterward a teacher in the Milwaukee-Downer college.

St. Andrew's church, at Bradfield, Berkshire, is the only church in England where the bells are rung by women instead of men. The vicar being unable to obtain men, appealed to the women of his congregation, and six young women have rung the bells regularly, although it is heavy and trying work.

"No more whisky advertisements on the public wastepaper boxes," is the slogan of club-women in Indianapolis, who are laying siege to the city council in order to do away with abuses in in the city management. They are also asking for the enforcement of the law on strict closing hours and the doing away of the wine-rooms.

The sum of $5,000 has been given to the University of Idaho for the endowment of a scholarship for women. The scholarship is of the annual value of $300 for two years from date and $200 thereafter. It is to be awarded to one of the young women at the end of the freshman year, and is to be used by the beneficiary for completing her course in the University.

Among the prizes offered by a Jamaica newspaper in its Christmas number was one to the servant who could show the longest continuous service in one family in Jamaica. There were fifty-nine competitors, and the prize was awarded to an African woman with seventy-four years' service to her credit. She is now 89 years old and hearty. The other fifty-eight servants had been employed from five to seventy-two years. The newspaper challenges the United States to show such a record.

The Woman's National Sabbath Alliance, Mrs. Margaret E. Sangster, president, offers a prize of $25.00 for a paper not exceeding 2,500 words, on the uplifting of a community through the sanctification of the Sabbath day, public worship, family prayer, religious training of the children in the school and Sabbath school—a work similar to that of Oberlin in France during the 18th century. No mere story or fiction will be accepted. Should there be two satisfactory papers, almost equally to the point, the prize will be divided, fifteen dollars for the first, and ten for the second. Manuscripts will be received at the office of the Alliance, Room 709, 156 Fifth avenue, New York City, until April 1st, 1903, and must contain a sealed envelope with name and address. No manuscript will be returned unless accompanied with full postage, or called for at the office. The winning manuscript will become the property of the Alliance.

SISTER: READ MY FREE OFFER

Wise Words to Sufferers
From a Woman of Notre Dame, Ind.

I will mail, free of any charge, this Home Treatment with full instructions and the history of my own case to any lady suffering from female trouble. You can cure yourself at home without the aid of any physician. It will cost you nothing to give the treatment a trial, and if you decide to continue it will only cost you about twelve cents a week. It will not interfere with your work or occupation. I have nothing to sell. Tell other sufferers of it—that is all I ask. It cures all, young or old.

☞ If you feel a bearing-down sensation, sense of impending evil, pain in the back or bowels, creeping feeling up the spine, a desire to cry frequently, hot flashes, weariness, frequent desire to urinate, or if you have Leucorrhea (Whites), Displacement or Falling of the Womb, Profuse, Scanty or Painful Periods, Tumors or Growths, address MRS. M. SUMMERS, NOTRE DAME, IND., U. S. A. for the FREE TREATMENT and FULL INFORMATION. Thousands besides myself have cured themselves with it. I send it in plain wrappers.

TO MOTHERS OF DAUGHTERS I will explain a simple Home Treatment which speedily and effectually cures Leucorrhea, Green Sickness and Painful or Irregular Menstruation in young ladies. It will save you anxiety and expense and save your daughter the humiliation of explaining her troubles to others. Plumpness and health always result from its use.

Wherever you live I can refer you to well-known ladies of your own state or county who know and will gladly tell any sufferer that this Home Treatment really cures all diseased conditions of our delicate female organism, thoroughly strengthens relaxed muscles and ligaments which cause displacement, and makes women well. Write today, as this offer will not be made again. Address

MRS. M. SUMMERS, Box 200 Notre Dame, Ind., U. S. A.

BURPEE'S SEEDS ARE THE BEST THAT CAN BE GROWN

If you want the choicest vegetables or most beautiful flowers you should read BURPEE'S FARM ANNUAL FOR 1903,—so well known as the "Leading American Seed Catalogue." It is mailed FREE to all. Better send your address TO-DAY. W. ATLEE BURPEE & CO., PHILADELPHIA.

Although the Methodist church does not permit its women to become regularly ordained ministers, Miss Helen Gertrude Rumsey is no less a Methodist preacher for that. She preaches and performs pastoral work as regularly, faithfully and efficiently as the men ministers do, and she is far more popular, to judge by the crowded houses she attracts whenever it is announced that the girl preacher is to speak.

Miss Louise W. Wilkins, who has recently added some $60,000 to her private fortune by the sale of her Satsuma mine in Arizona, is probably the only woman in the world who is a practical gold miner. She is about 34 and has been a prospector and miner for twelve years. She has found, opened, developed and sold five gold and two copper mines in Arizona and Chihuahua, and from three of her gold properties she has realized about $175,000.

Having lived in three centuries and under every president except Washington, Miss Rebekah Whitcomb, of Berlin, Mass., has just completed her 103d year. In early life she was a school teacher. She was always industrious, but for the last few years her hands have been too numb to sew. Her eyes are somewhat weak, but she can read a short time. Her hearing is impaired, but she is able to enjoy conversation and sees many callers, whom she always receives with pleasure. She does not seem to recall much of her early life, but has a good memory for the events of middle life and later years.

An Indiana woman has been called upon to pay a poll tax and this is what she has to say about it: "It is a rare thing for a woman to have to pay poll tax. A woman is not supposed to know much about law. Some men holding city offices here have taken advantage of this, and when I went to pay the tax on my real estate I was notified that there was $10.55 city tax against me. Upon making inquiries of the treasurer I was led to believe it was all on the real estate, but after they had got my money I looked at the receipt and found that it included $1.65 for poll tax in the name of my late husband. I consulted my attorney and he said he was 75 years old and I was the first woman he ever knew of that had to pay poll tax. I saw that I was being duped and I demanded my money, but they said they had sent it to Indianapolis. I have paid $4.13 poll tax since Jan. 15, 1902. I then made inquiries if I would be permitted to vote at the next election. They said they were afraid I would be denied that privilege. I do not wish to gain notoriety by this, but I do wish to warn other widows that may be left in like circumstances to beware of the tax collectors, for they are abroad in the land."

Large DIVIDENDS ASSURED
INVESTORS GUARANTEED AGAINST LOSS.

Stock in the HONDURAS INVESTMENT AND PLANTATION CO., owning a tropical plantation of 60,000 acres, is guaranteed by Gold Bonds. An IDEAL INVESTMENT for large and small capitalists. No greater proposition in the market. For particulars, address

HONDURAS INVESTMENT AND PLANTATION CO.
Hendricks, Minn.

"RED RUM"

A thrilling temperance story which appeals to men, just the thing to place in the hands of voters just before election. Address with stamp for sample copy, W. C. T. U., Jamestown, New York.

KINDLY MENTION THE UNION SIGNAL WHEN WRITING ADVERTISERS.

LADIES: Make sofa pillows at home; entirely new idea; $8 to $15 weekly; materials furnished. No canvassing; steady work. Send stamped addressed envelope. New Textile Manufacturing Co., Erie Street, Chicago.

Publishers' Notes.

A Gift. The offer of THE UNION SIGNAL TEN WEEKS FOR TEN CENTS is, in reality, a GENEROUS GIFT of the publishers to any one who is willing to forward this amount to cover the cost of mailing. It is made because they keenly appreciate the necessity of every member of the W. C. T. U. becoming thoroughly acquainted with the official organ, which is of vital importance to the national work. The hundreds who are not subscribers cannot know what they have lost and are losing by neglect of duty in not subscribing and so we urge upon every local president and upon every W. T. P. A. agent, in fact upon EVERY SUBSCRIBER who so well knows how essential THE UNION SIGNAL is to the welfare of the work and worker, an individual responsibility in announcing this offer and endeavoring to gain the full membership of their respective unions as subscribers. The publishers most sincerely solicit your co-operation

Calendars. We have a small number of very select calendars which we will close out at greatly reduced prices. The fifty-cent calendar will be sent postpaid for 35 cents; the thirty-five cent calendar for twenty-five cents; the twenty-five cent calendar for fifteen cents, or we will mail THREE beautiful calendars for fifty cents. These are all choice goods and the number is limited.

WOMAN'S TEMPERANCE PUB. ASSN.,
184 La Salle St., Chicago.

Signal Notes

Dr. John P. Woods of Coffeyville, Kan., celebrated his 101st birthday anniversary Jan. 4, 1903. He has never used intoxicants nor tobacco. Has never worn glasses and until a sort time ago read the newspapers regularly.

The Pennsylvania company has issued an order that its employes must not be engaged in any other business while working for the company. A number of conductors are interested in restaurants along the line of the road, others have groceries, and occasionally have been found to be silent partners in saloons.

Nine amendments to the state constitution of New Hampshire were framed by the constitutional convention, just adjourned. These include prohibition of trusts; the extension of the suffrage to women; a tax upon inheritances and franchises; an educational qualification for the suffrage, and to strike the word Protestant from the bill of rights.

Students of sociology in France are calling attention to the fact that the consumption of spirituous liquors in that country is rapidly increasing. Her drink consumption per head is greater than that of Great Britain, Germany or the United States, not only of wine, but of the more fiery spirits. As a result of the increasing alcoholism, there has been a six-fold increase in the number of recruits unfit for military service and in some cantons recruiting is practically impossible. Sixty per cent of the males and 70 per cent of the females in the lunatic asylum at Alencon are alcoholic.

The Citizen's League of Chicago has issued an attractive folder, which is being sent to all the manufacturing firms in the city, urging employers to pay their employes in cash instead of bank checks. "We find," says the folder, "that the custom of paying your employes in checks is a serious cause of drunkenness. Large numbers of saloon-keepers by cashing these checks get your employes into their places and put them under obligation to patronize their bars. Many men get trusted for drinks until pay day because they agree to bring in their checks and after paying up the score they begin to drink and spend all their money, going home empty-handed to abuse their families. Hundreds of minors take their first glass when the saloon-keepers cash their checks."

Russian temperance committees do much to make happier the lives of their country's poor. In Moscow one year saw twelve huge "Narodny Dows" or Peoples Houses opened, which contain workingmen's restaurants, clubs, libraries, labor bureaus and much besides. Wholesome, nutritious food is served at a price suited to all pockets. The restaurants are crowded with a motley company. Workers of all kinds from skilled artisans to road-cleaners, small office holders, and tramps of every sort, peasants from neighboring villages, criminals just released from jail, and persons only recently compelled to economize. Entertainments are frequently furnished into which temperance is skillfully woven, music and art playing their part. Schools are few and far between in Russia, and the poor are heavily burdened. It would be difficult, therefore, to over-estimate the value of the work the Moscow Committee is doing in thus bringing instruction within the reach of all classes, and trying to give at least a touch of interest and pleasure, sweetness and light, to lives fraught with hardship and gloom.

COSTS NOTHING TO INVESTIGATE. WRITE US FOR OUR PROPOSITION ANYWAY

$20 TO $35 AND EXPENSES WEEKLY.

NO EXPERIENCE REQUIRED.

$1000 to $1500 Annual Income

FOR BOTH MEN AND WOMEN.

LET US START YOU

WRITE TO-DAY

BIG PROFITS

TRAVELING OUTFIT FOR GOLD, SILVER and NICKEL PLATING.

WRITE US TO-DAY

Royal Silver Outfit in Operation.

SHOP Outfit for Gold, Silver and Nickel Plating.

No Humbug, Fake or Toy Proposition.

An Honest, Legitimate Enterprise, Backed By An Old, Reliable, Responsible Firm, Capital $100,000.

We Manufacture Complete Outfits. All Sizes.

What Is the Use of Your Slaving Longer for Some One Else?

Why not start a business for yourself, reap all the profits and get a standing in your locality?

If you are in some one's employ, remember he will not continue to pay you a salary only so long as he can make profit out of your labor.

In this era every bright man and woman is looking to own a business, to employ help, and to make money.

It is just as easy to make money for yourself as it is to coin money for some grasping employer, who pays you a small salary each week.

If you are making less than $30 weekly it will pay you to read this announcement, for it will not appear again in this paper.

If you read it and take advantage of the opportunity offered, you will never regret it. To own a business yourself is certainly your ambition.

We start you in a profitable business. Teach you absolutely free how to conduct it.

To show you what others have done, we quote the expressions of a few who have made money in the nickel, gold, silver and metal plating business.

"MR. REED MADE $88.16 THE FIRST THREE DAYS." Mr. Cox writes: "Got all I can do. Elegant business. Customers happy." Dave Crawford writes: "The first week I had my outfit I made $42.75." E. D Waterbury writes: "Am sixty years old. Just completed job 1,800 pieces tableware. I clear about $6.00 a day profit."

Gentlemen and ladies positively make $5 to $15 a day at home or traveling, taking orders, using, selling and appointing agents for PROF. GRAY'S latest improved guaranteed Plating Machines and Outfits. NO FAKE OR TOYS, but genuine, practical, complete, scientific outfits for doing the finest of plating on WATCHES, JEWELRY, KNIVES, FORKS, SPOONS, CASTERS, TABLEWARE OF ALL KINDS, BICYCLES, SEWING MACHINES, SWORDS, REVOLVERS, HARNESS AND BUGGY TRIMMINGS, metal specialties; in fact all kinds of metal goods. HEAVY THICK PLATE EVERY TIME. GUARANTEED TO WEAR FOR YEARS. No experience necessary.

There is really a wonderful demand for replating. You can do business at nearly every house, store, office or factory. Almost every family has from $2 to $10 worth of tableware to be plated, besides watches, jewelry, bicycles, etc.

Every boarding house, hotel, restaurant, college or public institution has from $5 to $75 worth of work to be plated. Every jeweler, repair or bicycle shop, every dentist, doctor and surgeon, every man, woman and child you meet has either a watch, some jewelry, bicycles, instruments, or some articles needing plating.

Besides the above there are hundreds of patentees and manufacturers of metal goods, bicycles, sewing machines and typewriter repair shops who want their goods plated, or to whom you can sell a plating outfit, furnishing them supplies for doing their own plating.

Retail Stores who handle hardware, harness, table and plated or metal goods all need a plating and polishing outfit for refinishing goods that become worn, soiled, rusty or tarnished.

Every Undertaker requires a plating outfit for repairing and finishing coffin and hearse trimmings which are soiled, tarnished or worn.

Manufacturers are making and selling tons of new tableware, jewelry, bicycles and various kinds of metal goods every month which has only a very thin plate, which, in a few weeks, wears off, making the goods unsightly, unfit for future use unless plated.

Manufacturers of new goods do no replating on old goods whatever, but try to force the public to throw away the old and buy new at high prices, but this only makes the plating business better.

The more new thinly plated goods sold the greater will be the demand for plating. Plate some articles for your friends and neighbors by Prefesser Gray's Process, and it quickly proves to them its genuinenese and merit and that your plating is much thicker, will wear better and longer than a large per centage of the new goods. Your trade is then established, and within a short time you will have all the goods you can plate.

Plate a few articles for your friends, call in a few weeks, a few months, or five years later, and you will find the plate satisfactory, and they will give you every article they have needing to be plated.

Factory and Warehouse of Gray & Co., Cincinnati, Ohio. Capital $100,000. Employ 200 to 300 people daily.

When you deliver the goods plated te customers they will be well pleased, in fact, delighted with the work, will pay for it promptly, and you will be given on an average twice as much work to be plated as they gave you the first time you called.

You Can Do Plating so Cheap that every person can afford to have their goods plated.

No tidy housekeeper will allow worn and rusty tableware to go before a guest when it can be restored and made equal to new.

No person will wear jewelry or a watch, or ride a bicycle, or use a typewriter, sewing machine, or any machine made of metal from which the plate is worn off when they see samples of your work and hear your prices. People in this day and generation are too sensible and economical to throw away their old goods and buy new when they can have their old goods replated for so small a cost, making them, in many cases, better than when new.

The best part of the plating business is that it increases fast and is permanent.

Put out your sign, secure your outfit, do a little work, and quickly you will be favored with orders. If you do not wish to do the plating yourself you can hire boys for $3 or $4 a week to do the work the same as we do, and solicitors to gather up goods to be plated on commission.

It is not hard work, but is pleasant, and especially so when your business is netting you $20 to $30 a week for 5 or 6 hours' work a day.

This is only a minimum income which may be earned by any one who is not lazy; hustlers should make $100 weekly.

TREMENDOUS PROFITS.

The profits realized from plating are tremendous. To plate a set of teaspoons requires only about 2c. worth of metal and chemicals; a set of knives, forks or tablespoons about 3c. worth. The balance of the price received for the work is for the agent's time and profit.

Agents usually charge from 25c. to 50c. per set for plating teaspoons, from 50c. to 75c. for tablespoons and forks, and from 60c. to $1.00 for knives.

We allow you to set your own price for plating. Get as much as you can. You will have no competition. You know what it costs to plate the goods, and all you get over cost is profit. Some agents charge much more than the above prices, while others do the work for half and still make plenty of money.

Let us start you in business for yourself at once, don't delay a single day. Be your own boss. Be a money maker. We do all kinds of plating ourselves, have had years of experience, and are headquarters for plating supplies. We manufacture our own dynamos and outfits, all sizes, and send them out complete, with all tools, lathes, wheels and materials; everything ready for use.

We teach you everything, furnish all receipts, formulas and trade secrets free, so that failure should be impossible, and any one who follows our directions and teachings can do fine plating with a little practice, and become a money maker.

THE ROYAL SILVER OUTFIT.

Prof. Gray's Famous Discovery.

THE NEW DIPPING PROCESS is the latest, quickest, easiest method known. Tableware plated by simply dipping in melted metal, taken out instantly, with a fine, brilliant, beautiful plate deposited. All ready to deliver to customers. MAKES THICK PLATE EVERY TIME. GUARANTEED TO WEAR 5 to 10 YEARS. A BOY PLATES 100 to 300 pieces tableware daily, from $10 to $30 worth of work, profits almost 1000 per cent. Goods come out of plate finely finished. No polishing, grinding or work necessary, neither before or after plating.

You will not need to canvas. Agents write they have all the goods they can plate. People bring it for miles around. You can hire boys cheap to do your plating, the same as we do, and solicitors to gather work for a small per cent. Put a small advertisement or two in your local paper and you will have all the plating you can do. The plating business is honest and legitimate. Plating on our machines gives perfect satisfaction. Wears for years; customers are always delighted and recommend you and your work.

We are an old established firm, have been in business for years, know exactly what is required, furnish complete outfits, the same as we ourselves use, and customers always have the benefit of our experience. We are responsible and guarantee everything. Reader, here is a chance of a lifetime to go in business for yourself. We start you. Now is the time to make money.

FREE—WRITE US TO-DAY

for our new plan and proposition; also valuable information how the plating is done. Sit down and write now, so we can start you without delay. If you wish to see a sample of plating by our Outfits, send 2c. postage. Send your address anyway.

GRAY & CO., PLATING WORKS, 375 MIAMI BUILDING, CINCINNATI, OHIO

The above firm is thoroughly reliable and do just as they agree. The outfits are just as represented, and do fine plating, and after investigation we consider this one of the best paying businesses we have yet heard of.—Editor.

NOTE: Our Special Subscription Offer Closes January 31st.

FOR GOD AND HOME AND EVERY LAND.

The UNION SIGNAL AND WORLD'S WHITE RIBBON

NATIONAL and WORLD'S WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION

Entered at Chicago Postoffice as Second-class Matter.

"Thou hast given a banner to them that fear thee: that it may be displayed because of the truth."

Vol. XXIX.—No. 4. Issued Weekly. | CHICAGO, JANUARY 22, 1903. | Price, $1.50 Per Year in Advance.

Notice.

THE UNION SIGNAL for one year to a club of ten, $10. This offer is extended to January 31, 1903.

Contents of This Number.

CURRENT TEMPERANCE NEWS 2, 3
YOUNG WOMAN'S BRANCH:
Mrs. Barnes Resigns—Suggestions for Memorial Day Observance—Miss Cameron's Letter—Program No. 1—Program No. 2—New Jersey Y Conference—Our Honoraries . 4
CONTRIBUTED:
An Interview with Mrs. Margaret Ellis Dye. By Elizabeth P. Gordon 5
A Fight Against Odds. By Kate Anderson 6
CHILDREN'S COZY CORNER:
Goody Two Shoes—Rags and Tags and Velvet Gowns—How to See the Wind—Correct Speech and Slang—On Guard—"Gather Out the Stones"—Puzzlers' Packet 7
EDITORIAL:
The Improvement of Moral and Religious Education—A Bit of Civic Economy—Down with Mars 8
The Editor's Question Box 9
PRESIDENT'S LETTER 9
OFFICIAL COMMUNICATIONS 10
QUARTERLY TEMPERANCE LESSON 11
MEMORIAL DAY PROGRAM 12
THE QUALIFICATIONS OF A GOOD SOLDIER 13
GAMBLING "INVESTMENTS" 14
W. C. T. U. NOTES—PUBLISHERS' NOTES 15

Red-Letter Day.

February 17, Frances E. Willard Thankoffering Day.

THE HEAVENLY BIRTHDAY OF MISS WILLARD.

News of the Week.

Congress passes bill for department of commerce and labor by vote of 137 to 40.

American and English missionaries are forced to depart hurriedly from the City of Fez, in Morocco.

Monument to Baron von Ketteler, German minister murdered by Chinese Boxers, is dedicated in Peking.

British debt increased $600,000,000 because of Boer war; Rand mine owners practically accept their assessment.

Reed Smoot, Mormon apostle, nominated for United States senator by Utah republican legislative caucus; election certain.

Fund of over $25,000 raised in Chicago to provide coal for poor families. Charity bureaus and Salvation Army overwhelmed with applications for aid.

John Mitchell, president of United Mineworkers, issued appeal to miners' unions for co-operation with operators in increasing production and relieving distress.

Mme. Adelina Patti will sing in sixty concerts as her last appearance in the United States, Canada and Mexico during the season of 1903-4, receiving therefor $300,000.

Leper colony on Molokai island to receive patients from United States recommended by senate Hawaiian committee; 858 patients there now; $432,378 rental payment to Queen Liliuokalani also favored.

Resolution for government seizure and operation of coal mines and companies transporting coal offered in Congress by Representative Jenkins (Wis.), judiciary committee chairman and veteran legislator.

Swedish government commission reported $7,000,000 needed to prevent starvation in northern districts; people subsisting on pine bark, and chopped birch twigs being fed to cattle; $200,000 donated thus far.

Macedonian revolutionary leaders will inaugurate rebellion on April 1, according to Berlin newspaper dispatch; list of proposed reforms, announced at St. Petersburg, takes central control from Turkish influence.

Rebate on foreign coal tariff for one year ordered by both houses of Congress after short debate; anthracite practically put on free list by Senate, which added amendment forbidding any duty after one year. Bill signed by the President.

Liquor Ammunition. The articles on "Temperance Reform," by Prof. Atwater, published in The Outlook, are being reprinted and given wide circulation in Vermont as anti-prohibition literature. It is to be regretted that Dr. Abbott's able and influential magazine should lend itself to the saloon propaganda.

To the Voter. The Capitol in Washington belongs to the people. It is the taxpayers' money which erected this and every other federal building, which maintains and sustains every department of government, with all its complex machinery. The question for each individual voter is, Do I want liquor sold in any building of which I am part owner? If not, write or telegraph to United States senators AT ONCE, asking them to vote for the passage of the McCumber Bill.

Resignation of Mrs. Barnes The formal resignation of Mrs. Frances J. Barnes as General Secretary of the World's Y. W. C. T. U., on page 4, will be read with the deepest regret by the host of women, young and old, to whom she is dear. By her wish the responsibility for this very important Branch devolves, for the time being, upon the two young leaders who have proved their fitness for the trust, Mrs. Clara Parrish-Wright and Miss Amy Swankie-Cameron. We can best show our appreciation of Mrs. Barnes' long and faithful service by rallying anew to the standard which she has intrusted to other hands. Lift it high!

From "The Seat of War." Since the writing of the article, "An Interview with Mrs. Ellis," by Miss Elizabeth Gordon, conditions have changed somewhat in Washington. The President has ordered the appointment of five women inspectors at the port of New York, and Mrs. Ellis is in that city at this writing to advise as to the appointees. A measure to repeal the Anti-canteen law has been introduced, and the House Committee on Military Affairs has voted that no action be taken thereon at this session of Congress. It is not improbable that this decision was influenced by the flood of petitions let loose by the prompt action of our Legislative superintendent. As Mrs. Ellis points out, no labor is lost when legislative action is deferred by our preparations for defense, and she is doubly assured that the white ribbon army is on "waiting orders," ready to respond immediately to the ringing call, "On to Washington."

The Work of the Hour. We trust that letters and telegrams are pouring in upon United States senators from voters all over the country asking them to vote for the McCumber Bill, forbidding the sale of liquor in all government buildings and grounds appertaining thereto, and for the provisions of the Immigration Bill, prohibiting the sale at immigrant stations and in the Capitol building. Remember that the requests which have most weight with a senator are those coming from VOTERS, those of his constituency who have power to send him to Congress or to bid him stay at home. Woman's influence is, in an indirect way, immense, as the W. C. T. U. has abundant reason to know, but in the last days before final action on these bills, the pressure should come direct from the sovereign voter. And in only four states of the Union does this mean women as well as men.

Temperance in the Church. A recent issue of The Christian Standard, published at Cincinnati, O., was given entirely to temperance and prohibition. The subject was ably and practically treated from the different standpoints of prominent workers in this particular field of reform. It is encouraging to note that more and more our denominational papers are striking forcibly the keynote upon which are based the harmonies of the home.

Memorial Day Program. The attention of local workers is directed to the program, on page 12 of this issue, for the observance of Willard Memorial Day, February 17th. In no way can we better show our tender remembrance of that sad day and our gratitude for the life to whom we are indebted for so many lessons in truth and helpfulness and love than by an effort, in her name, to bless and to help the lives of others. The Frances Willard Memorial is not a costly monument of perishable marble, but it is what she would have liked to have it—a sky-piercing shaft of good deeds, noble sacrifices, heaven-born charities. Let us all have a part in its eternal building.

The Willard Statue Bill. Miss Anna Gordon has been in Springfield, Ill., the past week in the interest of the Willard Statue Bill, which has been introduced in both branches of the legislature. This bill, it will be remembered, was enacted by a former legislature, appropriating $9,000 for a statue of Miss Willard, to be placed in Statuary Hall of the Capitol building at Washington. The law, however, provides that such an appropriation cannot be drawn until a bill of particulars in regard to expense is filed and approved by the Governor, and this must be done within a specified time. In the case of the Willard statue appropriation, the time expired before the bill of expense could be filed, because of the unusual amount of time taken by the artists in preparing models to submit to the committee. The present legislature is therefore, asked to re-enact the measure, which it will be glad to do. A picture of the statue and a descriptive article will be given in THE UNION SIGNAL a little later.

Chain Letters Again. Relative to the chain-letter scheme (with headquarters in Philadelphia) for the alleged promotion of a monster anti-cigaret petition, Josiah W. Leeds sends word that he went to the address on Chestnut street to which all letters were to be sent, but could not find the parties; communicated with the owner of the building, made inquiries at the central postoffice, and finally placed the matter in the hands of the postoffice inspector. That official now reports that "mail such as you mention has been coming to the Philadelphia postoffice for a year, and it has been unclaimed. There is no one at 1423 Chestnut street to receive it, and it is all sent to the dead letter office." It may be well to state for the information of those who have not given the matter serious thought, that lists of the names and addresses of young people are often sought and paid for by selfishly interested or unprincipled people. Trashy papers will then be sent to these addresses, filled with advertisements of objectionable schemes. They are deadly enemies of the home.

Our Washington Letter.

Margaret Dye Ellis, Correspondent.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 19.—Persons cognizant with legislative matters understand that conditions are subject to change almost at a moment's notice; the introduction of an amendment, the offering of a resolution, the action of a committee, may change the entire complexion of affairs in the briefest possible time.

This has been the case during the past week. Tuesday, January 13, the following statement to the press was given out by Hon. J. A. T. Hull, chairman of the House committee on Military Affairs: "No action will be taken by the House Military committee on the canteen question at this session, and no consideration is being given by the committee to any measure proposing a restoration of the canteen to the Army post exchanges. Chairman Hull has been in receipt daily of a vast number of letters, telegrams and petitions from all over the country."

This was further corroborated on Thursday, January 15, by a resolution passed by the committee in "deciding to take no action on the canteen question at this session."

Hon. R. Wayne Parker, of Newark, N. J., who presented the bill to repeal the law, represents a district which has twenty-five breweries, with a capital of $12,000,000, and with an output of $8,326,000 and with 1900 licensed saloons; hence it is but a logical sequence that he should be anxious for a repeal of the present anti-canteen law, in accordance with the behest of his beer-making, and beer-selling constituency, (leaving out a constituency represented by 213 churches.)

Letters have reached me this week from different parts of the country, showing feelings a little aggrieved at the change in legislative lines. One says, "I have just commenced sending out word to the women, and now comes the word to halt, until we hear direct from headquarters." Another, "I sent my son off post haste on horse back to catch the first mail, when the paper says, "Congress has adjourned for the holidays," etc.

It is this very activity, responding so royally, that covers every emergency, which causes a halt along Congressional lines, as well as our own, and if we but wage our peaceful war, using as our weapons "letters, telegrams, and petitions from all over the country," we shall win the day.

Remember, we have two bills and very important they are too, which if we but strive for, I believe will pass, viz: To prohibit liquor selling in all Government buildings; to prohibit liquor selling in immigrant stations. "A long pull, a strong pull, and a pull altogether" will give us this victory too. Do not relax your diligence for one moment.

Last week I mentioned my interview with President Roosevelt concerning women inspectors being appointed at New York harbor. In a couple of days I was sent for by the Commissioner General of Immigration who told me they "had decided to appoint five women at once and would like me to assist them in securing the proper parties." I go to New York to-night to spend one day in trying to bring things to a fulfillment.

Let us work on! God is good and some day we shall win the world's great battle, against the legalized liquor traffic.

The Anti-Saloon League in Indiana.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Jan. 13.—Under the direction of the Indiana Anti-Saloon League, the anti-saloon forces of the state held an all-day conference in the Meridian street Methodist church today and by unanimous vote decided to defend in this legislature the Nicholson liquor laws, and especially the blanket remonstrance clause.

The meeting would indicate that the Anti-Saloon League has the united support of all the evangelical churches of the state. Practically every church body in Indiana was officially represented in the meeting.

It was announced that the church forces in Indiana could muster 200,000 voters in a fight to protect the blanket remonstrance. Plans were laid to get this army in marching array. It was decided to set aside February 22 as Anti-Saloon Sunday. It is thought that the brewers will not attempt to force legislation before that time. On that day the plan is to have rallies in every church in Indiana. If the brewers make a move before that time the Anti-Saloon Sunday will be moved up ahead of them.

It was decided today to conduct a legislation information bureau, under the direction of the Anti-Saloon League, and to keep the record of every Representative and Senator in this session of the Legislature.

There was a sentiment in favor of introducing a bill that will cause a druggist, convicted of illegal selling of liquor, to forfeit his pharmacy certificate. There was also a favorable expression for a law making it prima facie evidence that a man is in the retail liquor business if he holds a Government license. These proposed measures will be held in abeyance, however, until it is found whether the brewers will make their threatened assault on the blanket movement.

In his report, Superintendent Saunderson showed that three hundred saloons had been closed in the state since last July, and that over 250 are at present doomed by blanket remonstrances. A fund of $20,000 for the work this year is asked of the churches and anti-saloon forces of Indiana.

Tennessee Prohibitionists Alert.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Jan. 13.—It is a singular fact that the first bills introduced in both houses of the state legislature are against the sale of whisky and reflect the sentiment of the strong opposition which has sprung up in the state against this interest.

Another "Peeler" bill was introduced in the house by Mr. Morgan, of Gibson county. It is simple in construction and proposes to amend the four-mile law passed in 1899 by striking out the word "two thousand inhabitants by the federal census of 1890," and inserting "having less than 5,000 inhabitants by the federal census of 1900."

The bill introduced by Mr. Stratton goes further and provides for the extension of the four-mile law to all towns having a population of 5,000 inhabitants.

Under the provisions of the Peeler bill it was left optional with the voters of a town as to whether or not the charter should be abolished, and the town re-incorporated without saloons. This measure is constitutional as its main provisions have already been sustained by the supreme court in the case of the State vs. Frost which was decided about six months ago.

If Mr. Stratton's bill becomes a law it will prohibit the sale of liquor in all towns under 5,000 inhabitants without regard to present, past or future incorporation. It is a sweeping blow at the saloon, and would rid many towns in the state of whisky without further ado.

Local Option Elections.

QUITMAN, Ga., Jan. 6.—The local option election held today resulted in the county going dry by about fifty majority. It has been the hardest fought election in years and the whole county is on fire with excitement. Anvils, cannon crackers, drums and anything that will make a noise, has been pressed into service. It is believed that this will settle the question here for good and all, as every effort has been made by the antis, with the result named.

FREDERICKSBURG, Va., Jan. 10.—The following is the result of the election held in Caroline on Thursday for local option:

Bowling Green District, dry majority, 200; Port Royal District, dry majority, 132; Reedy Church District, dry majority, 34; Madison District, dry majority, 84.

Guineas and Moss Neck precincts cast a solidly dry vote. There were only sixteen votes for the sale of liquor in Fort Royal District. Every precinct gave a majority for the drys.

COLUMBUS, O., Jan. 9.—The Anti-Saloon League today made public a list of the towns in which local option elections have been held under the Beal law, with the result of such elections. Ninety-six of the 142 towns which have voted went "dry."

Temperance Wave in Alabama.

NEW DECATUR, Ala., Jan. 12.—A mass meeting under the auspices of the Morgan County Temperance Association, was held here yesterday afternoon, presided over by Rev. W. Y. Quisenberry. The courthouse was well filled with representative citizens from almost every vocation of life and there was a strong sentiment in favor of temperance and of a prohibition bill for Morgan county. A prohibition bill had previously been prepared and was read at the meeting. The measure is a strong one and prohibits the sale of liquors in the county except for medicinal purposes in the compounding of physician's prescriptions, etc.

Prohibition Electors.

TORONTO, Canada, Jan. 13.—A movement has been started in West Toronto to organize into a pledged electoral association the voters of the province. Mr. J. A. Austin, grand councillor of the Royal Templars, is one of the promoters. The electors sign a pledge to vote only for candidates for office who will pledge themselves to support prohibition in their respective legislative bodies to the full extent of the constitutional power of the body to which they aspire and to do this regardless of party.

Field Workers in Iowa.

Clara P. White Correspondent.

VOLGA, Iowa, Jan. 15.—Evangelist J. W. Pierce organized a union at Weldon last week; Mrs. Cora A. Bennett, president of the Fourteenth district, is giving talks on the National Convention to her unions, and Rev. A. J. Wheeler is conducting union revival services in Legrand with marked success. Waterloo union has engaged National evangelist, Mrs. Anna M. Palmer, for a week of gospel temperance work. This union has now two sisters, singing evangelists, for one week's service.

Miss Annie Robbins, of St. Louis, speaks in Danville on the 20th, and at Lyons on the 25th.

Mrs. Satella Penman, president of the Eighteenth district, has gone with her husband to Galveston, Tex.

Law Enforcement in Maine.

Mary T. French, Correspondent.

AUBURN, Me., Jan. 19.—The event of greatest interest just now to the temperance people of our state (and it may be added to the intemperate people as well) is the recent inauguration of the sheriffs of our sixteen counties. Ten of these sheriffs are new to the office—six republicans and four democrats. At least three out of the ten—two democrats and one republican—were nominated and elected directly on the enforcement issue, also receiving the nomination of the prohibition party.

In Androscoggin county interest centers in the work of Rev. C. S. Cummings, a Methodist clergyman who, having been nominated by the prohibition party, received the republican nomination on the seventh day and the two hundred and second ballot of the most unique political convention ever held in Maine.

While Sheriff Cummings' name had previously not been especially connected with the temperance movement, he was doubtless as radical a temperance man as it would have been safe to offer the last named party. The new sheriff has appointed four special liquor deputies and on January 1 began his term by tendering a dinner to the deputies and the other county officials at the leading hotel of the county seat. One item of the menu was "Cummings' Pudding with Temperance Sauce."

In Kennebec county, where the statehouse is situated, Sheriff Ham who, by the way, was not nominated on any temperance issue, seems to have a realizing sense of which way the wind blows, for he has read his new deputies a most emphatic lecture to the effect that the people have shown by their vote that they demand rigid law enforcement and that they must, therefore, have it. In proof of which he cited the fact that in the last election thousands of republicans all over the state bolted their party nominations for sheriff.

Thus we see how the good work begun by the late Sheriff Pearson, of Cumberland county, and his successor, Sheriff Dunn, has set a standard for the whole state.

Missouri's Work in the Schools.

Lena M. Sargent, Correspondent.

SPRINGFIELD, Mo., Jan. 19.—Work in the various departments is moving on apace. Mrs. Belle C. Kimball, state president, sent greeting to all the state officers and state superintendents, following these with a New Year letter to every union in the state. The letter is full of information, good suggestions and encouraging words.

Our state president, and state recording secretary, Mrs. Emma Robberson, of Springfield, visited the State Teachers' Association held in St. Louis during the holidays, in the interest of Scientific Temperance Instruction. Mrs. Robberson, who is state superintendent of that department, made an exhibit of work done in that line by pupils of the Springfield public schools, which attracted much attention and received deserved praise.

The announcement has just been made to the schools of Springfield by the unions of the city that eight silver medals will be awarded this year, as for several years past, for the best temperance essays in the various grades of the ward schools, and two gold medals, one to the high school and the other to Drury academy, for the best original essay on any phase of the temperance question. A competent committeee of citizens is selected to make the awards. Medals are also given to pupils in the colored schools for excellence in temperance work.

The prize essays this year will form part of the Scientific Temperance exhibit to be made next year at the Louisiana Purchase Exposition in St. Louis. If other schools in the state do as good work as the Springfield schools have done, the exhibit will certainly be a very creditable one.

Our state superintendent of Legislative Work, Miss Ellen D. Morris, of Savannah, has sent to each union in the state, and all state officers, a letter on Legislative Work, and a leaflet giving the names of United States Senators and Congressmen and the members of the Missouri assembly for 1903. Active work is expected in this department, of which reports will be given later.

Alabama State Convention.

(Special Correspondence.)

NEW DECATUR, Ala., Jan. 19.—The Alabama annual convention, held January 7-9, re-elected Mrs. Martha L. Spencer president, and Mesdames Jeffries and Weisel corresponding secretary and treasurer. Mrs. Chatfield, of Tuscaloosa, is the new recording secretary. Of the three invitations received for the next convention that from Tuscaloosa was unanimously accepted.

The president's address was filled with practical suggestions. A desired law against the sale of cigarets received attention, and a portion of the address was taken up with an able discussion on the child labor bill.

The state banner for increase of membership was won by the Fort Payne union, and this union also received the custodianship of the National banner won by Alabama at Portland. Mrs. Maude L. Greene and Mrs. Mary Jewett-Telford were the convention speakers.

Mrs. Livermore Addresses Massachusetts Women.

Louise C. Purington, M. D., Correspondent.

BOSTON, Mass., Jan. 19.—Massachusetts observed its Day of Prayer in Pilgrim Hall, Congregational House, Monday, Jan. 5. Mrs. Harriette C. Walker, state superintendent of evangelistic work, and Mrs. Anna Kerr, formerly of Connecticut state executive, assisted during the hours, respectively in charge of county and state officers, and the superintendent of Frances E. Willard Settlement. January 11, in Pilgrim Hall, the Massachusetts W. C. T. U. was addressed by Mary A. Livermore on "Social Drinking." When Mrs. Livermore has a message the people listen, and this time, as always, she was most heartily received. She said that it seemed rather out of place for her to address a body of temperance workers on the subject of "Social Drinking," and then explained that because a certain bishop in the west had been reported as making the accusation that women were drinking, smoking and gambling, and because her opinion had been asked on the subject, she would be pleased to speak on the topic.

Speaking of her own experience, she said: "In the whole circle of my acquaintance—and I know so many North, South, East and West, that that means a great deal—I have never known a drunken woman. I don't mean I have never seen drunken women, but they are not women of the great middle class who are carrying on the work of the world. I have never known women who gamble. I have never known women who smoke cigarets.

"Yet I see a danger in the present condition of things, which is different than it used to be, and this is something against which we should lend our influence and effort."

Massachusetts is preparing for an earnest campaign in the observance of membership crusade week in February. "Our Message," the state paper, will be a special organization number and will lend itself to spread interest and awaken enthusiasm and increase the growth and power of the W. C. T. U. in the old Bay State.

The Massachusetts union unites with other temperance organizations in pushing the "Twentieth Century World-Wide Temperance Crusade for Plede Signing!" 250,000 signers are expected from Massachusetts.

Of the thirty temperance societies organized in Massachusetts during the last seventy years only thirteen are in existence to-day; and the only one of the thirteen showing gain in membership and steady advancement is the Woman's Christian Temperance Union.

Mid-Year Meeting of Texas Executive Committee.

Mattie R. Turner, Correspondent.

TERRELL, Tex., Jan. 14.—The state executive committee held its annual mid-year meeting in Fort Worth, January 1. Following are the most important items of business disposed of: Date for holding state convention was set for May 6-10 inclusive, place to be decided later.

The committee pledged support to a bill to establisk a home for incorrigible children, also pledged assistance to all legislation for the protection of the home and opposition to every measure in favor of the legalized saloon, dispensary, or any form of regulation of the liquor traffic.

Each union in the state will be requested to send a telegram to Washington protesting against the repeal of the anti-canteen law.

The committee sent the following telegram to Hon. Jno. A. Hull, chairman committee on military affairs, Washington, D. C.: "We protest against a drunken army. Our country's defenders should be sober. Let us have reformation or discharge, but no canteen saloon."

Mrs. Purinton, superintendent of Purity, offered a resolution protesting against "illustrations of the female figure unclothed, or partially and suggestively clothed, upon bill boards and other public places," which was adopted.

It is probable that a bill favoring the dispensary system of regulation will be introduced in the legislature during the session just opened.

Mrs. Stoddard and Miss Fanny Armstrong, office secretary, have taken apartments in Austin, to remain throughout the session of the legislature.

Mrs. Stoddard was one of the principal speakers at the laying of the cornerstone of the Girls Industrial College at Denton on the 10th, she being secretary of the Board of Regents.

Mrs. Curtis, state lecturer, has just completed a fruitful itinerary in "the panhandle" country. She organized ten unions and assisted in several local option campaigns. She is also to assist in the county campaign in Grayson county the last of this month.

Mrs. A. C. Zehner has gone to Missouri for the week of prayer, in response to a call from the Ministerial Alliance.

Wilbarger county came into the prohibition column on the 6th, and Carson county on the 9th. Precinct No. 1 of King county also went "dry" on the 9th. All these are in the panhandle.

Agitation in Utah.

Mrs. L. L. Shepard, Correspondent.

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah, Jan. 19.—The W. C. T. U. of Salt Lake has undertaken to clean and purify the terrible conditions in our tenderloin district. The Ministerial Association and the First Presidency of the Mormon Church have been interviewed and their co-operation secured. The city has been greatly aroused, and conditions have changed, but in view of the need of continued action, we have organized a strong committee, made up of two members from the W. C. T. U., two from the Ministerial Association, two from the Mormon Church, two lawyers and two editors. This committee expects to keep awake public sentiment until next election, and then we are going to elect a clean mayor.

The city papers have been full of the agitation. I addressed two large audiences last Sunday, one at the First M. E. church in the morning, and at the Baptist church in the evening.

Next Friday the state W. C. T. U. president, Mrs. J. S. Gordon, will meet with us at a joint meeting of the Salt Lake Central union and the Waterloo union, to consider the various phases of the work.

Conferences in New Jersey.

Emily Ruth Kirby, Correspondent.

WOODSTOWN, N. J., Jan. 19.—Bloomfield W. C. T. U., at the suggestion of the county president, Mrs. M. C. Canfield, held an all-day prayer and conference meeting, January 6. The state president, Mrs. Emma Bourne, of Newark, was the guest of the day and the leading spirit of the two sessions. Several papers were presented, and a half hour of "thought exchange" was enjoyed.

Mrs. Emma Bourne, State President.

The bill introduced in Congress by a Jerseyman to re-establish the canteen in the army, was scored by Mrs. Bourne, and the W. C. T. U. of the state will try hard to help defeat it.

A request for an ordinance against collecting cigar stumps has been asked by the W. C. T. U. of the Newark board of health, which has appointed Dr. Diebrow chairman of a committee to take up the matter and to make it a misdemeanor in that city, as it is now in New York and Jersey City, to pick them up for sale or for other uses.

Miss Sarah G. Bancroft.
President Bloomfield W. C. T. U.

Programs are out for the Essex county mid-winter conference, to be held in Nutley, January 17. This county, which stands away ahead of all others in the state in number of public and local meetings held, in signatures to the pledge and in amount of money raised during the past year, is also the home of the state president.

For the first time since the smallpox epidemic, the Newark jail was opened last Sunday to the W. C. T. U.

Rhode Island Women at Work.

Mary E. Olney, Correspondent.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Jan. 19.—During the past three months the state and local unions of Rhode Island have carried on their accustomed lines of work with usual vigor. Some of the small country unions have failed to accomplish as much on account of the inclement weather and because of illness among their members. Unions have been favored with addresses from National workers, Mrs. J. K. Barney, of Rhode Island, Miss Robbins upon "Life in Manila," Miss Belle Kearney and Mrs. Mary F. Lovell. Accompanied by some of our W. C. T. U. ladies, Mrs. Thatcher visited the Fort and held a song service. Temperance Sunday was observed in Sunday schools, Junior and Senior Christian Endeavor Societies and church services.

Some unions have labored successfully in behalf of no license in their towns. Interesting and helpful district conventions have been held. At one the afternoon session was devoted to the consideration of affairs in the coal districts. Ex-Mayor Tiepke, who had given much time to investigating the anthracite coal regions, gave a vivid description of surrounding conditions there, holding the closest attention of his audience and answering all inquiries most satisfactorily.

Louisiana Borrows from Oklahoma.

Mae A. Davis, Correspondent.

PLEASANT HILL, La., Jan. 19.—No one within the boundary of the "Pelican State" to-day is working harder or accomplishing more for the advancement of the W. C. T. U. than Mrs. N. E. Oliver, of Estherwood, whose picture is here presented. She presided over the district convention just closed at Crowley and was greatly instrumental in its success. Several new unions have been recently formed by Mrs. Oliver, and she has just begun a tour of the state as lecturer and organizer. Her faithful work as corresponding secretary of Oklahoma and as evangelist of Indian Territory recommends her in her new position.

North Carolina News.

Special Correspondence.

GUILFORD COLLEGE, N. C., Jan. 19.—On Feb. 1 Miss Tinling comes to our state for two weeks' work, going as far east as Raleigh or perhaps Fayetteville, and as far west as Hickory.

Two bills are now before our state legislature, one in the senate and the other in the house, and both provisional temperance bills. In fact, temperance is almost a party issue and never in the history of our state have our people been more aroused upon the subject. The bill which we hope to see succeed restricts the manufacture, sale or giving of intoxicants to unincorporated towns, at the same time specifying what shall be the size of a town before it can be incorporated. The bill also provides that the people may have the same opportunity to vote on the dispensary system, which it already possesses on prohibition. It is safe to say that the country distillery, whether licit or illicit, is the most menacing factor in our state.

On Jan. 1, 1903, the county of Washington, in the east, closed its country saloons, largely through the efforts of the W. C. T. U. On the same day Union, in the west, closed its dispensaries, which have been in operation since 1898. No liquor can now be legally bought or sold in that county!

Cumberland county, which contains Fayetteville, one of the oldest towns in the state, in the state election, November 2, had a strong fight to remain prohibition territory, and with pride we can state that they won the victory.

NOTE: Our special subscription offers close January 31st.

Minnesota in Line.

Mary E. Hoover, Correspondent.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Jan. 19.—The Minneapolis conference of unions held a meeting of special interest the first week in January, at which time it was decided to engage Miss Annie Robbins, National lecturer, for a week's work in February. There was a large attendance, and a social hour followed the program.

On the day of the Minneapolis conference meeting Hennepin district held an executive meeting, at which it was decided to engage Mrs. Callie Howe for one week in May. A campaign is planned for legislative work by the unions, and in this they unite with the Equal Suffrage Society in asking for presidential suffrage. An effort will be made to raise the age of consent to eighteen years. The unions are circulating petitions for the immigration bill in national Congress.

The state central committee plan to hold a matrons' medal contest in March to raise funds for state work. The committee has also asked for an anti-polygamy speaker for the state, and if secured, she will be sent through the large towns and cities.

Willard (Minneapolis) union has lately held two Christian Citizenship meetings, one social and one mothers' meeting. They emphasize Sunday-school work, and have sent one member to the Northwestern Bible Training School. They hold meetings at the jail and send flowers to the sick and literature to the lumbermen. This union has done faithful L. T. L. work and is on the up-grade in every respect. The Minneapolis conference of Y's will be held January 27. Mrs. Warrington, the conference president, is doing much to inspire the Y's of the city.

YOUNG WOMAN'S BRANCH.

Conducted by Mrs. Clara Parrish-Wright, General Secretary.

Mrs. Barnes Resigns.

MRS. FRANCES J. BARNES, our well-beloved leader in the World's Y. W. C. T. U., has tendered her resignation to the World's officers in the following letter:

To the Officers of the World's Woman's Christian Temperance Union.

Dear Sisters: Finding that I may be physically unable to promote the work of the Young Woman's Branch of the World's W. C. T. U. for another year, I herewith tender my resignation as General Secretary of that Branch.

It is with sincere regret that I relinquish the position which I have tried to fill for so many years. My heart is still in the work, hence I take the liberty of asking to have Mrs. Clara Parrish-Wright appointed as Acting World's Y. Secretary, and Miss Swankie-Cameron as her assistant.

Yours in loving, loyal comradeship,
FRANCES J. BARNES.

126 West 103d St., New York.

The World's officers have complied with Mrs. Barnes' request, in accepting her resignation (rendered imperative by her continued ill health) and Mrs. Clara Parrish-Wright, of Paris, Ill., and Miss Amy Swankie-Cameron, of London, England, have been appointed to superintend the work until the World's Convention meets in June.

Suggestions for Memorial Day Observance.

MY Dear Local Y Presidents:—The one thought uppermost in my mind for the work today is that you should observe February 17, the anniversary of the "home going" of our beloved "Chieftain," and send $2 to our National treasurer, Mrs. Helen M. Barker, Evanston, Ill., for the purpose of helping to send our workers into the unorganized parts of the country.

Elsewhere on this page you will see the appeal of Miss Swankie-Cameron to the young women of Great Britain. It is so strong and clear that I cannot improve upon it so I send this little word to emphasize her wish and to show you how very much I desire that American Ys should observe it too. The increase in the number of societies that have done it each year has been most encouraging, but we want a still larger number next month to learn of her life and work.

Since I am dictating this from my couch, I shall not say more today but leave the matter of my unfinished conference with local presidents until another time.

There is so much I want to say to you about Miss Smart and our work in Japan, but that, too, will have to be left over till another letter.

Yours for our very best year of service,
Clara Parrish-Wright.

Paris, Ill.

Miss Cameron's Letter.

MY DEAR FRIEND:—As one of the young women to whom Frances Willard's wonderful inspiration and influence opened up a new vision of the possibilities of this life and the next, I rejoice in having the privilege of laying the following plan before you, and asking for it your deepest consideration and kind co-operation.

Some of our leading Ys think that our girls do not know nearly enough about the great woman who founded the World's Woman's Christian Temperance Union, of which the British Woman's Temperance Association is so important a part. We have, therefore, decided, by unanimous vote of the Central Representative Y Committee, to make a great effort to establish a "Willard Membership Day" among the Y Branches of Great Britain. Each Y Branch is to be asked to have a special meeting on Feb. 17 (the anniversary of Miss Willard's passing away) to study the beautiful strenuous life of our sainted leader, and the great work among women the world around of which she was the founder, and to make it a special time of gathering in new members. Then the members so gained are to be sent for registration to the superintendent, and at the following council a beautiful portrait of Frances Willard is to be presented to the Branch with the largest recorded gain. This portrait is to be framed in oak in a design of shields, and as year by year it is passed from Branch to Branch, a shield is to be inscribed in gold with the name and numbers of the winning Branch. We are very hopeful that this scheme, if well worked, may increase enthusiasm as well as numbers among our Ys. The committee has pressed me into taking the superintendency, and I am writing now in the full assurance that you will be glad to help to make the "Willard Membership Day" a success worthy the name it bears. Will you, therefore, bring this letter before the next meeting of your Branch, thoroughly discuss the plan, and the best way to arrange the meeting in your town or district, and let me know as soon as you can what you have resolved upon. I append sketches of two programs—one for a Willard evening, and one for a World's W. C. T. U. evening—or, possibly, you may like to combine the two. Anyway, let me beg you to plan a meeting for February 17, or thereabouts. However small an effort, it cannot but bring a blessing on your Branch, and as knowledge of love for our beloved "Chieftain" of the White Ribbon Army increases, so will increase enthusiastic work for our great cause. I would suggest that you invite as many strangers as possible to your meeting, remembering the object of keeping the anniversary in this way.

Be sure to ask me for any further information or help that you may desire. I wish specially to direct your attention to the Y pages in "The White Ribbod" of December and January.

Your sincere comrade,
Amy A. Swankie-Cameron.

Program No. 1.

Frances Willard Evening.

Devotions—Prayer and singing.

Roll Call—Responded to by each giving a quotation from Miss Willard's writings.

Chairman's remarks.

Contributions—"Our Chieftain" (a) as a child. (b) a student, (c) a teacher, (d) an organizer, (e) a leader.

Solo and Chorus—"On Heights of Power."

Selected reading from "How to Win."

Testimonies—"What in Miss Willard's life has impressed one most?"

Membership enrolment, while music is going on.

Temperance Doxology.

Books needed—A large copy of Miss Willard's life, or "A Sketch of the Life of Frances E. Willard," with quotations. "How to Win," a book for girls and young women, by Frances E. Willard, and "The Year's Bright Chain."*

*The books mentioned may be secured of the W. T. P. A., 184 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.

Program No. 2.

World's Y. W. C. T. U. Evening.

Hymn—"All Round the World."

Prayer and Scripture reading.

Chairman's remarks.

A group of Ys, each representing a different country and carrying its flag, viz: Great Britain, United States, Canada, South Africa, Japan, India, Australia and Europe, to come on the platform in single file, joined by a broad white ribbon, and give—either reading or from memory—a short account of what the Ys are doing in each of these countries.

Musical solo.

A short general address by a visiting or local speaker on the work of the World's Y. W. C. T. U.

Membership enrolment while music is going on.

Hymn.

Benediction.

Book needed—The World's Y Report and Bulletins.

New Jersey Y Conference.

[The Editors' apologies are due Miss Burgyes for the belated appearance of this report. It was inadvertently omitted from the last Y page.]

AS per program the New Jersey Y's held their annual conference at Middletown, November 28th and 29th. It was most excellent. The answer to roll-call was: "What we have been most successful in doing the past year." Atlantic City Y reported: "A systematic study of the life of Frances Willard"; Bridgeton, "A stirring fight against license on election day"; the "Mary R. Denman" Y of Newark attributed their success to their "weekly evangelistic meetings"; Middletown Y to their "Flower Mission work"; Morristown, to "securing new members, and co-operation with other young people's societies"; Orange Y, to "a study of departments"; Roseville Y, to "public lectures, and the observance of World's Missionary Day, April 14th."

Among the good things was a fine report of the National Convention by Miss Lawrence, of Morristown Y; Mrs. Bourne discussed pledge signing in a most helpful way, and a free parliament followed on Y "Graduation."

The speech of the Conference was made by Miss Christine Tinling, of England, who was characterized as "most sympathetic and earnest." Miss Elizabeth Carr, a devoted, intelligent white-ribboner from Burma, was present.

Resolutions were passed indorsing the anti-canteen law, and rejoicing that scientific temperance instruction had been introduced into the last state. A recommendation was also passed, the girls pledging themselves not to patronize a drug, grocery or department store where liquor is sold. Those in attendance felt that they had been strengthened for all the year.

ANNIE SHREVE BURGYES,
Conference Reporter.

Our Honoraries.

THEY are such a brave, noble and necessary part of our organization that the question of "What shall we give our honoraries to do that will help them and keep them interested," is a very vital question. I have suggested appointing them superintendents of departments and chairmen of committees, and find from reports received that they work well and are very efficient. I want to tell you of one very interesting meeting held here. The superintendent of the department of law enforcement was given the little book, "Laws of Colorado," compiled by Mrs. Hungerford, and when his evening came for conducting that meeting, he read some of these laws, and a general discussion, in which many took part, proved very interesting. Indeed, one evening is not enough for all that may be learned from this book. It brought to the attention of these young people the flagrant violation of law by liquor dealers, not permissible in any other business.

A flower superintendent with a young woman assistant, works well. Press superintendents seem to be, especially, the work for our honoraries. Sometimes the program for the entire evening is given by the young men, and is quite entertaining. There are so many new things they can do, and will gladly do, if they are made to feel that they are a part of this army of right against wrong.

In some places the attendance of the young men is larger than that of the young women, especially is this true when the meetings are held in the evening. My experience is that the young men generally are very loyal to the white ribbon army, when enlisted, and prove valiant soldiers for our cause. Don't fail to ask them to join our ranks and then be sure to give them something to do. We need their sterling young manhood to strengthen our forces, and they need our influence and encouragement.—Mrs. Nannie T. Patterson, in Colorado "Messenger."

An Interview with Mrs. Margaret Dye Ellis.

By Elizabeth P. Gordon.

THE Capital City has a festive, holiday air. Decorations of holly and evergreen abound. The stars and stripes wave from the Capitol and numerour government buildings, adding a touch of color to the scene and giving one a thrill of patriotism. The affairs of government, however, are wellnigh forgotten; Congress is taking a recess. One can almost hear the shouts of the children in the White House, and those in the poorest homes are equally happy over the gifts of Santa Claus.

Washington is a cosmopolitan city, and hundreds here have no homes of their own. Residents have a fellow feeling for the stranger, who is always sure of a warm hand-shake at church and at reception.

No greeting was so welcome to the writer as that given her by our National Superintendent of Legislation, Mrs. Margaret Dye Ellis, who is once more at the District Headquarters, 522 6th Street, N. W. I found Mrs. Ellis busily at work in the National office, on the second floor, a handsome front parlor, twenty by thirty feet, to which has been given the dainty touch of its refined home-loving occupant. "Dearie Ellis," as Frances Willard used to call her, has her desk in the large front bay window, as if to secure all possible light on the weighty Congressional documents which fill every available space. On the left of the desk is the typewriter, at which Mrs. Ellis was sitting, with "John," "the best product of Maine," near by, culling valuable items from the newspapers. A letter from Mrs. Stevens had just arrived. "I receive one from her nearly every day when emergencies arise," said Mrs. Ellis, "and I value much her wise counsels."

A large prettily framed picture of Frances Willard decorated with flags, and an array of white ribboners' photographs on the mantle and in wire frame, make one feel at home. A little motto, "Cheerful Todays, and Trustful Tomorrows," has a conspicuous place. Bright rays of sunshine light up the green Virginia holly gracefully entwined in the white lace curtains, and play on the crimson velvet carpet, the loan of a generous local white ribboner.

Visitors invariably express their high appreciation of the National office. Among the callers whom Mrs. Ellis has lately welcomed were Mrs. General Bidwell of California, Mrs. Helen D. Harford, president of Oregon W. C. T. U., Miss Annie Robbins, late of Manila, Mrs. Dorcas J. Spencer, corresponding secretary of California W. C. T. U., Miss Esther Pugh, of Ohio, and Miss Cornelia Dow, of Maine.

The closing hour of the old year found many people assembled in the various churches praying.

"O God, our help in ages past,
Our hope for years to come,
Be thou our guide while life shall last,
And our eternal home."

In one of the oldest churches of the city as the solemn midnight hour struck, the people were on their knees in reverent consecration, and beside Mrs. Ellis and the writer knelt Jennie Smith, the railroad evangelist, who now makes her home in Washington.

Everybody receives on New Year's day, but the reception given by the District W. C. T. U. at night was one of the most successful in the city. The pleasant, commodious parlors on the first floor of the handsome brick building were prettily decorated, and the ladies were so attractingly gowned and served such delicious ices and coffee that it seemed like a delightful home affair. Three hundred people shook hands with the receiving party, among whom were Mrs. Clinton Smith, president of the District Union, and Mrs. Ellis, who was greeted for the first time this season by many of the warm friends she has made during her six years' stay in Washington. One of the ladies expressed the feeling of all when she said, "We are so glad when Mrs. Ellis arrives, for we know congressmen trust her judgment, and our work is safe in her hands; she is so womanly and so dignified."

Those who think it makes a woman less charming to do public work should dine with Mr. and Mrs. Ellis, as I did on Christmas day, and enjoy the culinary achievements of a stateswoman who is skilled in light housekeeping. The arrangement of the little table was not complete until the pictures of the grandchildren, Margaret, John and Albert, were brought from the parlor. "Ah," said Mrs. Ellis, "it's a real deprivation to be separated from the darling children. It is the first time we have ever been away from home at Christmas."

Letters from the girls, the two married daughters, formed a part of the festivities. It did my homesick soul good to share this bit of beautiful home-life and to hear Mr. and Mrs. Ellis call each other "father" and "mother," the dearest names on earth.

Finding Mrs. Ellis early one Saturday morning

A Corner of the Legislative Office.

busily engaged in mending and sewing buttons on her husband's coat, I said to her, "You certainly are in a true woman's sphere now." "Yes," answered Mrs. Ellis laughingly; "some one asked my eldest daughter if her mother knew how to sew. Minnie was quite indignant and replied with considerable spirit: 'Mother not only did our mending, but she made all our dresses until we were sixteen years old.' "

Headquarters W. C. T. U., Washington, D. C., Legislative Office, Second Floor.

I said: "This is just the opportunity, Mrs. Ellis, for the interview you promised me." "Well, hurry," she answered. "When I have darned the last stocking I must write and make arrangements to have an interview with the President next week. What is your first question?"

"Was it not voted at the Convention in Portland that the National W. C. T. U. should take the initiative in trying to secure an anti-polygamy amendment to the federal constitution?"

Mrs. Ellis: "It was, and as soon as Congress convened a pressure was brought to bear on the House Judiciary committee which caused the question to come to a vote. Seven were opposed and six were in favor. This should not be a cause of discouragement, but rather of encouragement, for it is the largest vote we have ever had on the question of an anti-polygamy amendment to the Constitution. It is an indication that the sentiment is rising. The men detest polygamy, but they think the question is hardly one of sufficient gravity to call for an amendment to the Constitution."

"Will there be any further opportunity to press the question in the House during this session?"

Mrs. Ellis: "In the House of Representatives there will hardly be a chance, as this is the short session, which closes the fourth of March. There is an opportunity in the Senate to make an amendment to the Statehood bills forever prohibiting polygamy in Arizona, New Mexico, Oklahoma and Indian Territory."

"What is the feeling in regard to uniting Indian Territory and Oklahoma as one state?"

Mrs. Ellis: "A petition just received from the president of Indian Territory W. C. T. U., which I will forward to the President at once, expresses the sentiment of the Christian and temperance people.

'We the undersigned beg and implore you for the sake of the Indians, to do all in your power to keep Indian Territory from being made a state with Oklahoma Territory. We also implore you for the sake of the Indians, that you will do all in your power to keep both of these territories from becoming states without prohibitory laws forbidding all manner of intoxicating liquors. It is our honest belief before God that if liquor saloons are allowed in these territories the saloon or liquor men will soon own nearly all the lands now belonging to the Indians. For the welfare and salvation of the Indians we plead. We are praying for you and for all of our Congressmen.' "

"Will Congress do anything towards the repeal of the anti-canteen law?"

Mrs. Ellis: "We cannot tell. Congress is now taking its holiday vacation. There are so many important measures of great public interest to be brought forward that I hardly think Congress will repeal a law which the Fifty-fifth and Fifty-sixth sessions passed; still, we are on the alert and ready for whatever may present itself."

"What are the conditions at Ellis Island? Have you been there?"

Mrs. Ellis: "The day after Thanksgiving I spent on Ellis Island in company with Miss Orr, our W. C. T. U. missionary, and other missionaries employed by the churches. I had the opportunity of studying conditions. The bar was well patronized; a bottle of beer costing five cents elsewhere sold for ten cents. Coffee was carried round in a large tin pail; it smelled bad and was weak and cold. A few days before, a lady upon asking for a glass of milk, was told there was none. 'Why, I supposed it was the rule for you to have milk.' 'So it is,' the attendant rejoined, 'and if you will wait we will get it,' which he proceeded to do.

"Two thousand seven hundred and seventy-six emigrants arrived that day. The girls coming over in the steerage are well protected. It is not at Ellis Island that girls are decoyed. It is at the steamers' docks where those who come over in the first and second cabins land. There these girls are met by designing parties who take advantage of their ignorance of the language and the customs of the country and deceive them by offering good positions at generous pay and then take them to houses of infamy."

"Can nothing be done to prevent this?"

Mrs. Ellis: "As soon as I came to Washington I called on Senator Penrose, of Pennsylvania, chairman of the committee on immigration, directing his attention to the need of women being appointed by the government to care for these girls. He heartily approved of the suggestion and gave me a letter to Commissioner Williams of Ellis Island. Later I called on the Commissioner General at his office here in Washington. He appreciated the necessity of something being done to protect these girls, but mentioned some of the difficulties in the

(Continued on page 14.)

A Fight Against Odds

By Kate Anderson.

Copyrighted by Woman's Temperance Publishing Association.

Synopsis of Preceding Chapters.

Mr. Kilgour, a railway conductor, is killed in the wreck of his train caused by the blunder of a drunken engineer. His son Ralph takes a position as clerk in a hotel and the second son, Willie, is offered the place of assistant, but refuses from a nameless fear of having anything to do with the "Thing" that caused his father's death. Allie, the only daughter, has a position as stenographer. Claude, the youngest, a fine boy of twelve, handsome and gifted, generous and loving, is in school. Willie's action in refusing a position connected with the sale of liquor comes to the notice of the W. C. T. U. women and the ministers of the city, who make much of him socially, while a Methodist "pillar" gives him a good position, and he makes new friendships among the best class of people. He soon becomes a Christian. Claude fails in his examinations, acts moody and sour and is discovered smoking a cigaret. He promises to reform, but continues the practice in secret.

Chapter III.

WILLIE sat up until midnight devouring the literature and statistics which Miss Meredith had given him on the subject of cigaret smoking. He learned of the woefulness of the accursed habit, of the youthful criminals crowding the jails and reformatories, of the thousands filling early graves, of the thousands more in hospitals and asylums. Then he dropped on his knees and groaned, "O God, help me, help me, help me to save our baby brother!"

The next morning he took Claude aside and accused him of untruthfulness. Claude pathetically and plausibly denied having lied, and almost succeeded in making Willie feel ashamed of falsely suspecting him. However, Willie was not deterred from making a thorough and systematic inquiry that night before he slept, and he learned from different sources that Claude had been smoking cigarets for nearly a year, and that he often consumed as many as six or seven packages a day. Willie made use of his first opportunity to inform Ralph of his discovery, and that young man was at first incredulous, then horrified.

"It is perfectly appalling, simply incomprehensible," he exclaimed, "to think that Claude has so completely deceived and hoodwinked the whole family for such a length of time. I would have given worlds to know of this at the beginning. I tell you, Billy, the ravages of whisky cannot compare in hopelessness to those awful cigarets. I have seen enough of their terrible work to make me hate the sight of one."

"Why, Ralph, I never heard you even mention the subject before."

"I don't know that I have ever talked about it, as it always seemed a subject remote from any personal interest of our own, but I have always made a practice of discouraging any fool youngsters I saw monkeying with the vile things. A person is apt to be callous to any existing evil until the thing is brought home to his own door, but I tell you it is then one becomes all eyes and ears to ward off a peril. It's a beastly, selfish uncaring world this, Billy boy, and no one of us is better than his neighbor, I'm afraid. But I could give you some eye-openers on the effects of cigaret smoking."

"I know," replied Willie, soberly. "I read it up only last night."

"Well," said Ralph, with a sigh, "I wish this were a thing you and I could engineer ourselves without worrying poor mother, but we are going to have a fearful tussle before us to get Claude broken off, and we shall need her help and Allie's too, to watch him."

The grief and consternation of the mother and sister were indescribable upon learning that their dear Claude was a sneak and a liar. The mother was hard to convince, and evidently could not grasp the seriousness of the cigaret-smoking in itself, or connect it with Claude's deceit.

"Why should he tell an untruth about it?" she asked piteously.

"Yes," agreed Allie vehemently; "of course it was very wrong and all that, for Claude to smoke on the sly, but then even the best of boys will sometimes get into mischief and do very wrong things, but it is out of all nature for him to lie about it when found out and questioned. That is what I cannot understand."

"Why," explained Ralph patiently, for the tenth time, "that's all part of the smoking. Haven't I been trying to tell you that the use of cigarets utterly destroys all moral sense, sort of deadens the discrimination between right and wrong, makes the conscience and perceptions all callous and hard. Why, I have known scores of young fellows who have formed the habit, and I cannot recall one of them who has reached a certain stage, but would just as soon tell a lie as the truth any day, and what is more, there is not a confirmed cigaret user I know of whom I would trust with any money of mine. That's a fact! They lose all sense of honor, and most of them would think as little of pilfering from a till as of lying. They seem to lose all idea of decency and ambition, they read nothing but bad books, seek nothing but low company, won't work, but turn tramps and loafers till they die off or get hanged."

"Oh, stuff!" exclaimed Alice impatiently. "I know lots of people who smoke. Why, Uncle Jim has always smoked, and you couldn't find a better, more high-principled man in Ontario. Claude is just turning into a wicked, bad boy, and a good talking to and punishment will bring him around."

"You see, Allie," said Willie, "it's some sort of opium or arsenic poisoning in the paper around the stuff that does the mischief. Seems it has the same effect as that experienced by confirmed opium eaters."

It was agreed that every cent of Claude's pocket money should be cut off and that he should not be allowed to leave his home either for recreation or for any other pretext—that while he might retain his situation at the hostelry during the brief remainder of the holidays, he should be strictly under Ralph's eye all day. It was further determined that by every art and resource which love and anxiety could devise, an endeavor should be made by the now thoroughly alarmed mother and brothers to rescue "the flower of the family," from the grip of this monster. "We must not tire, or become weary or careless, or lose vigilance for an hour or a day, or even be deceived by apparent reform or assertions to that effect," said Willie, who had been well coached by Miss Meredith.

And thus it was done as agreed upon. At the end of three months Claude's reform seemed so assured that the watchfulness was slightly relaxed, and he was allowed more liberty.

Then it was that Miss Meredith came to Willie. "Willie," said she. "Claude is in the habit of going down to Armand Renaud's fishing shanty to drink beer with a gang of young toughs, while his mother thinks he is at choir practice."

Willie could scarcely express his feelings. "Blessings on you, Miss Meredith," he finally blurted out. "You are worth the whole shooting match of us put together." His lips were very white.

Miss Meredith laid her fair hand on his arm.

"Don't forget to pray unceasingly, dear Willie; I am praying, too."

"I do, I do," he exclaimed earnestly, his brown eyes filling with tears.

Again a consultation was held with Ralph. Ere midnight, by diligent detective work, the two young men had unearthed the facts that Claude did drink beer, and that he mingled with the lowest company to be found in that tough little city; that he had never ceased the use of cigarets, that he sneaked away with other depraved youths to devour the vilest, most pernicious, most unspeakably filthy literature that could be procured by lawful or unlawful means; that, young as he was, he had entered into low vice to hear of which made even Ralph's bronzed cheek blush.

It was useless taxing Claude. He denied everything, and when proofs of his guilt were shown him, he indifferently admitted that he had been lying.

"And where has all the money been coming from?" asked Ralph, who had been himself drawing Claude's pay for him and seeing that no money was handled by him.

Claude half smiled at the simplicity of this question. "Oh, pshaw," he replied derisively. "Do you suppose any fellow with half an ounce of brains can't pick up an odd tip or earn a dime in a town like this, to say nothing of swaps?"

"But," said Willie, "you promised to give every cent you got to mother to take care of, so you could not be tempted."

"Rats!" replied the boy.

Ralph said not a word, but he picked the young reprobate up by the coat collar, and carrying him to the far woodshed, administered such a complete and thorough horsewhipping that Claude never forgot. Claude howled for mercy like a young Comanche, and when the punishment ceased he was a thoroughly subdued and frightened boy.

"Now," said Ralph, "that's the dose you get every time we hear of your smoking a single cigaret, or in any particular disobeying any command given you by one in this house. You never get any unreasonable ones."

This last outbreak it was decided to keep from the little mother, who happened to be out visiting a friend in the country when these latest discoveries took place.

"Willie," said Ralph, as the brothers disrobed that night, "I've quit the hostelry—had a row with Cruickshank."

"How's that?" asked Willie, deeming it prudent not to allow face and voice to reveal his joy at this intelligence.

"Well you see, Cruickshank owns that cigar store on Sandwich avenue, run for him by that sneak of a Lafferty, where the boys get supplied with all the cigarets they can pay for in spite of the law. I spoke to him about it and to my surprise he—well, he wasn't nice. The truth is, Cruickshank is identified heart and soul with all the tobacco and liquor interests in the county. Last night he was elected president of the Southwestern Tobacco Growers' Union. I tell you what it is, Billy, I'm turning prohibitionist. Of course I never did have any personal use for either liquor or tobacco, and as a question of common sense, could never see how the country benefited in the long run by the traffic. But I never concerned myself about the question till lately. It stands to reason, though, that if no beer or liquor were to be had, Claude could not get off on these tears, and the same with cigarets. Say, it beats me all to pieces how it comes that cigarets are permitted to be made and sold. Even liquor has a limited sphere of usefulness as a preservative or drug, while it would be hard to convince some that tobacco is anything more than a harmless, useless, expensive and filthy luxury, though it's precious few confirmed or enslaved tobacco users I know who amount to a row of pins compared with what is in them to be, if they'd leave the narcotic alone. But I don't know that I ever heard anyone even attempt to say a good word for cigarets, no more among the most confirmed tobacco sots, than among temperance cranks. All agree in admitting them to be the most devilish poison to brain, body and soul known to exist. You can set to work and reform a drunkard if he himself really wants to reform, but there seems no material to begin on in a cigaret fiend. Get a drunkard sobered up and he is full of vim and energy to reform, as far as the will goes, but there is no will, no enthusiasm, no anything that is not dried up and dead in a cigaret fiend."

"But do you suppose," asked Willie, anxious to draw out his elder brother, "that a prohibition law could ever be enforced?"

"Certainly not, at least in this county, at present," was the quick reply. "But conditions are much more healthy back of us, and my theory is that it is a most idiotic policy to legalize and control anything which is wrong in itself. So long as evil walks forth under the cover of law and respectability, there will ten men fall where there would otherwise be but one. There will always be a percentage of people who will steal and murder and burn barns and use foul language, in spite of the most stringent laws and penalties, but these gentry are not favorites in good society, and are obliged to resort to all kinds of unpopular and unpleasant devices to gain their ends. Take divorce in Michigan for instance. Lots of men would think twice before clearing out with their neighbor's wife, but under the cover of an easy divorce law, which insures the legality and respectability of their action, many will secure a divorce and marry the 'lady next door.' Plenty of swell fellows who think a lot of themselves, but don't hesitate to enter a high-toned licensed saloon or bar-room to learn to be drunkards, would never stoop for an instant to underhand or low devices to obtain a drink. I tell you, a town containing a low hole where rowdies resort to drink on the sly, though it speaks badly for its power to enforce a law, is morally better off than a town containing a so-called 'respectable' and high-toned licensed drinking place which makes drinking popular among the better class, while also affording an open opportunity for the lowest class to indulge their desires without the stigma of being law-breakers."

"Great Scott!" mentally ejaculated Willie, "isn't Ralph great? Sound as a bell and solid as a rock when he gets started on a tack. That fellow will make a mark if he sets out after it."

In Willie's prayers that night arose a special petition for this brother who, he felt, was very near the kingdom.

Another change took place in Claude from the date of his somewhat severe, though not cruel punishment. Evidently the thrashing had made an impression on him which all the prayers, entreaties, kindness, helpfulness and forbearance on the part of the entire family had failed to accomplish. This in itself was a heart-breaking evidence of the change which had taken place in Claude's noble high-strung nature. Formerly, a tear in his mother's eye, a sisterly tenderness from Alice, an undeserved kindness from Ralph, was enough to melt Claude's frank affectionate nature to instant repentance and atonement for any boyish fault. Now only the measures that might be applied to a brute beast could arouse any sensation in his frame. As soon as his mother arrived home, she was told that Claude had been smoking again and her aid invoked in placing a doubly vigilant guard on his movements.

(To be continued.)

Children's Cozy Corner.

GOODY TWO SHOES.

I'M little Goody Two Shoes,
Have you heard the true news,
How dear father signed the pledge,
And says he'll drink no more?
He's kind as he can be
To mother and to me,
And we are happier now, I'm sure,
Than e'er we were before.

They call me Goody Two shoes,
Father bought my new shoes.
Don't you think 'twas very nice
For him these shoes to buy?
I hope some other miss
Has a new pair just like this,
And is a happy little girl,
As happy as am I.

—Verses for Little Children.

Rags and Tags and Velvet Gowns.

"'N there was a new boy at school yesterday, 'n he had great patches on his knees; 'n when we choosed up the boys didn't choose him; 'n his face got red, oh! as red as fire; 'n he walked away 'n stood lookin' off over the water at the ships. Served him right, I say."

Ted had been rattling on in this fashion for at least fifteen minutes; and mamma, who was reading up for the next club paper, hardly heard a word; but this last caught her attention, and she looked over the top of the book with a little start.

"Perhaps he was watching for his ship to come in," said she quietly.

If Ted could have seen the rest of her face he would have done some thinking before he said any more.

"His ship. 'Tisn't likely a boy like him would have a ship—is it now? Course he can't help the patches, p'r'aps," said Ted, condescendingly, "but he oughtn't to come to a pay school with us. Harold Winston said it wasn't—suitable; and so did all the other boys. He ought to go to the public school where the patches are."

Mamma's eyebrows went up in a fashion that would have alarmed Ted if he had happened to look at her, but he was stroking the spotless knees of his own velvet trousers.

"I used to know a boy who wore patches."

"Yes. I used to play with him every day. Patches and bare brown feet, and a hat without any brim."

"Was he a nice boy?" Ted asked, doubtfully.

"I think, taking everything into consideration, he was the nicest boy I ever knew," said mamma, with an emphatic little nod.

"And I ought to know, for I went to school with him for years."

"'N when the boys choosed up did they leave him out?" asked Ted.

"Oh, dear me, no!" said mamma, decidedly. "They wouldn't for the world have done anything so impolite.

Ted looked blank for a moment. Then his face grew red, oh! as red as fire.

"His ship hadn't come in then," continued mamma; "but it has since. He owns a big factory now."

"W-w-hat's his name?" sputtered Ted.

"John Hartley Livingston."

"Uncle John Livin'ston?"

Mamma nodded. "All boys who wear patches—and bare brown feet—don't become rich men; but I fear they are more apt to become something worth while than boys who wear—velvet suits, because they are used to hardships and dirt and disagreeable things. Men who amount to something have a great deal of hard, disagreeable work to do."

"This is my best suit, anyway," cried Ted, twisting in his chair. "I don't always wear velvet. You know I wore it 'cause it was Friday and speakin' day."

Mamma went back to her book, and Ted stole away and lay down on a fluffy white rug with his feet on the seat of the sofa—a favorite position of his when he wanted to think. Monday night he came home greatly excited and stood before his mother with his feet crossed.

"The boys choosed again, 'n I choosed the patched boy, 'n they wouldn't let him play, 'n we went off 'n played mumbley-peg by our two selves," he cried, the words fairly tumbled over each other. Then he uncrossed his feet and swung the under one forward. There was a jagged hole in the knee of his trousers. "'N I want that patched," he cried, with a defiant ring in his voice. "If you please, mamma," he added in gentle tones.

"Very well," said mamma soberly, but her mouth was smiling behind the book.

"The boys have all come 'round, mamma," Ted announced, cheerfully, a week later. "Harold Winston came 'round today. He held out two days longer 'n any of the rest, 'n he did hate to give in, but he got tired of walkin' 'round all by himself."—Mary Marshall Parks.

How to See the Wind.

TAKE a polished metallic surface of two feet or more, with a straight edge; a large hand-saw will answer the purpose. Select a windy day, whether hot or cold, clear or cloudy, only let it not rain or the air be murky; in other words, let the air be dry. Hold this metallic surface at right angles to the wind; that is, if the wind is north, hold your surface east or west and incline it at an angle of forty-five degrees, so that the wind, striking, glances and flows over the edge. Now sight carefully over the edge at some small but clearly defined object and you will see the air flow over as water flows over a dam.—Classmate.

Correct Speech and Slang.

CORRECT speech must be used constantly if one would feel at ease in polite conversation. Using slang six days out of seven tends to make you awkward in speaking the mother tongue, just as a plow boy feels awkward when he dons his Sunday suit. The girl or boy who resorts to slang—which generally has its origin in low places—will seldom make a good impression on those whose good will is valuable. It is slovenly and vulgar. Correct speech is an accomplishment, and should be cultivated.—Selected.

On Guard.

SOMETHING brave within you, boys,
Bids you manly be
When Sir Tempter's army comes
To make you bend the knee.
Sir Conscience is a nobleman,
Who'll guard you safe, if any can.

Something wise within you, boys,
Bids you watchful be,
When Sir Pride would lock your heart,
And throw away the key.
It's better, boys, to keep Sir Pride
With all his saucy men outside.

Something true within you, boys,
Bids you honest be,
When old Sir Untruth would try
Your deepest thoughts to see.
I'd listen, boys, if I were you
To open-hearted Captain True.

FRANK WALCOTT HUTT.

"Gather Out the Stones."

"IT is such a stony little path between here and Mrs. Harvey's that I can't bear to go over it," said Jim.

"And Dick Harvey doesn't like it any better when he comes over here," said Frank. "I heard him say he had got ever so many bruises in that path. He was grumbling about it yesterday."

"Why don't you clear the way between here and your neighbor's?" asked Mr. Morris. "Much better do that than keep grumbling about it."

"Why, we should never get all the stones out of that path," cried Jim.

"Not all in one day, nor by taking all the stones at once," said the father. "But if each of the boys who crosses there would take a stone out of the way every time he goes, the work would be done. Try it."

The boys did try it. Half a dozen young lads who used the path, helped, and the path was cleared.

This is exactly the way to make it easier and pleasanter for others in this world. Let each one make it his business, as he goes through life, to take some little hindrance out of the way whenever he can. Little faults should be cured, and little temptations that cause unwary feet to stumble should be removed.—Selected.

Puzzlers' Packet.

Puzzles marked (*) are protected by copyright. Contributors will please keep matter intended for this department distinct from other correspondence, and address same to PUZZLERS' PACKET, THE UNION SIGNAL, Chicago.

9.—A Triangle of Anagrams.

Let
E E
Pragh O Hopen

Each side of the triangle names a modern invention. A fourth invention may be found by omitting a single letter in the base line of the triangle.

EDITH ESTES.

10.—Charade.

"Cheer up, cheer up," the robins sing,
And show no sign of ONE,
Until a bad boy robs their nest,
And they are left alone.

From busy TWO the truth is learned
That labor is the best,
So cheerfully they sing and toil
And build another nest.

Their song is e'er a TOTAL song,
"Cheer up, cheer up, cheer, cheer."
Their drink is e'er the water cool
From sparkling brooklet near.

BELLE GORDON.

11.—Curtailed Animals.

1. Curtail an animal and leave an abbreviated partnership.
2. Curtail an animal and leave an abbreviated state.
3. Curtail an animal and leave another abbreviated state.
4. Curtail an animal and leave abbreviated sameness.

LEHCAN.

12.—A Dissected Fruit.

I divided a fruit into six parts, and in trying to put it together again I found successively:

1. The sound of a bell.
2. An animal.
3. A spring.
4. A vegetable.
5. A meadow.

E. W. R.

13.*Letter Removals.

(Remove one letter in each case.)

A robust man with weary step
And pale and haggard brow,
Walked down the lighted village street
With faltering step and slow.

The bank had failed! His modest store
Wth which he hoped to ONE
The space 'twixt him and chosen TWO
Was now entirely gone.

He's on his way to tell her now
They'll have to "THREE a wee."
But here the brave and noble girl
FOUR him the thought to flee.

"FIVE rather help you, dear," she said,
"Than have you toil alone,
That SIX in after years might use
The wealth your toil has won."

ETHYL.

Answers.

1.—Lifetime.
2.—Vice is a monster.
3.—1. Uni-corn. 2. Corn-wallis. 3. Corn-er. 4. A-corn. 5. Capri-corn.
4.—The night shall be filled with music,
And the cares that infest the day
Shall fold their tents like the Arabs
And as silently steal away.
5.—Mary, hard, mart, cart, hare, care, fare, cars, dare, park, dark, harm, farm, tart, bark, Earl, Carl, barn, hart, dart.
6.—We wish you all a glad New Year.

FOR GOD AND HOME AND EVERY LAND

The UNION SIGNAL AND WORLD'S WHITE RIBBON

NATIONAL AND WORLD'S WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION

Official Organ of the WORLD'S AND NATIONAL WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION.

Published Weekly by the Woman's Temperance Publishing Association, Chicago.

EDITOR-IN-CHIEF, - - - - - - MRS. LILLIAN M. N. STEVENS.
CORRESPONDING EDITOR, - - - LADY HENRY SOMERSET.
MANAGING EDITOR - - - - - MRS. CORNELIA T. JEWETT.

CONTRIBUTING EDITORS:

MRS. SUSANNA M. D. FRY. MRS. KATHARINE L. STEVENSON.
MRS. CLARA C. CHAPIN. MRS. ISABELLA WEBB PARKS.

Address all letters and manuscript intended for the editors to, The Editorial Department, UNION SIGNAL. Unavailable manuscripts will be returned only when sufficient postage accompanies the request.

SUBSCRIPTIONS.

Subscriptions may commence with any issue.
The date on the label indicates when your subscription ends.
Papers will be discontinued unless otherwise ordered.
Remittances should always be made in the safest manner available to the remitter. Register cash remittances.
Change of Address.—Give both your old and your new address when you desire a change.
Change of Date.—It takes at least three weeks to change the date, after your subscription is renewed.

PRICE $1.50 PER YEAR IN ADVANCE.
FOREIGN POSTAGE $1.04 ADDITIONAL.

Address all Business Communications to
The UNION SIGNAL, 184 La Salle St., CHICAGO.....

Chicago, January 22, 1903.

"The women that publish the tidings are a great host."

The Improvement of Moral and Religious Education.

A BODY of earnest Christian men, known as the Council of Seventy, have put forth a document calling for a national convention to be held in one or more of the largest churches of Chicago, February 10-12, 1903. The object of this convention is to effect a national organization for the improvement of the religious and moral education, through the Sunday school and other agencies. The present situation is outlined as follows:

It has become increasingly clear that the instruction of the young in religion and morality, which is given in the Sunday school, the home, and by other means, is inadequate to the present need and is not wholly in accord with the best present knowledge. The gradual retirement of the Bible from the common schools has decreased the amount of moral and religious instruction which the children receive. The Sunday school is in essential respects failing to do its full duty, and only a comparatively small proportion of the children of the country come under its influence for any length of time. The home training of children in religion and morality is generally neglected and defective; parents do not know how, or do not take the necessary time and trouble to give their children a real education in these directions. Others leave their children to get such knowledge of these matters as they chance upon or learn by experience. As a consequence, the greater number of children grow up without correct and adequate religious and moral education.

The work which needs to be done by the new organization aims "to define the true relation of religious and moral instruction to other branches of instruction; it is to present and apply the established results of modern psychology, pedagogy, and modern Bible study, as related to religious and moral teaching; to indicate the proper place of the Bible in religious and moral instruction, and, finally, by all means to accomplish the adequate training of teachers to give instruction by showing what amount and kind of knowledge are required and how they may be attained; what spiritual and moral qualifications are necessary for the training of boys and girls into men and women, and what are the best methods in the many branches of this most important of all educational work."

The Council of Seventy directs the American Institute of Sacred Literature and has secured the enthusiastic support in this new movement of a very wide circle of Christian workers throughout the land, including such men as President William R. Harper, Prof. Herbert L. Willett, Prof. Shaler Matthews, Dr. Newell D. Hillis, Dr. Charles H. Parkhurst, Rev. Josiah Strong, President F. W. Gunsaulus, Mr. L. Wilbur Messer, and Prof. George A. Coe.

We hail this movement as an obviously normal, timely and vital step in the development of our Christian civilization. The world does move, and that in the right direction. If the powers of darkness are rallying for the final conflict, so are the forces of light, and there can be no doubt as to the outcome. So far from wishing to substitute a vast system of cumbersome machinery for vital processes, we understand that the object of this proposed organization is to remove obstacles out of the way, to prepare the way of the Lord, make straight in the desert a highway for our God. Instead of taking God's redemptive work out of His hands, the intention is to prepare the field of the world for the ripening grain. As never before, good men are recognizing that law and constancy, order and sequence, cause and effect, reign in the inner world of character and devotion as well as in the outer material world. Here, then, is a challenge for a better understanding of the place of Christ in modern life, for better work, for greater confidence, enthusiasm and cooperation in Christian work. We shall watch with sympathetic interest the further development of this great movement.

A Bit of Civic Economy.

AN interesting chapter of municipal history appears in a recent issue of the Chicago Tribune, entitled "A Training School for Drunkards," wherein was presented a civic enterprise of which the majority of citizens would plead ignorance.

One Mary O'Brien, representative of a sad sisterhood, the victim of the drink habit, during the twenty years prior to her death, served 313 separate sentences in the bridewell, on the charge of drunkenness. Each arrest, commitment and trial cost the city about $9, and it is estimated that during those twenty years the city invested in this case a sum approximating about $3,000. This expensive reformatory process proved an utter failure, and in the end the woman died a victim of alcoholism.

Mary O'Brien not only has numerous sisters with similar records, but she has an even greater number of brothers who are the constant subjects of this process of civic reform. The beautiful system, for the support of which the city annually pays thousands of dollars, is this:

First, the municipal government gives to certain individuals, for a stipulated sum per annum, the privilege of selling poison to a thirsty world.

Second. A far too large proportion of that world respond to the invitation which these licensed dealers extend, become a fit subject for the police department, and are arrested and brought before a justice of the peace.

Third. This justice, with an utterly mistaken idea of the true meaning of sympathy, fines the ordinary offender the minimum penalty, $1 and costs, which is equivalent to the spending of five days in the Bridewell.

Fourth. Just at the time when the subject has sufficiently recovered from the effects of his debauch to be uncontrollably thirsty, his term expires and he is released to go out and beg, borrow or steal such a sum as will enable him to repeat his former experience, which he invariably does.

The most noticeable thing about the system is that it soon becomes almost automatic. The arrangement of small fines and short terms is as sure to transform the occasional offender into the chronic, as the chronic is sure of turning up at the Bridewell a certain number of days after his discharge, a few degrees more worthless than when he left.

One merit the scheme can claim: it is absolutely and heartlessly consistent. To license an evil sure to produce crime, to condone or treat as trivial that crime, to nurse back to comparative decency and health in order that the victim may go out to further indulgences which are provided for him at every corner, and finally to bury him in a pauper's grave—this is the inspiring program offered for the contemplation of the tax-payer and the philanthropist!

The superintendent of the Bridewell suggests longer terms of commitment as a remedy. This would, at least, be somewhat more humane. It might afford the occasional individual who has a real desire to reform, an opportunity to recover his manhood sufficiently to struggle back to health and respectability. Not much more could be expected.

And yet society has utterly failed to treat this awful sin in anything but a superficial way. Although the most prolific of evils, from which spring untold crimes, involving the city and state in constant expense, it is, nevertheless, almost invariably treated in a jocular manner, as a foible of humanity which must be tolerated. Not until society has come to see its awful gravity and to consider it with a seriousness born of an appreciation of the misery it inflicts upon humanity, may we hope for far-reaching methods of reform.

Down with Mars.

A CERTAIN pedagogue of prominence has sounded a new and wholesome note in educational circles. At a recent Illinois State Teachers' Association meeting he said: "Let us renounce the training based on the stories of war and its ravages. We have tried too long to exploit the story of Caesar's work and Alexander's conquests to inculcate the heroic and moral virtues. A militant civilization has been replaced by a commercial and peaceful civilization, and the educator must yield."

In other words, the learned gentleman disparages the theory that crops of good, wholesome, juicy figs are to be reaped from fields sown plentifully and diligently with thistle seed. "No teaching is good," says the professor, "which does not prepare a pupil for the civilization in which he is living" According to this new theory, if you sow an Alexander, you may reap a Caesar; if you sow a Caesar you may reap a Napoleon; and if you persist in sowing all of these military ideals in the minds of the youth of our country, when, O when, can you expect to reap a peace-loving republic of men and women?

This logic is unassailable. One can, in fact, almost see the pedestals upon which are standing the Caesars and Alexanders of the past, crumbling beneath them in the atmosphere of this altruistic age, and these old warriors—forced to show themselves upon a level with the manhood of today, and to be measured by present-day standards—appearing as nothing more than moral pygmies.

"Peace, not War," is the watchword of the hour, and it is time to revise our calendar of heroes and bring it up to date.

If, as the professor suggests, "culture is largely a matter of spirit," there is, doubtless, need to inaugurate a twentieth century course in hero worship and to frame a new definition of a hero. Heroism long ago ceased to be synonymous with warlike deeds. Heroic virtues have ceased to depend for their vigor and virility upon a fellowman's blood; a hero's name is no longer necessarily linked with a blood-stained sabre.

The stuff from which heroes are made is not, by any means, exhausted; it is simply coming to be refined and purified of its grosser qualities and cast in a nobler mold. In place of the warrior, is coming to stand the peacemaker and the arbitrator, who by consummate tact and wisdom bring together great bodies of men and mighty nations, and by virile qualities of mind and heart, rather than by cannon and musket, make possible settlement of differences without the shedding of men's blood or women's tears.

Little danger is there that heroism will go out of fashion or that the heroic qualities in man will atrophy from lack of use in this peaceful age. Never so much as now was there need for fighting men—men of indomitable courage, men who will not accept defeat, but who will enlist in a campaign against vice and corruption in high places and low places. Latter-day heroism can find unparalleled opportunities for winning victories compared with which Caesar's conquests shall seem childish and insignificant.

Send Petitions at Once. It is of the greatest importance that petitions should be sent to Congress at the very earliest possible moment. In the last few days of Congress moral measures have very small chance of a hearing. The petition is worth fully twice as much in January as in February. Although petitioning should be kept up to the last, the importance of hurrying to the utmost at this season cannot be too strongly urged. The Congressional Record shows, from day to day, the number of petitions coming in, and it is feared that it will be, as it was two years ago, that many of the petitions will come in too late to be of any special service. Let us endorse the policy of Napoleon, as expressed in that familiar sentence, "I know the value of minutes in war."

An Acknowledgment. The managing editor wishes to express her personal thanks to the official reporters of the various states for their prompt and efficient co-operation in making a success of the new system of reporting news from the field. Many letters of commendation for the plan have been received from state presidents, and many words of appreciation from general readers, while the opinions of the reporters themselves are expressed in the following clever note by one who shall be nameless: "Now ———— will have to be sparing of her adjectives and adverbs, and it will serve her right, too, for she knew all the time that these were weakening. But one thing she may still do—praise the workers all she can, even with the blue pencil lifted ominously against her."

President's Letter.

MY DEAR COMRADES: I write as I journey along on the Mountain Division of the Maine Central railroad, en route to Vermont. It is a sharp New England morning, ten degrees below zero. The White Mountains are marvelously beautiful, snow-covered and sun-kissed. Well might they have been named "White" on just such a morning as this.

I am reluctantly leaving my desk for "a week and two Sundays" in Vermont. I can do no other, for Vermont's necessity from a temperance standpoint is at this time very great. The subtle, unholy alliance that was made last summer among certain politicians led to the legislative action of substituting high-license local option for state prohibition. The legislature provided for a referendum by which is decided the time when prohibition will cease to be inoperative. In short, if the majority vote Yes, prohibition in Vermont will cease the first of March, 1903; if the majority vote No, prohibition will continue.

Mrs. Read and the other Vermont W. C. T. U. general officers are doing everything in their power to bring about a No vote. Other temperance organizations and the churches are also loyally and energetically at work to bring about the desired result. Of course the liquor fraternity is bringing everything possible to bear to defeat prohibition. It is very strange that anybody who wishes the sale of liquor to diminish or intemperance to be lessened, can be like-minded with brewers and distillers and liquor sellers in regard to prohibition. Yet some professedly good people appear to believe it to be right to license the sale of liquor.

Mrs. Hoffman, Mrs. Stevenson, Mrs. Howe (National Organizer), are now in Vermont, and Miss Gordon hopes to complete the business that has called her to Springfield, Ill., in time to permit her to be in Vermont the last week of the campaign. It is now my purpose to return to Vermont for those important days.

Last Thursday a Bill for Resubmission of the Prohibitory Clause of the Constitution of Maine was introduced into the Maine legislature. It was presented by one of the few men who two years ago favored the measure. The Maine W. C. T. U. is promptly and strenuously protesting against the Bill. The Civic League, Good Templars and the churches will also protest. There is no probability that the necessary two-thirds, or even one-half of two-thirds, of the legislature will vote in favor of resubmission. Some really honest temperance people would like to have the voters of Maine speak again on the question, because they believe the result would be most encouraging and helpful to the cause. The W. C. T. U. believes the vote would be in favor of sustaining the law but that time, work and money called for by such a campaign could be better expended for the good of the temperance cause than in an unnecessary resubmission campaign.

I am greatly pleased that white ribboners are so promptly rallying to the support of the Anti-Canteen law, working as white ribboners well know how to do to defeat the effort for its repeal. The law has not had a fair test. Gen. Daggett declares that five years, at least, would be required to give the law a fair trial. The money appropriated by Congress for improvements at post exchanges, etc., has not been used as yet; but we have reason to be well pleased with the results of the law even under adverse circumstances. According to latest official reports disease in the army (including insanity), has greatly decreased. There has also been a decrease in the number of cases of court martial. We must all be alert and work to hold the law as earnestly and diligently as we worked to secure it.

It has been fully decided that it is not best, after all, to accept the invitation to Milwaukee for our next National Convention. Miss Gordon and I spent a day in that city in company with the local committees, and we were all agreed that there was no suitable building in which to meet. We heartily hope that when a talked-of Music Hall is built, the invitation to come to Milwaukee may be repeated.

We hope now to round out the third decade of our W. C. T. U. by going for Convention to some Ohio city, and as near Hillsboro as possible. Mrs. Clark, president of the Ohio W. C. T. U., is promptly encouraging this thought Any city that entertains the Convention is blessed thereby. The people of Portland are profuse in their declarations of appreciation and thankfulness that the Convention came to them. We are constantly being reminded of pleasant, helpful episodes of that meeting, many of which were not reported in THE UNION SIGNAL and could not be unless the paper were many times larger.

Sitting on the platform during the meeting was Mr. Brunson Snyder, a man from Indiana, who signed the temperance pledge in 1839, and said, "In 1846 I raised the first barn in Green township, Columbia county, Ohio, that was raised without whisky." Comparing this time with the old time as he knew it, no wonder he felt at the Portland Convention that he saw "the glory of the coming of the Lord."

It was a great satisfaction to have with us during the entire Convention our old time comrade, Mrs. Judge Merrick, of Louisiana. Mrs. Merrick is a strong W. C. T. U. advocate and helper, an ardent suffragist, and an author. Her book, "Old Times in Dixie Land," is very interesting. She generously donated fifty copies to the National W. C. T. U.

Among the souvenirs of the Convention that Lady Henry prizes is a Georgia flag, beautifully made and presented to her by Mrs. Jennie Hart Sibley.

Plans for the World's W. C. T. U. Convention are favorably progressing, except that we have great anxiety concerning the health of Lady Henry, although letters just received assure us that she is much better. We were aware before she came over to our Convention that she was not well, and, accordingly, few meetings were arranged for her. Our prayers are all united for her speedy recovery, and may "the dews of Heaven fall thick in blessings on her."

With a loving greeting to all readers of THE UNION SIGNAL, mingled with the sincere desire to have their number multiplied, I am,

Yours for victory in Vermont and all along the line.

L. M. N. Stevens

Jan. 12, 1903.

The Editor's Question Box.

THE editors of THE UNION SIGNAL desire to know positively just what features of the paper are pleasing to its readers; whether or not it is meeting the needs of the great organization it represents. To this end we solicit definite answers to the list of questions appended herewith. We desire the suggestions, commendations, criticisms, complaints and requests of our subscribers, that we may be mutually benefited.

1. Which of the four numbers of THE UNION SIGNAL published in December did you like best, and which did you like least, and why?

2. Which article in these four numbers did you like best, and which did you like least, and why?

3. Which feature of the Magazine number, January 1, did you like best, and which did you like least, and why? Would you like to have the Monthly Magazine number continued?

4. What feature of THE UNION SIGNAL do you find most helpful, and what, if any, feature is not to your liking, and why?

5. Have you approved of the changes in the typographical appearance of THE UNION SIGNAL during the past six months, and do you wish to have it continued in its present form?

6. What suggestion can you make that, in your opinion, would improve THE UNION SIGNAL and make it more valuable to its readers?

7. Is every member of your Union a subscriber to THE UNION SIGNAL, and, if not, why not?

8. Has every member of your Union been asked to subscribe to THE UNION SIGNAL under the various special offers made? If not, why not?

9. Has every member of your Union seen a copy of THE UNION SIGNAL during the past six months? Sample copies may be had for the asking.

10. Have you, as an interested worker, made an effort to extend the influence of your National Official Organ, and if so, how? What plan would, in your opinion, be most effective in adding 50,000 new subscribers to our list?

To secure these replies promptly we make the following offers, good until February 15, 1903:

For the best answer to the set of ten questions, $5.00.

For the second best answer to the set of ten questions, $3.00.

For the third best answer to the set of ten questions, $2.00.

These answers will be carefully considered by a committee of three and the awards will be announced in our March Magazine number.

Answers received later than February 15, cannot be entered. Address all communications on this subject to Editor's Question Box, Union Signal Office, 184 La Salle St., Chicago.

OFFICIAL COMMUNICATIONS

REST COTTAGE. THE WILLARD.

GENERAL OFFICERS:

President,
MRS. LILLIAN M. N. STEVENS, Portland, Me.
Vice-President-at-Large,
MISS ANNA A. GORDON, Evanston, Ill.
Corresponding Secretary,
MRS. SUSANNA M. D. FRY, Evanston, Ill.
Recording Secretary,
MRS. CLARA C. HOFFMAN, Kansas City, Mo.
Asst. Recording Secretary,
MRS. FRANCES E. BEAUCHAMP, Lexington, Ky.
Treasurer,
MRS. HELEN M. BARKER, Evanston, Ill.

Headquarters National W. C. T. U., Evanston, Ill.

Corresponding Secretary's Notes.

DEAR SISTERS:—Mr. T. W. Glover, of England, has had a long and successful career in connection with the cause of temperance prohibition. He has just completed an eighteen months' campaign for the New Zealand Alliance and expects to arrive at Honolulu about February 3, and after ten days in the Hawaiian islands, comes to the United States. He can be addressed at Honolulu, care Anti-Saloon League, 9 McIntyre Building, or at 132 McAllister street, San Francisco, Cal., by those who would like to engage him for addresses. His testimonials show him to be a most entertaining and instructive lecturer and he has had great receptions in many parts of the world. He says, "With entertainment provided, there is little fear about results being satisfactory to all." It would seem that our cities at least ought to hear Brother Glover.

Some of the National organizers ask me to speak a word for membership contests and tell how to hold them. Let the unions choose sides as in an old-fashioned spelling-school, the officers being chosen as well as other members. Designate a definite length of time wherein each side shall seek to gain the largest number of members. It would be well to give several weeks to this. If a prize such as a souvenir spoon or book is offered, it should go, of course, to the individual gaining the largest number of members, but often the conditions are that the losing side shall furnish a reception with refreshments to the union and invited guests on the occasion of the introduction of the new members. Sometimes the losing side must also furnish the program, but it seems to me the winning side ought to be allowed to do that. Any union can easily originate such plans as will be acceptable to all. Suffer this caution, however; try to win members who will become permanently interested and do not forget the pledge in eagerness to secure dues. Make the campaign educational as well as entertaining. I know of a small union in Minnesota which increased its membership to over 100 by this method and had a great jubilee, with a fine program, at the close of the contest.

One of the National organizers writes me that she found in a certain state that most of the unions she visited did not take a single copy of THE UNION SIGNAL! She remarked that this accounted for some of their out-of-date methods. We ought to be proud that our organization is full of life and vitality. It constantly originates new methods and new applications for old methods. Otherwise, it would be dead. It is a sorrowful thought, however, that any union is without the official organ, for that means that it is not receiving what it might from the life-giving trunk. How we long to have all of our unions thoroughly alive and progressive, broad-minded and comprehensive in their plans and purposes. Let us work to this end.

Yours cordially,
SUE M. D. FRY

Physical Education.

DEAR COMRADES:—In getting down to serious business these January days, we pin our faith to two things: First, the motherhood, the womanhood of this nation must somehow be enlisted in this line of work which means so much for the rising generation; second, the influence of the physician should be earnestly sought in all effort to establish in our schools a long neglected phase of education. Of what use is it to discipline the mind, leaving the body of the child to become a wreck upon which all hope of success in life must strand?

The people at large know that something is radically wrong with the physical life of the present generation; but the cause of it, and how it may be corrected, is not generally understood. For this reason, sentiment making should be pre-eminently the work of the year.

Public addresses on this subject have their place and value; but we believe greater immediate results will attend parlor meetings, which specially belong to women. So far as possible give these parlor meetings the atmosphere of social gatherings. Send written invitations to mothers and to women who have influence in the community along literary and educational lines. Provide sufficient music to lend variety, but do not make it a musical program. The time cannot be spared. Secure, if possible, a speaker who commands the ability to tell women what they should know regarding the body. Encourage discussion during the last half hour. Let the one prevailing thought of the occasion be: "How can we secure healthier, better disciplined bodies for children?"

If, for any reason, a specialist is not available, then do your best with a "home-made" program. The department literature will be helpful here. Interest some one to prepare a paper on "A Great Legacy," or "The Place for Physical Training in the Life of the Child." Also, "What This Department Means to the W. C. T. U. Woman." You will find "home-makers" and "home-keepers" ready to hear on this vital question. At the close of such a meeting "pass the basket." Scarcely one will fail to decide that something worth knowing has been gained.

Educators are already overtaxed with plans for mental discipline, which has long had right of way. Physicians know little of the prevailing curriculum, and care less; but they do know, better than educators, what the body of the average child needs to-day. Their judgment will have weight, and should be sought in our effort to secure education for the body as well as the mind. Confer with the most available medical man in your community. Place documents in his hands showing our conception of the subject, urging him to bring the matter before local, county and district medical society. We specially recommend that all state superintendents be diligent in effort to find some influential physician, with more than local reputation, who will, according to his best judgment, get this question before the State Medical Society, to secure endorsement of our effort. Suggest some such pertinent subject as "Defects in Our Public School System from a Physician's Standpoint."

Persistent distribution of literature will, in time, educate any community to the physical need of the people. No department has more efficient literature for sentiment-making than has this one. Send stamp for list. We suggest and urge that each local union will place the "Physical Education Quarterly" in the hands of all officially connected with school work, such as board members, superintendents and teachers. In clubs of ten or more the subscription price is only 10 cents. Some additional reduction is made when the list reaches twenty-five.

The article in last issue of the Quarterly, entitled, "Nervous Force of the Teacher," by Dr. Mara L. Pratt, is worth much to reformers as well as to educators. Do not fail to read this carefully.

As some local unions yet fail to understand the relation of this department to temperance, will county presidents please give this subject a place on their next program? Send 10 cents in stamps for special helps, including typewritten copy of latest article suitable for conventions and institutes. "Exercises for Busy Women" and "The Home Gymnasium" will sell readily at parlor meetings. Try them.

Look to the Quarterly for valuable information. Last year's four numbers will be mailed to any address for 10 cents. Send all orders for literature to Mrs. Frances W. Leiter.

Mansfield, Ohio.

Notice.

During the National Convention a pair of glasses were left at the home of Mrs. Stevens. As they were in a Portland case they were first advertised in Portland papers, but have not been called for. They are very valuable glasses, having been made with great care and expense. They await the call of the owner.

Temperance Literature.

TO all who labor for the enlightenment of the people, through Temperance Literature, greeting: You ask, "What shall the harvest be," for 1903. I answer, we shall reap according to what we sow.

Let us emphasize the many excellent methods used in the past; a postoffice campaign; house to house distribution; general distribution at public meetings, always careful to use leaflets bearing on the subject under discussion; the same plan should be observed at local union meetings. Keep boxes filled in railroad stations and on trains, in stores, shops, etc.; remember those who are isolated in lumber camps, in mines, in the army and navy, on the sea, not forgetting hospitals, prisons, and every place where humanity dwells, and where love and light are needed.

The national annual leaflet, and our official organ, THE UNION SIGNAL, should be used more freely for distribution. More general information concerning our organization is found in these than in anything else. Truly "people are destroyed for lack of knowledge." Superintendents of Temperance Literature are commissioned light bearers, to supply this need. In states where legislatures are in session, send, or give, to each member literature germane to the measures you hope to have become law.

The Kansas W. C. T. U., ever alert for best results, appropriated twenty dollars for samples of literature to be put in every copy of the annual state report sold. This method is worthy of adoption by other states.

Make March 1st, a Red Letter Day indeed. The birthday of our beloved, self-sacrificing president, Mrs. L. M. N. Stevens, should be observed by every union in the nation. On that day circulate literature, and take subscriptions for UNION SIGNAL. Pennsylvania was the banner state last year, who will excel her this year? Let us work on, waiting patiently for the harvest which will surely come, if we do our duty.

ELLEN D. MORRIS.
Savannah, Mo.

Infants Thrive

on cow's milk that is not subject to any change of composition. Borden's Eagle Brand Condensed Milk is always the same in all climates and at all seasons. As a general household milk it is superior and is always available.

All Sick Ones

Get My Help When They Ask It.

It is waiting for you.

Just write a postal stating which book you need and I will gladly do this:—

I will mail you an order—good at any drug store—for six bottles Dr. Shoop's Restorative. You may take it a month on trial. If it succeeds, the cost is $5.50. If it fails, I will pay the druggist myself—and your mere word shall decide it.

I know how other treatments have failed with you. I know how the sick get discouraged. So I don't argue my claims. I simply ask you to try my way at my risk, and let the remedy itself convince you.

My records show that 39 out of each 40 pay for the treatment gladly, because they are cured. Not a penny is wanted from the rest.

I have spent a lifetime in learning how to strengthen weak inside nerves. My Restorative brings back that power which alone operates the vital organs. I treat a weak organ as I would a weak engine, by giving it the power to act. My way always succeeds, save when a cause like cancer makes a cure impossible. And most of these chronic diseases cannot be cured without.

You'll know this when you read my book.

Simply state which book you want, and address Dr. Shoop, Box 948, Racine, Wis.

Book No. 1 on Dyspepsia,
Book No. 2 on the Heart,
Book No. 3 on the Kidneys.
Book No. 4 for Women,
Book No. 5 for Men (sealed),
Book No. 6 on Rheumatism.

Mild cases, not chronic, are often cured by one or two bottles. At all druggists.

Lion Coffee States of America

The greatest nation in the world is the greatest consumer of coffee.

Lion Coffee

is the standard beverage of every state and territory of the Union. It's pure—that's why.

Always in 1 lb. air-tight, sealed packages, insuring freshness and uniform quality.

KINDLY MENTION THE UNION SIGNAL WHEN WRITING ADVERTISERS.

Burpee's Seeds Grow

Probably you have heard of this famous motto for many years but have you proved for yourself that Burpee's Seeds are the BEST that Grow?

If not, write to-day for Burpee's Farm Annual for 1903—so well-known as "The Leading American Seed Catalogue." It is an elegant book of 184 pages, with beautiful colored plates and will be sent FREE to planters everywhere; —to others upon receipt of 10 cents, which is less than cost per copy in quarter-million editions. Write TO-DAY. Do not delay! It is sufficient to address simply

BURPEE, Philadelphia

KINDLY MENTION THE UNION SIGNAL WHEN WRITING ADVERTISERS.

New England Conservatory of Music has now the finest building devoted to music in the world. Founded 1853. Unsurpassed advantages in composition, vocal and instrumental music, and elocution.

George W. Chadwick, Musical Director.

Pupils received at any time. For year-book address FRANK W. HALE, General Manager, Boston, Mass.

KINDLY MENTION THE UNION SIGNAL WHEN WRITING ADVERTISERS.

ONLY

EIGHT

MORE DAYS IN WHICH TO AVAIL YOURSELF OF THE SPECIAL SUBSCRIPTION OFFERS TO THE

UNION SIGNAL

Clubs of 10 Subscribers at

One Dollar Each

New names or renewals received in these Clubs

The Unparalleled Offer

of 10 Weeks' Subscription for 10 cts.

DO NOT DELAY. THESE OFFERS CLOSE JANUARY 31ST

Union Signal

CHICAGO

Quarterly Temperance Lesson

By JOHN F. COWAN, D.D.

LESSON STUDY: "Christian Self-control." I Cor. 8:4-13. Golden Text: "Let us follow after the things which make for peace." Rom. 14:19.

CORINTH was a vest-pocket edition of our world of today; the little church there had its puzzling questions of eating and drinking, social customs, and, perhaps, amusements and Sabbath observance. They were not exactly like the "drink question" and the "amusement question" as our ministers preach on them today, and our editors write on them, but the principles underlying them were precisely the same as those on which the "White Ribbon" movement stands—education of conscience, mutual rights and liberties, responsibility for the other man.

Mrs. Mary H. Hunt's conscience in the matter of alcoholic drink, is on a far higher plane than Mrs. O'Flannigan's, whom a steerage passage has just landed from an Irish fishing town where smuggled whisky flows as freely as tea, or Mrs. Blatteroffsky's, fresh from Continental beer-gardens. They had both kinds in Corinth. The one that had knowledge was exhorted to be patient with and enlighten the other. Thank God for Mrs. Hunts, who apply this first principle of temperance progress towards self-control by providing temperance education for the children of Mrs. O'Flannigan and Mrs. Blatteroffsky! And for the woman from the whisky smuggler's port and the woman from the Continental beer-garden there are mother's meetings and sisterly advances. Knowledge that puffs up its possessor and makes Pharisees, needs the outlet, the gearing to temperance problems that the W. C. T. U. affords.

The second principle underlying the perplexing questions at Corinth was one that we are just beginning to recognize today—that one man's liberty ends where another's begins; that one man's right to carry a torch must stop short of another man's powder magazine or gasoline tank.

The man who insists that his liberty to use wine moderately must not be interfered with, no matter how great the wreckage of humanity in the police courts and morgues; no matter how many young clerks and students are decoyed onto the rocks by his false light, is on a par, in a way, with the anarchist who insists on waving his red rag on the street because this is the land of liberty. The red nose and the red flag mean the same.

Suppose we should grant, for sake of argument (though it is yet to be demonstrated) that some persons can use alcohol moderately with impunity both to themselves and their posterity, and that their consciences were clear on this score, still there remains the principle that love never allows one man's liberty to become another man's temptation.

There are many persons of mature mind who might read Tom Paine or Zola without injury to themselves, but have they a right to leave the books of those authors where the children could get them? Some of us like open windows and free ventilation, and it agrees with us, yet we do not insist that our invalid friends shall sit in death-dealing draughts that we may exercise our liberty.

"But the Bible doesn't say that a Christian must be a total abstainer." The Bible doesn't say that I must not keep slaves. The Bible does not make me prefer a republican form of government. The Bible does not command free schools. The Bible makes it my privilege to do a great many things that the Ten Commandments do not impose on me. The Bible simply places my brother in my keeping and leaves love to do the rest.

This brings us to the third principle by which Paul settled all these questions in Corinth—love makes it easy to know duty and to do it. If we let love rule our sideboards there will be empty decanters. Liberty may say, "It is no one's business, and if any one is so foolish and weak as to"—but Love will gently place her fingers over the lips of Liberty and say, "Hush, my dear! Jesus Christ had liberty to shun the cross; it was love that sent Him there for you and for me."

This Christian self-control, of which Paul writes, is something different from the self-control of the athlete who says, "I must bring every muscle into subjection to my will in order to win for my college, or to break the world's record."

It is something different from the self-control of the business or professional man who says, "I must keep my head clear and my nerves under perfect control, because I shall come into competition with men of keen wit and strong will."

It is even different from the self-control of the mother who sits by the bedside of her sick child and who tells herself, "I must keep my feelings and judgment under control. The doctor tells me that I must be perfectly calm and self-possessed for my dear one's sake."

Christian self-control says, "I must keep the road free from stumbling-blocks, for yonder comes a traveller who, though a stranger to me, is the brother of my King. He must not fall through my neglect or example."

It seems as though Paul was thinking of life as a race, as he used so often to do. The stronger ones could leap over obstacles and make the goal, but the weaker ones, back there, they were all the King's brothers, and even though the meat offered to idols might mean nothing to the strong, it would cause the weak to stumble.

The cigar that the Sunday-school superintendent, teacher, or minister smokes is something offered to idols to the boy in his Sunday school. Every day I enter and leave the Park street subway station, Boston. As I go down the steps at night I notice that they are strewn with cigar and cigaret stubs thrown there, many of them, by church members who are about to enter the cars. As I come up the steps in the morning I see the same steps littered with burnt matches thrown there by men, many of them deacons and Sunday-school teachers and leaders in church work, who have lighted cigars or cigarets as they came up.

It seems to me that those steel steps are an altar, and I see on them the offerings made to the god of Nicotine. And yet, in this modern Corinth, we wonder why so many of our boys are "emboldened to eat things sacrificed to idols;" why it is necessary that we should pass anti-cigaret laws, and organize anti-cigaret leagues to try to keep boys away from the dreadful "coffin nails" that make so many school boys fail in their examinations, that unfit so many lads for serving their country in army or navy, and that entice so many sons of fond mothers on to drink and drugs.

(Continued on page 12.)

BROWN'S BRONCHIAL TROCHES

TRY THEM FOR Coughs, Colds, Asthma, Bronchitis, Hoarseness, and Sore Throat.

Fac-Simile Signature of John I. Brown & Son on every box.

What Sulphur Does

For the Human Body in Health and Disease.

The mention of sulphur will recall to many of us the early days when our mothers and grandmothers gave us our daily dose of sulphur and molasses every spring and fall.

It was the universal spring and fall "blood purifier," tonic and cure-all, and mind you, this old-fashioned remedy was not without merit.

The idea was good, but the remedy was crude and unpalatable, and a large quantity had to be taken to get any effect.

Nowadays we get all the beneficial effects of sulphur in a palatable, concentrated form, so that a single grain is far more effective than a tablespoonful of the crude sulphur.

In recent years, research and experiment have proven that the best sulphur for medicinal use is that obtained from Calcium (Calcium Sulphide) and sold in drug stores under the name of Stuart's Calcium Wafers. They are small chocolate coated pellets and contain the active medicinal principle of sulphur in a highly concentrated, effective form.

Few people are aware of the value of this form of sulphur in restoring and maintaining bodily vigor and health: sulphur acts directly on the liver, the excretory organs and purifies and enriches the blood by the prompt elimination of waste material.

Our grandmothers knew this when they dosed us with sulphur and molasses every spring and fall, but the crudity and impurity of ordinary flowers of sulphur were often worse than the disease, and cannot compare with the modern concentrated preparations of sulphur, of which Stuart's Calcium Wafers is undoubtedly the best and most widely used.

They are the natural antidote for liver and kidney troubles and cure constipation and purify the blood in a way that often surprises patient and physician alike.

Dr. R. M. Wilkins, while experimenting with sulphur remedies, soon found that the sulphur from Calcium was superior to any other form. He says: "For liver, kidney and blood troubles, especially when resulting from constipation or malaria, I have been surprised at the results obtained from Stuart's Calcium Wafers. In patients suffering from boils and pimples and even deep-seated carbuncles, I have repeatedly seen them dry up and disappear in four or five days, leaving the skin clear and smooth. Although Stuart's Calcium Wafers is a proprietary article, and sold by druggists, and for that reason tabooed by many physicians, yet I know of nothing so safe and reliable for constipation, liver and kidney troubles, and especially in all forms of skin disease as this remedy."

At any rate people who are tired of pills, cathartics and so-called blood "purifiers," will find in Stuart's Calcium Wafers a far safer, more palatable and effective preparation.

DRINKING FOUNTAINS FOR MAN AND BEAST.

Copyright, 1901 by The J. L. Mott Iron Works.

Catalogues mailed on request, and special prices given to all Charitable and Temperance Societies.

Manufactured by THE J. L. MOTT IRON WORKS, 84-90 Beekman Street, New York.

CHIRON LUBRICATING PILE CONE

A small, hollow, perforated wooden cone, filled with the Chiron Ointment, especially prepared for the purpose. Perfect and continuous lubrication by soothing and healing ointment directly to the sore spots. Endorsed by physicians. Immediate relief and a certain cure for ALL KINDS OF PILES. By mail, securely sealed in plain wrapper, with extra box of ointment, $3, P. O. or Exp. Order.

The CHIRON Mfg. Co., Plainfield, N. J.

25 CTS. PISO'S CURE FOR CURES WHERE ALL ELSE FAILS. Best Cough Syrup. Tastes Good. Use in time. Sold by druggists. CONSUMPTION 25 CTS.

Free to Everyone.

A Priceless Book Sent Free For the Asking.

Piles Cured Without Cutting, Danger, or Detention From Work, by a Simple Home Remedy.

Pyramid Pile Cure gives instant relief and never fails to cure every form of this most troublesome disease. For sale by all druggists at 50c. a package. Thousands have been quickly cured. Ask your druggist for a package of Pyramid Pile Cure, or write for our little book which tells all about the cause and cure of piles. Write your name and address plainly on a postal card, mail to the Pyramid Drug Co., Marshall, Mich., and you will receive the book by return mail.

(Continued from page 11.)

I used to know a college professor who took the more manly course of sneaking off to the woods when he smoked a cigar.

The kitchen and the dinner table are sometimes made idols' temples in which we eat things sacrificed to the god of Alcohol. We go to the cook-books for our liturgy; or we make the hotel waiter our high priest. When alcohol in pudding sauce, pies, and ices comes to the board at which the young sit or the weak disciple watches our example, love goes away and hides her face in shame and sorrow.

I pass the delivery department of the largest grocery store in Boston, on my way to my office. At half-past eight in the morning the sidewalk is almost blocked by baskets containing orders for groceries that are being loaded into the wagons for delivery to homes. It would make your heart sick to see the large proportion of baskets in which there are long-necked bottles packed in ice; for this grocery also fills family orders for wines and spirituous liquors. The modern department store has its temple in which things sacrificed to the god Gambrinus are eaten by those who do not think of the conscience of the weak.

If I were to open an office for the treatment of wounded consciences I should have more patients flocking to me than did Dr. Lorenz. Here would come a young student, saying, "I came to college fully determined to be a Christian, but one of the professors asked some of us boys to his room and there were beer and pipes, and I was too weak to decline."

Here comes a girl who with sobs uncovers her wounded conscience. Her mistress, a leader in church and charitable work, ruthlessly thrust a bottle of ale through it when the girl was sick.

Here comes a young stenographer. His employer is a railway manager and a churchman. His private car is always stocked with wine. The young man's father died in delirium tremens, and the son was born with latent thirst that bursts into flame every time a cork pops.

There limps into my office a woe-begone wretch. "I reckon you can't patch my old conscience up again to do any good," he feebly says. "I have reformed two or three times. My wife had faith in me. The last time I was brakeman on a train that carried a millionaire's private car in which there were bishops going to a convention. I had to pass through the car, and the fumes of the champagne drove me frantic for drink."

"O the rarity of human charity!" in the matter of making a brother to stumble through tickling our own palates.

Cancer of the Breast.

So many people are dying of this terrible disease. The disease is increasing with wonderful rapidity. Mrs. B. F. Southard, of Buffalo, Mo., has recently recovered from a most advanced stage of this disease by the Oil treatment of Dr. Bye, of Kansas City, Mo. Mrs. Nancy F. Billings, of West Bridgewater, Mass., was cured by home treatment. Persons afflicted should write to Dr. Bye for 112 page illustrated book on the treatment of cancer in its various forms. Address Dr. W. O. Bye, Kansas City, Mo.

Memorial Day Program.

BY IDA B. COLE.

THE noblest tribute we can pay our sainted leader is faithful service in the organization to which she devoted her life. Memorial Day, therefore, should be characterized by a spirit of thankfulness for her life and its wonderful and continued influence. Our exercises should inspire our members to deeper consecration and should interest others to enlist. The keynote of the day should be more members and a cheerful thank offering to carry on the work she so nobly began. Hymns for this program should be selected from the White Ribbon Hymnal, published by the W. T. P. A.

Program.

1. Opening hymn.
2. Scripture lesson, by members of Union.

A GUILTY WORLD

Wherefore, as by one man sin entered the world, and death by sin; and so death passed upon all men, for that all have sinned. Rom. 5:12. The wages of sin is death; but the gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ, our Lord. Rom. 6:23.

But the scripture hath concluded all under sin that the promise by faith of Jesus Christ might be given to them that believe, Gal. 3:22.

SAVED BY CHRIST.

For God so loved the world that He gave His only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in Him should not perish but have everlasting life. John 3:16.

Hereby perceive the love of God, because He laid down His life for us; and we ought to lay down our lives for the brethren. 1 John 3:16.

A CHRISTIAN'S DUTY.

Whatsoever thy hand findeth to do, do it with thy might; for there is no work, nor device, nor knowledge, nor wisdom in the grave whither thou goest. Ecc. 9:10.

As we have, therefore, opportunity, let us do good unto all men. Gal. 6:10.

Say not ye, There are yet four months, and then cometh the harvest. Behold I say unto you, lift up your eyes and look on the fields, for they are white already to harvest. John 4:35.

OUR PROMISES.

OF GRACE: The Lord will give grace and glory. Ps. 84:11.

OF STRENGTH: Fear thou not, for I am with thee; be not discouraged, for I am thy God; I will strengthen thee; yea, I will help thee; yea, I will uphold thee with the right hand of My righteousness. Isa. 41:10.

OF SECURITY: They that trust in the Lord shall be as Mount Zion, which cannot be removed, but abideth forever. Ps. 125:1.

OF GUIDANCE: I will instruct thee and teach thee in the way which thou shalt go; I will guide thee with mine eye. Ps. 32:8.

OF VICTORY: Thanks be to God which giveth us the victory through the Lord Jesus Christ. 1 Cor. 15:57.

3. Prayer.
4. Hymn.
5. A brief statement of the object of Memorial Day and the Thank-offering fund, by a member of the Union.
6. Singing: Our Sainted Leader; tune, "Sweet sang the angels in the clear, calm night."

(To be sung by a chorus of children carrying flowers in their hands. Suitable flowers can be made of paper. During singing of chorus, after first three verses, the children wave the flowers in time to music; when chorus is sung after last verse the children march in single file across platform and place flowers around picture of Miss Willard, which should stand on an easel in the center and at the back of the platform.)

Let us raise our voices in a gladsome song,
Thanking the dear Father for her life so strong;
Bravest of the workers in this loyal band,
Gave her life in serving God and native land.

Chorus.

Children, bring sweet flowers for our sainted queen;
She is still our leader though in Land Unseen.

When the children suffered through the curse of drink;
When weak men were slipping over ruin's brink;
When the mothers perished by rum's cruel blight,
Then she led her forces 'neath the banner white.

As we utter praises of her noble deeds,
Oh, let us remember our dear country's needs.
Strong drink still is spreading sin and evil wide,
And the cause needs helpers now to stem the tide.

Let us bring an offering for this cause so true;
Bring our hearts and voices, all that we can do.
Let us bring them gladly now for her dear sake;
We, too, for God's children, sacrifice can make.

7. Address: A tribute to Miss Willard, by a pastor or member of union.
8. Hymn.
9. Recitation, by a little boy.

If I Was You.

If I was a man, a great big man,
I know some things I would do:
I'd tell the people who keep saloons
That we'd have some laws quite new;
That they should not sell that wretched stuff
That so many drunkards makes,
Causing a father to beat his child,
While wife and home he forsakes.
If I was a man, a great big man,
Oh, yes, if I was you,
I'd vote for temperance every time
If I was you.

If I was a mother, grown up tall,
I'd tell my son not to drink;
To put aside the very first glass—
Even from cider to shrink.
Then I would work for the other boys,
Whose mothers don't seem to care
That drink, like a terrible giant,
Wants boys who are young and fair.
If I was a mother, grown up tall,
Oh, yes, ma'am, if I was you,
I'd join the union just for my boy,
If I was you.

10. Short paper: Why you should join the W. C. T. U., by a member of the union.
11. Recitation, by a little girl.

When I Am a Grown-Up Lady.

When I am a grown-up lady,
Just as big and as wise as you,
I'm going to be a member
Of the W. C. T. U.
I will go to all the meetings,
Wear a bow of ribbon white,
And learn about 'most ev'rything,
And always work for the right.
When I am a grown-up lady,
I will tell you what I'll do;
I will give both time and money
To the W. C. T. U.
I'll always stand for temperance,
And I'll labor with my might;
When I am a grown-up lady,
I will wear the ribbon white.

12. Vocal solo.
13. Short paper or address: The Need of Temperance Work and Workers, by a member of the union.
14. Thank-Offering.
15. Hymn.
16. Parting words, by five children.

First child: Grace be unto you, and peace from God, our Father, and from the Lord Jesus Christ, now and forever. 1 Cor. 1:3.

Second child: Grace, mercy and peace, from God, our Father, and Jesus Christ, our Lord, be and abide with you all. 1 Tim. 1:2.

Third child: Now the God of hope fill you with all joy and peace in believing, that ye may abound in hope, through the power of the Holy Ghost. Rom. 15:13.

Fourth child: The Lord bless thee and keep thee; the Lord make His face shine upon thee, and be gracious unto thee; the Lord lift up His countenance upon thee and give thee peace. Num. 6:24-26.

Fifth child: Now the Lord of patience and consolation grant you to be like-minded one toward another according to Christ Jesus, that ye may with one mind and one mouth glorify God. Rom. 15:5, 6.

In concert: Now unto him that is able to do exceeding abundantly above all that we ask or think, according to the power that worketh in us, unto him be glory in the church by Christ Jesus throughout all ages.—Eph. 3:20, 21.

17—Doxology.

Chicago.

Try them All

You'll go back to using Huyler's

Best for PURITY, STRENGTH, QUALITY AND FLAVOR

SOLD BY ALL UP TO DATE GROCERS.

If not handled by yours send us his name and we will send free sample

Huyler's NEW YORK.

KINDLY MENTION THE UNION SIGNAL WHEN WRITING ADVERTISERS.

Flower Seeds FROM California

Flower seeds mature to perfection in the balmy climate of California; and that land of flowers is the natural seed warehouse for the Eastern garden. We make a business of supplying flower seeds, and our packets are made up exclusively of California grown seeds which will grow readily in cooler climates. Many of them are natives of the state, and include some of the most beautiful flowers known. We put up a package of ten very choicest kinds at 50c. Send us orders from two of your neighbors, and we will mail you three packages for the dollar—one to pay you for your trouble. Wanted—Reliable Agent at once, in each town. Liberal pay, cash. Cal. Flower Seed Co., Dept. G, 3148 Kingsley St., Los Angeles, Cal.

KINDLY MENTION THE UNION SIGNAL WHEN WRITING ADVERTISERS.

LADIES—STUDY AT HOME

TRAIN TO NURSE

Use leisure hours to become independent. Every woman inexperienced or experienced in nursing should receive a thorough course of theoretical training before assuming the responsibility of ministering to the sick. Our course universally endorsed by physicians and surgeons as practical and easy of comprehension. Our faculty, leading physicians and surgeons of Chicago. Our scholars enthusiastic in our support. Diploma. Catalogue free. American Cor. School for Nurses, O—167 Dearborn, Chicago.

OIL--SMELTER--MINES.

Dividend-Paying Mining, Oil and Smelter Stocks, Listed and Unlisted, our Specialty.

DOUGLAS, LACEY & CO.,

Bankers & Brokers, Fiscal Agents,
Members N. Y. Consolidated Stock Exchange.
66 BROADWAY & 17 NEW ST., NEW YORK.

Booklets giving our successful plan for realizing the large interest and profits of legitimate mining, oil and smelter investments, sub. blanks, full particulars, etc., sent free on application.

These trade-mark crisscross lines on every package.

Gluten Grits AND BARLEY CRYSTALS,

Perfect Breakfast and Dessert Health Cereals.
PANSY FLOUR for Biscuit, Cake and Pastry.
Unlike all other goods. Ask Grocers.
For book or sample, write
FARWELL & RHINES, Watertown, N. Y., U.S.A.

LADIES to do piecework at their homes. We furnish all material and pay from $7 to $12 weekly. Experience unnecessary. Send stamped envelope to ROYAL CO., Dept. U.S., 34 Monroe Street, Chicago, Ill.

KINDLY MENTION THE UNION SIGNAL WHEN WRITING ADVERTISERS.

$20 A WEEK Straight salary and expenses to men with rig to introduce our Poultry Mixture in country; year's contract; weekly pay. Address, with stamp, Monarch Mfg. Co., Box 1166, Springfield, Ill.

KINDLY MENTION THE UNION SIGNAL WHEN WRITING ADVERTISERS.

LEARN PROOFREADING.

If you possess a fair education, why not utilize it at a genteel and uncrowded profession paying $15 to $35 weekly? Situations always obtainable. We are the original instructors by mail.
HOME CORRESPONDENCE SCHOOL, Philadelphia

THE LATEST BOOKS
At 10 per cent Reduction During January.

"By Order of the Prophet."

A tale of the occupation of the Great Salt Lake basin. By ALFRED H. HENRY, illustrated. "True to history founded upon actual incident, forcible in the telling and strong in the depiction of character, this book is a worthy contribution to the literature and the making of the west."

Price, $1.50. Net, postpaid, $1.35.

"Letters from a Self-Made Merchant to His Son"

By GEORGE HORACE LORIMER. A masterpiece of American humor and sound sense. Price, $1.50. Net, postpaid, $1.35.

"A Chinese Quaker."

By NELLIE BLESSING EYSTER.

A most interesting story, telling of a young Quaker woman, who, although antagonistic to the Chinese, is led to take a heathen boy in charge, who, under her training, becomes a consistent Friend.

Price, $1.50. Net, postpaid, $1.35.

"Two Wilderness Voyagers."

A true story of Indian life, by FRANKLIN WELLES CALKINS. Price, $1.50. Net, postpaid, $1.35.

"Jean Mitchell's School"

By ANGELINA W. RAY. One of the most entertaining and inspiring books ever issued, and should be read by every teacher in the public schools and every superintendent of the Loyal Temperance Legion.

Price, $1.25. Net, postpaid, $1.12.

Coupon.

Please send to .....

Street, ...

City, ...

State, ...

The books herein listed (attach list of books) upon which, by the use of this coupon, I am entitled to 10 per cent discount if presented during January.

We solicit your orders for any and all books, assuring you that orders will be promptly filled.

No Further Discount From the Net Prices.

WOMAN'S TEMPERANCE PUBLISHING ASS'N, 184 La Salle Street, CHICAGO.

The QUALIFICATIONS OF A GOOD SOLDIER.

By Lord Roberts, Commander-in-Chief of the British Army.

THE soldier without health and power of endurance is a fraud. He is being educated and paid, not for parade purposes in times of peace—for a soldier in peace is a chimney in summer—but for a sterner occasion which, if it occurs during his service, he will be found unfit to cope with.

I make no reference here to the, I am sorry to say, many who, from the effects of the climate or other causes beyond their own control, become invalids or are sickly. They deserve every respect, help and sympathy.

But what of those others who, from want of self-discipline, render themselves unfit to fulfill the contract they have entered into with their country? They are false to themselves, for they betray the highest trust reposed in man, the preservation of his manhood, and they are false to the country for which they have volunteered to fight, because they render themselves incapable of upholding the credit and the glorious traditions of a nation's army in its hour of need.

There is, I believe, in some quarters an idea that it is the more spirited section of the British soldiers that drink. I do not believe it for a minute.

Undoubtedly there is a certain recklessness of disposition that will carry men a certain length, particularly in the first flush and fashion of a campaign; but it is not a dependable quality.

The characteristics that mark the best soldiers in trying circumstances and amid pressing surroundings are a high sense of duty, self-respect and self-command.

If soldiers would raise the social status of their profession they must cultivate temperance and decorum, and banding themselves together in societies, such as the Army Temperance Association, is the best means of attaining the much desired end.

During the past year the numbers on our rolls have increased by no less than 4,014. This makes up the total average number of members to 22,369, or practically about one-third of the British army in India are now total abstainers.

As I was myself a regimental soldier for thirty-two years, I know something of the trials and difficulties which beset the soldier's life, and first I would speak of the advantage the abstinence society confers on the men themselves.

No matter what walk of life a man may adopt, there is no qualification for success that can compare with a good character; a reputation for being a good man that can be relied on at all times to do his duty strongly and bravely.

To earn such a reputation among his comrades—and they are close observers and often captious critics—a man must teach himself self-control.

From generalities let us now proceed to particulars.

Take the matter of courts-martial.

I find that the court-martial return of 1893 shows that there were eight general courts-martial held for the trial of British soldiers.

Of those tried all were non-abstainers. There were 1,450 district courts-martial, and of these only 34 were abstainers. There were 1,150 regimental courts-martial, and of those tried only 39 were members of the association.

To sum up, there were 2,608 courts-martial in the year, and of these trials only 73 were held for the trial of members of the Army Temperance Association.

It does not need the help of the schoolmaster to show that according to the percentage of our strength we were entitled to about 869 courts-martial and we only get credit for 73.

My experience tells me that nearly all the crime in the British army in India is directly traceable to drinking to excess.

In India there are not the same inducements to the offense of absence without leave that there are at home.

Yet there are many offenses committed by soldiers which, though not recorded as drunkenness, are the direct consequences of drink; such as the disinclination for work or duty which follows after the period of dissipation, or the ill-humor resulting from reaction leading up to insubordinate words or acts.

The figures I have quoted are positive proof of the extraordinary effects of temperance in decreasing crime. Some may perhaps think that these figures are not reliable; in fact, that they are army temperance figures.

I confess that I was so astonished last year at the comparative absence of crime among the temperance men, disclosed by the figures in the report of the association, that I had them investigated by the adjutant-general of the army in communication with commanding officers, and though there were some slight discrepancies, the difference was so small as to be altogether outside of the zone of practical consideration.

Next let us consider in the results of the Army Temperance Association its effects on the discipline and efficiency of the army.

I have already said enough to show how it has improved and is improving the discipline of the army. The efficiency of the army depends in the highest degree on the health of its soldiers. Let us again refer to the report for evidence as to the effect of temperance on health.

I find from an average taken over twenty-two different corps, selected at haphazard and representative of all our nationalities, that the admission into hospital per cent of abstainers was 5.5 and among non-abstainers 10.0.

These figures establish the benefits of temperance on health.

When a man has lost control over himself from drink, he is as unmindful of what is due to his health as he is forgetful of what he owes to his reputation.

It is thus that men, maddened by drink, expose themselves to the ruthless rays of the noonday sun in the plains of India, and get knocked over, possibly to be helpless imbeciles for the rest of a wearisome existence.

There are other forms of sickness which the recklessness of consequences bred of drink leads men into, often to the ruin of steady nerve and strong physique which should be the pride of every soldier and which he should guard as the apple of his eye.

WHO HAS NOT HEARD OR READ OF THE MARVELOUS QUAKER CURES WITHOUT DRUGS AFTER DOCTORS AND MEDICINES FAILED.

A GRAND INVENTION.—Physicians astonished and Thousands of Grateful Users Testify To The Marvelous Results Obtained From The

QUAKER HOT AIR AND VAPOR BATH TREATMENT

No disease can resist its marvelous power. Benefits every Man, Woman and Child

MARY L. WILLIS, of Cloverdale, Ala., testifies that it saved her life, cured her of dropsy and kidney troubles after doctors and medicines failed to benefit her.

JUDGE J. O. HUTCHINS., Haywards, Calif., testifies that it rescued him from the grave. Was a confirmed invalid for 15 years. Baffled best doctors. Thanks God the marvelous power of the Quaker cured him of weak heart, sleeplessness, dropsy, catarrh, piles, rheumatism, kidney troubles and partial paralysis. Is today well and vigorous.

L. J. MORRISON, Pellville, Ky., afflicted 30 years, unable to walk, was cured of kidney disease, rheumatism, general debility after everything else failed.

REDUCED TO $3.50

JOHN C. PERRY, Norfolk, W. Va., wasted away until he was a mere skeleton on crutches. Afflicted with worst case of blood poison and rheumatism on record. Was completely cured after doctors, medicines and everything failed by the Quaker Tretament. Improved after first trial.

JOHN H. SHAUCH, Marlboro, N. J., says: I doctored and doctored with no benefit. Physicians at Long Branch Hospital told me four years ago I had that deadly disease, Loco-Motor Ataxia and would never be well. I read of the wonderful cures of the Quaker, sent for it and commenced at once to grow strong and well. No aches or pains. Took no medicine.

JOHN CURTIS, Box 321, Malone, N. Y., afflicted from head to foot with frightful eczema, also bad kidneys, impure blood and weak heart was cured after doctors and all failed. Had despaired of life.

ELIZABETH COLEMAN, Bokoshe, I. T., testifies that her doctor told her two years ago she had deadly Bright's and kidney disease. Could not live a month. He recommended the Quaker Treatment. She writes it saved her life. Now well and strong. Does her own housework.

REV. J. W. HENDERSON, Weston, La., writes: That his son 13 years old the doctors had given up to die. Badly bloated. So terribly afflicted with dropsy, could not walk. Thank God the marvelous power of the Quaker Cabinet cured him in two weeks.

D. P. SMITH, Greensburg, Kan. An old soldier. Never a well day since 1862. A mere wreck. 63 years old. After most eminent doctors failed to benefit, was cured of heart failure, kidney troubles, rheumatism and sore eyes. Today is hale and hearty.

MRS. ANNA WOODRUM, Thurman, Iowa, afflicted for years testifies that she was cured of nervous prostration, headache, indigestion, kidney and female ills with the Quaker Treatment after doctors and medicines failed. Has since sold many Cabinets to friends and says everyone is delighted.

MRS. L. COEN, of Maysville, Mo., was relieved of pains, congestions, etc., and recommends the Quaker as a God-Send to all suffering ladies.

MRS. W. BLACKWELL, Birmingham, Miss., writes: "I hope that old chronic cases like mine that have been doctored half to death will not give up but take courage as I did, and try the wonderful Quaker Bath Cabinet Treatment. I had muscular paralysis 3 years.' Was helpless. Doctors said I was a hopeless case. After three of the famous Quaker Treatments my improvement was wonderful, and now a year later I can walk as well as ever. Am fat and well."

WM. CORNET, Smithville, Miss. 72 years old. Terribly afflicted with lung trouble 16 years. Hardly able to walk. Testifies that it did him more good than all medicines and 7 doctors. Benefited his lungs. Cured his neuralgia and rheumatim. After three treatments threw away his cane. Walked 7 miles.

REV. FRED. D. HAMILTON, Buffalo, says: "This Quaker Treatment did my wife more good in 5 weeks than 3 years doctoring and a fortune spent at Hot Springs and Health Resorts. Cured her of female weakness, nervousness and dropsy with which she had long suffered. It is a God-Sent blessing to humanity.

JULIAN F. TANNER, LaFayette, La., afflicted, testifies that this marvelous Treatment cured him of a stroke of paralysis when the best doctors failed to benefit.

MISS M. SPARKS, Hatley, Miss., afflicted 2 years with acute indigestion, had not eaten solid food for 3 months. After six treatments could eat what she wanted. In a few months was completely well.

THE ATHENS SANITARIUM, Athens, Pa., writes: They find the Quaker Cabinet Treatment splendid for curing Morphine, Cocaine, Opium, Cigarette, Tobacco and Liquor Habits. Hundreds of prominent people have been cured there.

Thousands of other sufferers testify to the marvelous results of this Thermal Treatment.

EX. GOVERNOR ATKINSON, of W. Va., U. S. SENATOR CHAUNCEY M. DEPEW, CONGRESSMAN JOHN J. LENTZ, RT. REV. BISHOP J. C. HARTZELL and hosts of other prominent people endorse it.

GROWING RICH ARE MEN AND WOMEN SELLING THIS GRAND INVENTION.

MR. VAN TASSEL cured himself and made over $1,500.00 first five months selling these Cabinets. IRA GLEASON, made $1,777.00 first year. MRS. HOWARD, $59.00 one week. MISS NESNE, $205.00 profit. MRS. FLORA BEARD, $400.00 profit. ROBERT PEART, sold 1,000 Cabinets first year. HAYWARD GARRETT, took orders for 625 Cabinets in 3½ months.

Any honest lady or gentleman having spare time can get a good position at BIG WAGES by writing us at once.

Let us send a Quaker on 30 days' trial

To be returned at our expense and your money refunded, if not as represented. Costs you nothing to try it. Our Quaker Cabinets have a National reputation for durability, convenience and healing properties. Over 300,000 Cabinets sold last year. Everybody needs it, men, women and children.

Our Cabinets are handsomely made, best materials, should last 20 years, guaranteed best on the market. Anyone can operate. Seated within the Cabinet, clouds of Hot Air and Vapor surround the entire body, giving a Hot Air and Vapor Bath, which opens the millions of skin pores, drawing out of the system all impure acids, salts and poisonous matter of the blood and internal organs which, if retained, overwork the vital organs and cause disease, debility and sluggishness. Keeps the body absolutely clean, inwardly and outwardly—vigorously and healthy without medicine. Clears the skin, beautifies the complexion. Safer than drugs. Cheaper than doctors and medicines. Wonderful blood purifier. Prevents disease. You enjoy at home for 3 cents each all the cleansing, purifying and invigorating healing effects of the famous Turkish, Russian, Hot Air Sulphur or Medicated Baths with no danger of taking cold afterward or weakening the system.

PRICES REDUCED For 60 DAYS. Our $5.00 Quaker Cabinet, rubber lined, complete with medicine and vaporizing pan, best alcohol heater, directions and 100 page "Health and Beauty Book," reduced to $3.50. Our $10.00 finest, best double-walled Quaker cabinet complete with fixtures as described above, reduced to $6.10. Our $1.00 Face and Head Steaming Attach., excellent for beautifying the complexion, curing catarrh, asthma, bronchitis and throat troubles, reduced to 65 cents.

DON'T FAIL TO WRITE TODAY FOR VALUABLE "NEW BOOK" & SPECIAL OFFER FREE!

Also testimonials from hundreds of users—Sent FREE. or, better still, order a Cabinet. Don't wait. You won't be disappointed or deceived, for we guarantee every Cabinet and cheerfully refund your money after 30 days' use, if not just as represented. We're reliable old Firm. Largest Mfgrs. Capital $100,000.00. Ship immediately upon receipt of remittance WRITE TODAY SURE.

AGENTS, SALESMEN AND MANAGERS WANTED $20.00 TO $35.00 WEEKLY AND EXPENSES. MEN and WOMEN—Splendid chance. No experience. Write quick for new plan and Special 1903 proposition. Address,

WRITE TODAY. THE WORLD M'F'G CO., 791 World Bldg., CINCINNATI, O.

Copper Cures Consumption

New Treatment for Consumption Indorsed by Members of British Tuberculosis Congress--Hope for All, No Matter How Bad Off.

Benefits Congressman Dingley's Son and Cures Hundreds of Others in Their Home—Any One Can Receive FREE Books Which Explain Exhaustively the Cure and Prevention of Consumption.

O. K. BUCKHOUT.

Chairman Kalamazoo Tuberculosis Remedy Co., (Ltd.) Member of British Tuberculosis Congress; Member International Association for the Prevention of Tuberculosis.

Consumptives need not worry about their future any more, as the long-looked-for cure for consumption has at last been found. Write to Mr. O. K. Buckhout, Chairman, 294 Main St., Kalamazoo, Mich., a noted member of the British Tuberculosis Congress and also of the International Association for the Prevention of Tuberculosis, composed of world-famous men who have made consumption—its cure and prevention—a life study. This cure is something entirely new and is called "Antidotum Tuberculose," or the Copper Cure. It is the only discovery that absolutely kills all tuberculosis germs which cause consumption. As the name of the remedy tells, its chief ingredient is copper, which metal has at last been found to be the deadly enemy of the consumption germ.

You can tell if you have consumption by the coughing and hawking, by continually spitting, especially in the morning, when you raise yellow and black matter, by bleeding from the lungs, night sweats, flat chest, fever, weak voice, peculiar flushed complexion, pain in chest, wasting away of the flesh, etc. Find out how the Copper Cure kills the germs, then builds up the lungs, strengthens the heart, puts flesh on the body and muscles on the bones, until the consumption is all gone and you are again a strong, healthy, robust man or woman.

Don't doubt this, for the very same discovery benefited A. H. Dingley, a son of Congressman Dingley of Dingley Tariff Bill fame.

If you have consumption or fear you are predisposed to it, write to-night to Mr. O. K. Buckhout, Chairman, 294 Main Street, Kalamazoo, Mich., and he will send you illustrated and scholarly books free of charge telling you fully how the Copper Cure will cure you in your own home in a very short time.

PAPER JARDINIERES, a New

Flower Pot Cover Adjustable to any size Flower Pots, (large or small). A pretty device to hide the unsightly appearance of the common flower pot. A protection from frost or heat. One dozen assorted colors and designs in neat folding box, convenient for mailing. Sent to any address.

Postpaid 30c per doz

Send coin or money order. No stamps. STRONGHURST M'F'G. CO. Dept. G. Stronghurst, Ill., U. S. A. Agents wanted

The Young Crusader

Official Organ of the

Loyal Temperance Legion

Attractive, Entertaining, Instructive

A valuable magazine for the young people, and one which should be in every White Ribboner's home. Write us for sample copies, and send in your subscription to commence with the January number.

Price, 25c Per Year.

Woman's Temperance Publishing Ass'n
CHICAGO, ILL.

Gambling "Investments."

BY JOSIAH W. LEEDS.

THERE came to me through the mail, in Philadelphia, some months ago, a booklet, purple-bound, and lettered in gilt on the outside: "You May Make Money if You Will Think; You may make it if you will Act for Yourself."

The parties sending out this booklet frankly declare that they are speculators in stocks and grain, who "conduct a clearing-house for the exchange of those commodities." They explain that they deal on "margins," the minimum quantity and price dealt in being ten shares of stock with a dollar per share margin, or 1,000 bushels of grain with a cent per bushel margin. These small margins, they say, are for their "room trade," that is, with persons who remain in the offices and operate on the fluctuations in prices for small profits or losses—in other words, they that watch the "ticker," just as do the miserably infatuated followers of the sellers of pools on horse-races.

Further, say these spider-and-the-fly speculators or "brokers," "Another class of customers are those that are engaged in business or professional vocations who keep a sum of money on deposit with us and send their orders to buy or sell, by mail, telegraph or telephone. They form opinions of the probable course of prices from newspaper reports and act accordingly." And so "we cordially invite persons desiring to speculate, or buy for investment to call at our offices and inquire of the customers found there whether our methods are satisfactory or not."

The outreachings of this speculating, betting, gambling vice may come very near to ourselves. In the columns of many of our religious, and even temperance papers, there have appeared during the past year many appeals to the cupidity of their readers, promises of enormous returns for comparatively small investments. To one of these firms advertising in a good, anti-liquor paper I wrote, persuaded—as, indeed, their reply made clear, that they were no other than stock gamblers. "In soliciting your orders," they wrote, "we must find good things, we must furnish information that will enable you to make money. Our information comes from the best sources and direct from New York. We are making more money for our customers than any house in the city. We now have information of a well known railroad stock that will have a big advance. Fifty dollars will carry ten shares for you; $500 will carry 100 shares for you, and every share will make big returns in quick time. We see a private dispatch from New York saying that ——— will go up 8 or 10 points very shortly." An illustrative statement for a customer was enclosed, showing a profit of $38.04 on a $200 account in a single week.

Let every white ribboner, and the families of such, beware of these money-making beguilements! "The end does not justify the means;" whether the result be gain or loss, the moral peril is the same. We can no more afford to drop the hateful seeds of the gambling habit within the home circle, than we can safely nourish there the wine-tasting habit. The whist game and progressive euchre of "society" are of the true generation of tares, and should have no shelter in the Christian home. I have reason to know that Frances E. Willard felt a deep concern regarding the gambling vice and feared that too few of the contenders for Home Protection realized the extent of its manipulations and the cunning and speciousness of its disguises.

One other warning I would sound, and it has relation to participation in any guessing contest that involves the prospect of a prize. Just previous to the recent state elections numerous schemes were afloat which promised prizes for the best guessers on election results. One of these schemes, the prospectus of which came to me by mail—as it did to many thousands of others—originated with a Cincinnati newspaper. It promised a distribution of $30,000 in sums of from $1 to $5,000 to those who estimated the nearest to the total vote for the Secretary of State of Indiana. The sum of fifty cents was required to pay for a coupon entitling the holder to a guess.

The writer having appealed to the Postmaster-General as to this seeming infraction of the Anti-Lottery law, received the reply of the Assistant Attorney-General that in a similar case (the opinion being affirmed by Attorney-Generals Griggs and Knox), the advertisement with money reward being offered in good faith, and an exercise of skill in political calculation being called for, the estimates could not be said to be dependent upon chance, hence the enterprise did not properly violate the statute. Nevertheless, it occurs to me to ask how much "good faith" was put forth in mailing these circulars to the two maiden ladies, proprietors of the little, cross-roads store, near my out-of-town home, who had never heard of any contest for State Secretary out in the Hoosier state, and who, if they made any "estimate" at all, would simply say their guess, take their chance, and exercise no skill.

It seems to the writer that here is another "opinion" of the Attorney-General, of a piece with that which, two years ago, nullified for awhile a certain anti-canteen law. Now, will the anti-lottery law likewise need the help of woman to straighten it out, and make it so plain to the common understanding and interpretation that "he may run that readeth it?"

Philadelphia.

An Interview with Mrs. Margaret Dye Ellis.

(Continued from page 5.)

way. He heartily approved of having women inspectors, and he suggested that they go down the bay with the health officers to meet the incoming steamers. This would give them from two to three hours to acquaint themselves with the girls' plans before the steamer would reach her dock. I shall lay this question before the President, who, as an old New Yorker, understands the situation."

"Has anything been done about prohibiting the sale of liquor in the Capitol?"

Mrs. Ellis: "Yes, an amendment prohibiting its sale in the Capitol building was tacked onto the Immigration bill while on its passage through the House; and when it reached the Senate, Senator Berry, of Arkansas, insisted that it should remain, although not germane to the subject of immigration, and he was sustained by a majority of the Senate. When the Immigration bill passes, the sale of liquors will be prohibited in the grand old Capitol."

"How do the women respond to your request for help in legislative lines?"

Mrs. Ellis: "Splendidly; they can accomplish anything they set their minds to do. Last year it took less than five weeks to call out an order from the War Department relating to the conditions of vice existing in the Philippines and causing a general reformation. Why? Because the women responded promptly to my appeal for letters and telegrams to the War Department. More and more do I realize that I stand here as the representative of the best women on this earth, the Christian women of America, embodied in the National Woman's Christian Temperance Union."

Washington, D. C.

AN OBJECT LESSON

In a Restaurant.

A physician puts the query: "Have you never noticed in any large restaurant at lunch or dinner time the large number of hearty, vigorous old men at the tables; men whose ages run from 60 to 80 years; many of them bald and all perhaps gray, but none of them feeble or senile?"

Perhaps the spectacle is so common as to have escaped your observation or comment, but nevertheless it is an object lesson which means something.

If you will notice what these hearty old fellows are eating you will observe that they are not munching bran crackers nor gingerly picking their way through a menu card of new fangled health foods; on the contrary they seem to prefer a juicy roast of beef, a properly turned loin of mutton, and even the deadly broiled lobster is not altogether ignored.

The point of all this is that a vigorous old age depends upon good digestion and plenty of wholesome food and not upon dieting and an endeavor to live upon bran crackers.

There is a certain class of food cranks who seem to believe that meat, coffee and many other good things are rank poisons, but these cadaverous, sickly looking individuals are a walking condemnation of their own theories.

The matter in a nutshell is that if the stomach secretes the natural digestive juices in sufficient quantity any wholesome food will be promptly digested; if the stomach does not do so, and certain foods cause distress one or two of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets after each meal will remove all difficulty because they supply just what every weak stomach lacks, pepsin, hydrochloric acid, diastase and nux.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets do not act upon the bowels and, in fact, are not strictly a medicine as they act almost entirely upon the food eaten, digesting it thoroughly and thus gives a much needed rest and giving an appetite for the next meal.

Of people who travel nine out of ten use Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets, knowing them to be perfectly safe to use at any time, and also having found out by experience that they are a safeguard against indigestion in any form, and eating as they have to, at all hours and all kinds of food, the travelling public for years have pinned their faith to Stuart's Tablets.

All druggists sell them at 50 cents for full-sized packages and any druggist from Maine to California, if his opinion were asked, will say that Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets is the most popular and successful remedy for any stomach trouble.

A PECULIAR ORE.

Every reader of this paper who is interested in discoveries along the lines of mineralogy or medicine should read the announcement on page 16 of this paper from the Theo. Noel Company of Chicago, proprietors of the famous Vitæ-Ore, a peculiar mineral mined from the ground, which possesses wonderful medicinal properties when oxidized and dissolved in water. This peculiar ore was first discovered by Theo. Noel, at that time a prospecting geologist, now president and principal owner of the Theo. Noel Company. Since its discovery this remarkable product has been instrumental in curing thousands upon thousands of people all over the country of all manner of diseases and has wrought many wonderful cures among the readers of this paper, the announcements of the company having appeared in this publication from time to time and been accepted by a large number of our readers. The offer made by the company is almost as remarkable as the Ore itself. They do not ask for cash, but desire each person to use the Ore for thirty days' time before paying one cent and none need pay unless positively benefited. The offer, which is headed "PERSONAL TO SUBSCRIBERS," is certainly an original one and can be read and accepted with profit by every ailing person. The company is reliable and will do as they agree.

W. C. T. U. Notes.

A new union was organized by Mrs. Harford, state president, at Dundee, Ore., on January 4, with fourteen active and ten honorary members.

Ever since the organization of the Wheeling, Mo., union, Mrs. Louise S. Wood has been its faithful president. She has held this office thirteen years. Four years ago she was elected district president and has shown the same devotion to the work in her higher office.

Wise discrimination is shown by a union when it votes to supply THE UNION SIGNAL and other temperance literature to Y. M. C. A. rooms, orphan asylums and headquarters of societies other than their own. That is what the Troy, N. Y., W. C. T. U. has been doing.

Have you sent to Mrs. E. B. Ingalls, St. Louis, Mo., for circulars concerning the anti-cigaret pledge-signing the first Sunday in March? You can get 100 pledge cards for 10 cents and badges for 5 cents each. This is a crusade that should be pushed to the utmost in these few remaining days.

The committee on "plan of work" at the Tennessee state convention recommended as follows: "That each union take a copy of the annual minutes and one or more copies of THE UNION SIGNAL; also every white ribboner possess as her very own a copy of the annual leaflet and a W. T. P. A. catalogue."

Cook County, Ill., W. C. T. U. held an enthusiastic executive meeting following a luncheon at the Chicago Business Woman's Club on the 13th. An invitation was extended to the state to hold its next convention in Chicago. Miss Brehm, state president, Mrs. Tyng and Mrs. Hopper, vice president and corresponding secretary, were present.

Saloonkeepers of Peoria, Ill., claim that an unusually large number of young men in that town "swore off" with the incoming of 1903, and that their receipts fell off to an alarming extent. This is not surprising to those who know that the state W. C. T. U. convention met there in October, that the local unions were increased by seventy new members, and that an active new Y was organized there at that time.

Passaic, N. J., union, composed of 240 members, has just dedicated an imposing new building and named it the "Frances E. Willard Hall." It is the only building owned exclusively by the W. C. T. U. in New Jersey, and cost about $15,000. It will be used for a permanent home for the W. C. T. U. and will also be rented to first-class entertainments and religious meetings. A well-equipped public hall occupies the second floor.

Battle Creek, Mich., has a city ordinance which closes the saloons at nine o'clock p. m. The saloonkeepers recently petitioned the city council to allow them to keep their places open until eleven o'clock on Saturday nights and until ten o'clock on the other business nights of the week. This was followed by a counter petition from the W. C. T. U. of Battle Creek urging that the council use its utmost endeavor by way of police surveillance and otherwise to keep the sale of liquors strictly within the law, to grant no further license, and to refuse to extend the hour of keeping open. As a result the mayor vetoed the extension of hours for which the saloonkeepers asked. He has also raided several notorious gambling places and is putting away billboards with their objectionable pictures.

Publishers' Notes.

Special Offers.

Are you fully aware that the date upon which our special subscription offers expire is almost at hand? Time passes so rapidly, we are very apt to delay just a little TOO LONG and in so doing lose a splendid opportunity. The publishers desire the subscription of every member of the W. C. T. U. and under the SPECIAL OFFERS all should respond. THE DATE OF EXPIRATION IS JANUARY 31ST.

Calendars.

We have a small number of very select calendars which we will close out at greatly reduced prices. The fifty-cent calendar will be sent postpaid for 35 cents; the thirty-five cent calendar for twenty-five cents; the twenty-five cent calendar for fifteen cents, or we will mail THREE beautiful calendars for fifty cents. These are all choice goods and the number is limited.

A Gift.

The offer of THE UNION SIGNAL TEN WEEKS FOR TEN CENTS is, in reality, a GENEROUS GIFT of the publishers to any one who is willing to forward this amount to cover the cost of mailing. It is made because they keenly appreciate the necessity of every member of the W. C. T. U. becoming thoroughly acquainted with the official organ, which is of vital importance to the national work. The hundreds who are not subscribers cannot know what they have lost and are losing by neglect of duty in not subscribing and so we urge upon every local president and upon every W. T. P. A. agent, in fact upon EVERY SUBSCRIBER who so well knows how essential THE UNION SIGNAL is to the welfare of the work and worker, an individual responsibility in announcing this offer and endeavoring to gain the full membership of their respective unions as subscribers. The publishers most sincerely solicit your co-operation. Do not fail to remember this offer closes January 31st, and subscriptions received after this date cannot be accepted.

January Young Crusader.

The January YOUNG CRUSADER is packed full of just the kind of reading to delight the girls and boys. Special features are two beautifully illustrated articles on childhood in Bermuda and in the North; live Anti-Cigaret pages with pictures of young boy workers, announcement of Anti-Cigaret Sunday, and continued $5.00 Anti-Cigaret story prize with a full-page illustrated talk by Dr. David Paulson. There are interesting items for the Seniors, and the Juniors will be delighted with an account of the "Zoo" of Old Orchard L. T. L. and with the prize Picture-Stories. The beautiful cover-design suggestive of the glad New Year is a gem that cannot be spared from your collection of the Crusader's art covers. Are you a subscriber to this fine magazine? If not, send us your name and begin your subscription with this number. The subscription price is only 25 cents per year.

WOMAN'S TEMPERANCE PUB. ASSN.,
184 La Salle St., Chicago.

The Doom of King Alcohol

By Mrs. Clara Drake.

A DELIGHTFUL DRAMA FOR AN EVENING'S ENTERTAINMENT

Young People's Societies

Will find this especially adapted to their work.

Price, 10 cents

Woman's Temperance Publishing Ass'n.
CHICAGO.

"FOR 34 YEARS A STANDARD PIANO"

THE WING PIANO

You need this book IF YOU INTEND TO BUY A PIANO. A BOOK—not a catalogue—that gives you all the information possessed by experts. It makes the selection of a piano easy. If read carefully, it will make you a judge of tone, action, workmanship, and finish; will tell you how to know good from bad. It describes the materials used; gives pictures of all the different parts, and tells how they should be made and put together. It is the only book of its kind ever published. It contains 116 large pages, and is named "The Book of Complete Information about Pianos." We send it free to any one wishing to buy a piano. Write for it.

Save from $100 to $200 We make the WING PIANO and sell it ourselves. It goes direct from our factory to your home. We do not employ any agents or salesmen. When you buy the WING PIANO you pay the actual cost of construction and our small wholesale profit. This profit is small because we sell thousands of pianos yearly. Most retail stores sell no more than twelve or twenty pianos yearly, and must charge from $100 to $200 profit on each. They can't help it.

1868—34th YEAR—1902

SENT ON TRIAL

We Pay Freight
No Money in Advance

We will send any WING PIANO to any part of the United States on trial. We pay freight in advance and do not ask for any advance payment or deposit. If the piano is not satisfactory after twenty days' trial in your home, we take it back entirely at our expense. You pay us nothing unless you keep the piano. There is absolutely no risk or expense to you.

Old instruments taken in exchange.

Easy Monthly Payments

Wing Organs

are just as carefully made as Wing Pianos. They have a sweet, powerful, lasting tone, easy action, very handsome appearance, need no tuning. Wing Organs are sold direct from the factory, sent on trial; are sold on easy monthy payments. For catalogue and prices write to

A Wing style—45 other styles to select from

This Piano is the handsomest style made in the United States. It is also the largest upright made—being our concert grand with longest strings, largest size of sound-board and most powerful action, giving the greatest volume and power of tone. It has 7⅓ octavos, with overstrung scale, copper-wound bass strings; three strings in the middle and treble registers; "built-up" wrest blanks, "dove-tailed" top and bottom frame; "built-up" end case construction; extra heavy metal plate; solid maple frame; Canadian spruce sound-board; noiseless pedal action; ivory and ebony keys highly polished; hammers treated by our special tone-regulating device, making them elastic and very durable; grand revolving fall-board; full duet music desk.

Case is made in Circassian walnut, figured mahogany, genuine quartered oak, and ebonized; ornamented with handsome carved mouldings and hand-carving on the music desk, trusses, pilasters, top and bottom frame.

In 34 Years 33,000 Pianos

We refer to over 33,000 satisfied purchasers in every part of the United States. WING PIANOS are guaranteed for twelve years against any defect in tone, action, workmanship, or material.

Instrumental Attachment

A special feature of the Wing Piano; it imitates perfectly the tones of the mandolin, guitar, harp, zither, and banjo. Music written for these instruments, with and without piano accompaniment, can be played just as perfectly by a single player on the piano as though rendered by an entire orchestra. The original instrumental attachment has been patented by us, and it cannot be had in any other piano, although there are several imitations of it.

WING & SON, 86 and 88 East 12th Street, New York

AS A BEACON LIGHT

VITÆ-ORE POINTS the way for storm-tossed sufferers to a haven of Health and Comfort. If you have been drifting in a sea of sickness and disease, towards the rocks and shoals of Chronic Invalidism, Port your Helm ere it be too late, take heed of the message of Hope and Safety which it flashes to you; stop drifting about in a helpless, undecided manner, first on one course and then another, but begin the proper treatment immediately and reach the goal you are seeking by the route so many have traveled with success. Every person who has used Vitæ-Ore is willing to act as a pilot for you, each knows the way from having followed it; attend their advice, follow the light and be cured as they have. Can you afford to disregard it? READ OUR PERSONAL OFFER.

MAKE NATURE YOUR DOCTOR

MEDICAL SCIENCE has failed to improve upon or even equal the remedies found in a free state in healing mineral springs. Physicians, the oldest and best, the newest and learned, acknowledge this to be a fact, and when they encounter a disease which is not amenable to the action of drugs, they pack the patient off to Carlsbad, Saratoga, Baden, there to drink the waters which contain the essential properties for the restoration of health and the patient returns—fresh, healthy, in mind and body. If the patients cannot afford the trip, and few but the wealthy can, they must continue to suffer, as the waters deteriorate rapidly, and when transported fail to produce the desired results.

A LETTER TO THE THEO. NOEL COMPANY, CHICAGO, will bring a healing spring to your door, to your own house, your chamber—will bring to you VITÆ-ORE, a mineral spring condensed and concentrated, a natural God-made remedy for the relief and cure of the ills with which man is afflicted. Why continue to suffer when this natural curing and healing Ore, nature's remedy, can be had for the asking, when you can have

A HEALING MINERAL SPRING AT YOUR DOOR?

WHAT VITAE-ORE IS. Vitæ-Ore is a natural, hard, adamantine rock-like substance—mineral—ORE—mined from the ground like gold and silver, in the neighborhood of a once powerful but now extinct mineral spring. It requires about twenty years for oxidization by exposure to the air, when it slacks down like lime and is then of medicinal value. It contains in part free iron, free sulphur and free magnesium, three properties which are most essential for the retention of health in the human system, and one package—one ounce—of the ORE when mixed with a quart of water will equal in medicinal strength and curative value 800 gallons of the most powerful mineral water drunk fresh at the springs. It is a geological discovery, to which there is nothing added or taken from. It is the marvel of the century for curing such diseases as Rheumatism, Bright's Disease, Blood Poisoning, Heart Trouble, Catarrh, and Throat Affections, Liver, Kidney and Bladder Ailments, Dropsy, Stomach and Female Disorders, Malarial Fever, La Grippe, Nervous Prostration and General Debility, as thousands testify, and as no one, accepting this offer and writing for a package, will deny after using. READ OUR SPECIAL OFFER:

Personal to Union Signal Subscribers and Readers

We will send to every subscriber or reader of this paper or worthy person recommended by a subscriber or reader, a full-sized One Dollar package of VITÆ-ORE, by mail, postpaid, sufficient for one month's treatment, to be paid for within one month's time after receipt, if the reader can truthfully say that its use has done him or her more good than all the drugs and dopes of quacks or good doctors or patent medicines he or she has ever used. Read this over again carefully, and understand that we ask our pay only when it has done you good, and not before. We take all the risk; you have nothing to lose. If it does not benefit you, you pay us nothing. We do not offer to send you a free sample to last three or four days, nor to send you a medicine which will cure you with four or five drops, but we do offer to send you a regular $1.00 package of the most successful natural medicine known to the civilized world, without one cent of risk to you. We offer to give you thirty days to try the medicine; thirty days to see results before you need pay us one cent, and you do not pay the one cent unless you do see the results. We know that when this month's treatment of Vitæ-Ore has put you on the road to a cure, you will be more than willing to pay. Vitæ-Ore has cured more chronic, obstinate, pronounced-incurable cases, than any other known medicine, and will reach every case with a more rapid and powerful curative action than any medicine, treatment or combination of medicines, which it is possible to procure.

VITAE-ORE WILL DO THE SAME FOR YOU as it has for hundreds of readers of this paper, if yuo will give it a trial. Send for a $1.00 package at our risk. You have nothing to lose. If the medicine does not benefit you, write us so and there is no harm done. We want no one's money whom Vitæ-Ore cannot benefit. Can anything be more fair? What sensible person, no matter how prejudiced he or she may be, who desires a cure and is willing to pay for it, would hesitate to try Vitæ-Ore on this liberal offer? One package is usually sufficient to cure ordinary cases; two or three for chronic, obstinate cases. We mean just what we say in this announcement, and will do just as we agree. Write today for a package at our risk and expense, giving your age and ailments, and mention this paper, so we may know that you are entitled to this liberal offer. ☞This offer will challenge the attention and consideration, and afterwards the gratitude of every living person who desires better health or who suffers pains, ills, and diseases which have defied the medical world and grown worse with age. We care not for your skepticism, but ask only your investigation, and at our expense, regardless of what ills you have, by sending to us for a package. Read the testimony of a few of the thousands Vitæ-Ore has cured and Send for a $1.00 Package at our risk. You have nothing to lose. Theo. Noel Company, Chicago.

Rheumatism

Vitæ-Ore will cure Rheumatism, even in chronic, diagnosed as incurable cases. Liniments and plasters are but a makeshift. Alkalies and the remedies that are almost invariably prescribed fail to cure because they weaken the digestion, irritating the delicate lining of the stomach, thus impairing instead of building up the system. Vitæ-Ore is absorbed into the blood, neutralizing the acid secretions, rendering them harmless for evil, and gradually eliminates them from the system. The thin acid blood is made pure and rich, nourishes and soothes the irritated nerve tissues, cools the hot, throbbing muscles, dissolves the hard, calcareous matter that has collected in the joints, and it passes out of the system. Cures with Vitæ-Ore are permanent and lasting.

Mount Holly Springs, Pa.—I have used Vitæ Ore for Rheumatism, which disease I had so bad I could not get out of bed. I used doctors' medicines, but they did me no good. I used but two packages of Vitæ-Ore and it cured me effectually and permanently, as it is now more than two years since my cure. It is worth its weight in gold for Rheumatism and Lumbago, and will do for these diseases what doctors cannot.—David Lightner.

Pawnee, Okla.—I have used Vitæ-Ore and was cured by it of Inflammatory Rheumatism of nine years' standing; have recommended more than one hundred people to use Vitæ-Ore and know of many cures which it has made hereabouts. I gladly recommend it to all sufferers.—Wm. Bowen.

Springfield, Mo.—I was attacked with Fever, and when the Fever was broken up, Rheumatism settled in my left knee so badly I was hardly able to walk except on crutches. I saw an advertisement of Vitæ-Ore and sent for some. Before one package was entirely used I discarded the crutches and took to a cane. I sent for another package, used it and am happy to state that I now walk the earth a man free from rheumatic affections. I honestly believe it to be the best medicine on earth for most of the ills flesh is heir to. This was two years ago and I have had no return of the trouble, and am willing to have this published for the benefit of suffering humanity. Everyone here that has used Vitæ-Ore speaks very highly in its praise.—Jeremiah W. Butler, 2300 Springfield ave.

Stomach Trouble

Vitæ-Ore contains as its constituent parts elements which supply to the stomach those vital forces necessary for the proper digestion and assimilation of food. Taken after meals, the food is digested before it has time to sour and ferment. It gives to the stomach what it lacks when in a diseased condition, thoroughly cleanses the intestines, removes all irregularities, and invigorates and stimulates all parts to a performance of the proper functions, makes your food feed you, the body, with rich, flowing, red blood, builds up strength in muscle and nerve tissue, causes a healthy normal action in the secretary and excretory organs, and gives that feeling of relief and comfort so desired by all.

Ottawa, Kas.—I have been bothered for a number of years with what some of the best doctors of Kansas City pronounced Neuralgia of the Stomach or Nervous Dyspepsia, for which they and others treated me, but gave me no relief. About nine months ago I commenced taking Vitæ-Ore, and in all that time have not felt my old trouble. It has cured my stomach and I have had better health than for years. I can honestly recommend V.-O. to any one suffering with Stomach Trouble.—Jos. D. Jones.

Lynnville, Tenn.—I can say that your Vitæ-Ore has been of great benefit to me, in fact has done me more good than all the medicines I have taken in the past years. My stomach has not troubled me since I have been taking this remedy. I will recommend it to every one suffering with stomach trouble. At present I am able to eat anything and give V.-O. all the credit.—Mrs. T. G. McMahon.

Hampden, Mass.—Just one month ago I received the package of Vitæ-Ore sent me on trial and have prepared and used it strictly according to directions. I must say that I never before received so much benefit from any remedy in so short a time. In three days I began to feel its good effects and I am forced to conclude that you have a wonderful remedy. I had Catarrh of the Stomach which seriously affected my digestion and that in turn painfully afflicted my heart. I had a sort of all-run-down feeling but have been gradually gaining in strength and buoyancy. I actually feel ten years younger. You are at liberty to use this report in any way you see proper; I mean every word of it.—Rev. W. P. Squires.

Catarrh

Vitæ-Ore will positively cure catarrh of any organ or part of the body, used in the manner prescribed in our printed directions. It is a natural astringent, possessing qualities as such which it seems impossible to duplicate in any manufactured or artificial product and immediately allays all inflammation, stops all morbid or irregular action on the membrane, eradicates all catarrhal conditions, and places each organ in a natural, normal, healthy condition, so as to faithfully perform its individual function, thus restoring the entire system to a state of perfect health.

Scuffletown, Ky. — Vitæ-Ore has cured me of Rheumatism, Kidney Trouble, Cough, Sore Throat and Catarrh of the Bowels. I have taken V.-O. six months. It seems to heal all complaints.—Jacob Hix.

Central Lake, Mich.—I have been very low with Catarrh of the Stomach, Bowels and Bladder. I could not walk without a cane. My stomach would fill with gas and was in such misery that I could hardly breathe. After a short treatment with V.-O. I have laid aside my cane and am much better than I have been for the past three years.—W. H. Stoddard, Box 27.

Estabutchie, Miss.—I suffered for three years with Catarrh of the Bladder, Bowel Disorders and Kidney Trouble, which troubled me so badly that I scarcely got a night's sleep. Four of the best doctors in this neighborhood failed to cure me. Five dollars' worth of Vitæ-Ore did me more good than all the drugs I have ever taken, and also cured my leg of a sore which the doctors said was Blood Poison and had failed to cure. I can recommend V.-O. from a personal test.—Warren Mott.

Constipation

Chronic constipation may be relieved, but never cured by cathartic remedies. Drastic cathartics, to purge the bowels, are of little value, and do injury by forcing the intestines to action by an artificial stimulation, which cannot be other than retroactive in its effects. A cure can be brought about only by a thorough renovation and strengthening of the stomach and intestines, the placing of the same in a normal, natural, healthy, strong condition. Vitæ-Ore cures constipation as it cures diarrhœa, by eradicating the disturbing or obstructing causes.

Brockville, Fla.—I have tried Vitæ-Ore and know that it has the virtue claimed for it, as it relieved me of Constipation that had followed me for forty-five years, and for which I tried many remedies, but none gave me any permanent relief except Vitæ-Ore.—J. C. Smith.

Watseka, Ill.—I cannot praise V.-O. too highly, especially when I consider how it cured me of constipation. I have never seen its equal.—B. F. Hathaway.

Kidney Trouble

Vitæ-Ore has cured thousands of old chronic cases of diabetes, has brought relief to case after case where patients suffered excruciating agony through the presence of gravel, and has cured hundreds of cases of Bright's Disease, where the patient had lost all hope.

Tallassee, Ala.—My family physician, Dr. Jas. T. Ruskin, says that V.-O. has prolonged my life and he thinks it a wonderful discovery. I had Kidney and Bladder Trouble and Rheumatism. It benefited when all else failed. I have been taking it for the past five years at irregular times and would not be without it.—Mrs. Ellie Gauntt.

Dido, Va.—I was taken ill with Gravel last January and would have died but for Vitæ-Ore. Your advertisement pursuaded me that it would help me, so I took it and after nine doses the stone was passed. I cannot praise Vitæ-Ore highly enough.—Joseph F. Mercer.

Thomasville, Ga.—Vitæ-Ore has done more for myself and others than anything which I have ever used. It has entirely freed me of Bright's Disease and Rheumatism, from which I suffered greatly; in fact, I felt that my time on earth was short. Vitæ-Ore is the best thing that I have found and I have practiced medicine since 1859.—J. B. Watkins, M. D.

Address THEO. NOEL COMPANY, UNION SIGNAL DEPT., Vitæ-Ore Building, CHICAGO, ILL.

FOR GOD AND HOME AND EVERY LAND.

The UNION SIGNAL AND WORLD'S WHITE RIBBON

NATIONAL and WORLD'S WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION

Entered at Chicago Postoffice as Second-class Matter.

"Thou hast given a banner to them that fear thee: that it may be displayed because of the truth."

Vol. XXIX.—No. 5. Issued Weekly. | CHICAGO, JANUARY 29, 1903. | Price, $1.50 Per Year in Advance.

Notice.

THE UNION SIGNAL for one year to a club of ten, $10. This offer is extended to January 31, 1903.

Contents of This Number.

CURRENT TEMPERANCE NEWS 2, 3
CONTRIBUTED:
A MOTHER'S MEETING:
"Dress"—The Nurse's Dream—A Thought From the German 4
In Far Japan. Temperance Sentiment Increasing. By Kara G. Smart 5
The Winter of the Soul. By Lulu Whedon Mitchell—A Fight Against Odds. By Kate Anderson 6
CHILDREN'S COZY CORNER:
Good for Nothing—The Story Mr. Fletcher Told—Of Curious Interest—The Gates of Gold—Puzzlers' Packet 7
EDITORIAL:
A New Era in Charitable Methods—Nature's Labels—The Use of Good Law 8
Personal Mention—Devotional 9
PRESIDENT'S LETTER 9
OFFICIAL COMMUNICATIONS 10
W. C. T. U. NOTES 11, 12
THE FRANCES E. WILLARD NATIONAL TEMPERANCE HOSPITAL—LORD METHUEN ON TEMPERANCE 12
THE OPTIMISTS' CLUB 13
THE EDITOR'S QUESTION BOX—ABOUT WOMEN 14
PUBLISHERS' NOTES—SIGNAL NOTES 15

Red-Letter Day.

February 17, Frances E. Willard Thankoffering Day.

THE HEAVENLY BIRTHDAY OF MISS WILLARD.

News of the Week.

Colored men of Indian Territory petition Congress to retain control over liquor traffic.

Julian Ralph, noted author and war correspondent, dies at his home in New York.

Bubonic plague claims 150 victims at Mazatlan, Mexico. Fatalities average 33 per cent of those afflicted.

Young Men's Christian Association celebrates fiftieth anniversary by largest convention in its history, at Washington.

Executive council of American Federation of Labor to begin active campaign in behalf of laws to prohibit child labor.

War on bubonic plague, which has existed three years in San Francisco, planned at conference of nineteen state health boards with Surgeon General Wyman.

Col. Arthur Lynch, Irish leader in Boer army, convicted of treason at London and sentenced to death; his wife will appeal to king and pardon or prison sentence is likely.

Wireless telegraph message from President Roosevelt to King Edward transmitted 3,000 miles by Marconi from Wellfleet (Mass.) station to Cornwall, England; previous record broken by 300 miles.

Twenty-seven coal corporations indicted by Chicago grand jury for alleged anti-trust law violation; seventeen individual dealers identified with Illinois, Indiana and Wisconsin soft coal trade, also indicted.

The treaty between the United States and Colombia for the construction of the Panama Canal has been signed; provides for payment by United States of $10,000,000 cash and $250,000 annual rental after nine years.

United Mineworkers of America in convention at Indianapolis began work of organizing greatest labor defense fund in history. Starts with $1,027,120. Vote to demand advance of 12½ cents a ton, run-of-mine basis, and 7 cents differential between pick and machine mining. Salaries of officers increased from 25 to 100 per cent.

Venezuelan situation complicated by action of German warships in bombarding Fort San Carlos. United States Minister Bowen reaches Washington to negotiate with European allies for settlement. Great Britain, Germany and Italy decline to consider proposal to raise blockade of Venezuelan ports. Minister Bowen sanguine of speedy adjustment of difficulty.

The Value of an Appeal. In response to a woman's cry against selling her husband strong drink, a saloon keeper in Oklahoma wrote these words: "You are the first Christion woman who has ever addressed me concerning my business. I have sold out and will never stand behind a saloon bar again." Such appeals can do no harm, and when made in the right spirit they may be infinite in their results.

Bullets vs. Ballots. Great applause greeted the utterances of the "Little White-Haired Mother," "Mother" Jones, the woman champion of the United Mine Workers of America at their recent convention in Indianapolis. She denounced the using of pistols in labor disputes, and prophesied that the young trade unionists growing up would not know how to pull a trigger. She suggested as a substitute the use of the ballot, saying it was more powerful in a campaign for right than any number of fire-arms.

Restrictive Laws Not Enforced. A popular argument with the good, moral citizen for the licensing of the saloon is that it is much better to have a liquor law which can be enforced than one which by reason of its continued violation is degenerating to the moral character of its citizens. Many of the unthinking are caught by this sophistry. With those, however, who are a little observing and willing to get at the facts, this argument falls flat, for they find that laws regulating the traffic are more frequently and defiantly ignored than laws prohibiting the same.

The Struggle in Vermont. Our National President, Mrs. L. M. N. Stevens, has given two weeks of heroic service in the referendum campaign in Vermont, and will return there for the last days of the conflict. She has been ably reinforced by those magnificent speakers, Mrs. Hoffman and Mrs. Howe, of Missouri, and Mrs. Katharine Lente Stevenson, of Massachusetts, and the outlook now seems most hopeful. Miss Anna Gordon entered the state January 27 for a week's work, leaving unfinished the business that brought her to Chicago, in order to respond to this special call. Liquor dealers from many states are freely furnishing money and are putting forth every effort to win. If Vermont votes against high-license, the state will enjoy the present prohibition law until 1906. The outcome of this struggle is awaited with the keenest anxiety.

The Next Thing. A permanent international congress follows a permanent peace tribunal as a natural sequence. The American Peace Society, which has its headquarters in Boston, has asked the legislature of Massachusetts to request Congress to authorize the President to take the initiative in this matter by inviting the governments of the world to join in establishing an international council. As time goes on and civilization advances, the nations become more and more interdependent, so that it becomes necessary to call frequent conferences for the adjustment of affairs of mutual interest. Then why not have, as an improvement upon these sporadic efforts, a regular time of convening and a regular place of meeting? The logic of events points to a world's parliament. The world's federation is no more poetic fancy: the Twentieth Century will, we doubt not, witness its actual accomplishment.

Science as an Aid to Brotherhood. The rapidity with which the world is moving these days almost takes one's breath away. Wireless telegraphy opens up, undoubtedly, a new era in the world's history. It is already found that Marconi's marvelous discovery is likely to be productive of international complications. The nations, like the neighbors in a village hamlet, are going to know too much about each other's affairs. This is sure to hasten international co-operation and universal peace. The first messages transmitted between America and England are a happy augury for the future of transatlantic wireless telegraphy.

Why Soldiers Desert. Recent visitors to the army posts in the vicinity of Washington, D. C., report much dissatisfaction among the soldier boys. They complain chiefly of a lack of interest and effort on the part of their officers to make the forts cheerful and inviting. At Fort Meyer, where an allowance of $40 a month is received from the government to be expended in good reading matter, two monthly magazines and two daily papers represented the outlay! The exchange store is flourishing—without beer—and a good monthly profit is realized, but with no apparent benefit to the men. It is to be hoped that the appropriation of $125,000 for the establishment of proper amusement and recreation rooms at Fort Meyer will convince those who are responsible for the present cheerless aspect of life at that particular post, that they may as well submit to the inevitable. The plan to create dissatisfaction and unrest among the boys in blue, which may be attributed to the abolition of beer from the canteen, deceives no one, and the responsibility for desertions will be very properly put where it belongs—on the heads of officers who are guilty of gross neglect, if nothing worse.

Protection for Immigrant Women. On December 8 Mrs. Mary M. Finley, press superintendent of the Philadelphia W. C. T. U., sent Mrs. Stevens a statement to the effect that on November 30, in Philadelphia a raid was made on twenty-two disreputable houses and 130 women and fifty-one men were arrested. This came about through a complaint of the German Consul that a syndicate of vice exists and that young girls are lured to this country under the promise of work or marriage and are distributed all over the country, some of these being only thirteen years of age and scarcely any over twenty-one. When the case came before the court for trial the judge decided there was no law to reach the matter, and all were discharged. The letter also represented that many of these girls who are coming to this country to seek honest work are met even before they land by those who "lure them to their destruction." On behalf of the National W. C. T. U., Mrs. Stevens at once requested Mrs. Ellis, National superintendent of the department of Legislation, to see what could be done to prevent this national disgrace. The result of the effort has already been announced in THE UNION SIGNAL, and all members of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, in fact all good people everywhere, are greatly indebted to President Roosevelt and others of the "powers that be" for their prompt action in providing for the appointment of five women inspectors to meet the incoming vessels and do everything within their power to protect stranger women who come within our gates.

Late News From Washington.

House Military Committee Deluged with Letters.

Margaret Dye Ellis, Correspondent.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 26.—While several states are in the throes of senatorial contests, we have been favored by the return of a number of Senators to the United States Senate for a term of six years, ho are especially friendly to our cause, notabl a.nong these being Hansbrough, of North Dakota; Gallinger, of New Hampshire, and Penrose, of Pennsylvania.

While I write, the Immigration bill is wending its final passage through the Senate, and this by courtesy of Senator Quay, who by his pertinacity in holding to the statehood bill, and not bringing it to a vote, is thereby obstructing all other legislation, only as he is pleased to give way, and allow it to move on. As soon as the routine business of the morning is concluded, at once he proposes the "regular order," and the daily grind commences.

Senator Fairbanks, by the consent of Quay, was to bring the Immigration bill up today, and if it passes, it carries with it the amendment to prohibit liquor selling in the Capitol, and for the first time in long years that grand old building will be free from the sale of intoxicating liquors.

It is certainly surprising how much valuable time is consumed in Congress by speech making. I doubt very much if any one of the members' views are changed in the least by these set speeches; indeed, it is the custom when a member rises to deliver an address, to see the other members whether in Senate or House, quietly retire one after another to the cloak rooms, or to their committe rooms, until frequently less than a dozen men are on the floor; and if the matter of "no quorum" is brought to the attention of the presiding officer, and he orders the clerk to call the roll, the members line up in the rear of the Chamber to answer when their names are called, and then immediately withdraw. This would certainly dampen the ardor of most persons, but not so a Congressman, for he always has an audience in the galleries, and he knows that every word he utters will be printed in the Congressional Record, and that his constituents will read and admire, and discuss, and consider him one of the great men of the age.

Of course there are notable exceptions, for it has only to be announced, especially if the subject is one in which the public is deeply interested, that certain ones will speak, to crowd the galleries, while scores, and oft times hundreds wait patiently in the corridors hoping by some possible chance to get within sound of the speaker's voice.

Last week occured one of those intensely interesting occasions which come unexpectedly, and break the routine, and touch and warm the heart. It was when the pathetic figure of Senator Vest of Missouri rose to address the Senate in behalf of free coal; as he stood supporting himself with one hand upon his desk, with the other raised, his eyes blazing out of his wan, pinched face, his voice clear, distinct, raised in pleading for destitute childhood, the Senate chamber filled, for all felt this was in all probability the closing speech of his long eventful life; he was too feeble to continue the address to the close, and the next day was confined to his bed, but the following day delivered the remainder of as eloquent and powerful an address as has been given in the Senate this year.

A disgraceful bill slipped through the House of Representatives during the first week of the present session, and is now pending in the Senate. All humane men and women ought to make their influence felt against its passage.

The substance of the bill is a change from twenty-eight hours as the extreme limit during which live stock may be kept without food or water or rest while being transported on interstate railways, to forty hours. In order to save a little expense and trouble demanded by the existing law, certain shippers and some railway officials are willing to run the risk of losing some animals, and cause such horrible suffering to poor dumb brutes. It is a request which Congress should scorn to grant. To subject live creatures to any harsher treatment than is now imposed would be disgraceful to this enlightened age.

Last Friday I went to New York to look up the matter of temporary homes for girls found on steamers by women inspectors. All to whom I mentioned the new departure spoke in highest praise of the undertaking. I was exceedingly fortunate in securing a most satisfactory interview with Miss Helen Gould. I found we were to come to Washington on the same train (she coming to attend the Jubilee services of the Y. M. C. A. to be held here), and she very kindly invited me to come to her drawing room in the car. Her interest was awakened and I feel confident when the need arises she will be one of the first to respond.

Margaret Dye Ellis.

The following letter to one of our women from Chairman Hull, of the House Military committee, gives evidence that the letters about the canteen are still coming:

"My Dear Madam: Your favor of the tenth received. As there will be no legislation whatever in regard to the canteen this Congress I am at a loss to understand why I am deluged with letters on this subject. Evidently some newspaper has started a discussion which has greatly aroused the Prohibitionists of the country.

Assuring you that you need have no fears whatever at this time, I am, Very truly (signed) J. A. T. Hull."

The Congressional Record of yesterday, January 22, shows that the two New Jersey Senators presented sixty-seven anti-canteen petitions from their state in one day. Parker is certainly hearing from home! Two years ago when the Military committee gave a favorable report on the anti-canteen bill, he brought in a minority report from the committee, signed by himself, urging Congress not to pass the bill. It is time the constituents of the 213 churches in his district be heard as well as the constituents represented by the twenty-five breweries.

To Protect Prohibition Towns and States Against "Inter-State Commerce" Tricks.

Rev. Wilbur F. Crafts, Correspondent.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 24.—The attention of reformers in the first session of this Congress was so largely occupied with the Gillett-Lodge bill that scarcely a passing thought was given to a most important bill introduced by Mr. Hepburn, of Iowa, for the protection of prohibition territory in that state and in other states, two-fifths of the population of the United States being under prohibition of one kind or another. The bill is as follows:

"A Bill to amend an Act to limit the effect of the regulations of commerce between the several States and with foreign countries in certain cases, approved August eighth, eighteen hundred and ninety.

"Be it enacted, etc., that chapter seven hundred and twenty-eight of the Twenty-sixth Statutes at large of the United States, approved August eighth, eighteen hundred and ninety, be, and the same is hereby, amended to read as follows: That all fermented, distilled, or other intoxicating liquors or liquids transported into any State or Territory or remaining therein for use, consumption, sale, or storage therein, shall upon entering or upon arrival within the boundary of such State or Territory be subject to the operation and effect of the laws of such State or Territory enacted in the exercise of its police powers to the same extent and in the same manner as though such liquids or liquors had been produced in such State or Territory, and shall not be exempt therefrom by reason of being introduced therein in original packages or otherwise." (H. R. 15,331.)

Now that the chairman of the House Military Committee, Mr. Hull, has declared that the anti-canteen law will not be disturbed at this session, it would seem that some earnest work might be done by the people in pressing for the enactment of this important law. There can be no doubt that if public meetings were held swiftly in all the prohibition districts and resolutions forwarded from them to Congressmen and Senators demanding the swift passage of this law, it could be rushed through even at this late day, for a very large percentage of Congressmen have these prohibition towns in their districts and no reasonable argument can be made in defense of the nullification which is so often accomplished under the plea of "interstate commerce." In any case, information as to these tricks should be sent in to reform leaders in Washington, either to Mrs. M. D. Ellis of the W. C. T. U. or to Rev. E. C. Dinwiddie of the Anti-Saloon League, or to the International Reform Bureau. I think that at the very least we should get the facts in the case and the protests of the people into a hearing before this Congress adjourns, which can be published as a government document and used in the interval before the next Congress to prepare the way for the enactment of the law early in December. That is the most favorable month in all the next Congress, as the money measures which usually crowd moral reforms will not be ready; and in order to make it available for this battle we shall need to have the collection of ammunition made at once. Meantime there should be no relaxation of the effort to carry the only prohibitory measures that we can confidently expect to carry in this session of Congress, those that are contained in the immigration act excluding liquors from immigrant stations and from the Capitol.

Only Eight Tennessee Cities "Wet."

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Jan. 22.—In a short time only eight cities in the state of Tennessee will have the privilege of selling intoxicating liquors as a beverage. These cities are Nashville, Memphis, Knoxville, Chattanooga, Jackson, Bristol, Columbia and Clarksville. All other cities and villages will be "dry." This revolution in the liquor traffic in Tennessee will be brought about by the Adams bill, which will be passed soon by the state legislature. The measure was carried in the senate today by a vote of 20 to 12, and it is expected to pass the house by a large majority. The bill prohibits the sale of liquor in towns of less than 5,000 inhabitants.

Order to Close Winerooms.

DAVENPORT, Iowa, Jan. 21.—Davenport's crusade against vice inaugurated by Bishop Henry Cosgrove of the Roman Catholic diocese of Davenport, resulted in an order from Mayor Becker today for the closing of wine rooms in connection with Davenport saloons. Several persons, many of them women, arrested in wine rooms were brought into police court and sentenced to various periods in jail. Bishop Cosgrove in a statement offered for publication expressed his satisfaction at the results accomplished, but stated that the movement would not be relaxed before the all-night and all-Sunday saloon has been driven out.

Work for Total Abstinence.

Thirty ministers of churches in Chicago have taken the first steps toward a campaign for total abstinence from alcoholic liquors. Beginning March 15 six weeks will be spent marshaling recruits for the Blue Button Army, a branch of the National Christian Abstainers' Union. For the first time in the nine years' history of the union an advisory committee of ministers was appointed. It will consist of forty ministers of Chicago churches. During the six weeks' crusade ten Chicago churches will be the scene of meetings in furtherance of the plans of the Blue Button Army.

Burton, Ohio, Votes to Remain "Dry."

BURTON, O., Jan. 20.—The election in this village here today under the Beal law resulted in a vote of 63 for saloons and 129 against. This is a more decisive victory than the temperance people had hoped for. The contest today was an exciting one, both sides doing their utmost to get out every vote possible, and had teams to bring in the tardy voters. Burton has been "dry" for fifteen years under the Dow law. The victory is being celebrated by the ringing of church bells, and there is general rejoicing among the people.

To Enlist Churches.

PITTSBURG, Pa., Jan. 21.—The Anti-Saloon League of Pittsburg has issued an appeal to every congregation in Pittsburg and Allegheny to petition the House of Representatives and the state Senate to use their influence to pass the bill in support of a local option law, which will be introduced within a few days, providing for the submission to the electors of each township, borough or city within the state, of the question of granting license for the sale of liquor within such municipal districts.

Montana Liquor Men will Fight Sunday Closing Law.

GREAT FALLS, Mont., Jan. 17.—The State Liquor Men's Association has decided to fight the Sunday closing law which will soon be introduced in the legislature. A tax of $10 each has been levied against all men in the liquor business in the state, and the fund will be used to fight the passage of the bill.

Ministers Attack Saloons.

OSHKOSH, Wis., Jan. 19.—The local ministerial association at its meeting this morning called upon the mayor to enforce the laws against saloons with reference to selling liquor to minors and permitting girls and women to frequent such places.

Goes Dry by Two Votes.

HAMILTON, O., Jan. 20.—At the special election held in Loveland yesterday under the Beall local option law the town went "dry" by a majority of two votes in one of the most hotly contested elections ever held in the town.

Temperance Conference in Maryland.

BALTIMORE, Md., Jan. 26.—The Anti-Saloon League has sent out a call for a state conference of the friends of temperance reform in Maryland, which will be held at the Central Y. M. C. A. in this city on Feb. 10 next.

Minnesota's Work for Woodsmen.

Mary E. Hoover, Correspondent.

MINNEAPOLIS Minn., Jan. 26.—Through the efforts of Mrs. Effie A. Burgan, state superintendent, not only the W. C. T. U., but many outside its ranks in the state, have become interested in lumber camp work, and the call for literature to be used by local unions in conducting department meetings has been greater the past year than ever before. More than one hundred camps are supplied, some unions having sent ten papers directly from the press. The state superintendent, as a forward movement, wishes unions to communicate with the "Mississippi Valley Lumbermen" telling of their lumber camp work and interest, and thus come into closer touch with men who are the recipients of literature. Mrs. Castle of Stillwater, who has done the most work of any one woman in the state, receives each year some money from the men, and the Frazer union received a present of fourteen dollars from the camps furnished.

Mrs. Effie A. Burgan.

Letters of appreciation are also frequent: "Many saved souls are on their way to heaven through your efforts;" "You will never know the good you are accomplishing till you meet the hundreds of 'Lumber Jacks' at the judgment day;" "You are accomplishing more than all the men of wealth combined. While they are changing the maps of the continent, you are changing the souls of men and so many, many each year;"—these are a few of the written messages.

From her earliest recollection Mrs. Burgan has had an interest in the lumber camps, her father having spent many winters "in the woods." For ten years she has been superintendent of this department and the magnetism of an enthusiastic leader has been felt throughout the state. In the work to relieve the woodmen of the monotony and evil tendencies of isolated camp life and to enlist them in Christian service, Mrs. Burgan believes she has found a golden opportunity and in W. C. T. U. efforts to put down license laws she sees the way of escape for the woodsmen who are the special prey of the licensed saloon as they return from camp.

Mrs. Burgan resides at 1725 University avenue, South East, Minneapolis, and the unions of the city are receiving a new impetus in the work of her department.

Election Victories in Georgia.

Isabella W. Parks, Correspondent.

ATLANTA, Ga., Jan. 26.—Local option elections were held January 6 in two of the southern counties of Georgia, Thomas and Brooks, and both counties, we rejoice to report, went "dry."

Your reporter has not yet been able to get particulars concerning the election in Brooks county, but the faithful president of the Thomasville union, Mrs. Leona W. Spence, sends some interesting items concerning the election in her county. Thomas county has been dry for four years with such good results that temperance people were surprised when they found that the liquor party was preparing to spring an election upon them. But the children of light determined not to be found less wise than the children of darkness, and prepared for the contest. A mass meeting was held at the Court House in Thomasville and Judge Roddenberry, a prohibition hero who had led the temperance forces when, four years before, whisky was driven from the county, was again elected the leader. Nor were our white ribbon women idle. Finding to their sorrow that the prejudices against our organization were great in the vicinity, they organized a Woman's Anti-Barroom League and gave most efficient help. Their work was partially that of distributing literature and much of it was W. C. T. U. leaflets.

On election day the men worked at the polls and the women held an all-day prayer meeting in the Methodist church. Before the day closed the victory became so sure that prayer was changed to praise.

Our state president has been doing effective work in getting petitions and telegrams sent to Washington against the repeal of the Anti-Canteen law and in favor of an Anti-Polygamy amendment. Other unions report similar work; the Atlanta Southside and the Thomson union have reported specially in this work.

The Thomson union was not worn out with the effort of entertaining the state convention but seems, on the contrary, to have gained new life and enthusiasm. They are at work now trying to secure evidence against some drug stores suspected of illegal selling of liquor and are also moving toward the establishment of Reading Rooms as places for young men to spend their evenings.

Progress in Pennsylvania.

H. Frances Jones, Correspondent.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Jan. 26.—The corresponding secretary of Allegheny county, Mrs. Ruth Shaffner Etnier, sent petitions to Senator Penrose and Representative Graham relative to retaining the Anti Canteen law and praying their influence against the admission of New Mexico and Arizona to statehood without an anti-polygamy clause. Courteous replies were received with a marked copy of the Congressional Record showing that the petition had been offered to the House and referred to the committee on military affairs. The county is active in all legislative work, and its doings are prominently noticed by the Pittsburg dailies.

A county W. C. T. U. history is soon to be published, giving the progress of the work since its inception.

Miss Jessie Ackerman and Miss Ada Murcutt nave arrived from Japan and are spending the winter with Mrs. Etnier in Avalon. They are regaining old-time health and spirits though both have been seriously ill. The former has spoken at several W. C. T. U. functions throughout this district and in response to an urgent appeal from the leader of the great mens' mass meetings held every Sunday in the Bijou Theatre, Miss Ackerman held a mass meeting for women in the second Presbyterian church, December 1st. These meetings were continued for the two following Sundays, Mrs. Etnier leader. The county president, Mrs. Henrietta Forrest, has been "across the line" in Washington county, speaking at various points and gathering in new members to the number of twenty-seven.

Miss Belle Kearney in four meetings secured forty-seven new members. Every prospect promises an excellent year for Allegheny county.

Westmoreland county shows marked increase in membership. Greensburg Y's through a membership contest gained fifty-three. Scottdale in the same manner added 152. Miss Kearney added twenty-two to the Greensburg union. Mrs. Law increased Branch union seven, and Monesson also has seven recruits. Daily afternoon prayer meetings were held Scott union during the week of prayer.

Y Plans and New Members in Delaware.

Lila Wilson Aron, Correspondent.

WYOMING, Del., Jan. 26.—The Silverbrook Y of New Castle county, organized last September, has started in a way which promises to make them an example to other Y's in the state. One feature of their work which shows they are in earnest is the fact that they meet regularly once a week. Already their work is showing in a very material way, in sending groceries to the poor and many other kinds of good work. They are soon to take up department work. The union consists of fourteen young ladies and eleven young men, each having signed the triple pledge.

While Mrs. Mary H. Hunt was in the state to address Teacher's Institutes in three counties, she also delivered an address before the teachers of Wilmington and another in Christiana, the home of the new superintendent of Scientific Temperance Instruction, Mrs. Mary E. Webber. The county president says she did them much good and also gained new members.

Mrs. Donnell has requested the unions of her county (New Castle) to hold special meetings for prayer while the local option question is pending the decision of the legislature. Mrs. Smithers, of Kent County has sent out blanks to each of her unions and many of them are hard at work with petitions. Smyrna, the mother town of the movement, is perhaps leading all the rest in activity.

While Madam Barakat was speaking in New Castle county she gained fifty-eight members.

Mrs. Donnell has sent fifty copies of the cigaret law to the superintendent of Anti-Narcotics, Mrs. H. C. Mearns, and 150 copies of the Scientific Temperance Instruction law to Mrs. Webber.

Counting Gains in Michigan.

PLAINWELL, Mich., Jan. 26.—Twelve unions organized since June with an aggregate of 203 members, represent one phase of the efficient work of our state president, Mrs. A. S. Benjamin, and our recording secretary, Miss Margaret J. Bilz.

May the portraiture of Norwood union, as drawn by Mrs. Howard of the Eleventh district, fit them all in due time: "They have THE UNION SIGNAL, the "Michigan Union," "The American Mother," the Annual Leaflet, and other leaflets by the score. Once a year they visit the public school in a body. They have Miss Willard's picture hung in the school room, and they take the "School Physiology Journal" for the teachers. In the Sunday school they have taken fifty triple pledges."

Other presentations of Miss Willard's picture have been that of Pontiac union to the M. E. Sunday school, and of Kent county union to the new public library in Grand Rapids. This union also presented its president, Mrs. M. E. Bodwell, a suitably engraved gold watch at its annual meeting.

In line with the proposed pledge signing crusade, nearly 100 signatures to the pledge were taken at a Sunday school rally in Bay City on World's Temperance Sunday in which six churches and the Broadway Guards, a boys' brigade, participated: and at a boys' meeting in Akron, conducted by the ladies and the local pastors, twenty-seven boys and young men and nineteen girls signed the anti-cigaret pledge.

Mrs. Mary E. Teats of California has entered upon a campaign for purity and temperance in our state from which great good is expected.

Oklahoma's Gains and Defeats.

Sue Uhl Brown, Correspondent.

OKLAHOMA CITY, O. T., Jan. 26.—Oklahoma will not be behind her sister states when the roll is called and work reported. Sixteen new unions have been organized since National convention last October. R. Foster Stone and Mrs. Lila Carlin Moore are at work in this field. There seems to be a deepening of interest in the old unions, a desire to be better informed in methods, which indicates real progress.

Payne county organized four new unions in a week, with a gain of 100 new members. The plan of one union in Canadian county for holding Loyal Temperance Legion meetings immediately after Sunday school is good.

Mrs. Moore organized seven new unions in Grant county and obtained 650 signatures to the pledge.

At Nellie, in Comanche county, a union has been organized, and with suppers and contests has helped to build school houses.

The Oklahoma W. C. T. U. made an effort to get a woman on the Territorial Board of Agriculture which has just been elected, but failed. But we succeeded in getting a loyal honorary on the Board, who wears his "knot of white" everywhere.

Several medal contests have been held. The Perry Y has opened a reading room. The Anadarko union secured the names of nearly all the business men in the city on a petition asking the council not to grant a license to a variety theater, which was becoming notorious. The council ignored the expressed wish of the people by tabling the petition, 5 to 3.

Nevada Legislation and a New Department.

Miss Gertrude Bonham, Correspondent.

RENO NEVADA, Jan. 26.—A petition is being circulated asking the state legislature to pass a local option bill, and also one to amend the law "prohibiting the sale of liquor to minors," making the punishment more effective and stringent. We are also asking for an industrial home for boys. We may not gain much this year, but it will be the entering wedge which will eventually split the log of political opposition. We are also forwarding to Washington, D. C., the letters and protests our leaders have called for.

A new department, Children's Rescue Work, is being quietly and effectively pushed by our state president, Mrs. Hershiser.

New Year's day we kept "open house" at Reno to all callers and enjoyed a social day. We also observed Peace day, Crusade day and Madame Willard's birthday.

Winnemucca union reports new members at nearly every meeting. Will unite with the Epworth League in a monthly temperance meeting. Hold regular cottage prayer meetings.

Connecticut has the "I Will" Spirit.

M. Josephine Lockrow, Correspondent.

MERIDEN, Conn., Jan. 26.—Mrs. Caroline B. Buell, recording secretary of the state W. C. T. U. and former corresponding secretary of the National, has been engaged to act as state organizer, to visit every town having no union and to secure, if possible, an organization here. Her motto will be, "All Connecticut for temperance and the Woman's Christian Temperance Union."

One of the most helpful and inspiring county conventions has been held at Stratford, Fairfield county. The addresses, papers, music and "Childrens' hour" were interesting to all, and must be productive of good.

Bridgeport union is doing much in the way of meetings. The regular union meeting is held every week, prayer meetings are conducted among the shut-ins, Gospel meetings held Sunday afternoons, a service once a month at the jail and the Rescue Mission, and the pastors of the city hold temperance meetings every week. Much good reform work has been accomplished.

Louisiana.

Mae A. Davis, Correspondent.

PLEASANT HILL, LA., Jan. 26.—The circular letter sent out by the state officers has reached every union, and news of its helpful influence has already been received.

Mrs. Oliver is at work in the Third district with gratifying results. The union at Hammond is helping the Soldiers and Sailors department by making and filling comfort bags; it is also circulating anti-canteen petitions, and planning good public meetings.

A MOTHER'S MEETING--Program.

BY MRS. McVEAN-ADAMS.

TOPIC: "Dress,"

1. Singing, "Whiter than Snow." Number 42, Pentecostal Hymns.
2. Scripture, I. Peter, 3rd Chapter.
3. Prayer.
4. Singing, "When I shall wake in that fair morn of morns." Number 183, Pentecostal Hymns.
5. Paper, "The ideal dress." a, For a baby. b, For a girl. c, For a mother.
6. Debate, "Resolved, that the present fashion of short skirts for little girls is an injury to health and delicacy."
7. Recitation, "Nothing to wear." (The old poem the author of which I cannot recall, beginning, "Miss Flora McFlimsey of Madison Square.")
8. Story, "The nurse's dream." (See this page.)
9. Roll call, Responses of Scripture verses about dress.
10. Pledge-signing.
11. W. C. T. U. Doxology.
12. Closing Prayer.

The Nurse's Dream.

MY task was done, and still I lingered in that home of luxury and of sorrow, in the same room where the death-angel had taken my patient from my care. In the silence I caught myself listening for her groans of pain or for her labored breathing, and I almost fancied that I heard again, as the previous night, from a distant room the pitiful sound of a child's faint crying.

Yet I knew that the young mother lay still, robed for the grave in her wedding dress, and upon her cold arm rested the little silken head of the baby that would never nestle at her bosom.

A door opened down the hall and I heard for a moment the heavy sobbing of the dead girl's mother, and above there was the regular tread of the young widower, alone in his lonely chamber, with his first sorrow gnawing at his heart.

All about me lay the garments of the dead girl-wife, for drawers and wardrobes had been opened to select her last attire.

Although my work was done, I could not return to the rest-home of the nurse-deaconnesses till morning came. Thus I sat quiet, relaxing from the strain of weary days and sleepless nights.

The piteous words of the young sister who had wept over her dead that day for the first time, kept repeating themselves in my mind, like a dull refrain, "O, it is cruel to take her like this; cruel, cruel!"

Suddenly I heard the words repeated in myriads of strange voices, near yet remote, small yet piercing to the ear.

Articulate sounds seemed to come from a rich cloak of silver fox that lay across a chair. "Cruel, cruel! and why should not men suffer cruelty, as they are cruel to us! Cannot I feel yet, in every fiber, the cruel clutch of that trap, the long hours of hunger, the deadly fights with my foes who found me wounded and a prisoner, at last the agony of gnawing off my crushed foot to gain my freedom, then, when I had suffered all and was almost free, the coming of the trappers and the cruel knife? And why? To wrap my lady from the cold in my rich coat. Ah, cruel! You may well say cruel!"

Then it seemed that a chorus of voices took up the plaint, each telling a pitiful, true tale. A bird on a street-hat told how the skin was slowly and carefully stripped whole from its living body, lest the bright hues of its brilliant plumage should be dimmed by death.

The diamonds told dark tales of being secreted by the slaves that worked the mines, told of wounds made in the living flesh where the stones were pressed deep, and of children who had been made to swallow the gems for safe-keeping, but, suspected, had been slain in order to secure the diamonds.

The aigrette fastened to a jeweled comb told of the ruthless killing of the mother bird for her one ornament, while she heard the shrill cries of her helpless nestlings—those cries that continued till starvation or snake or owl silenced them forever.

The pearls told of divers, with life-lines fouled, dying under deep-sea waters.

The filmy laces told of eyesight sacrificed by toilers in dim cellars, keeping the fine thread damp that it might not be roughened.

A rich gown for the races, made entirely of hundreds of squirrel skins, told of the wholesale slaughter of the innocents, the merry little children of the trees, to furnish one dress.

Silks, satins and gauzes told of thousands of silk-worms stifled for their bright, soft winding-sheets.

Most heartbreaking was the story of the muff of beautiful Persian lamb—the tragic story of taking this soft, rich fur from the body of the unborn lamb, thus requiring two innocent lives for each skin, that of the mother and her babe.

One by one the rich garments took up the tale of harrowing pathos, the fine linens made in the sweat-shops, and the bargains sold by weary young girls behind counters. Some were stained with the blood of souls, and more than one had cost a woman's honor; for she must eat.

The whole room seemed to echo, "Cruel, cruel, cruel!"

Finally a voice sounded from a perfumed and lace-trimmed corset. "Why do you all accuse man and do nothing to harm him? Look at me! I am small and fine, yet I have caused more sorrow than is imagined. I freely confess that I have done more to cause my lady's death than all else. Yet no one thinks of blaming me. Yes, every time my straight military front was clasped round her soft body, every time her maid drew my strings to the size that she always used to wear me, I felt that I was bringing her down to this place where she lies so still."

Then the dainty slippers and fashionable shoes took up the word. "We, too, brought her to her death. With our high heels we have pitched her forward till every organ was out of its true position. To walk gracefully was torture, and her poise was destroyed."

"And I," said the skirt of a dinner gown, "I hung about her hips and weak back and helped to drag her down."

"I, too," said a dainty lace veil, "I hung before her eyes, with my small, black dots, till she had nervous headaches, and little specks kept dancing before her sight even after she took me off."

"Do not forget my part," said the thin silk stockings, "for with the help of the tight white kid gloves that she wore through the winter, I destroyed the circulation of the blood, and my lace stripes chilled her, no matter how many furs were hung about her shoulders."

"Furs!" sneered a chiffon waist and the black lace yoke of a satin corsage. "Furs! Why, when the richest furs fell down from her neck yet always we were left uncovered, showing between our meshes the white skin of her bosom, and what her doctor called 'the fashionable pneumonia neck.'"

"Surely I helped to destroy her, too," said the high choker collar of a tailor-made traveling gown.

"And I, also," said the trailing skirt, whose fur border brought the fever germ it gathered on the way from the carriage to the house.

"And I," said the heavy plumed and jetted hat, "I gave her that stabbing pain in the back of her neck."

Last of all spoke a great white rug, once a polar bear whose cubs were killed before her as she died. "Then we are partly avenged for the cruelty of man. Yet she seemed so young and happy, and she did not know. Some one might have told her how to dress. When motherhood came to her, the weights and tortures of modern dress were too much, and she died. But the good doctor, who stood upon me yesterday, said that when something came, which he called 'the millennium,' women would dress with modesty, simplicity and sanctified common-sense, so as to have sound minds in sound bodies. He said, too, that when that came, men would no longer murder their brethren of the air, the woods and waters, for food or for adornment. The great man sighed and smiled and said that then there would be no more need of doctors."

I started, seeming to hear the familiar voice of the doctor in my ears. Was I dreaming? Not now, surely, for here was sunlight on the floor, and I might go.

Note.—If the beautiful and true old poem, "Nothing to Wear," is not to be found, for a recitation, substitute the following charming child poem, by the late lamented Mary F. Butts, having a wee girl speak it:

A Court Outfit.

Hippity-hop over the hills,
Hippity-hop to the dandelion mills.
Get me a necklace of gold and green
To wear when I pay my court to the queen.

Trittity-trot over the moor,
Trittity-trot to the tulip store.
Get me a train of white and red
And a yellow crown to wear on my head.

Trippity-trip and do not stop,
Trippity-trip to the violet shop.
Make me some sapphire finger rings
And fill my belt with the lovely things.

Hurry away to the lily loom,
Bring me a cup in perfect bloom;
Bring it of silver, lined with gold,
And as full of honey as it will hold.

Stop on the way at the pansy place,
Make me a fan to cool my face—
A fan of purple as soft as silk,
Edged with laces as white as milk.

Flittity-fly, as a bird flies over,
Bring me a sash of sweet red-clover.
Won't I be a sight to be seen,
When I go to pay my court to the queen?

—By permission, from "Cockle Shells and Silver Bells."

A Thought From the German.

By Eva May Tucker.

JOY and Sorrow form a part
Of each pulsing human heart.
These two sisters side by side
In the soul's deep caverns' bide,
So near are they.

Blithesome, gladsome, gay is Joy
Ever seeking to decoy
Sorrow from the heart's dark aisles
To the light of her own smiles,
So bright are they.

Sometimes Sorrow falls asleep;
Joy on tiptoe watch doth keep,
Lest her footfall near Grief's door,
Rouse her ere her nap is o'er,
To sleep no more.

E. Las Vegas, N. M.

Through all my little daily cares there is
One thought that comfort brings whene'er it comes,
'Tis this: "God knows." He knows
Each struggle that my hard heart makes to bring
My will to his. Often when night-time comes,
My heart is full of tears, because the good
That seemed at morn so easy to be done
Has proved so hard; but then, remembering
That a kind Father is my judge, I say:
"He knows.' And so I lay me down with rtust,
That his good hand will give me needed strength
To better do his work in coming days.

elected.

IN FAR JAPAN.

TEMPERANCE SENTIMENT INCREASING.

BY KARA G. SMART.

THROUGH the joint action of the W. C. T. U. and the National Temperance League an advisory committee of three has been appointed to arrange dates for addresses and outline a plan for temperance work in Japan. This committee consists of the president of the National W. C. T. U., Mrs. Yajima; the president of the Foreign Auxiliary, Miss Spencer, and the president of the National Temperance League, Hon. Taro Ando.

It was unanimously decided that I should make my headquarters here in Tokyo during the winter months, as there is a large need here, and work done in Tokyo influences the whole nation.

Shortly after my arrival on these shores, as is customary with newcomers, I called at the United States Legation and made known my presence in this country to our United States Minister, Mr. Buck. A little later through his kindness I received an invitation from His Highness, the Emperor of Japan, to attend the grand chrysanthemum garden party given by him in November. Of course, I accepted the invitation.

The party was held in the grounds about the Akasaka palace—a veritable fairy land. It was while at this party that I saw two Japanese officials of high rank refuse to drink any kind of intoxicating liquor—one of them even refusing to drink water from a champagne glass lest someone should think he was indulging in champagne. There are a few brave Daniels in this country.

I have had the pleasure and privilege of delivering an address at the Peeress' School, to the "Great Japan Woman's Educational Society," an organization having three hundred members and consisting of the peeresses and the foremost ladies of the land. They gave me my subject, "Home, sweet home," and asked me to describe to them an American home. I did this to the best of my ability, and I also tried to picture them the ideal home, not forgetting to name temperance and purity as the chief foundation stones of every ideal home. I closed with a strong appeal to them as women of influence to help better the condition of the homes of their own land.

I was made an honorary member of this organization, and presented with the badge of the order, a beautiful solid silver crescent with a cherry-blossom pendant, also with one of their teacups, a fine white china cup, on which is engraved in gold the name and emblem of the society and their royal purple furoshiki. Our friends here tell me that a great honor has been conferred upon me and them and that this recognition is a great victory for our cause.

You will be interested in the following item from a congratulatory letter received from Hon. Sho Nemoto, our staunch temperance advocate in the Imperial diet:

"I am sure your good work is everywhere to be welcomed, as no other temperance worker has ever addressed, as you did a few days ago, at the place where was the imperial family. Princess Kaninno Miya was present, and she appreciated your address. 'It was very interesting,' said the princess. Hereafter the royal family will face towards the great importance of temperance and true civilization."

One afternoon in November the temperance societies in Yokohama united in giving me a royal welcome and a reception, at which I was entertained with one of the most ancient Japanese dances, a number of musical selections played on their remarkable instruments, and a sumptuous gochiso (Japanese feast). That evening a temperance rally was held. This meeting was addressed by Hon. Taro Ando and myself. At its close about forty men signed the pledge and became members of the local society.

In company with Hon. Mr. Ando and Rev. Mr. Ukai (the last named gentleman is acting as my interpreter for the present), I went to Shizuoka, the city next in size to Yokohama. Our visit was made at the urgent request of the temperance forces there. A big rally was held that evening and was addressed by each of us. At its close a number of men signed the pledge and joined the society.

Japanese School Girls.

One young man, a bright looking fellow, came forward and handed me a paper sack containing a dozen unsmoked cigarets. After thanking me for my talk, he told me he had signed the pledge that night and not only meant to keep it himself, but intended to get others to do the same.

A Booth of Japanese Chrysanthemums.

While at Shizuoka I spoke six times—at the temperance rally, at the annual meeting of the temperance society, and before the girls in a mission school, forty of whom became my followers, each promising to get one more before I should visit them again in April. I addressed four hundred girls in the government middle school, the young women of the government normal school, and spoke to a large audience of women. Eight of these young women joined the local union, among them the two daughters of the richest banker in the city. Others took the pledge-cards home with them and promised to think about joining later.

Shizuoka is a seven hours' ride by rail from Tokyo. We returned to Tokyo late Monday afternoon, and yesterday I addressed a woman's meeting at a mission school. At the close of the meeting fifteen of those present, one-half of the audience, signed the pledge and became members of the W. C. T. U.

There is to be a grand rally of the temperance forces here in Tokyo, at which I speak twice. I am also engaged for talks and addresses for every week up to the middle of January, and I have not thought of visiting any of the other cities from which I have received invitations.

Many loving letters and messages have come from the homeland, all of which gladden my heart and strengthen me to do my best for this needy people. Thus far I have not been able to reply to many of them. I know you will not wonder at my silence when you read the above lines and are reminded that when I reached here I did not have an address or even a talk outlined. I am obliged to prepare a new address for nearly every call, as they have printed in many of their papers the most of those already given. When I refuse to give them my copy, they bring in a stenographer, and that settles my using that speech again.

We have already begun making arrangements to translate and to have written suitable literature for several departments of work, and are planning to do much at the coming Osaka Exposition, which begins March 1, and continues until July. This exposition is a national affair, and it is most important that we should be well represented by both literature and workers.

Our first efforts for the organization here must be directed towards furnishing the members we already have with tools for work, towards infusing new life into their veins aud getting them more firmly established in our fundamental principles.

Temperance sentiment is increasing at a rapid rate and in most unexpected quarters. We are now reaping the harvest from the faithful seed-sowing and the self-sacrificing labors of Clara Parrish and Mrs. Large. Everywhere I go I find that it was Miss Parrish especially who has broken down the barriers (and they were many) and prepared the hearts of this people for the coming of future workers. I have written you at such length that you might see now wonderfully your prayers for this land and for your present representative have been answered. As I go in and out among this people I am constantly reminded that "Closer is He than breathing and nearer than hands and feet."

Tokyo, Japan.

The Winter of the Soul. By Lulu Whedon Mitchell.

I LOOK upon the bare and snow-wrapped fields;
The north wind sweeps them in an angry rage,
No promise greets the eye of springtime yields;
Here's but despair, chill loneliness and age.

The skies are rifted by no sunny ray,
No bird-song echoes on the stinging air;
The wintry landscape stretches grim and gray;
No hint of fair to-morrows anywhere.

So proves the life self-centered, self-content,
In the sure winter of its bleak decline.
Barren it lies, the cold skies darkly bent
Above it, starred by no clear faith divine.

Than this, what scene, what end, more drear and sad,
The hour of grace misvalued and denied?
O, Winter of the Soul, the landscape had Sunlight and smile, thy frozen waste beside!

Evanston, Ill.

A Fight Against Odds

By Kate Anderson.

Copyrighted by Woman's Temperance Publishing Association.

SYNOPSIS OF PRECEDING CHAPTERS.

The Kilgour family, who have been bereft of husband and father by a railroad wreck caused by the blunder of a drunken engineer, are engaged in a desperate struggle to save the idolized youngest son from the curse of cigaret smoking. The boy succeeds in completely deceiving them for a time but is finally discovered to be a frequenter of the lowest dive in the tough city. At first he denies this, then brazenly admits that he was lying. His eldest brother Ralph gives him a horsewhipping. Ralph resigns his position in the hotel.

Chapter IV.

A SYSTEMATIC campaign was now begun to break Claude of his vicious habits. His pockets were searched twice a day for evidences of guilt. Every possible hiding-place about the premises was kept under eye, while Ralph undertook the unpleasant and humilitating task of visiting every place in the city where cigarets might be procured, cautioning the owners and clerks against selling to Claude and, when necessary, threatening them with the severest penalties if caught dealing out cigarets to minors. Willie walked to and from school with Claude, and so rigid were the restrictions placed upon the offender that he could neither escape across the river nor have any recreation or companionship outside his own home. There were many wily attempts to escape from this rigid serveillance, none of which, however, succeeded.

It was very noticeable that, cut off as he was from at least unrestricted indulgence in his habit, the abstinence was telling fearfully on him. He could no longer make even a pretense of studying; he could not remember or concentrate his mind on any subject; he could not stick to any work for five consecutive minutes. He even slept and ate by fits and starts. Willie slept with him, lest he steal away at midnight for a surreptitious smoke. It was a terrible time for the afflicted family. No tongue could utter, no pen portray the agonies endured by his poor mother, yet what were these compared with those that followed?

One November morning Willie fainted at the blackboard, as he was attempting to demonstrate a problem in geometry. The boy had not been well for a fortnight, and ere nightfall the Kilgour house had been turned into a silent hospital, with a white-capped nurse in charge, for the three eminent physicians in consultation had agreed that the case was typhoid fever of the most aggravated form.

"I have handled many cases of this type," gravely spoke Dr. Fleming, "and have read the end from the first glance. They don't usually last a week."

The doctor's colleagues, though more reserved, were evidently doubtful of the outcome, and the anxious family read no message of encouragement in the eyes of Dr. Meredith, the physician retained in charge.

"Billy, Billy boy," sobbed Ralph, at the bedside where he watched all the long night, "look at me; I've something to tell you! O Willie, I want you to know what I've found—I've found your Jesus."

But Willie turned unseeing eyes on the kneeling figure and all the while muttered a Latin conjugation.

Ralph seized the burning hand of the sick boy. "Willie, listen, you MUST live; you must, you must. You and I have so much to do. Oh, I have wasted all these years, and you must live to help me make them up. See; I am going to pray now for you to be spared to us." And still clasping the unconscious fevered hand the young man's stalwart frame shook with emotion as his voice rose in earnest supplication to the Most High.

The events of the past year had wonderfully developed the womanly character of little Alice. Gradually, in the pressure of graver interests, she exchanged the girlish vanities for the "things which matter." Both she and her mother consecrated themselves afresh to Christ's service. During these dark days all the deepest wells of filial love had been aroused on her frail little mother's behalf, and it became an absorbing passion with her to place, whenever possible, her vigorous young self between her mother and every fresh grief or heartbreak. When Willie became ill she left the office to care for the household, in order to allow her mother to spend more time in the sickroom. She endeavored to fill the breach caused by Willie's illness in the matter of guarding and watching Claude. As a detective she proved herself the better man of the two, and Claude found it impossible to elude her vigilance or to deceive her by any of the arts in which he had become past master. It is impossible to describe the absolute cunning and inexhaustible resources of a cigaret fiend. They can only be likened to the wiles of a confirmed opium-eater.

In less than a fortnight's time Alice discovered that her brother had been smoking. It was to be presumed, for that matter, that he had never ceased, in case he had found opportunity, but he had managed for some time to cover up proofs. He now fell into a frenzy of terror and implored Alice not to tell Ralph. Alice deemed it best, in this instance, to inform her mother, who talked to Claude and succeeded in genuinely touching his feelings, though he had often before hypocritically manifested the sincerest penitence. He also spoke more freely of the habit which enslaved him, for the first time admitting the chains which bound him. Always before he had avowed that he could stop when he liked, and had declared his determination that this particular relapse should be the last. With sobs and groans he now told his mother that he had begun the habit nearly a year before his father's death, and when at that time remose impelled him to try to stop, he was overwhelmed to find what a struggle he was enduring. This accounted for his nervous outbreaks and strange demeanor at that sad time. "And, O mother, if I had only persevered then, the worst would have been over. I didn't smoke for a whole month, and had got nearly cured. I have never even wanted to stop very badly since that. I don't want to now. It seems as if I don't care about anything as I used to. Lately I've had scarcely any chance to get at it, and besides I feel as awful as I can feel about anything on account of Willie. I'm afraid, too, of Ralph's whipping me, but all these things together don't hinder me when I get a chance. I wish you'd shut me up right now, when I feel like this; I'm sorry now, and I do want to stop."

Incredible to relate, after the doctors' dictum, Willie did not die within the week or the month. Instead he survived a six weeks' course of fever, and regained the feeble consciousness of first convalescence. But he was so very weak, so utterly emaciated and lifeless that the anxious watchers did not even then dare to cherish much hope. By his own entreaties Claude was taken from school, as he was making absolutely no progress. Ralph sternly refused to accede to his pleadings to be allowed to find something to do.

"No, Claude, not until this habit is broken, but we'll burn wood in the furnace this winter, and you can have a job at sawing and splitting. Idleness would be the worst thing for you but we will pay you by the cord at regular prices, and lay the money away to your credit."

A few days later six dollars was missing from a bureau drawer. It was money which Allie held, as treasurer of Trinity Girls' Mission Guild. The loss caused much anxiety and unhappiness. All shrank from thinking that Miss Roberts, the nurse, could have touched it, yet its disappearance seemed otherwise unaccountable. In less than a week Mrs. Kilgour found a half-used package of cigarets stuck in a crevice of an unused woodhouse wall. She called Claude, who, coming in, brought with him a strong smell of tobacco, mingled with perfume, cloves and cough medicine. She locked him in his room until Ralph's return from work. Claude tearfully and earnestly denied having used tobacco in any form for three weeks, and vowed that the package had been hidden a year before and then forgotten.

"Did you take Alice's money?" asked Ralph, calmly. Claude acted so utterly taken aback and heartbroken at the very shadow of such a suspicion that Ralph almost melted.

"I swear I never touched a cent not belonging to me," the boy declared in a ringing tone of sincerity.

"Well, at any rate, you are lying about the smoking and you can't deceive me," replied Ralph. "I'm sorry to do it, but march down quietly with me, so as not to disturb Willie."

The boy shrieked with terror. Alas, in the days gone by, Claude had been no coward!

"Oh, don't whip me and I will tell the truth. I was smoking, Victor Dumouchelle gave me a package through the fence, while I was sawing wood."

"Where is the rest of the money you stole?" asked Ralph, as if he had never heard this explanation.

"I never stole it. Oh! oh! I shan't go downstairs. We'll at least call mamma first. I want to speak to her for just a minute."

"No, mother has enough to bear, without this scene."

"I won't make a scene. Oh, please, please let me see her. Let me see her! Let me see her!" His voice rose to a shrill scream, which brought his mother to the room.

"Let Claude speak. What is it, my poor erring boy?"

"He says I stole Allie's money," cried Claude hysterically, "and he is going to kill me."

"Nonsense, Claude, Ralph never whipped you cruelly, and alas, I have come at last to see this is the only way of appealing to your senses. I will not interfere. Ralph," turning to her eldest son, with a look of trust and confidence, "what is this about Allie's money?"

"Never mind his ravings, mother; he had no right to mention a subject before you which I had drawn him aside to speak about alone," and Ralph collared the shrieking boy.

"Claude," his mother stood very straight, with whitening lips, "you did take that money. Something tells me I am not mistaken." She swayed and would have fallen but for Ralph's quick support.

"Oh, don't whip me and I will tell you. Let go of me and I will tell you all," sobbed Claude.

"Let him go, Ralph. No, I am quite able to stay and hear. Speak, Claude."

"Well, I did take it."

"And was it you who have been stealing from the household purse for more than a year? I never seemed to be able to make ends meet. Accounts were short at the end of every month. Claude, you have so often seen me in such perplexity and trouble over this."

"O mother, indeed, indeed I didn't do that! Surely you can't think that of me!"

A movement from Ralph.

"Oh, oh, yes, it was I. But I never took twenty-five cents altogether."

"Stop so much unnecessary lying," growled Ralph, "or I'll make you smart for it."

"And it was you, Claude, who stole the purse containing all my egg money which I had been gathering to build that new hen-house, together with twelve dollars Allie had saved from working overtime and given me, and which I supposed I had lost on the ferry, and spent so much in advertising for."

"Speak, sir," thundered Ralph.

"Oh, don't touch me. Yes it was me. Oh, mamma," and for once his voice rose in sincerity of anguish—"Mamma I have killed you—"

"Stand aside," spoke Ralph, and he lifted his mother's unconscious form from the floor and strode across the hall.

(To be continued.)

Children's Cozy Corner

Good for Nothing.

"JUST look at these pennies," said roguish Dan
To his sturdy companion, Roy;
"My mother gives me a penny a day,
Whenever I've been a good boy."

"I Wouldn't be paid just for being good,"
Said Roy with a toss of his head,
"I'd just as soon and a little rather
Be good for nothing," he said.

The Story Mr. Fletcher Told.

THE last tap of the bell was still vibrating in the air, when two red-faced boys sprang up the school-house steps, and broke into Mr. Fletcher's room as if Comanches were after them. A stranger would certainly have expected some thrilling tale of adventure to follow such an advent; but as Mr. Fletcher did not even raise his head from finding the roll of boy-names in his little note-book, I suppose he was accustomed to this mode of entrance.

"There! what did I tell you?" panted red-faced Teddy Weaver to the equally red-faced Alec Fiskin; "I told you I'd get here before the W's were called —didn't I? Now, where's my chewing gum?"

A smothered snicker from the boys around accompanied the very reluctant transfer of a grimy stick of "Rhodes' Best" from Alec's pocket to Teddy's. The look on Alec's face as he parted with the precious commodity would at any other time have raised a roar of laughter among the boys; but Mr. Fletcher was already on his feet, and roll call was about to begin. There was no sign that the teacher had seen the transaction; certainly there was no sign that he shared the boys' amusement, for he looked particularly grave—and yet Mr. Fletcher was a great hand for guying the boys, and laughing at and with them.

Morning prayers followed roll call, and then came fifteen minutes that the boys liked so well they had been known to say it was almost as good as not being in school at all. It was the time Mr. Fletcher took for telling them something of what he called "current events;" that is, what he had gotten out of the newspapers the day before. But to-day his big "Daily" lay on the platform at his feet, and he seemed to have something else on his mind.

"Boys," he said, after a minute's silence, "I want to tell you a jungle story to-day." There was a murmur of approval through the school. "But, to be honest with you," continued the teacher, "my story has much less jungle and much more truth in it than those of your princely story tellers, Kipling and Seton-Thompson." Still the boys did not look discouraged, and Mr. Fletcher kept on:

"There came out of the jungle into my town, when I was a boy, a beautiful, glittering serpent, whose name we boys did not know. Our mothers, indeed, and some others, said it was a young boa-constrictor; but the men that hung about the streets, whom we boys thought very wise, laughed at the idea. They said this little snake was perfectly harmless, never grew any bigger, that of course women and preachers (and they sneered when they spoke of preachers) were afraid of it; but we boys, if we were the right sort of boys, could fool with it as much as we pleased without being hurt.

"I believed what these men said, and I fretted a good deal that my mother made a point of my having nothing to do with this interesting visitor from the jungle; but in my heart of hearts I knew that my mother was worth all the other people in the world—to me—and so I obeyed her command, and let the thing alone. Ah, boys!"—and here Mr. Fletcher's voice got a little husky—"blessed is the boy who has that sort of mother, and knows it. Well, a friend of mine whom I will call Casper was very fond of the little snake (for it was a little one when it first came among us), and he was always playing with it. But I must make my story short—first for your sakes, because you have your lessons to learn, and then for mine, because it makes me unhappy to remember these things. In short, the jungle visitor was a boa-constrictor. And it grew faster than anything you ever imagined. Casper found out too late its terrible power over him; when he wanted to escape he could not—no, not though we all tried to help him. The deadly thing was wound so tight around his limbs that no human power could wrench it away."

Mr. Fletcher had turned rather pale, and his forehead was damp, as if he were making himself do some hard thing in telling this story. "This is a sad story, boys," he said, "but it is a true one, so true that several hearts are breaking under it. Perhaps you guess what I mean; that boa-constrictor was the spirit of gambling! and when I see a boy bet another boy anything—even a piece of chewing gum"—Mr. Fletcher turned to Teddy and Alec with a sad sort of smile,—"I am bound to tell him that he is playing with a boa-constrictor. It may be a very little one, but God only knows how fast it grows, and how strong it grows, and how cruel it is. Ah, boys! I met my poor friend on the street yesterday, and he clutched me by the arm, and said out loud, there on the public street, 'Fletcher, take me home and lock me up, and see if you can't save me from this gambling devil that is destroying me!"

There was not a sound in the schoolroom; you might have heard a pin drop, till Mr. Fletcher gave himself a shake, as if he must get rid of some painful thought, and said: "Well, boys, it will be a long time before I tell you as grisly a story as this again. First class in history, come forward!"

Then every boy in school saw one little chapped red hand fumbling for another one very much like itself, and a grimy piece of chewing gum changed back to its original owner; but nobody laughed this time.

Elizabeth Preston Allan.

Of Curious Interest.

—An ostrich lives about thirty years, and the average annual yield of a bird in captivity is from two pounds to four pounds of feathers.

—Beetles in the East and West Indies are so brilliant in coloring that they are beautiful as gems.

—The barking of a dog is said to be an acquired habit and one lost if the animals are allowed to run wild.

—Street-corner story-tellers still earn a good livelihood in Japan. In Tokyo alone six hundred of them ply their trade, provided with a small table, a fan and a paper wrapper to illustrate and emphasize the points of their tales.

—The longest tree in the world lies broken and petrified at the end of a defile in Arizona. It is said to be 666 feet long.

—The Island of Cuba was known by that name by the Lucanyan Indians, who were with Columbus when he discovered it.

—If great cold turned our atmosphere to liquid air it would make a sea thirty-five feet deep over the surface of the whole globe.

—In order that a rainbow may be produced, the sun must not be more than forty-two degrees above the horizon.

—The ants of South America have been known to construct a tunnel three miles in length.

The Gates of Gold.

IF you are tempted to reveal
A tale some one to you has told
About another, make it pass,
Before you speak, three Gates of Gold.

Three narrow gates—first, "Is it true?"
Then, "Is it needful?" In your mind
Give truthful answer. And the next
Is last and narrowest, "Is it kind?"

And if, to reach your lips at last,
It passes through these gateways three,
Then you may tell the tale, nor fear,
What the result of speech may be.

—Home Chat.

PUZZLERS' PACKET.

Puzzles marked (*) are protected by copyright. Contributors will please keep matter intended for this department distinct from other correspondence, and address same to PUZZLERS' PACKET, THE UNION SIGNAL, Chicago.

14.—*A Foreign Letter Package.

A postal clerk on the ———— Railroad found one day a letter from Paris, a letter from Athens, a couple letters from Liverpool, one from Madrid, one from London, one from Rome, one from Berlin, one from Constantinople, one from Stockholm, one from Venice and one from Naples. He tied them all securely in a "direct" package for a great American city. What was the city?

EDITH ESTES.

15.—*Bird I've Seen.

1. A screaming bird sailed through the air;
   Part of a horse's leg was there.
2. Swift darting pinions cleft the blue;
   I heard a gulp and gurgle too.
3. Some ebon wings flop slowly by;
   The rooster's clarion call is nigh.
4. I heard a whistle when 'twas late;
   Run, Willie, and escape your fate.
5. A scream is heard in yonder field;
   An azure letter is revealed.
6. A kind of dog (with head removed);
   A bird by Uncle Sam beloved.

ETHYL.

16.—A Lesson in Entymology.

1. What insect, when following a noted Quaker, finds itself floating from the mast of a vessel?
2. What large insect chased Thomas into a river?
3. What insect is a famous game?
4. What noisy insect sounds like a vegetable growth, a means of unfastening, and part of the foot?
5. What insect does the air-ship man try to do?
6. What insect is popularly reported to have fat hogs?
7. What insect is a great time-keeper?

WILLIE AND HARRY.

17.—*Charade.

The WHOLE comes marching down the street;
Ah! sure 'tis an inspiring scene,
While gay plumes wave and drumsticks beat,
And clarion tones are heard between.

His walk is grave as any priest's
Who walks the shaded temple aisle,
While sweet choir ONE the sacred hymns,
And splendid organ peals the while.

TWO watch the WHOLE with bated breath;
His mien so stately plainly says
That he can read his title THREE
To noble blood of ancient days.

LEHCAR.

18.—Riddle.

I am prized very highly by many who possess me, and often ornamented with precious stones. I can't be seen sometimes, for I am intangible and can only be heard. Again I can't be heard, for when I am done no sound is produced, because I am an act, not a thing. I often take part in an important ceremony, yet I never speak. I am often very musical, yet I am not a musical instrument. I am round and hollow.

C. A. S.

19.—*Numerical.

Should Edward VII, the English king,
1-2-3-4-5-6,
(You know those who high office hold
Are up to just such tricks),
Should he do this, all England would
Be cross as two crossed sticks,
And in his place his oldest son
Would 1-2-4-5-6.

R. AND W.

(Answers in two weeks.)

FOR GOD AND HOME AND EVERY LAND

The UNION SIGNAL AND WORLD'S WHITE RIBBON

NATIONAL and WORLD'S WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION

Official Organ of the WORLD'S AND NATIONAL WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION.

Published Weekly by the Woman's Temperance Publishing Association, Chicago.

EDITOR-IN-CHIEF, - - - - - - MRS. LILLIAN M. N. STEVENS.
CORRESPONDING EDITOR, - - - LADY HENRY SOMERSET.
MANAGING EDITOR - - - - - MRS. CORNELIA T. JEWETT.

CONTRIBUTING EDITORS:

MRS. SUSANNA M. D. FRY. MRS. KATHARINE L. STEVENSON.
MRS. CLARA C. CHAPIN. MRS. ISABELLA WEBB PARKS.

Address all letters and manuscript intended for the editors to, The Editorial Department, UNION SIGNAL. Unavailable manuscripts will be returned only when sufficient postage accompanies the request.

SUBSCRIPTIONS.

Subscriptions may commence with any issue.
The date on the label indicates when your subscription ends.
Papers will be discontinued unless otherwise ordered.
Remittances should always be made in the safest manner available to the remitter. Register cash remittances.
Change of Address.—Give both your old and your new address when you desire a change.
Change of Date.—It takes at least three weeks to change the date, after your subscription is renewed.

PRICE $1.50 PER YEAR IN ADVANCE.
FOREIGN POSTAGE $1.04 ADDITIONAL.

Address all Business Communications to
The UNION SIGNAL, 184 La Salle St., CHICAGO.....

Chicago, January 29, 1903.

"The women that publish the tidings are a great host."

A New Era in Charitable Methods.

A CHICAGO journal comments as follows upon improved methods now in vogue in the establishment of charitable institutions:

"A few years ago the mode of procedure would have been different. Five or six active men and women would have made up their minds that a children's hospital was needed. They would have drawn up plans for such a hospital. Generous but inadequately informed persons would have subscribed the necessary money. The hospital would have been built, and Chicago would have had an addition to its charitable resources and obligations forced into existence, not by the needs of the situation so much as by the zeal of a few enthusiasts."

The paper commends the change of policy which opened the doors of the Woman's Club to a discussion in which authoritative opinions were secured and every feature of the situation was clearly surveyed. A thorough investigation of the question of supply and demand was entered into, and when the need was determined, the best methods were discussed for meeting it.

No enterprise ever called with greater insistence for an application of common sense business methods than the charities and benevolences of the day. One is constantly confronted with distressing facts which illustrate the unevenness of the distribution of benevolences in cities. In one district in which are centered all manner of benevolent institutions and organizations, are to be found such a multiplicity of mothers' clubs and mothers' meetings that there are not found matrons enough to go round, consequently the poor mothers who ought to be attending to household duties, are forced to duplicate, and even to triplicate and quadruplicate themselves socially, in order to sustain the worthy enterprises, to the detriment of their family life. There are undoubtedly other districts where the mothers would gladly entertain these helpful gatherings if opportunity were given.

The sensible manner in which the hospital agitation has been met may be an evidence that we are reaching the permanent third stage of benevolence in our social life. Not many years ago we were in what might be denominated the gaseous stage, when sympathy and charity for the unfortunate classes was a somewhat vague and vapory affair—beautiful to contemplate in the abstract, but rare in the concrete—when to give largely of one's substance was the unusual thing, and to establish a home or a hospital was to be forever a marked man.

Then followed the fluid state, from which we are only now emerging, when awakened impulses of humanity caused generosity to flow easily and respond to all and to every call whether worthy or unworthy, making benevolence a glowing, human element of living, although often formless and shapeless. To have attained to the third stage in which benevolence and generosity have become crystallized into wise practicalities, is to have made great strides.

Never before was the world in so generous a mood; never before were there such stores of sympathy and kindliness of heart, ready to be coined into currency of practical helpfulness, waiting for investments which shall actually pay dividends in the good they may do; never before, apparently, were there greater needs to be met. To bring the two together without waste and with wise discrimination is the social problem with which thoughtful minds are now struggling.

After a fashion the business and the social world are coming to accept the law of the old Jewish dispensation and, as one of its regular duties, to pay tribute to the poor and the unfortunate. This union of heart and head in the matter of benevolence will add greatly to its value, both to the giver and to the receiver.

I am glad to know that the present effort for THE UNION SIGNAL "Ten Weeks for Ten Cents," is meeting with a ready response and that subscriptions are coming in rapidly, but mingled with this is the thought that when the ten weeks expire that the subscription will expire also unless these trial subscribers become regular subscribers. Would that all of them might be so impressed with the value of the paper and the importance of the information that it contains, which can be secured from no other source, that they would feel like promptly sending their annual subscription.

This appeal is especially to all white ribboners who certainly cannot be intelligent on W. C. T. U. matters unless they read the official paper, and I appeal also to all who are friends of the W. C. T. U. and of the temperance cause.

Lillian M. N. Stevens

Portland, Me., Jan. 21, 1903. President.

Nature's Labels.

A WESTERN editor has received from one of his readers this eager inquiry: "What may a man take after drinking liquor to remove the smell from his breath? This may seem to you a frivolous query, but I have no doubt thousands of other men do not regard it in that way and will appreciate an answer."

The sinner against natural laws never tires in his absurd, futile efforts to outwit Nature. How to ignore the laws of health and yet to be clothed in the glorious raiment of health; how to give one's self over to sin and wantonness and yet wear the robe of spotless virtue; how to indulge in grossest appetites and yet appear to the world clad in the seamless garment of abstinence, are queries as old as time.

Such wasted effort and energy as have been spent upon finding the answers! Nature's labels are ineffaceable, woven in the warp and woof of life. One thing above all others Nature's God demands: Truth and righteousness in the inward parts. One thing He abhors: Hypocrisy. Nature puts no premium upon lying, and if, perchance, for a time she permits a man's tongue to speak falsely, over against the falsehood she sets the tell-tale breath which gives the lie to every assertion. Though the man continue to falsify, as time passes there comes the bleared eye, the flushed cheek, the swollen features to corroborate the one and to disannul the other.

To sweeten the liquor-laden breath! No, not all the perfumes of Arabia will suffice; not the most costly of essences; a mother's scalding tears, a baby's kisses, a wife's heart-blood, freely though they were offered.

And yet if in very truth the anxious inquirer dislikes the labeling which advertises to the world his habits, Nature offers one remedy, and if he cares to take advantage of it, he can be assured that Nature will do her part and label him in a far more attractive fashion.

Yes, there is one unfailing specific, so simple in its composition that the most befogged brain cannot fail to understand it, so inexpensive that one need not hasten even to the corner drug store with a prescription, and yet so valuable that for ages it has been preserved and handed down as an infallible cure. Without money and without price it is offered, and if one cares for testimonials as to its efficacy, he may know that they would fill great libraries, for they have been accumulating for thousands of years. As old as the proverbs of Solomon and the ancient Scriptures, this specific has been thundered from platform and from pulpit, and this very day it is being published by a great concourse of women.

Not only will it sweeten the breath, but it is guaranteed to sweeten the lives of the women whom man calls wife and mother. It will restore manhood and put vitality and vigor into diseased bodies and minds. It will put money into the pocket and bread and butter into the mouths of babes. It is an open secret; no man, no association claims a patent upon it. Take it, eager questioner, and use it every hour of the day and every hour of the night. Share it with your thousands of fellow-sufferers. In the pointed, forceful words of the editor to whom the question was addressed, this specific is—"Don't drink."

The Use of Good Law.

IT would be an ignorant and silly impulse that could make one speak slightingly of the use of good laws.

A life of the late distinguished congressman from Maine, Mr. Nelson Dingley, has lately been published. It is a book that makes remarkably good reading. He was a man of extraordinary intellectual gifts, but he was above all a man of masterly character.

All through his long and eminent public career his personality stood for a character that never failed to command the peculiar respect of all who knew him. Just the same in Washington or his home state he carried weight by the law of his own convincing integrity. Those who knew him best felt that they knew what it was to come into contact with a Christian statesman.

From boyhood to the end Mr. Dingley was bold and stanch in his devotion to the cause of temperance. Moreover Nelson Dingley believed as distinctly as did Neal Dow in the need and use of good law.

"Those who deny that there has been any improvement in the drinking habits of the people of Maine," said Mr. Dingley on occasion of a great temperance convention, "endeavor to create the impression that the people of Maine have abandoned moral means and are relying on legal agencies." These men, he declared, "wilfully overlook the fact that in no other state has there been so general a use of moral agencies in promoting temperance reform as in that state. The most potent moral means that have ever been known have been in use there. The prohibitionists in that state have ever been foremost in moral work. They have simply used legal as a buttress of moral suasion. They have done this that the men gained by moral agencies might be aided in keeping their good resolutions by the removal of the dram shop temptation."

But that was not all: They had felt also, said Mr. Dingley, that in the realm of morals, as well as religion, the law is a school master to lift men to a better life. Laws prohibiting dram shops have their first effect in branding the drinking habit as wrong, while they also lessen the temptations that beset the morally weak.

From 1857, when they first met, Neal Dow and Nelson Dingley were warm friends and ardent supporters of each other in the battle against the grog shop.

Programs Wanted. Our Red Letter Day Calendar was adopted for the purpose of enabling local union members to become familiar with W. C. T. U. history by making special observance of certain important events connected therewith. A program for each Red Letter Day is usually given in THE UNION SIGNAL to aid local workers in presenting our cause be-fore a public audience. In order to learn the exact needs or ideas of the local worker in this particular respect, we solicit programs for all the Red Letter Days on the following terms: We will pay $5 for the best program for any Red Letter Day in the calendar; $3 for the second best program for any Red Letter Day. These programs must be practical enough to be adapted to local needs, and they should average about 1,800 words in length. Send to National Headquarters, The Willard, Evanston, Ill., (inclosing stamp) for a copy of the Annual Leaflet which contains the Red Letter Day Calendar, as well as much other necessary information. Send to the W. T. P. A., 184 La Salle street, Chicago, Ill., for literature bearing on the work of the departments represented in these special days, and for the leaflet on suggested programs by Mrs. Mary D. Tomlinson, National Superintendent of Social Meetings and Red Letter Days. A state president says in a recent letter: "My people perish for lack of knowledge!" Let there be such a general reading up on the literature of all our departments of work, such a careful study of the Annual Leaflet, that our members will not only be qualified to make programs, but to carry them out, to our mutual benefit. We especially desire a good program for UNION SIGNAL DAY, March 1, the birthday of our beloved National President, Mrs. L. M. N. Stevens. These should be submitted by February 10. Programs for Neal Dow Day should be in the editor's hands by March 1. The offer for the rest of the Red Letter Day programs is open until March 15. The awards will be announced in our April Magazine Number. Stamps should be inclosed for the return of unavailable manuscript.

Where Draw the Line? We believe that immigration should be restricted, but we are not yet persuaded that a sweeping exclusion of all illiterates would be either wise or just. This country, with its vast resources, many of them undeveloped, even undiscovered, is able, under proper conditions, to provide employment with a living wage and educational privileges to every man and woman who seek our shores with the laudable purpose of "bettering themselves." The criminal should be excluded, of course, perhaps others; that is a question not to be entered into here. But if, for instance, British or German capital comes to us, helps to develop American resources, opens channels for American labor, is it not manifestly unfair to debar the sober, moral, industrious British or German workman, even though he cannot read or write, from coming to share in our greater opportunities and privileges? Better have the honest, industrious illiterate than the educated unprincipled schemer, the man who lives by fleecing his fellows. We realize that from the illiterate class comes a large proportion of recruits for the saloon, but the remedy lies not in the exclusion of illiterates, but in the extermination of the saloon. With national prohibition an accomplished fact the danger from ignorant citizenship will be reduced to a minimum When that day comes the undesirables, the people who are so enslaved to drink that they cannot do without it, will either stay in their own country or emigrate to some land where rum still rules and ruins.

Personal Mention.

Rev. Frances E. Townsley is supplying the Covenant Baptist church, Chicago, during the months of January and February. She will be at liberty to hold revival meetings or to accept an invitation to settle as pastor after March 1st. Her Chicago address is 5943 Normal avenue.

Mrs. A. A. Hawley and Mrs. A. Hungerford, president and vice-president of Colorado, were tendered a reception January 20 by the W. C. T. U. women of Denver, at the hospitable home of Mrs. M. A. Cassell. It was really a farewell to the president and a welcome to Mrs. Hungerford, who will take her place during Mrs. Hawley's six months abroad. The house was thronged all the afternoon, and club women and white-ribboners exchanged compliments over the delicious refreshments, or listened to music and readings embodying selections from Mrs. Hawley's own poems. Later Mrs. Cassell with appreciative words presented a "remembrance" contributed by the unions of the state to their beloved leader. Mrs. Hawley will sail from New York, February 4.

President's Letter.

MY DEAR COMRADES:—The situation in Vermont is most complicated. First, it is as regrettable as it is surprising that the Vermont legislature should give a majority vote on such an unreasonable bill as that concoction of the liquor fraternity and unscrupulous politicians—a bill so formulated that it is puzzling the people, and they are anxiously awaiting the Supreme Court's answer to the questions regarding the matter. It is generally thought, however, that the interpretation already given and reported in THE UNION SIGNAL will be sustained, and thus Vermont still has a chance to be redeemed (in part at least) on February 3.

It is all too true that many of the good folks of the state who have enjoyed for fifty years, or all their lives, the benefits which prohibition gives to a state, were not alert in defending their prohibitory law, and they now see their mistake and are trying to overcome it. Of course it is a serious question whether the majority in the villages and towns that are practically free from liquor selling will be large enough to overcome the liquor vote of the cities, including, of course, the purchasable vote. For a Vermonter to speak against prohibition is like treating with ingratitude one's best friend.

Last evening I spoke in the shire town of Orange county. I heard it stated several times that "the town is free from liquor selling—the law is always well enforced." and they shudder at the thought even of having a licensed saloon there. I read with interest these words on a placard in some of the covered bridges through which I rode:

"In what place in your town do you want a saloon?"

This is a very meaningful question and I believe the verdict will be on February 3.

IN NO PLACE IN VERMONT DO WE WANT THE SALOON.

For this the Vermont W. C. T. U. is faithfully, self-sacrificingly working. It is no easy task to make successful itineraries for speakers, as Mrs. Davidson and Mrs. Drew are doing. It is no easy task to keep constantly "in the field" for months as Mrs. Read has done. Recently she was called aside by the illness of her beloved sister, Mrs. Eleanor H. Wright, of Saratoga Springs, N. Y. This sister has been an earnest co-laborer for many years. Yesterday I received a letter from Mrs. Read containing these words: "We have passed down in the valley with the dear sister and bade final goodbye this morning. My heart is very sore but there will be a great reunion by and by. . . . I shall go back to my work as soon as we have laid to rest the frail tenement that held her pure soul."

Such forgetfulness of self, such devotion and consecration to a great cause must and will have its reward.

I have been frequently reminded since coming to this section of Vermont that it was here that the parents of Frances Willard were born, those stalwart champions of righteousness—an explanation in part of what their noble daughter came to be. I remember, too, that each autumn the white ribboners of Vermont send to Evanston, Ill., a wreath of Vermont evergreen from the early home of Mrs. Willard, and with loving tenderness Anna Gordon places the wreath on the sacred mound at Rose Hill, above the Arbor Vitae which always each fall is put where the flowers of the summer have been blooming.

By all inspiring memories, by all the present hopefulness I believe the Green Mountain State will not go back on its record but will continue to be a state of "good morals and high purposes."

L. M. N. Stevens

En route in Vermont, Jan. 15, 1903.

Devotional.

BE master of the clouds,
Let not them master thee;
Compel the sunshine to thy soul,
However rough the sea.
—Marianne Farmingham.

***

Evil can harm me not if I surround
My soul with good as with a parapet;
If truth outlines the goal toward which I'm set,
The shafts of error will from me rebound.
—Susie M. Brest.

***

Love Him and keep Him for thy friend who, when all go away, will not forsake thee, nor suffer thee to perish in the end.—Thomas á Kempis.

***

God is my refuge! not one fear
Shall move my heart when danger's near
Though foes surround on every hand;
Sheltered in Him I safely stand;
My heart shall rest and sweetly sing,
Beneath the shadow of His wing.
—Mary Ingalls Pierce.

***

The world is a kindergarten of little children, very little children, and the great God is trying to give them his great love and his great life.—Lyman Abbott.

***

To know, to love, to hope, and to believe,
Make glad the heart; to touch, to taste, to dwell
In things of sense, and with desire to cleave
To matter mere, is to be infidel
To the pure soul, which ever yearns to leave
The earth, and soar to Heaven's high citadel.
—Bishop Spalding.

***

Make sure that, however good you may be, you have faults; that however dull you may be, you can find out what they are; and that, however slight they may be, you would better make some patient effort to get quit of them.—Ruskin.

***

Come unto me....and I will give you rest.—Matt. 11 : 28.

It is always in the inner chamber, in the presence of God, in the vision of God, that we find this rest. To see him in his Omnipotence controlling all things, to know that his infinite wisdom is guiding all the affairs of the universe, to know that his righteousness triumphs, that his great love and pity yearn over all men; to draw nearer to him and to call him my Father; this is deep, delicious, unutterable rest to the soul. To put off the burden of our care from our tired shoulders and let him carry it for us—home cares, business worries, soul troubles, church work, national affairs, fears about the future—to lay them all upon him who careth for us, that is rest. To pass up from the toss and turmoil of the earth, away into the secret place of the Most High; to find in the Eternal God our refuge, to feel that underneath us are the everlasting arms, to be sure of his love as our very own—this is the rest which his love and our need alike urge us to seek as a necessity of healthy spiritual life.—Mark Guy Pearse.

***

Have you had a good thought to-day? Write it down ere it passes by, that the thought may do thee good another day and help thy brethren on their way. Whence cometh the good thought, friends? Is it not God's good gift to man, yet not for you alone? It will soon be on the pages of the past, write it down. Phantom-like they pass us by, yet if we would have them do us good, let us keep them in our hearts and thoughts to-day. In memory may they ever dwell. Thoughts of Jesus, his life and works for men, divinely sent words to guide us in our lives while here. Words to draw us within the circle of his love, such his teachings and such his life for us.

Pass on a good thought to-day, unfold the beauties of his word, making life radiant with inward peace, reflecting a glow of love and brightness, casting no shadow, sorrow or discontent to mar his perfect creation, remembering he has said: "Lo, I am with you alway," and thus the divine light cometh into our lives, bringing the peace of God to all who love and seek his ways. Is it not to-day that we should be radiant within and reflect our higher creation?—E. Howard Leggett, in New York Observer.

U. OF MD. LIBRARY

OFFICIAL COMMUNICATIONS

REST COTTAGE. THE WILLARD.

GENERAL OFFICERS:

President,
MRS. LILLIAN M. N. STEVENS, Portland, Me.
Vice-President-at-Large,
MISS ANNA A. GORDON, Evanston, Ill.
Corresponding Secretary,
MRS. SUSANNA M. D. FRY, Evanston, Ill.
Recording Secretary,
MRS. CLARA C. HOFFMAN, Kansas City, Mo.
Asst. Recording Secretary,
MRS. FRANCES E. BEAUCHAMP, Lexington, Ky.
Treasurer,
MRS. HELEN M. BARKER, Evanston, Ill.

Headquarters National W. C. T. U., Evanston, Ill.

With the Treasurer.

THE holiday season with its loving distractions and thoughtful ministrations has come and gone and we come back to our everyday duties full of thankfulness for all it brought us of kindly remebrance and loving messages, and full of hope for the new year and its absorbing work for righteousness. Our hearts have been made sorrowful over the reports of suffering attendant upon the severe cold and the scarcity of fuel. On the other hand we have been made to rejoice over the generosity and brotherly aid tendered by the churches, the city, the charitable organizations and large-hearted citizens who have so promptly come forward with money and supplies for those in need. Truly there is much of brotherly kindness and unselfish generosity in this wicked world that seems sometimes so sordid, so grasping and oftentimes so heartless. For all this we give thanks and take heart anew to continue our work for the home and humanity.

The seventeenth of February, that day that must be an anniversary full of sacred memories to every white ribboner, will soon be here. Let every union plan for a commemorative meeting, making careful preparations and bringing before the public the great work of Frances Willard, giving extracts from her brilliant writings, music from our hymnal and speeches by those who appreciate what her great life gave to the world.

Some of our unions are anticipating the meeting by sending in to the Memorial Fund their gift of $2.00 in advance. Since last report the following contributions have been received:

Connecticut—Stratford, New Preston, Deep River.

New York—Treasurer, $10.75.

Idaho—Nampa, seventy-five cents.

Massachusetts—Salisbury, Wollaston, South Sudbury, Reading, Sharon.

Michigan—Big Prairie, Erie $1.00.

New Mexico—Las Vegas.

Wisconsin—Plainfield.

Nebraska—Trenton.

North California—Chico.

With the money sent to this fund last year a large amount of missionary work was accomplished and we are hoping for even a larger amount the present year.

HELEN M. BARKER.
The Willard, Evanston, Ill.

Superintendents.

Christian Citizenship.

BECAUSE of the illness of the newly appointed superintendent of Christian Citizenship, her introductory letter has been postponed for a time, but she sends this program which the unions will please note.—Editor.

CHRISTIAN CITIZENSHIP RALLY.
For February 22, 1903.
(State papers please copy.)

Hymn: "Christ for the world we sing."

Scripture: Isaiah 5: 8-25 and Psalm 144.

Prayer: For the subject in hand.

Short Sketch of George Washington as a Citizen.

Reading: Oaths of office of President, Governor and Mayor.

Recitation: "The Flower of Liberty," by Oliver Wendell Holmes.

Solo: "Star Spangled Banner," first and second stanzas. Mass the children in choir loft or prominent corner to sing chorus to the waving of banners.

Talk: "The Duty of the Voter," by pastor or other earnest man.

Recitation: "The Better Way," by Susan Coolidge, or "The Bravest Battle," by Joaquin Miller.

Hymn: "We are living, we are dwelling, in a grand and awful time."

Open Discussion: Do we need laws for the protection of morals?

Reading: Declaration of Principles of National W. C. T. U.

Singing: America.

Benediction.

Will unions that use this program please report the same direct to me?

MARY JEWETT-TELFORD.
McMinnville, Tenn.

Anti-Narcotics.

THERE are some bright spots in the anti-cigaret work which our folks will be glad to share with me, both for our own encouragement and because they show that we can push this work in everywhere.

At the annual convention of the Missouri Federation of Clubs, held in Kansas City, Mr. Johnson, probation officer, made an address. He said, "There is a connecting link between the cigaret and the jail." After this speech, I offered a resolution pledging the clubs to work for an anti-cigaret bill before the legislature. Members of the convention said this was the most popular matter brought before the session. I was made a member of the legislative committee for the clubs and given the anti-cigaret branch. Many of the club women are at work.

The Missouri State Federation of Colored Women's Clubs met in St. Louis during the holidays. I made an appeal for a similar resolution as the one passed by the white women, and met with a very kindly response.

The last of November the National Reform Association held an annual meeting in St. Louis. Here again I spoke and offered an anti-cigaret resolution. It was heartily indorsed, and some of the prominent gentlemen spoke in the highest terms of our organization and leaders.

When the Educational Association of Missouri began holding sectional meetings this winter, our state secretary, Miss Morris, wrote to the teachers and interviewed them, speaking at their meetings when this was possible, until the sentiment was strong in favor of an anti-cigaret law. Later the Missouri State Educational Association met in St. Louis. I spoke to two thousand teachers and asked for a resolution favoring a law. The resolution was unanimously passed. At the same date, the Missouri Colored Educational Association was in session, and following the same program, they too passed strong resolutions.

We have the women, the editors and pastors with us, but alas, the trust and the lobby is on the other side, and we may again fail to secure a law to protect our boys, but the effort is educational.

All the above goes to show how easy it is to enlist honest people in the war against the cigaret, and I hope our women will not lose an opportunity to secure resolutions touching upon this subject from all organizations.

On March 1st we are to have a general pledge signing all over the country. Send to me for information.

MRS. E. B. INGALLS.
4119 Westminster Place, St. Louis, Mo.

A Fine Kidney Remedy.

Mr. A. S. Hitchcock, East Hampton, Conn. (The Clothier), says if any sufferer from Kidney and Bladder Disease will write him he will direct them to the perfect home cure he used. He makes no charge whatever for the favor.

World's Convention, Geneva, Switzerland, June 9-11.

THE promised circulars for the trip to Geneva to the World's Convention, with a stop at London to look in on the British women in their annual convention, are now in my hands. Full details of the trip, with prices, route and necessary information, can be had upon request. I have mailed a copy to each one who gave me her name at Portland. As it is desirable to have them reach every delegate, I should be glad if the state corresponding secretaries would send me their lists at once.

The party will sail from New York City, May 16, landing in London May 25 or 26. This allows two days in London for the B. W. T. A. convention or for desired sight-seeing. The evening of May 28 the party crosses from Harwich to Rotterdam, The Hague and Amsterdam will be visited. From Cologne to Mayence the day will be spent on the Rhine, a charming trip. Heidelberg, through the Black Forest, Falls of the Rhine, Zurich, Lucerne, the Brunig Pass to Interlaken and Grindelwald, thence to Geneva via Lausanne.

After the Convention the party returns to Paris for four days, including a day at Versailles, thence back to London via New Haven and Dieppe for the home sailing.

For those desiring a longer stay on the continent, an additional side-trip of two weeks into Italy has been arranged, going as far south as Naples and Pompeii, stopping enroute at Aix-les-Bains, Genoa, Rome, Florence, Venice and Milan. Another trip in England, Wales and Ireland has been arranged. All taking the main side-trip will have their hotel accommodations included, as well as all other expenses during conventions in London and Geneva. Free entertainment is not furnished in either city.

Please let me know if you contemplate going. If you prefer a later sailing I should be glad to know that also.

The Convention bids fair to be of more than usual interest, and a trip abroad, with congenial company, is a great pleasure. Mrs. Stevens and Miss Gordon sail with the party May 16.

MINNIE B. HORNING.
Chairman of Transportation.
Evanston, Ill.

Notice.

Will all young women who took Y Almanacs at the National convention, to sell, please send all unsold copies remaining in their possession to Dr. Howard Yarnall, 114 E. 98th St., New York city. The edition is exhausted and orders are constantly coming that cannot be filled.

I Will Cure You of

RHEUMATISM

Else No Money is Wanted.

Any honest person who suffers from Rheumatism is welcome to this offer.

I am a specialist in Rheumatism, and have treated more cases than any other physician, I think. For 16 years I made 2,000 experiments with different drugs, testing all known remedies while searching the world for something better. Nine years ago I found a costly chemical in Germany which, with my previous discoveries, gives me a certain cure.

I don't mean that it can turn bony joints into flesh again; but it can cure the disease at any stage, completely and forever. I have done it fully 100,000 times.

I know this so well that I will furnish my remedy on trial. Simply write me a postal for my book on Rheumatism, and I will mail you an order on your druggist for six bottles Dr. Shoop's Rheumatic Cure. Take it for a month at my risk. If it succeeds, the cost is only $5.50. If it fails, I will pay the druggist myself—and your mere word shall decide it.

I mean that exactly. If you say the results are not what I claim, I don't expect a penny from you.

I have no samples. Any mere sample that can affect chronic Rheumatism must be drugged to the verge of danger. I use no such drugs, and it is folly to take them. You must get the disease out of the blood.

My remedy does that even in the most difficult, obstinate cases. It has cured the oldest cases that I ever met. And in all my experience—in all my 2,000 tests—I never found another remedy that would cure one chronic case in ten.

Write me and I will send you the order. Try my remedy for a month, as it can't harm you anyway. If it fails it is free.

Address Dr. Shoop, Box 948, Racine, Wis.

Mild cases, not chronic, are often cured by one or two bottles. At all druggists.

1/2

At One Half the Cost

Lion Coffee

has better strength and flavor than many so-called "fancy" brands.

Bulk coffee at the same price is not to be compared with Lion in quality.

In 1 lb. air tight, sealed packages.

$5.50 Hygienic Steam Cooker, $3.00

The correct way to cook food. Steam cooking endorsed by the best authorities. No soggy vegetables. No burnt or tough meats. No odors. No pots or pans to scour. No scalded hands. No standing over a hot stove. Any dish may be removed without disturbing the others. To introduce this MATCHLESS HOUSEHOLD ARTICLE to UNION SIGNAL readers, we make the following offer for a limited time: To the first person applying from each town, we will furnish our $5.50 Cooker complete for $3.00! Write for circular giving full particulars, also opinions on steam cooking by eminent authorities. Money refunded if not as represented.

P. J. PHILLIPS & CO.,
209 E. Kinzie St., CHICAGO.
Agents wanted everywhere. Excellent opportunity. Liberal terms.

KINDLY MENTION THE UNION SIGNAL WHEN WRITING ADVERTISERS.

THE DOOM OF KING ALCOHOL

By Mrs. Clara Drake.

A DELIGHTFUL DRAMA FOR AN EVENING'S ENTERTAINMENT

Young People's Societies

Will find this especially adapted to their work.

Price, 10 cents.

Woman's Temperance Publishing Ass'n,

CHICAGO.

SPECIAL

Anti-Cigaret

NUMBER OF

The Young Crusader

WILL BE THE

February Issue

Place your orders at once so that the papers for distribution on ANTI-CIGARET SUNDAY, March 1st, will reach you promptly.

Price, $2.00 per hundred

Woman's Temperance Publishing Association,

Chicago, Illinois.

W. C. T. U. Notes.

The mid-winter executive committee meeting of Wisconsin W. C. T. U. will be held in Milwaukee the last of January.

Invitations have been issued for a reception to Cook county, Ill., officers January 27 at the home of Mrs. Clayton E. Crafts, Austin.

The Gordon L. T. L. of Newark, N. J., has presented a picture of Frances E. Willard to the Miller Street public school of that city.

Madam Jarley's wax works were given for a public entertainment at West Paris, Me., by the W. C. T. U. A good sum was secured for the treasury.

Unions of the Ninth, Tenth and Fifteenth wards of the city of Rochester, N. Y., have united to purchase a drinking fountain for the north part of the city.

Mound City, Kan., held a mother's meeting on Madam Willard's birthday. Forty-three women in attendance showed a good interest, and they will come again.

Illinois' mid-winter meeting convenes in Springfield February 10. An evening meeting addressed by Miss Brehm will be held in connection with the latter.

Dr. E. O. Taylor, of Boston, is doing most satisfactory work through Tennessee by his scientific temperance addresses. He is in the state under W. C. T. U. auspices.

A medal contest, given at Woodstown, N. J., under the management of the superintendent, Miss Alice Barton, netted the society the sum of $87. The medal was won by Miss Florence Turner.

The union of Denver, Colo., is preparing a bill to be presented to the incoming legislature, for the protection of birds. The secretary of the State Humane Society is co-operating with the organization.

Madison, Wis., union is co-operating with the Consumers' League and the Women's Club in pressing before the coming session of the legislature the demand for the enactment of a better compulsory education law.

The Delaware W. C. T. U. will act with the directorate of the new State Temperance Alliance and circulate petitions to the legislature asking that body to exercise the constitutional provision concerning local option.

Mrs. Mary E. Kuhl, National superintendent of the department of Work Among Miners, is afield in Illinois. She will spend a week at Owanaco, going from there to Illiopolis, Pawnee, Oblong, Robinson and other points.

Among the many unions that honorder Mothers' Day, the birthday of Madam Willard, with special programs, were the Ashland, Wis., and San Jose, Cal. At the latter meeting Miss Effie D. Whitman read a paper, a sympathetic sketch of the "Great Mother."

The Birmingham, Ala., W. C. T. U. has a noble institution in its Mercy Home for women and children. It includes outcasts in its care as well. Mrs. Spencer, state president, has always been its president. The building and grounds, worth $30,000, are free from debt, and the deed stipulates that in case of the disbandment of the local union, which has founded and mothered it, the property shall revert to the State Union.

Regular visits to the prison, barrels, boxes and money sent to the Kentucky mountain mission, New Year's letters sent to 125 railroad employes, literature distributed in large quantities, are some of the results of the work of the Y at Norristown, Pa., for the month of December.

Miss Elizabeth W. Greenwood has just finished over two weeks of gospel services in Poughkeepsie, N. Y. Her meetings have been largely attended. At one of the meetings given over to the local W. C. T. U. she repeated her Texas Convention sermon, "Where to Put the Emphasis in Life."

The W. C. T. U. of Council Bluffs, Ia., observed the week of prayer by holding cottage meetings every afternoon. The first meeting was held with "Grandmother" Rice, a charter member of the organization, who is now in her ninety-third year. A different subject and leader was chosen for each meeting.

Each union in Grant county, Wis., was asked to choose one week in January for a week of prayer. The Platteville union reports excellent results. The pastors of the city gave hearty co-operation. An effort to increase UNION SIGNAL readers in Platteville was sucessful, as a list of new subscribers testifies.

"He captivated his audience with his first sentence," is what an exchange says of Mr. R. Foster Stone. Mr. Stone speaks on topics of practical benefit to the W. C. T. U. His dates are not all filled for this winter and spring. He can be addressed at Green City, Mo., by those wishing to secure information as to dates and terms.

The Owatonna, Minnesota, union, through its new press superintendent, Mrs. J. M. Thompson, reports twenty-three active members and much activity. The study of the state laws, current events, and department work make the regular meetings profitable, and a public meeting in the Congregational church, for the study of anti-narcotics, was a financial success as well as educative. A public meeting and a silver medal contest are planned as a part of the union's work for no license at the spring election.

The Portland, Me., "Daily Press" gives the following interesting account of the "send off" given the 108th Company of Coast Artillery of Fort Williams, on the eve of their departure for the Philippines, by the local W. C. T. U. "The entertainment was arranged by the W. C. T. U. of this city and was in every way a most pleasing event. All of the soldiers were presented with comfort bags and all that they should contain, and other gifts from the W. C. T. U. of Portland, which they will take with them to the islands of the Pacific. During the evening there was a musical entertainment furnished by the soldiers and by Mrs. V. K. Rollins, Mrs. E. L. Burnham, Miss Elizabeth McGregor and others. A bountiful supper was served the soldiers at the Dairy Lunch, where they were the guests of the local union. A C. T. U. in the 108th Company was formed, comprising thirty out of the 100 members of the company and this union was called the Mary S. Burnham Union, after the president of the local union."

(Continued on page 12.)

COUGHS,
Bronchitis, Hoarseness, Sore Throat, Effectively Relieved
BROWN'S BRONCHIAL TROCHES
Fac-Simile Signature of John B. Brown Son on every box.

LADIES—STUDY AT HOME
TRAIN TO NURSE
Use leisure hours to become independent. Every woman inexperienced or experienced in nursing should receive a thorough course of theoretical training before assuming the responsibility of ministering to the sick. Our course universally endorsed by physicians and surgeons as practical and easy of comprehension. Our faculty, leading physicians and surgeons of Chicago. Our scholars enthusiastic in our support. Diploma. Catalogue free.
American Cor. School for Nurses, O—167 Dearborn, Chicago.

MADE $105 THE FIRST MONTH

writes FRED. BLODGETT, of N. Y. J. L. BARRICK, of La., writes: "Am making $3.00 to $8.00 every day I work." MRS. L. M. ANDERSON, of Iowa, writes: "I made $3.80 to $6.50 a day." Hundreds doing likewise. So can you. $5.00 to $10.00 daily made plating jewelry, tableware, bicycles, metal goods with gold, silver, nickel, etc. Enormous demand. We teach you Write—offer free. FREE.
G. GRAY & CO., Plating Works, A Miami Bldg., Cincinnati, O.

PAPER JARDINIERES, a New

Flower Pot Cover Adjustable to any size Flower Pots, (large or small). A pretty device to hide the unsightly appearance of the common flower pot. A protection from frost or heat. One dozen assorted colors and designs in neat folding box, convenient for mailing. Sent to any address.

Postpaid 30c per doz

Send coin or money order. No stamps.
STRONGHURST M'F'G. CO. Dept. G.
Stronghurst, Ill., U. S. A. Agents wanted

The New Regulator
on the Sure Hatch is really automatic and direct acting—greatest improvement of years. Don't pay double price for old style machines. Get our book and free trial offer.
SURE HATCH INCUBATOR CO., Clay Center, Neb., or Columbus, Ohio.

The Young Crusader

Official Organ of the

Loyal Temperance Legion

Attractive, Entertaining, Instructive

A valuable magazine for the young people, and one which should be in every White Ribboner's home. Write us for sample copies, and send in your subscription to commence with the January number.

Price, 25c Per Year.

Woman's Temperance Publishing Ass'n
CHICAGO, ILL.

SKIN DISEASES CURED
MEXICAN PALMA SALVE will positively cure
Tetter, Erysipelas, Salt Rheum, ScaldHead, Itch, Ringworms, Ulcers, Burns, Scalps, Barber's Itch, Ulcers in the Ear, Pimples or Blotches on the Face, Sore Nose and Sore Eyelids, Corns, PILES and all Eruptions of the Skin.
It removes all Ugly Blotches, Pimples, Roughness and Redness of the Skin and effectually heals all Scaly, Tettery Eruptions, cooling the irritation and making the skin beautifully fair and smooth.

Chapped Hands
will be relieved with one or two applications, and made soft and white with two days' treatment.

Red and Rough Hands
made soft and white with two days' treatment, and will remain white with occasional applications of the salve.

Special Offer.
To introduce this excellent salve to the readers of the Union Signal, we will send our regular 25c. box for 12c. in stamps. Send NOW, to
LA PALMA PERFUMERY CO.
1106, 184 La Salle Street, Chicago, Ill.

INDIVIDUAL CUP COMMUNION SERVICE Should be used by every church. Complete outfit sent for trial upon request. THOMAS COMMUNION SERVICE CO., Box 75, Lima, O.

LEARN PROOFREADING.
If you possess a fair education, why not utilize it at a genteel and uncrowded profession paying $15 to $35 weekly? Situations always obtainable. We are the original instructors by mail.
HOME CORRESPONDENCE SCHOOL, Philadelphia

25 CTS. PISO'S CURE FOR CURES WHERE ALL ELSE FAILS. Best Cough Syrup. Tastes Good. Use in time. Sold by druggists. CONSUMPTION 25 CTS.

The Skin

PEARLINE does not injure the hands in the least.
Mrs. Rev. B. M. N.

We use PEARLINE for bathing, and find it excellent—do not like to bathe without it.
Rev. H. D. S.

Two of the Millions. 687

(Continued from page 11.)

A request comes that temperance papers and literature be sent to J. B. Rayner, Calvert, Tex., that he may put them into the homes of the colored people throughout the state. Mr. Rayner has opened a bureau of temperance and prohibition for the enlightenment of the negro voter.

Mrs. S. L. Oberholtzer, World's and National superintendent of School Savings Banks, lectured recently on school savings in the auditorium of the high school in Holyoke, Mass., to an audience of teachers and school authorities. The lecture was under the auspices of the Holyoke W. C. T. U., ever active in good work. The people were much interested in the savings system as presented by Mrs. Oberholtzer, and expect to place it in their public schools this winter.

Texas has been suffering from injury to its crops by the boll weevil, so much so that the attention of naturalists has been called to it. A crusade is being started against the killing of birds, as they destroy the insects and save the plants. A bill for bird protection will be presented to the state legislature, and will have the indorsement and work of the W. C. T. U. Miss Eula Turner, a young schoolgirl, daughter of the editor of the Texas "White Ribbon," is the state superintendent of Mercy, and will push work for the bill and for the education of the people to this needed legislation.

The impetus given to the contest work in the state of Illinois by receiving the National banner at Portland, Me., is becoming manifest by a larger number of contests having been held during November and December than during the same months in any previous year. There seems to be a determination on the part of the women of the local unions to keep this banner in the state. In a letter sent by the state officials to the local unions medal contests are emphasized. An effort is being made to have each union in the state take up the work. Many contests will be held at the county institutes.

The report on medal contest work from the state of Tennessee the past year shows an increase three times that of the previous year. If the well-formulated plans of the state superintendent, Mrs. Patton, accomplish what she hopes and believes they will, they will make a record that has never been excelled by any state. Mrs. Patton recently ordered several hundred recitation books and quantities of the circulars of instructions and rules. She has a printed circular that will be sent to every teacher of the public schools in the state. She will donate the books provided they will promise to hold one contest during the year. The state is furnishing means to carry out this plan. We expect to hear of wonderful results.

The Frances E. Willard National Temperance Hospital.

A WELL attended business meeting the first Monday in January followed by a joint meeting of the staff of physicians and members of the board, betokens applied energy and consequently good results.

The evening of March 21 an entertainment, "Impersonations of David Harum," will be given at Steinway Hall for the benefit of our hospital, under the supervision of Mrs. F. L. Bailey, who comes to us highly recommended by reliable persons.

Good music may be expected. Come and enjoy a good laugh and help along a most worthy cause. A lecture on "Yellowstone Park," is also being arranged for, the date to be about February 15. Further notice of this lecture will be given in an early issue of THE UNION SIGNAL. Tickets for this illustrated lecture will be sold at the exceedingly low price of twenty-five cents, and we shall certainly expect the liberal patronage of all our friends and acquaintances.

At a recent class quiz the physician in charge expressed himself as much gratified at the ready answers from the nurses. Our training school is in a most satisfactory condition under the able management of the superintendent, Miss Amelia Graessle, whose articles on "Home Nursing" will appear in the Monthly Magazine Number of THE UNION SIGNAL. These can not fail to be of value to mothers, upon whom a large share of the family nursing must inevitably fall.

Our non-alcoholic principles were taken by advanced thinkers when the theory was exceedingly unpopular; perhaps few, even of our own temperance people, have realized how hard advancement has been against public opinion, but the movement has gained ground among those physicians standing high in the profession. We receive many letters saying "We have no physician in our town who does not recommend liquors, or is silent upon the subject." Here is work for our women! Send to Mrs. Martha Allen for leaflets, and give them out freely; see what the medical journals are saying about the matter, insist upon your physician having the subject discussed, and if he sees that you are in earnest and will have yourself and family treated strictly from a non-alcoholic standpoint, he will very soon find something "just as good" that will be perfectly safe.

The hospital looks forward to a most successful year. What can you do to help, in influence, in work, in money? None of us are helpless to help a little. Yours for service,

MRS. MARGARET INGLEHART,
President.

Lord Methuen on Temperance.

THE value of the Royal Army Temperance Association of the British Army is well set forth in a recent address delivered at Bristol, England, by General Lord Methuen. He said when first the Army Temperance Association was started he had the honor and pleasure of being asked to serve upon its council, and he thought it was only right of him, as one of the council, to let a large assemblage like that know what progress temperance had made in the army. They had as a council to go on the lines that Lord Roberts had started in India for temperance. Lord Roberts had not only spoken in favor of temperance, but he had taken a thoroughly practical interest in it. As time went on Lord Roberts became commander-in-chief; in the course of things he became president of their council, and on that council they had the chaplain-general and other generals, and last, but not least, a number of very good and earnest warrant officers whose example in every-day life amongst their comrades, he would undertake to say, did as much as the work of any one member of the council.

With regard to the details of temperance in the army, they had 40,000 total abstainers in the army. They paid 4d a month, and the amount that they got from that came to rather over $40,000 a year. Government had given them $3,850 annual grant, and they also allow them, wherever possible, a temperance room in the barracks. At their last annual meeting they asked that, if possible, they should be able to find funds in order to give them one room in each of the barracks that were built. Their secretary, with an activity which did credit to the exhilarating force of non-alcoholic drinks, went to the Cape and succeeded in raising $5,050, and, while remaining there seven months, he succeeded in forming fifty branches of the society.

What did he, as a soldier, think temperance did for him? Well, it did for the army what it did for all civilians—it saved the prison, it saved the hospital, and it economized. On service, too, it gave him a man far more reliable than the man who would be soaked in drink. Temperance saved his wastage; that is to say, he did not have so many men leaving the front for hospital or prison, and he told them what it also did—that whatever country they fought in, the civilians in that province would not suffer the terrible cruelties and horrors that accompanied wars in times past, and which were often attributable to an army soaked in drink. Then, if he looked at temperance from the smallest point of view, he said that as a soldier it was the finest means he knew towards the end—that end being to make a reliable and intelligent man. But if he looked at it from a far nobler point of view, he recollected, surely, that the civilians sent to them many thousand lads every year, and surely just as they sent their lads to school, and expected to get them back morally, mentally and physically fitter at the end of their school time than when they went there, so surely he to whom they gave the care of their lads from that city was bound to return them those lads as men with a finer mental and physical and moral equipment than when they came to him.

He considered it a reflection on the army if any man were to come back to his home after leaving them, having joined the army with pure thoughts, and be able to say to his people, "All my coarse and impure mind I gained from contact with my comrades in the army."

THEY GUARANTEE TO CURE RHEUMATISM. SEE AD OF JEBB REMEDY CO., Battle Creek, on page 11.

The Value of Charcoal.

Few People Know How Useful it is in Preserving Health and Beauty.

Nearly everybody knows that charcoal is the safest and most efficient disinfectant and purifier in nature, but few realize its value when taken into the human system for the same cleansing purpose.

Charcoal is a remedy that the more you take of it the better; it is not a drug at all, but simply absorbs the gases and impurities always present in the stomach and intestines and carries them out of the system.

Charcoal sweetens the breath after smoking, drinking, or after eating onions and other odorous vegetables.

Charcoal effectually clears and improves the complexion, it whitens the teeth and further acts as a natural and eminently safe cathartic.

It absorbs the injurious gases which collect in the stomach and bowels; it disinfects the mouth and throat from the poison of catarrh.

All druggists sell charcoal in one form or another, but probably the best charcoal and the most for the money is in Stuart's Absorbent Lozenges; they are composed of the finest powdered Willow charcoal, and other harmless antiseptics in tablet form, or rather in the form of large, pleasant tasting lozenges, the charcoal being mixed with honey.

The daily use of these lozenges will soon tell in a much improved condition of the general health, better complexion, sweeter breath and purer blood, and the beauty of it is, that no possible harm can result from their continued use, but, on the contrary, great benefit.

A Buffalo physician in speaking of the benefits of charcoal, says: "I advise Stuart's Absorbent Lozenges to all patients suffering from gas in stomach and bowels, and to clear the complexion and purify the breath, mouth and throat; I also believe the liver is greatly benefited by the daily use of them; they cost but twenty-five cents a box at drug stores, and although in some sense a patent preparation, yet I believe I get more and better charcoal in Stuart's Absorbent Lozenges than in any of the ordinary charcoal tablets."

Mrs. Eugene Field once asked her husband to watch some pies for her a minute. On returning, she was surprised to find the oven door wide open and the meringue flat. "They're ruined!" she exclaimed in dismay. "Why didn't you keep the oven door shut?" "Keep the door shut!" Mr. Field repeated, in very genuine amazement. "Why, you told me to watch them every instant; and I'd like to know how I could do that with the oven door shut!" —New York Times.

Responsive Readings

Published Monthly.

Designed for the use of local unions and of great aid to workers, as they contain information wholly upon the work of the departments of the W. C. T. U.

SUBSCRIPTION PRICE:

Single Copies, per year	$ .10
13 Copies, per year, to one address	1.00
100 of this issue	.50

Subject for January Reading,

The Work for the Promotion of Purity in Literature and Art.

By Emilie D. Martin.

Woman's Temperance Publishing Association,

184 LA SALLE ST., CHICAGO, ILL.

THE OPTIMISTS' CLUB.

By JOHN F. COWAN, D.D.

AT the last meeting of the club a Searchlight committee was appointed to scan the newspapers for stray croppings of the millennium. They weren't silly enough to expect to find under the first page headlines any gleams of hopefulness bright enough to call out the fire department, so they poked their noses into all the out-of-the-way corners of newspaperdom, and hidden between advertisements, and in solid nonpariel type, they found finds that sent them back to the club with seven-league strides and full-moon smiles on their countenances.

President Happyface called the meeting to order by starting the music-box to playing "There's a Good Time Coming; Help It On," and after the roll-call and a reprimand to Brother Bill (full name Bilious) Temperament for saying, just after eating heartily of a Welsh rarebit, that he was afraid the world was going to the bow-wows, the report of the Searchlight committee was called for.

Dr. Serene Hope said: "Fifty-four street drinking fountains for man and beast are maintained in Chicago by the Humane Society. You'd think from your morning paper that the only fountains were those run by an inhumane society, to make beasts of men."

The cheery tones of John Beaming-eye broke in with: "John Wanamaker has built an $84,000 'John Chambers Memorial' church in Philadelphia. All the Johns worth mentioning are not prize-fighters or political bosses."

A little man boiling over with a big enthusiasm arose. "Deacon Hilarious Giver," said the president. "Why, bless your life!" exclaimed the deacon, "the Johns haven't a monopoly of philanthropy. William Waldorf Astor has given $250,000 for an out-patient department for a London hospital, as a memorial for his deceased daughter, Gwendolin."

Mrs. Confidence Smyle wanted to add to the roll of generous givers Major Alexander Shaw, of Baltimore, who recently left by will $50,000 for Baltimore Woman's College, and $10,000 for Pennington Seminary.

"And I have learned of another Methodist layman," said Professor Gladheart, "who has pledged Bishop Thoburn $100,000 for educational work in India."

"The Methodists are so jubilant over completing their $20,000,000 jubilee fund," added Deaconess Delight Do-something, "that they propose to raise a $5,000,000 ministerial aid fund, just to keep their hand in."

"And to keep their frontier ministers in—grub," whispered a facetious member.

Mr. O. B. Cheerful had just been down Fitchburg, Mass., way, where a woman's club had undertaken to beautify the high school grounds. Miss Fay gave $10,000, and Mr. Rodney Wallace built a splendid approach costing $30,000.

"And I am called to witness," said Miss Daily Thankful Frame, "that Mr. and Mrs. Halls, of Brooklyn, have added $125,000 to the $700,000 George I. Seney gave to the hospital that bears his name."

A little man with sanguine hair and complexion and a round, sunbeam countenance had been bobbing up repeatedly, but there seemed to be small hope of getting the president's eye unless he did the Zaccheus act, so rapidly had the others reported. "I can put the cap-sheaf on all this," he stammered excitedly. "Over $77,000,000 were given in 1902, in sums of $10,000 and upwards, for education, charity and religion. It might have reached the $123,000,000 record of 1901 if Andy Carnegie could have found more places willing to take libraries. Only $4,000,000 was given for libraries last year, as against over $15,000,000 the year before."

"That's Harry Heartsome," whispered a member to your reporter. "The blues and he can't live in the same house."

"I think," remarked President Happyface, "that we must call this our 'Kingdom-come Givers' Meeting.' Let me add my mite. I know a large manufacturing concern that for twenty-five years has been giving its employes Christmas presents. It has built an auditorium for them, and this year it invited the men and their families to a Christmas dinner and gave 7,000 gifts to the children. I thank the committee for its good report, and now—"

"Wait! wait! Mr. President, are we going to forget about the $4,000,000 profit-sharing scheme the steel trust has offered its 168,000 employes, and the pensions the Standard Oil Company is going to give its men after they are sixty-four?"

"But there is too much good being done in this old world to tell it all in one meeting, the pessimists to the contrary. The club will vote in new members at its next meeting. Each candidate must tell one optimistic fact."

Boston.

Veterans and the Canteen

COL. C. C. HORTON, governor of the Marshalltown, Ia., Soldiers' Home, has made a public statement concerning his regulation of that institution, which speaks volumes for temperance and against the canteen. He says firmly:

"If ever any attempt were made to foist a canteen onto this home, after the splendid manner in which it has vindicated the honor of the Grand Army veteran and his natural love for good citizenship, I would walk out the next day, and every inmate of the place would follow me. But our board of control and the people of the state of Iowa would never consent to such a change.

"My old comrades have all my sympathy; those of them who have, unfortunately, succumbed to the drink habit have my pity as well, but these feelings are overbalanced by what I owe, as commandant of this home, to the vast majority of self-respecting, noble, patient old men. If a man here falls once I do everything to reclaim him. If I find that it is impossible to restrain him, then he is discharged.

"Discipline has put the home where it is to-day. I have brought my old army experience into play and never try to surround the old soldiers with any show of physical force. I simply put them on their honor and leave the bars down. The system has worked wonders. The men are not watched. They are free to go and come as they please within the regulation hours. My observation has been that there is only one way to act with them. Bars and penalties will not cure, but put them on their honor as soldiers and they respond eagerly and with tears in their eyes.

"No officer of this home, in my knowledge, has ever spoken a harsh word to an inmate. I consider that the absence of a canteen means the removal of constant temptation to men weak physically and mentally, a temptation that few outsiders can understand.

"In my opinion, based not only on my experience in the Civil War, but during the last twenty-five years spent more or less among my comrades of those campaigns, the canteen is the curse of the veterans' homes of this country. Take it away, appeal to the honor of the men and at one blow you demolish the source of all the crimes, all the disturbances, all the scandals and all the shame that have overwhelmed more than one institution.

"It is claimed that men will get drunk, canteen or no canteen, but the truth of the matter is, and none know it better than old army men, that with the temptation removed from under their noses, nine-tenths of those who would otherwise drink to excess do not drink at all."

Crowned.

Mrs. Emma Smith Somers, of Wichita, Kan., passed to her heavenly home January 5, 1903. Mrs. Somers had been for two years the efficient state superintendent of the department of Sabbath Observance. She was an earnest worker and a woman of great ability, having successfully filled many county and district offices. At her request the Wichita W. C. T. U. assisted at the burial services.

Mrs. Hannah Elliott Sleeper, president of the W. C. T. U., at Baldwin, Kan., passed away January 5, 1903, after a brief illness. She was a member of the Quaker Church and for several years president of their Missionary Board. During this time she made two trips to Alaska, rendering valuable assistance to the missionaries there. She was a charter member of the Baldwin W. C. T. U. Her life was spent in doing good and in home, church and W. C. T. U. she will be greatly missed.

Mrs. Eleanor Hall Wright, of Saratoga Springs, N. Y., passed from labor to reward January 12, 1903. She had been for five years county evangelist and superintendent of the department of Proportionate and Systematic Giving for Saratoga county, and will be greatly missed by the members of the organization to which she gave such faithful, untiring service.

Mr. A. Dickinson, father of Mrs. Helen D. Harford, state president of Oregon, passed away suddenly on December 27th, at his home in Kansas City, Mo. He had all his life been a strong temperance advocate. His more than eighty-two years of kindly thought for others brought to him a peaceful, happy ending.

The Stronghurst Manufacturing Co., Stronghurst, Ill., manufacture a paper jardiniere to be placed around the ordinary clay flower pot. They are made in different colors and designs and lend additional beauty to the flowers. Any one raising plants for indoor display should not be without a supply of these serviceable articles on hand. See their ad in this issue.

"I have given the Hygienic Steam Cooker, advertised in THE UNION SIGNAL, a thorough test and find it perfectly satisfactory. Five articles (including onions and a delicate pudding) were cooked at the same time, with no mingling of odors, a fact that seems incredible to the average housekeeper. The maker claims this advantage for his article over all similar inventions, and I have given it a practical demonstration. Making due allowance for the extra time required to cook by steam, there is still a considerable saving of fuel where gas is burned. I have no hesitancy in recommending the Hygienic Steam Cooker.—Mrs. Cornelia T. Jewett.

The Right Thing.

A New CATARRH CURE, Which is Rapidly Coming to the Front.

For several years, Eucalyptol Guaiacol and Hydrastin have been recognized as standard remedies for catarrhal troubles, but they have always been given separately and only very recently an ingenious chemist succeeded in combining them, together with other antiseptics into a pleasant effective tablet.

Druggists sell the remedy under the name of Stuart's Catarrh Tablets and it has met with remarkable success in the cure of nasal catarrh, bronchial and throat catarrh and in catarrh of the stomach.

Mr. F. N. Benton, whose address is care of Clark House, Troy, N. Y., says: "When I run up against anything that is good I like to tell people of it. I have been troubled with catarrh more or less for some time. Last winter more than ever. Tried several so-called cures, but did not get any benefit from them. About six weeks ago I bought a 50 cent box of Stuart's Catarrh Tablets and am glad to say that they have done wonders for me and I do not hesitate to let all my friends know that Stuart's Catarrh Tablets are the right thing."

Mr. Geo. J. Casanova of hotel Griffon, West 9th street, New York City, writes: "I have commenced using Stuart's Catarrh Tablets and already they have given me better results than any catarrh cure I have eved tried."

A leading physician of Pittsburg advises the use of Stuart's Catarrh Tablets in preference to any other treatment for catarrh of the head, throat or stomach.

He claims they are far superior to inhalers, salves, lotions or powder, and are much more convenient and pleasant to take and are so harmless that little children take them with benefit as they contain no opiate, cocaine or any poisonous drugs.

All druggists sell Stuart's Catarrh Tablets at 50 cents for full size package and they are probably the safest and most reliable cure for any form of catarrh.

$20 A WEEK Straight salary and expenses to men with rig to introduce our Poultry Mixture in country; year's contract; weekly pay. Address, with stamp, Monarch Mfg. Co., Box 1166, Springfield, Ill.

KINDLY MENTION THE UNION SIGNAL WHEN WRITING ADVERTISERS.

LADIES to do piecework at their homes. We furnish all material and pay from $7 to $12 weekly. Experience unnecessary. Send stamped envelope to ROYAL CO., Dept. U.S., 34 Monroe Street, Chicago, Ill.

KINDLY MENTION THE UNION SIGNAL WHEN WRITING ADVERTISERS.

CHIRON LUBRICATING PILE CONE

A small, hollow, perforated wooden cone, filled with the Chiron Ointment, especially prepared for the purpose. Perfect and continuous lubrication by soothing and healing ointment directly to the sore spots. Endorsed by physicians. Immediate relief and a certain cure for ALL KINDS OF PILES. By mail, securely sealed in plain wrapper, with extra box of ointment, $3, P. O. or Exp. Order.

The CHIRON Mfg. Co., Plainfield, N. J.

KINDLY MENTION THE UNION SIGNAL WHEN WRITING ADVERTISERS.

BURPEE'S Largest Mail-Order Seed House in the World. ☞ In buying BURPEE'S SEEDS direct by mail you get your money's worth in the Best Seeds that Grow—and you have your choice of Rare Novelties for 1903, which cannot be had elsewhere. Write to-day (a postal card will do) for our complete catalogue —FREE to all who intend to purchase seeds. W. ATLEE BURPEE & CO., Philadelphia.

The Editor's Question Box.

THE editors of THE UNION SIGNAL desire to know positively just what features of the paper are pleasing to its readers; whether or not it is meeting the needs of the great organization it represents. To this end we solicit definite answers to the list of questions appended herewith. We desire the suggestions, commendations, critcisms, complaints and requests of our subscribers, that we may be mutually benefited.

1. Which of the four numbers of THE UNION SIGNAL published in December did you like best, and which did you like least, and why?

2. Which article in these four numbers did you like best, and which did you like least, and why?

3. Which feature of the Magazine number, January 1, did you like best, and which did you like least, and why? Would you like to have the Monthly Magazine number continued?

4. What feature of THE UNION SIGNAL do you find most helpful, and what, if any, feature is not to your liking, and why?

5. Have you approved of the changes in the typographical appearance of THE UNION SIGNAL during the past six months, and do you wish to have it continued in its present form?

6. What suggestion can you make that, in your opinion, would improve THE UNION SIGNAL and make it more valuable to its readers?

7. Is every member of your Union a subscriber to THE UNION SIGNAL, and, if not, why not?

8. Has every member of your Union been asked to subscribe to THE UNION SIGNAL under the various special offers made? If not, why not?

9. Has every member of your Union seen a copy of THE UNION SIGNAL during the past six months? Sample copies may be had for the asking.

10. Have you, as an interested worker, made an effort to extend the influence of your National Official Organ, and if so, how? What plan would, in your opinion, be most effective in adding 50,000 new subscribers to our list?

To secure these replies promptly we make the following offers, good until February 15, 1903:

For the best answer to the set of ten questions, $5.00.

For the second best answer to the set of ten questions, $3.00.

For the third best answer to the set of ten questions, $2.00.

These answers will be carefully considered by a committee of three and the awards will be announced in our March Magazine number.

Answers received later than February 15 cannot be entered. Address all communications on this subject to Editor's Question Box, UNION SIGNAL Office, 184 La Salle St., Chicago.

About Women

A working girl's home in Boston which shall charge only enough to meet the running expenses is an innovation in that city. If any surplus remains over rates charged it will be used to increase the comforts of the home.

Postmaster General Payne has directed the removal from the department at Washington of all women whose husbands are in the government service, and in fact, all women who have husbands to care for them.

The oldest daughter of the late Frederick Krupp, the famous gunmaker of Germany, is the principal heir to her father's vast estates. Miss Bertha Krupp is but 17 years old, and her inheritance makes her the world's richest girl.

Mrs. A. F. Rowley, of De Kalb, Ill., has become an expert basket maker. She has originated a number of new figures and shapes in raffia work and has just produced a collection of pieces that have won unstinted praise from all who have seen them.

A petition to parliament asking for the franchise has been presented by 66,800 women, textile workers of the English counties of Lancashire, Yorkshire and Cheshire, with the declaration added that "the right to vote is of vital importance to women engaged in the industrial struggle for existence."

The inauguration of the rural mail delivery has benefited many women who have been employed by the government as carriers. Already women carriers have been found satisfactory, and draw the same salary as the men. They wear an official uniform of light gray cloth, and are as attractively attired as the men.

The Newport News Shipbuilding and Dry Dock Company has instituted a trial of women's services in their shipbuilding plant, never before tried. They have put a score of girls to work in the drafting department of tracers, and if the experiment is successful there will be enough added to bring the number to one hundred.

A woman in Indiana has an odd lawsuit on her hands. She gave her brother a remedy to cure him of the liquor habit. The remedy proved effective. Now the brother claims that he did not wish to be cured of the drink habit, was not aware that the cure was being administered to him and has sued his sister for $5,000 for his loss of appetite.

Miss Blanche Ferguson, a comely young notary public in St. Louis, Mo., sentenced a refractory witness to jail for contempt for refusing to answer questions. The unwilling witness was a clerk in the Election Commissioner's office. He spent over an hour behind the bars and then decided it best to obey the mandate of the stern notary.

On the eightieth birthday of Mrs. Julia A. Carney, who wrote the old school day's song "Little Drops of Water, Little Grains of Sand," the school children of the United States will give their pennies to present her with a memorial. She wrote the song fifty years ago, it has been translated into many languages and sung in them all. Her birthday is next April.

By the will of Alida Van Schaick $30,000 goes to the Board of Foreign Missions of the Reformed Church in America, $12,000 to the Board of Education, the income to be used to maintain scholarships in the theological seminary of the church in New Brunswick, N. J., and $12,000 to maintain scholarships in the Western Theological Seminary of the church, of Holland, Mich.

"Burpee's Seeds Grow."

This famous motto of an equally famous seed house is true in a double sense; for not only do Burpee's seeds grow when planted, but they grow constantly and very rapidly, year by year, in the favor and confidence of all who cultivate vegetables and flowers. So intimately is the name of this house associated with all that is best in seeds, that the advent of Burpee's Farm Annual is awaited each year, as an event of real importance in planting circles. Of this publication—well known and universally spoken of as "The Leading American Seed Catalogue" — the 1903 issue is especially noteworthy. It is an elegant book of 184 pages, with beautiful colored plates; a veritable store-house of valuable information regarding choice flower and vegetable seeds, andmailed free to planters everywhere. It is much to be recognized as the largest mail-order seed house in the world, but it is yet more to mail all over the world "The Best Seeds That Grow." Both of these distinctions can be truthfully claimed by BURPEE, Philadelphia.

One of the best governed communities in the Russian empire, the interior minister reports, is that of Nikolskoye, in the district of Rybinsk. The men of the place are all employed in the factories of large cities or in business in Moscow and St. Petersburg. The women run the affairs of the community, meet in council, elect officials and, according to the interior minister, do it splendidly.

In response to the question, "Should a Woman Marry a Man Who Drinks?" asked of its readers by the Philadelphia "North American," Mrs. Mary S. Wright, press superintendent of Camden county, N. J., W. C. T. U., responded "No," emphatically from scientific and hereditary reasons. It was the most intelligent and convincing letter of the large number published and was given the central position of the page.

The board of education of New York city has served notice on all women teachers that if they marry while in the service of the public schools, they will be dismissed from the service. The resolution as passed reads as follows: "Resolved, That no woman principal, woman head of department, or woman member of the teaching or supervising staff shall marry while in the service, and such a marriage shall be reported to the board of education, which may direct that charges be preferred against such teacher."

Miss Helen M. Gould received as a New Year's gift a handsome loving cup, which was presented to her by 319 enlisted men in the United States army who are stationed at Fort Slocum, on the sound. These soldiers belong to the Eighty-first coast artillery and companies A, B, C, and D of the Sixteenth infantry, and have recently returned from three years' service in Luzon. The cup is of solid silver and bears the following inscription:

"Miss Helen Miller Gould, with New Year's greetings from the enlisted men at Fort Slocum, N. Y., 1903."

Miss Jessie Luther, curator of the Labor museum, at Hull house, Chicago, has been engaged to spend a week at the settlement of the Colorado Fuel and Iron Company, Pueblo, Colo., teaching the families of employes the art of spinning and weaving. The concern, which employs several thousand men, is engaged in numerous projects for improving the lot of the workingmen, and for this purpose maintains a "sociological department," including a staff of instructors in various crafts. The company heard of the success of Miss Luther's introduction of the Italian methods of spinning wool and weaving, and immediately asked her to undertake to start the wives and daughters of their employes in the same kind of work.

Club women of Colorado are interested and active in a measure to preserve the belongings of the Cliff Dwellers and save them from destruction. The best of these ruins are located in southwestern Colorado and northern New Mexico. Many houses remain in part, and bone knives, wooden spoons and other utensils are found. The largest of the ruins is called the Cliff Palace; it contains 125 rooms on the ground floor, and it is estimated housed 1,000 people. The Cliff Dwellers' association has been formed of women, with Mrs. Gilbert McClurg as regent, to push the undertaking in the shape of bills through the Colorado legislature and the United States congress. Ellis Meredith writes very interestingly on this subject, in Pearson's Magazine.

From Boston comes the news of an innovation in the form of the woman elevator operator. An official in a company that makes elevators was asked if he thought there was any likelihood of elevator girls for New York. "There aren't any yet," he said, "but I see no reason why there shouldn't be. Of course a girl couldn't run the sort of car that has to be hauled up and down by main strength with a rope, but many of the cars these days travel through eighteen and twenty more stories under the control of a man who doesn't use any strength at all. A metal crank does the work, and a child could do the physical part of it as well as anybody. The operator simply has to have a level head, and if the head's a girl's, it is just as good as though it were a man's, isn't it?"

Latest Leaflets

Home Leaflets For Mothers' Meetings

No. 3 The New Century for Mothers. Mrs. Nettie B. Fernald.

No. 13 Why a Mothers' Meeting? Mrs. J. H. Myers.

Price, 3c. each; 50, 50c.; 100, 75c.

Mothers' Meetings, Purity Leaflet

No. 3 Safeguard the Home. Mrs. Emma W. Shores.

Price 2c. each; 100, 50c.

National Leaflets

No. 2 Suggestions for Treasurers. Mrs. Helen M. Barker.

No. 31 The Philosophy of Fashion — What Shall We Wear? Louise C. Purington, M. D.

No. 94 American Liberty—Will Alcohol Help the Soldier Maintain It? Mrs. Mary H. Hunt.

No. 95 A Double Jury on Woman Suffrage. Amos Wells.

No. 96 A Lesson in Finance. Mrs. Helen M. Barker.

Price, 3c. each; 50, 50c.; 100, 75c.

Department Leaflets

Y. W. C. T. U.

No. 56 The Ideal Y. Member. Miss Laura Smith.

L. T. L.

No. 182 A Study in L. T. L. Methods. Mrs. Helen G. Rice.

School Savings Banks.

No. 222 How School Savings Banks are Run. Mrs. S. L. Oberholtzer.

Parlor Meetings.

No. 242 How to Win. Mrs. Mary D. Tomlinson.

Narcotics.

No. 47 Why is the Cigaret more harmful than Tobacco used in other ways?

Price, 50, 15c.; 100, 25c.

Total Abstinence Leaflet

No. 18 Experience. The Schoolmaster.

Signal Lights.

No. 4 How Can I Win New Members? Mrs. M. B. Platt.

Price, 25c. per 100.

Miscellaneous Leaflets.

God's Nobleman,
White Cross Movement,
The White Shield Society; Its Purpose and Membership
High Ideals for Schools,
Practical Benefits of the Curfew Law,
Consider the Lilies,
The Power of the White Ribbon,
A Mother's Letter to the Y Girls.

Price, 50c. Per 100.

Woman's Temperance Publishing Ass'n,

184 La Salle St., CHICAGO.

Publishers' Notes.

Anti-Cigaret Number of The Young Crusader.

The February YOUNG CRUSADER will be a special Anti-Cigaret number designed for use on Anti-Cigaret Sunday, March 1. Sunday school workers will find it the strongest weapon that has yet appeared against the cigaret. Its pages will contain testimony, never before printed, from famous educators and leaders in the business world. B. G. Wilder, professor of Neurology and Physiology of Cornell University, tells of the effect of the cigaret on school work, and prominent teachers of the country have written expressly for this number of the YOUNG CRUSADER, while all boys will be influenced by the strong testimony of F. H. Yost, the famous coach and trainer of the University of Michigan. Mrs. Jennie Waters, Dominion superintendent of Anti-Narcotics, contributes a most interesting article on "Boys in Canada" and their sports, while in the "Adventures of an Ice Boat," her daughter writes a fine anti-cigaret story. Mrs. Caroline B. Humphreys' "The Tame Anaconda" will make a strong recitation. Miss Annie A. Robbins tells of the cigaret evil in Manila and through Mrs. Squires we learn of the Anti-Cigaret Leagues in Arizona Indian schools. Dr. Olive Wilson has a timely warning to mothers about the Small Shops and the Cigaret. Mrs. E. B. Ingalls, World's and National superintendent of Anti-Narcotics, and her associate, Mrs. Ida B. Cole, have each given their best to this number, which also contains an anti-cigaret program for Sunday schools, an exercise especially prepared for Anti-Cigaret Leagues, a chalk talk and telling cartoons. The Superintendent's Round Table presents effective ways of teaching the evil effects of tobacco. Sunday school workers everywhere, and all desirous of fighting the cigaret evil should further the distribution of this special number on Anti-Cigaret Sunday, March 1. If 500,000 copies of the February YOUNG CRUSADER could go into the Sunday schools of the land we should have the desired 5,000,000 boys pledged against tobacco. The price of this special number will not be advanced, but remain the regular rate—$2 per 100 copies.

Health Studies.

A constituency entirely apart from our own would find valuable and essential knowledge and instruction in the new leaflet "Studies in the Problem of Food," from the pen of Dr. Louise C. Purington, but to our own family of white-ribboners it is absolutely necessary. "Relation of Food to Character," "Food Value," "Its Adpatations and Requirements," "Breakfast Foods," and "What Shall We Drink," are a few of the many things about which we all should know, and Dr. Purington is able skillfully to tell us. Send 5 cents for this leaflet or, better still, for you and your friends 10 copies will be sent for 20 cents.

Dr. Purington's "Nerve Dissipation, Causes and Cure" should be in the hands of every man or woman who suffers from our national disease "Americanitis," which translated means "living at high pressure," and who in our ranks is not a sufferer from that disease? Surely those who make things "go" know the symptoms. A mere reading of the leaflets is restful, and its instructions carried out, sure cure. This leaflet is 2 cents for one copy, or 10 copies for 15 cents.

"The Spiritual Athlete," the third new leaflet, by Dr. Purington, is on a somewhat different order, but is helpful and contains new thoughts and up to date ideas that we want to be posted on as well as the writer. One copy 2 cents. Ten copies 10 cents.

WOMAN'S TEMPERANCE PUB. ASSN.,
184 La Salle St., Chicago.

Signal Notes.

Colonel P. H. Ray, commandant at Fort Wright, Spokane, has gone on record against the army canteen.

Injunctions have closed four saloons in Clinton, Ia., the plaintiffs in the action being four prominent ministers of the city.

In Ohio a campaign has been started against milliners who sell native songbirds for hat decorations. Affidavits have been filed against several milliners in Columbus and Toledo. The state game warden is pushing the reform.

A bill, limiting the ages for miners to work in or about coal mines and in mills and factories, has been drafted at Philadelphia. It raises the age of boys permitted to work in the mines from 14 to 16, and raises the age limit of boys working in the breakers from 12 to 14, and in mills and factories from 13 to 14.

Read Something New.

Send a two-cent stamp to Mrs. Cora Howe Beebe, Lacona, N. Y., and she will send you her new plan for program to be used on Frances E. Willard's heavenly birthday, February 17.

Four Manitoba farmers amused themselves by compelling a boy to drink whisky, and when he became unconscious they poured the liquor down his throat. He died from alcoholic poisoning. Arrests of the farmers, it is expected, will follow.

Pure food agents all over Pennsylvania have been instructed by Commissioner Cope to collect samples of beer for analysis. The sellers of those containing injurious adulterants will be prosecuted. A fine of $50, according to state laws, may be imposed. The adulterants said to be most frequently used are glucose, decayed rice, mouldy corn, Irish moss and rosin.

As the result of a protest by the United States navy department public gambling in Bremerton, Wash., has been completely ended. Games were running in five saloons, but the mayor has closed them all and says they will not open again. Commandant Stirling notified the Mayor that no more battleships would be sent to the Puget Sound navy yard until the town presented a better moral tone.

The colored population of Burlington, Iowa, and many white persons, are intensely interested in a 6-year-old wonder called Lonnie Lawrence Lennis, who is conducting revival services there. He is said to have had no schooling, yet he repeats chapter after chapter of the Bible accurately, and delivers long, earnest and interesting discourses on Bible texts. Many conversions have resulted from his meetings.

Saloon men of Brazil, Ind., have been cashing city orders at par, while the bankers discounted them. Finally, as the city's indebtedness came to exceed the 2 per cent limit, the banks refused to accept them at any discount. Now the saloonkeepers find themselves owners of about $21,000 in city orders, and are planning to have the city corporation declared bankrupt. This is supposed to be revenge for the ordinances passed by the city council increasing the saloon license, prohibiting screens, tables and chairs, enforcing Sunday closing and enacting a law that city orders would not be received in payment of license.

Finland's Pathetic Appeal

An Urgent Cry for Help

IN Helsingfors, the capital of Finland, there is a statue overlooking the port, representing a sailor on the mast of a shipwrecked vessel, peering with eager gaze into the distance in search of help. That shipwrecked sailor represents Finland to-day; her famine-stricken peasants are looking this way for help, and if the American people are true to the traditions of the past, the patient, suffering Finns will not look in vain.

Hasten quickly to their rescue,
Hear their bitter cry for bread,
Ye, who in your homes have plenty,
Ye, whom God has always fed.

Finland's climate is subject to sudden changes, and not infrequently does the farmer, after toiling in his fields throughout a fine summer's day, go home with a trembling, anxious heart. The calm, warm day may be followed by a chilly night, during which the temperature will go down below the freezing point, and in a few hours utterly destroy his prospects of a bountiful harvest, and render thousands of hard-working people destitute for the winter. In times of extreme dearth, they are compelled to make up for the failure of their crops, by mixing the ground bark of pine trees, chopped straw, and other ingredients, with the rye of which they prepare their bread.

* * *

Rather Die Than Beg

Ordinarily, under such trying circumstances, the tenacious endurance and heroic resignation of the Finlander are displayed in all their power, and very rarely is he heard to complain of his lot in life; but just now he is indeed in the direst straits. Not only locally, but throughout vast tracts of territory, the complete failure of crops has reduced nearly 400,000 people not simply to destitution, but to the very verge of actual starvation, and now, even Finnish endurance has reached its extreme limits.

But so quiet and undemonstrative is the Finlander in his intensest suffering, that, were it not for occasional letters from the Fatherland to sons and daughters who have found homes in other climes, the world would know but very little of the calamity that has recently befallen this God-fearing, peace-loving people, for the Finlander would rather die than beg.

Even now the peasants of that rugged land, who have "a song for every joy and for every sorrow," are striving hard to tide themselves over until better days shall dawn; but authentic advices make it quite evident that unless help from without comes, and comes quickly, many thousands must necessarily perish of hunger and cold.

Pitying hearts that throb with sorrow,
By your deeds ye shall be known,
Give to-day, and ere to-morrow,
'T will be carved on God's white throne.

* * *

America Will Save Them

It is, indeed, a very sad picture that poor, suffering, starving Finland presents to the civilized world, and one that cannot but touch the hearts and enlist the practical sympathies of our own people, comparatively so favorably circumstanced. According to the recent census, Finland has over 2,500,000 inhabitants—honest, industrious, God-fearing and God-serving people, who have fallen upon evil times, and whom America will not desert in this hour of their dire extremity, nor suffer them to perish from off the face of the earth. Help will surely be afforded them, and in such bountiful measure that the calamity that has come upon them shall not overwhelm them. And thus the beautiful words of Whittier, written many years ago, shall have glorious fulfilment in the noble generosity of our ever open-hearted, and open-handed people:

And as to Finland's sorrow
The sweet amend is made.
As if the healing hand of Christ
Upon her wounds were laid.

Then row thy boat, O fisher!
In peace on lake and bay;
And thou, young maiden, dance again,
Around the poles of May.

Sit down old men together,
Old wives in quiet spin;
Henceforth the Anglo-Saxon
Is brother of the Finn!

From Stereoscopic Photo, Copyright, 1897, Underwood & Underwood

A TYPICAL FINNISH DAIRYMAID

Of the Household of Faith

The Finlanders are an industrious, deserving, educated people. Of 470,000 school-children between the ages of seven and sixteen, 448,000 attend school. These simple folk have a great reverence for sacred things, and they are not ashamed to speak of matters concerning their souls. Seriousness is stamped upon their countenances, when eternal things are being discussed. During prayer, every knee is bowed, and at services held in the open air, every head remains uncovered during the singing, prayers and sermon.

Although the Finns are Lutheran as a nation, other religious bodies have a work in their land. The Baptists began work there about thirty-five years ago, and the first Methodist chapel was dedicated in 1882. In 1891 the Methodist Episcopal Church obtained legal right to free religious exercise.

The Finnish people have often passed through the furnace of persecution, pestilence and war, and even under such trying circumstances have not forgotten to seek for comfort in the Revealed Word, which they have had both in Finnish and Swedish for centuries past.

Let us do good unto all men, especially unto them who are of the household of faith.—Gal. 6: 10.

Let Us Act Quickly

It is for these faithful but distressed people that we appeal for help. Never yet has the generous American heart turned a deaf ear to the pitiful cry of the destitute, the desolate, the distressed or the hungry, and contributions have commenced to pour in from every direction; but so much is needed, so much is to be done, so much of misery and famine is to be relieved, that unless every one does a share, and does it quickly, little can be accomplished to stem the tide of suffering, starvation and death.

Midwinter is approaching in Finland, when the whole country is sheeted in snow and ice, and the temperature falls to from 20° to 30° below zero, adding greatly to the suffering in the North and East, where over 60,000 families will have to fight a grim, silent battle with starvation, and must succumb unless quickly aided. In the last great famine in Finland, many years ago, over 100,000 perished. How many of the 400,000, who are now suffering, will live to see another spring?

Soon will the season of rescue be o'er;
Soon will they drift to Eternity's shore;
Haste, then, my brother; no time for delay,
Throw out the life-line and save them to-day.

* * *

An Opportunity for All

We urge every reader of this paper to seize this opportunity to place his name upon the roll of life-savers. Every pastor can aid the work by putting it before his flock; every Sunday School Superintendent can tell his scholars of the glorious opportunity of which they may avail themselves; for it is certainly a great thing to save even a single life. Every Sunday School teacher has here a chance; so also have the King's Daughters, Epworth Leagues, Christian Endeavor Societies, Ladies' Aid Societies, Young People's Unions, and the various other church societies. We cannot conceive of any nobler work than this, which gives us a share in averting so great a disaster as threatens the people of Finland.

* * *

Every contribution, however small, will be gratefully received and publicly acknowledged in THE CHRISTIAN HERALD. All money received will be cabled to Finland absolutely free of cost. Representative Finnish merchants and clergymen at Helsingfors, Uleaborg, and Wasa, have formed Relief Committees, serving without pay, to distribute the supplies, thus making every dollar tell in behalf of the sufferers. Address,

FINLAND FAMINE FUND

The Christian Herald, 316-326 Bible House, New York

God help poor Finland. God bless every giver. God bless and multiply the gifts.

FEBRUARY MAGAZINE NUMBER

The Union Signal

VOL. XXIX NO. 6.

CHICAGO, FEB. 5, 1903.

Oh, wise and great!
Their like, perchance, we ne'er shall see again,
But let us write their golden words upon the hearts of men.

ISSUED WEEKLY

PRICE $1.50 PER YEAR.

U. OF MD. LIBRARY

Books for the Home

Or Sabbath School Library

☞ Let Us Help You in Making a Good Selection

"A Great Mother."

The life of Madam Willard.
A beautiful gift book.
Price, - - - - - - $1.50
Postpaid.

"The Little Green God."

Caroline Atwater Mason.

A story and study of to-day.
Price, - $1.00
Postpaid.

"Talks to Girls."

Eleanor A. Hunter.

"Talks to Boys."

Eleanor A. Hunter.

These books contain most convincing and earnest advice. Artistically bound in decorated covers.
Price, each, - - - 50 cents
Postpaid.

"Those Black Diamond Men."

William F. Gibbons.

A tale of the Anthrax Valley.
Price, - $1.50
Postpaid.

"Nineteen Beautiful Years."

Frances E. Willard.

The story of the life of "Sister Mary."
Price, - 60 cents
Postpaid.

"Winsome Womanhood."

Margaret E. Sangster.

Familiar talks on life and conduct.
Price, - $1.25

"Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch."

Alice Caldwell Hegan.

A wonderful mingling of pathos and humor, "a sure cure for the blues."
Price, - $1.00
Postpaid.

"Alcohol a Dangerous and Unnecessary Medicine."

Mrs. M. M. Allen.

A book that should be in every household.
Price, - - - - - - $1.25
Postpaid.

"Janet Ward."

Margaret E. Sangster.

A meritorious book for girls.
Price, - $1.50
Postpaid.

"Studies in Hearts."

Julia MacNair Wright.

A series of charming sketches. Illustrated.
Price, - - - - - - 75 cents
Postpaid.

"The Opportunity Circle."

Faye Huntington.

A story of good deeds accomplished by young earnest hearts.
Price, 50 cents
Postpaid.

"To the Third Generation."

Hope Daring.

A story of intemperance, showing the effects on the children and grandchildren of a man whom wine was not supposed to injure.
Price, - - - - - - $1.00
Postpaid

"Aunt Abby's Neighbors"

Annie Trumbull Slosson.

A book of New England folk. Fully illustrated.
Price, - $1.00
Postpaid.

"White Ribbon Birthday Book."

Anna A. Gordon.

A book composed of quotations from noted women.
Price, - - - - - - $1.00

"David Douglas and His Wife."

Mrs. O. W. Scott.

A practical prohibition story.
Price, - - - - - - 50 cents

"By Order of the Prophet."

A tale of the occupation of the Great Salt Lake basin. By Alfred H. Henry, illustrated. "True to history founded upon actual incident, forcible in the telling and strong in the depiction of character, this book is a worthy contribution to the literature and the making of the west."

Price, Postpaid, $1.50.

"Letters from a Self-Made Merchant to His Son"

By George Horace Lorimer. A masterpiece of American humor and sound sense.
Price, postpaid, $1.50.

"A Chinese Quaker."

By Nellie Blessing Eyster.

A most interesting story, telling of a young Quaker woman, who, although antagonistic to the Chinese, is led to take a heathen boy in charge, who, under her training, becomes a consistent Friend.

Price, Postpaid, $1.50.

"Two Wilderness Voyagers."

A true story of Indian life, by Franklin Welles Calkins.
Price, postpaid, $1.50.

"Jean Mitchell's School"

By Angelina W. Ray. One of the most entertaining and inspiring books ever issued, and should be read by every teacher in the public schools and every superintendent of the Loyal Temperance Legion.

Price, postpaid, $1.25.

"Temperance Helps for Primary Teachers."

By L. Mabel Freese.

A book helpful alike to the public school or Sunday school teacher and interesting to anyone.
Price, postpaid, 50 Cents.

"How to Win."

By Frances E. Willard.

Written especially for young women.
Price, postpaid, $1.00.

RALPH CONNOR'S BOOKS.

"Glengarry School Days."

Connor's Latest Work.

This new volume fittingly supplements "The Man from Glengarry" in that it deals with some of the same characters, but in a different period.
Cloth bound.
Illustrated.
Price, - $1.25

"Black Rock."

A tale of the Selkirks.
Price, - - - - - - $1.25
Postpaid.

"The Man from Glengarry."

A tale of the Ottawa.
Price, - - - - - - $1.50
Postpaid.

"The Sky Pilot."

A tale of the foothills.
Price, - - - - - - $1.25
Postpaid.

"Six of Them."

Mrs. S. M. Perkins.

A cleverly told temperance tale.
Price, - - - - - - 75 cents
Postpaid.

"The Beautiful Life of Frances E. Willard."

Anna A. Gordon.

The biography of Miss Willard, written by one most closely identified with her.
Price, - - - - - - $2.00
Postpaid.

"How I Learned to Ride the Bicycle."

By Frances E. Willard.

A charming book for young people. (Illustrated.)
Price, postpaid, 40c.

When in need of ANY BOOK, whether listed in our Catalogue or not, favor us with the order. We WANT your book trade and assure you all orders will be promptly filled.

Woman's Temperance Publishing Association, Chicago, Ill.

FOR GOD AND HOME AND EVERY LAND.

NATIONAL and WORLD'S WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION

The UNION SIGNAL

AND WORLD'S WHITE RIBBON

Entered at Chicago Postoffice as Second-class Matter.

"Thou hast given a banner to them that fear thee: that it may be displayed because of the truth."

Vol. XXIX.—No. 6. Issued Weekly. | CHICAGO, FEBRUARY 5, 1903. | Price, $1.50 Per Year in Advance.

Contents of This Number.

CURRENT TEMPERANCE NEWS 4, 5

CONTRIBUTED:

The Drink Habit Among Women. By Leonora M. Lake—An Organization Memorial. By Mrs. Henrietta M. Monroe 6

The Frances E. Willard National Temperance Hospital. By Julia H. Thayer—Temperance and Medical Men. By T. D. Crothers, M. D. 7

An Equal Suffrage Examination Paper. Answers by Ellis Meredith 8

The Illinois Manual Training School Farm. By Stella Perceval North 9

Under the White Ribbon. A Mother's Appeal. By Mary Henry-Rossiter 10

My Whittier Days. Amesbury-Oak Knoll. By L. Mabel Freese 11

Hymn. By Isabella Howe Fiske—A Fight Against Odds. By Kate Anderson 12

CHILDREN'S COZY CORNER:

A Bird Lover. By Theresa Day—A Dinner-Pail Story—My Valentine. Ida B. Cole — Whittier's Dog — Puzzlers' Pocket 13

The Temperance Hospital An unusual pressure of work at our National Temperance Hospital has made it impossible for Miss Graessle, superintendent of the Training School for Nurses, to furnish "copy" for her "Hints on Home Nursing" in time for this issue. This omission is compensated for, in part, by the special article on "The Frances E. Willard National Temperance Hospital," on page 7.

Anti-Cigaret Pledge Signing Day. The W. C. T. U. will make a grand effort to rally its forces for the anti-cigaret pledge-signing day, Sunday, March 1. All persons, all Sunday schools and all churches interested in the future of our country are invited to help make this day one of mo- [illegible] to begin to Miss Smart's Address. Miss Kara G. Smart, our World's W. C. T. U. missionary to Japan, asks that her friends be notified that her present address is 30 Tsukiji, Tokyo, Japan. Miss Smart is in excellent health and spirits, and her work progresses very satisfactorily.

A Physician's Prescription. The attention of our readers is directed to the very valuable article on page 18, "Home Treatment of a Cold," by Dr. Cordelia Greene, head of the well-known Sanitarium at Castile, N. Y. In these days when the microbe of influenza runs riot over the land, mothers will be especially grateful for such explicit directions for putting the enemy to rout. In this connection please note that in the article by Dr. Greene in our [illegible] 15, "The Danger of Moderate Drink- [illegible] uld have read "dis- [illegible] c.

Publisher

UNION SIGNAL,

CHICAGO, ILL.

Please send the UNION SIGNAL to the address given below for one year, for which find $1.50 enclosed.

Name _____

Address _____

SUBSCRIPTION PRICE:

$1.50 PER YEAR IN ADVANCE.

190

[illegible] said to be almost [illegible] in the annals of [illegible] court was that of a [illegible] cided the fate of Pat- [illegible] murder of an asso- [illegible] William H. Dietz—a [illegible] r upon any undertak- [illegible] idance—the jury sank [illegible] ly joined in the earn- [illegible] aching a just verdict. [illegible] nd suggestive as well. [illegible] all enter into the civic [illegible] n there will be small [illegible] the country go wrong.

[illegible] during the six years of [illegible] managing editor's con- [illegible] h THE UNION SIGNAL [illegible] now to the needs and [illegible] "The Question Box" has [illegible] ny expressions of good will and appreciation from those we aim to serve, but it has dropped many valuable suggestions that we hope to utilize for the good of all concerned. The "Box" is open until February 15, and every reader of the official organ is cordially invited to join the conference. THE UNION SIGNAL is "in the hands of its friends," for criticism, commendation and suggestion. The result of the experiment thus far is very satisfactory.

The Interstate Commerce Bill. We urge our readers and the friends of our cause generally to write or wire immediately brief, courteous appeals to the two Senators from their states at Washington to support the Hepburn bill (H. R. 15,331) which passed the House Jan. 27, and is now referred to the Senate Committee on Interstate Commerce. In states having a Senator on that committee, let a special request be made of such Senator to urge early consideration and a favorable report to the Senate as well as for support on the floor. The Senate Committee on Interstate Commerce is composed of the following: Stephen B. Elkins, West Virginia, Chairman; Shelby M. Cullom, Illinois; Nelson W. Aldrich, Rhode Island; John Kean, New Jersey; Jonathan P. Dolliver, Iowa; Joseph B. Foraker, Ohio; Moses E. Clapp, Minnesota; Joseph H. Millard, Nebraska; Benjamin R. Tillman, South Carolina; Anselm J. McLaurin, Missippippi; Edward W. Carmack, Tennessee; Murphy J. Foster, Louisiana; Thomas M. Patterson, Colorado.

try.

The Kansas senate defeated the bill proposing to grant women the privilege of voting for Presidential electors.

The Belgium Senate passed the government bill for the suppression of obscene songs and speeches in public gatherings.

Secretary of War Root issues an order to all recruiting stations that no more boys under 21 years of age shall be enlisted.

A bill prohibiting the sale of cigarets and cigaret paper in the state has been passed by the Alabama House of Representatives.

Fears entertained in North China that Yung Lu, the real ruler of the empire, is plotting another outbreak against foreigners.

Eugene Heitler Lehman, of Pueblo, Colo., a graduate of Yale, given the first Cecil Rhodes scholarship awarded to an American student.

Bill introduced in Illinois Legislature by Representative Stewart of Chicago to prohibit manufacture and sale of cigarets in the state.

Judge W. R. Day, secretary of state under President McKinley, accepted appointment to United States Supreme court to succeed Justice Shiras.

The sentence of death passed upon Colonel Arthur Lynch, the Irishman who fought in the Boer war, who was found guilty of high treason, has been commuted to penal servitude for life.

Deadlock in Venezuelan affairs. England, Germany and Italy refuse to accept Minister Bowen's proposition that all creditors be placed on an equal basis. No settlement in sight.

Vermont prohibition law repealed by referendum majority of 1,642 after being in force since 1852; local option measure substituted; referendum declared unconstitutional, but result will determine legislature's action.

pet call, loud and prolonged, which must be [illegible] from afar. "We have licensed hell," is the message. "For a price we have given the devil permission to produce poverty, profligacy, cruelty, wretchedness, death. We do not look for a great, sweeping, all-pervading, all-conquering revival of religion in this country until the Christian church shall arise in its might and do its utmost to smite, hip and thigh, the monstrous, murderous, legalized liquor traffic!" To all of which the temperance forces, who work and pray for just such an alliance, say, Amen.

A Light Under a Bushel The town of Phoebus, Va., deplores, through the editorial columns of its newspaper, "The Sentinel," the fact that while having all the natural advantages of a flourishing business center, its reputation is so smothered under the cloud of the liquor traffic that the stranger can see only saloons. Admitting that forty dramshops are in the town by the consent of its population of two thousand inhabitants, the point is urged that no commercial development can be possible while conditions class the town with the lowest resorts of the country. The editor confesses to having vainly endeavored for the past five years to secure business enterprises and to having seen them go elsewhere because the parties interested were not willing to bring their families to such a place. This instance is only a type of cases innumerable. True prosperity goes hand in hand with integrity. The light that is under the bushel leaves every one in darkness.

Temperance Legislation at Washington.

Margaret Dye Ellis, Correspondent.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Feb. 2.—Tuesday, January 27, the Hepburn bill in the interest of interstate commerce in intoxicating liquor, passed the House of Representatives. Mr. Clayton, of Alabama, was in charge of the bill, while Mr. Bartholdt, of Missouri, as might be expected, was its principal opponent. He brought forward the old time arguments of an "infringement of personal liberty," and of the crime of debarring an individual from being able to procure what he wanted to eat or drink. He also opposed the bill on the ground that "it would legalize prohibition," to which Mr. Clayton responded, "That is exactly this bill: intending to enforce the prohibition laws of the state in a community, so that they may not be violated as they have been." The bill passed without a division of the House, not as a party measure, but strictly on its merits.

This bill really supplements the famous "Wilson bill," the decisions of the Supreme Court having lessened its powers. The judiciary committee favored its adoption by a unanimous vote, and an extended report, and decided that inasmuch as the Wilson bill had been pronounced constitutional, it would be better to let that whole legislation which was had in the interest of good morals stand, and to report an original proposition adding to the merits of the Wilson bill, viz: To surrender back to the state certain control which was given to Congress by the Federal Constitution under the commerce clause, which is simply a proposition to restore to the states in this matter, full and ample power to enforce their police regulations against the sale of intoxicating liquors.

In the state of Iowa, and probably in other states, soliciting agents visit communities where the moral sentiment of the people is against the sale of intoxicating liquors, and establish a business of taking orders for liquor, which would be sent to another state, and then the liquor shipped, in many instances to the agent as consignee and by him distributed direct to the customer. By this means, the soliciting agent has been permitted to carry on the business of a liquor dealer in communities where the law of the state, and the moral sentiment of the people are to the contrary.

The practice has grown to such an extent that in one town in Iowa as high as 100 jugs at a time were found in a single express office, addressed by the consignor to himself, the consignee. This measure is intended to give to the states the right and power to control the sale of intoxicating liquors within their borders. This is indeed a victory.

It goes to the Senate, and every one believing in home rule, and in favor of state rights, who believes in the moral sentiment of a people being maintained, should IMMEDIATELY wire or write his or her Senator urging him to vote for the bill in the interest of the inter-state commerce in intoxicating liquors. This calls for quick work. Don't let it fail in the Senate for lack of attention.

The statehood bill fight has assumed still more serious complications. Senator Quay chose an opportune moment when little attention was being paid to proceedings, to announce that he had a couple of amendments to offer, and that he desired them referred to the committee on organization of which he is chairman. The amendments were not read, and later it was discovered that they were amendments to the sundry civil appropriation bill and to the agricultural bill, and were in fact the text of the omnibus statehood bill. The Senator had caused them to be referred to his committee, it is supposed, in order to have them favorably reported to the Senate and to prevent them from being subject to a point of order, as proposed amendments to appropriation bills.

This means all appropriation bills will have to wait until the statehood bill is disposed of, and for an extra session of the Senate. This would bring the new Senators, among them Senator Smoot from Utah.

Senator Bard of Southern California, in an address on Arizona made the statement that in that territory one-fifth of the population in 1890 were Mormons, and quotes from Gov. N. O. Murphy, who says: "It seems to be generally accepted by the highest modern intelligence that the public welfare and the general good of our people will be best subserved by legislative restrictions upon the Mormons, and it has been the policy of the government and of communities wherever the followers of Mormonism have gained a foothold in this country to restrain by legislative enactment the extension of Mormon power and influence."

The Vermont Campaign.

Mary S. Morgan, Correspondent.

WILMINGTON, Vt., Jan. 28.—The state corresponding secretary sends me the following details concerning the work of the five National speakers who are now in the state: Mrs. Stevens and Mrs. Stevenson came into the state during the second week in January from the 11th to the 18th inclusive, both giving two Sundays. Mrs. Stevens began work in Orange county, speaking five times in the county, viz., South Newbury, Newbury, E. Corinth, Chelsea, and Randolph. The driving snow storm on the evening of the 11th bade fair to spoil the meeting, but a good audience gathered notwithstanding. Mrs. Stevens spoke four times in Windsor county, at South Royalton, Windsor and Woodstock, holding two services in the last named place on Sunday the 18th. The audience there was large and very enthusiastic. Mrs. Stevens is now in the state with Miss Gordon, beginning at South Ryegate in Caledonia county. The plan for all the places they visit together, is to have a children's meeting in the afternoon and a union mass meeting in the evening.

Mrs. Hoffman has been in Orleans, Franklin, Caledonia, Washington and Chittenden counties, is still in the state and will remain until after February 3 as will Mrs. Stevens and Miss Gordon. Mrs. Stevenson spoke at Chester and North Springfield in Windsor county, and at Bellows Falls, Newfane, Townshend, Jamaica, South Londonderry, West Brattleboro, and Brattleboro in Windham county, making nine addresses in all.

Many who were license sympathizers attended the meeting, and at Bellows Falls, one was present who accompanied Mr. Clement on his campaign tour. The most enthusiastic and largest meetings were at South Londonderry and Brattleboro, but all were well attended. Mrs. Callie Howe began her work in the state at North Bennington, January 11th. She spoke at Readsboro the 12th, Wilmington the 13th, Manchester the 14th and beyond that point we have not been informed. Though coming at such a stormy time Mrs. Howe was well received and greeted by good sized audiences at the places mentioned.

During the week ending with January 24, Mrs. Read, state president, and Mrs. Smith, president of Bennington county, held school-house meetings in that county, driving alone about fifty miles in all, facing the storms and enduring the zero weather, putting up their own posters and braving all the discomforts of meeting in ill-lighted rooms, yet feeling that the meetings were a success, after all. On one of the stormiest nights one hundred people gathered in a school house to hear them, while on some other nights the numbers reached were sometimes as small as twenty. Mrs. Read will be in Rutland and Addison counties until after February 3. She is brave indeed to take up this work even while her heart is aching for the loved sister so recently called to the heavenly home. She has the sympathy of her constituency throughout the state in this bereavement.

Mass meetings and rallies are being held in many towns, the ministers often taking the lead. Many of these with local speakers might be reported did space permit.

The state W. C. T. U. have issued a plan for Sunday services February 1:

MORNING: A sermon by pastors to voters.

AFTERNOON: Women's prayer meetings.

EVENING: A union service, with addresses, readings, recitations and music.

The referendum vote will doubtless be taken before this letter reaches the readers of THE UNION SIGNAL, and the world will know whether Vermont will take a backward step in this great temperance movement. God grant that she may be heard to speak a most emphatic "No."

Though so many of our W. C. T. U. women are doing special work during this campaign, the rank and file in the unions are keeping up the work in much the usual way.

Legislative Work in South Dakota.

Alice R. Gossage, Correspondent.

RAPID CITY, S. D., Feb. 2.—Mrs. Luella A. Ramsey, state president, and Mrs. P. E. Johnson, our legislative committee, are in Pierre at present working for the passage of several beneficial laws, but it is as yet too early in the session to tell what has been or is being accomplished.

Alice R. Gossage.

Our state convention is so long in the past that it is history, and yet there were many things which deserved mention that did not get it. You read of our losing Miss Smart for a larger field, but you did not read of the report of the "White Ribbon Journal" finances. Owing to the $1.00 dues the expenses of the paper were more than met, besides putting the state paper into the hands of every member. This felicitous condition is largely due to the efforts of our valued state treasurer, Mrs. E. P. Eckenbeck, who worked early and late to bring it about.

At the state convention it was urged that we make a strong effort to clear our indebtedness this year by every member giving one dollar in addition to the dues, or each union sending an amount equal to one dollar. A considerable number of members are working toward the desired end.

The twenty-second annual meeting of the Sioux Falls union was held recently, and showed a large amount of work accomplished. The union numbers over fifty members, and does work in ten departments.

South Dakota's state reporter has been silent for a much longer time than she should have been, or than she intends to be in the future.

Anti-Canteen Testimony.

Annie A. Robbins, Correspondent.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Jan. 19.—A great deal has been said about the canteen, yet in my travels over the states I find many who think we took away the comforts of the post-exchange when only the beer was removed. It is stated by some that conditions are worse since the canteen closed.

Annie A. Robbins.

During three years' service in the army, while the canteen was in power, I saw so much drunkenness, so many young men led astray and neglecting their duty as soldiers, so many punishments that they were forced to endure, that I cannot conceive of worse conditions.

While I was in the army one young man told me there was only one man in his company, of over 100 men, who did not drink, himself excepted. Another said that on Christmas day there were fourteen sober men in his company. The chairman of a board of missionaries told me that after they had talked to hundreds of our soldiers, they found that nine out of every ten drank, and that four out of every ten were drunkards. If conditions are now worse than this, what must they be?

Dr. Homer C. Stuntz, of Manila, told me of one post he visited after the canteen was voted out. He went into the "company club," as they called it, and saw on the wall a list of expenses and returns of the club for the month past. Taking out his note-book he began to make a copy of the list. The sergeant in charge objected to this, but Doctor Stuntz persisted, and he found that $710 had been spent for beer and other "light drinks"—all of this for the use of only eighty-two men on duty at that post. By reporting to division headquarters he succeeded in getting two or three of these "clubs" closed.

At the close of my address in Willimantic, Conn., Captain Fenton, who was one of the clerks in his own Connecticut regiment, spoke as follows:

"I know that some good officers favor the army canteen, but I don't see how they can. I saw its workings in my own regiment. At the head of my company street stood the canteen. One day, for my own satisfaction, I made an estimate of the figures found on our regimental books and was astonished to find that there had been paid back to the government from $10,000 to $12,000 in fines for the regiment of 1,300 men. Many of these fines I thought unjust. The canteen was placed in a regiment, the boys would spend at least fifty per cent of their $15.60 there, get into trouble, as a consequence, and be fined $5, $10, to be taken from next month's payroll. It looked to me like placing a temptation before the soldiers and then taking their money in fines for accepting the invitation. The profits from the canteen were supposed to purchase the extras for the soldiers, but judging from the amount of money the soldiers had to pay, it always looked to me like a pretty dear investment. If, as it is claimed, the W. C. T. U. was chiefly instrumental in having the canteen abolished from the army, the American soldier owes them a great debt of gratitude."

Field Workers in Iowa.

Clara P. White Correspondent.

VOLGA, Ia., Jan. 29.—The lectures of Miss Annie A. Robbins on "Life in Manila," illustrated by many articles she brought from there, and brightened by her experience as an army nurse for nearly two years, have been of surpassing interest. Hundreds were unable to gain admittance to her meeting at Ft. Madison.

Mrs. Ida B. Wise reports the work of Rev. A. J. Wheeler in her district, the Sixth, as follows: "He is one of the best workers we ever had. He visited fourteen places, held fifty-two meetings; took up $312 in collections, paid of this amount $55.20 to local unions, secured names of forty-seven new members." His address is Danville.

Evangelist G. W. Pierce has been doing a grand work in the Third district, under the leadership of its president, Mrs. Arline Moyer. Mr. Pierce secured hundreds of signatures to the triple pledge; organized new unions and L. T. L's, and gave nine addresses on Purity, to boys and girls with blessed results. His address until May 1 is Tingley.

Our state president, Mrs. Dunham, is urging more diligent work in the department of Scientific Temperance Instruction. Our Anti-Cigaret and Scientific Temperance Instruction laws, printed on large cards suitable for hanging in school rooms and other places, may be secured of her for two and a half cents each.

Our state treasurer hopefully assures us that if dues continue to come in during the year as they have since her last quarterly report, we shall have 1,000 new members.

A new Y has been organized in Winnesheik county at Quandahl. Edgewood Y, organized by Miss Van Vleet, with seven members, has doubled its numbers.

The Y's in Politics.

They Win in New Jersey.

Emily Ruth Kirby, Correspondent.

Woodstown, N. J., Feb. 2.—The Y's of Bridgeton have recently won a splendid victory. After being a no-license city for years, one year ago, while the temperance forces were resting in their long security, a license council was elected. Nine wholesale and retail licenses were granted without delay, and the number was speedily raised to fifteen. All enjoyed the "privilege," from the keepers of the "best" hotels to the dives kept by men who had served for less fiendish crimes, perhaps, in state's prison.

The brave young women of the Bridgeton Y determined to arouse and change public sentiment. They began by quiet and individual work. Soon afterward one of their active members, Miss Lucie A. Henderson, the county press superintendent, went on the staff of the Bridgeton "Evening News," the largest paper of the city, and contributed largely to the "Fruits of the Saloon," a series of word pictures published during the year. These awakened wide interest and general comment and were of untold influence, so that prior to the fall elections a vigorous campaign was inaugurated. Public meetings were held in conjunction with the Prohibitionists and a fund was raised for active work.

The W's and Y's sent a type-written appeal, worded to arouse people to the importance and opportunity of the approaching election, to be read in all the churches. Presiding Elder Rev. D. B. Harris, prepared for them an "Appeal to Voters." These were enclosed in envelopes and the boys and girls put one in every home.

The Y's had large posters printed with the words "Saloons Must Go! Shall we have the Saloons? No." These were liberally posted. Some were torn down by the saloon element, others remained; all had their effect.

Small cards were given to the school children, with the words printed thereon: "Shall we have the Saloon? No." These they tied to their coats and hats.

The opposition printed a similar one in appearance with the words: "The Speak-easy hides its work and pays no tax. The Saloon is open and paves the streets." One merchant added thereto "To Hell" and hung the card up in his store. This the newspapers took up and published broadcast.

Lucie A. Henderson.

Jennie C. Nickelson.

Ada S. Butcher.

Jessie A. Rice.

Result: The election of a prohibitionist in one ward and an anti-license man in every other ward but one. January 15 Bridgeton went "dry." Council met in adjourned session and in twenty-eight minutes refused eleven applications for license. Eight of the fifteen places that were open during the year are now closed and the rest will be by March 1, except one that will have a month longer.

The children who distributed the appeals were afterward given a treat, and Miss Jessie A. Rice seized the opportunity to organize an L. T. L., of which she is the efficient superintendent. Miss Ada Butcher has received much praise for her leadership as the Y president, and Miss Jennie Nickelson, superintendent of literature, has been the real backbone of the enterprise.

The Jerome Bill in New York.

Emma Alexander, Correspondent.

Brooklyn, N. Y., Feb. 2.—District Attorney Jerome has had introduced in the state legislature a bill to open the saloons of New York City on Sunday after 1 p. m. He says there will be a hearing upon the bill, and that a number of clergymen will go to Albany and speak for it. While there may be a few clergymen, as Bishop Potter and Dr. Rainsford, who believe in Sunday opening, their views are the views of a very small minority, and the Protestant clergymen are almost a unit against it, as are most of the Catholic priests.

A good deal of interest is manifested in New York City over the appointment of the five women inspectors who are to board all vessels to look after the welfare of the women in the first and second cabins. The W. C. T. U., under the leadership of Mrs. Ellis, is given full credit for their appointment, and while the newspapers have magnified the dangers of boarding the vessels, the plan meets with general approval.

Thursday of the week of prayer is appointed each year as a day of prayer by the officers of New York state W. C. T. U., and is generally observed by the unions all over the state. An all-day meeting was arranged for in New York City by the state president, at the M. E. Missionary rooms, 150 Fifth avenue. All the counties in the vicinity of New York were represented, and it was a day of spiritual uplift.

Special attention is being given this year to our mid-year conventions. Each county has heretofore acted independently in planning for its meetings, but this year the counties have been grouped in seven sections, and the Institutes in each section will be held on consecutive dates, with something of uniformity in program. While it will not be possible for all the counties to fall in line, yet most of them will do so. Mrs. Boole and Mrs. Graham are now attending institutes in the western part of the state.

The organizing work of the state demands considerable attention, and to the earnest, faithful efforts of our organizers, seconded by county and state officers, has been due our gain in membership.

Our next state convention will be held at Stamford, in the Catskills, October 6-9. This will be a beautiful time of the year to visit the mountains, and as board and lodging will be provided for all at a uniform rate of $1 per day, we are looking forward to a large attendance of visitors, and to the presence of many of the husbands of our workers.

Our state superintendents are pushing department work, and we are all working harmoniously to build up our society and to make sentiment for total abstinence and against the liquor traffic.

Local Option Strikes Virginia.

Mrs. Geo. W. Oliver, Correspondent.

Winnie, Va., Feb. 2.—Caroline county has been greatly stirred by a local option election, which resulted in victory for the "Drys" by 459 majority. Thirteen saloons have been wiped out. One precinct polled every vote dry. The Baptist and Methodist ministers were very helpful. Much of the success of the temperance forces is due to the untiring energy and industry of the county president, Mrs. Hicks. Our state president, Mrs. Hoge, and her husband, who is always a helpmeet, have just held a successful Institute at Warrenton. They attended the Anti-Saloon League convention January 20 in Richmond, where Mrs. Hoge made an address. The Richmond papers were very complimentary in their remarks about Mrs. Hoge as a speaker.

Mrs. H. M. Hoge.

Topeka City Council Takes Radical Action.

Mrs. Lena Hartzell Wallace, Correspondent.

Morland, Kansas, Feb. 2.—Dr. J. S. McFarland, pastor of First Methodist Episcopal Church, Topeka, Kansas, who was fined $100 for contempt of court in the trial of Mrs. Nation, paid his fine, but the money was made up to him in an hour's time, and $10 more. He said that he wished to pay the fine himself and promptly sent a check for $25 to the State Temperance Union. The next week the City Council used its prerogative and called a special meeting over the head of the mayor; seven of the members signing the call. At this meeting they ordered Mrs. Nation's fine remitted and instructed the Chief of Police to set her at liberty.

Tennessee's New Temperance Measure.

Silena Moore Holman, Correspondent.

Fayetteville, Tenn., Feb. 2.—A few days ago the Tennessee legislature passed a law through both Houses, almost two to one in the Senate and seven to one in the House, extending the privileges of the four-mile law to towns of 5,000 inhabitants. This law prohibits the sale of intoxicating liquors within four miles of any schoolhouse in the state, except in incorporated towns. Up to two years ago towns and villages of 200 inhabitants or under, were permitted to surrender their charter, and under a majority vote, re-incorporate without the saloon, and under the privileges of the four-mile law. Two years ago the legislature passed a law giving towns of 2,000 inhabitants similar privileges, and a few days ago the present legislature extended the same privileges to towns of 5,000 inhabitants and under. This shows the rapid growth of temperance sentiment in our state. This law will give every town in the state, except eight, the privilege of getting rid of the saloon. It is better than local option, inasmuch as if a town once votes liquor out, it is permanently out, and cannot be re-introduced without a special act of the legislature. There are now only about fifty places in the state having saloons, and it is believed most of these places will soon be without them.

Remonstrance Effective in Indiana.

Luella F. McWhirter, Correspondent.

Greencastle, Ind., Feb. 2.—The W. C. T. U. of Greencastle decided that a remonstrance (under the Nicholson law) should be circulated to prevent a saloon applicant from securing a license. A committee of men was appointed to do the work, but when they got access to the poll books and found how many names must be secured they declared the case hopeless. Again the women urged them on, and securing a loyal brother to get the remonstrance headings ready, every man worked on in desperate earnest and the remonstrance won.

Indian Territory Reports Progress and Prizes.

Martha Gilmore, Correspondent.

Muscogee, Ind. Ter., Feb. 2.—Our president, Mrs. Laura E. Harsha, recently sent a circular letter to the local presidents giving plans and recommendations for the year. The local unions have been sending in protests against the repeal of the Anti-Canteen law, and we have been using our influence against single statehood for Oklahoma and Indian Territory, mainly on account of Oklahoma's saloons. Mrs. Harsha visited the Wagoner union January 19 and 22. Several new members were secured, a good list of subscribers obtained for "Our Helper," and the union greatly strengthened. Mrs. McKenna, of Poteau territorial press superintendent, is offering a prize for the best scrap book of temperance clippings sent by a local press superintendent. Mrs. Richmond, of South McAlester, superintendent of contest work, offers "The Beautiful Life of Frances Willard" to the union holding the most contests. Miss Laura Scott, superintendent of Sunday-school work, is making especial efforts to secure pledge signers and a good presentation of the temperance lesson February 15.

Mrs. Laura E. Harsha.

Poteau union began the year with an evangelistic meeting and has since held a mothers' meeting. They are studying the "Rights of Childhood."

Ada union, a small band, is reaping a harvest from faithful sowing. Six drinking men have recently been reclaimed. Two of them had not spent a sober Christmas before for nearly twenty years!

A Movement for State Prohibition.

Harriet B. Kells, Correspondent.

Fayette, Miss., Feb. 2.—The liquor men of Mississippi find it a grievous thing that the capitol city is in a "dry" county. Their efforts are increasing to overturn this condition. Last August they brought in a petition for a local option election which, after a hard-fought contest, was defeated by five votes. On January 7 they filed another petition, which has just been "turned down" by a majority of more than one hundred. Several districts were yet to be heard from when the defeat was acknowledged, which would have swelled the majority several times. Leading men say, "We are sick of the eternal fight and expense of local option. We will work for state prohibition." A mass meeting of prohibitionists is called for February 17 at Jackson, to settle upon the method of securing this.

Mrs. Harriet B. Kells.

The DRINK HABIT AMONG WOMEN.

By LEONORA M. LAKE.

WHILE every phase of the temperance question has a vitality and an importance that demands the most serious thought, conscientious discussion and unceasing effort, there is one phase which goes to the heart of every God-fearing, country-loving man and woman, and that is, the drink habit among American women.

In August, 1900, in my report to the Catholic Total Abstinence convention, without any thought of sensationalism or of criticism, I cited the testimony of authorities on the subject—alienists, physicians, scientists, and those having charge of inebriate institutions—because I thought that their evidence would carry greater weight than could mine. The press of the country took the question up, and for awhile excitement ran high. The investigations then started by the metropolitan press resulted in an absolute verification of the truthfulness of the statements made in my report, which report was further corroborated by additional testimony from eminent physicians and well-known clergymen who were interviewed on the question at issue.

The greatest furore seemed to center round Dr. Cyrus Edson's statement regarding drinking among society women, and interviews with many women members of the social class bristled with indignation or ran smooth with a thin veneer of apology for the custom, but no society woman whose position was secure and free from blame allowed herself to be interviewed on the subject.

There are society women who are leaders in all that is pure, lofty, refined, intellectual, charitable and philanthropic, at whose door no such charge could be made—but there are others. What was said concerning the drink habit, whisky-teas, punch-bowl receptions, afternoon poker games with high balls, gin fizzes and cocktail refreshments is true, very word true, and as we go down the social ladder we find that similar customs prevail, in quantity if not in quality.

One of the greatest neurotic specialists of the century said, "If you would stop drunkenness, begin at the cradle, in your nurseries." I would go further and say, begin before the conception of a new life. Though a child may not inherit the direct taste for alcohol, yet it is true that a weak, characterless one, with perverted moral tendencies, will be the child of any mother who poisons her body and debases her character by drinking egg-noggs, cocktails, brandy or beer, while she is forming the character and building the structure of the new being God has given her.

In almost every walk of life, young women are surrounded by such conditions the wonder is that more of them have not acquired the curse of an alcoholic appetite. In that part of the world where the hand-painted china or cut-glass punch bowl is ever present at social functions, who is chosen to serve out its wine or brandied contents? Why, the brightest, prettiest, most winsome girl the hostess can secure. Naturally when the young girl entertains her own friends the custom instituted by the elders is further carried out, resulting oft-times in a maudlin condition of both the hostess and the guests. After-theater suppers, with champagne as a beverage, have sent many a young woman home in an intoxicated condition.

Then there is the beer garden—a blot and a shame on our boasted Christianity and civilization. Visit one of these, ye who are inclined to be sceptical or critical, and see our future mothers, now in their teens, drinking glass after glass of beer or other intoxicant, and judge for yourself what the harvest will be after a few years of such indulgence, when love for the social glass has become a fixed habit.

How can any sensible person expect women to escape destruction from the same cause by which countless thousands of strong men have gone down to ruin, body and soul? Has not a woman a physical being, flesh cells, nerve centers, brain tissue, as well as has her brother? And if practice or indulgence gives birth to habit, habit to vice, vice to death of the body by alcoholic poisoning, and of the soul through moral decay of the man, in God's name, why is it a matter of such wonder that women should also go down under its deadly influence?—she whom men have always called "the weaker vessel."

Someone has said that clergymen and physicians wield more influence in human lives and affairs than do any other class of men. However true this may be, one thing is certain, women themselves have almost unlimited power as regards society and its practices. They can be less worldly and more spiritual; they can put the seal of condemnation upon society's drinking customs; they can exclude strong drink from functions in which they are concerned; they can avow themselves total abstainers, that the light of their good example may be a guide to their hapless sisters in life's valleys and shadows. They can teach little children the danger that lurks in the wine glass. Oh, what can not women do when their hearts shall be moved by Divine pity like unto that which filled the heart of Him "Who so loved the world that He gave His only begotten Son for its redemption?"

St. Louis, Mo.

An Organization Memorial.

By Mrs. Henrietta L. Monroe.

THE Woman's Temperance Crusade began in Ohio, in December, 1873. The following February a convention was called at Columbus to consider the interests of the movement which was sweeping over the state.

In April, a similar convention assembled at Cincinnati, to bring influence to bear upon the Constitutional Convention, then in session in that city, lest a license clause be inserted in the revised constitution of the state.

Both the February and the April gatherings were mass conventions, composed of men and women. Each convention appointed a State executive committee, for conference and counsel in state work. Mrs. H. C. McCabe, chairman of the first committee, was made chairman of the second also. A joint session of these committees was called at Delaware, June 3, 1874, to devise plans by which the outgrowth of the early Crusade movement might be made permanent in organization.

This joint session was held in Williams Street Methodist church, at which time was drafted a constitution for an organization to be known as the "Ohio Woman's Christian Temperance Union," and a call was issued for a convention, to be held two weeks later, in Springfield. This convention, great in enthusiasm as well as numbers, was also a mass assembly, of men and women, representing the "Temperance League" of Ohio, and was presided over by Doctor (now Bishop) Walsen, of Cincinnati, with Mrs. Frances W. Leiter as secretary.

Before the close of the session, the constitution drafted at Delaware was ratified, and a State Executive Committee created to develop organization. This executive was composed of Mrs. H. C. McCabe, president; Mrs. Frances W. Leiter, secretary; Mrs. Eliza J. Thompson (of Hillsboro), treasurer, and one vice-president from each congressional district.

The first distinctly W. C. T. U. meeting was an executive session, held at Delaware, September 23, to consider organizing the state under the constitution adopted. Then, and not till then, was it fully decided that the W. C. T. U. should be composed of women only. Even the advisory committees of men were abandoned. This business was transacted in the same Williams Street Methodist Episcopal church where the constitution was drafted which finally gave to it the name "The Church of Organization."

A little later, the old building gave way to a fine new church edifice. It was the happy thought of Mrs. McCabe, that we ask space for an Organization Memorial window, believing it would be educational for coming generations. After considerable funds had been raised for this purpose through the efforts of Mrs. McCabe and Mrs. Leiter as state officials, objection was made by one or two members of the church board of trustees, who did not approve of the Crusade. This delayed plans. The money, bearing interest, was held for the purpose intended, awaiting the opportunity of the future.

In the spring of 1898, official word came that the church would consider it an honor for the Ohio W. C. T. U. to carry out its original plans. The state union at once commissioned Mrs. Leiter, Mrs. McCabe and Mrs. Monroe to perfect plans for the Memorial, raising additional funds if necessary.

After careful consideration it was decided advisable to place an inner tablet instead of the window, as at first proposed.

This memorial tablet, recently completed, is made of white Portland statuary marble. It is composed of seventeen pieces, or parts. The tablet proper is a molded slab set on edge, bearing the inscription, and resting upon a finely molded shelf, which is supported by two handsomely carved brackets of the scroll design, with oak leaves carved in relief. At either side of the inscription slab, and resting on the shelf, just above the brackets, are two polished columns with molded bases and carved caps, treated with lily of the valley and ivy design, making a very effective decoration. These columns support the frieze and superstructure. On the shelf below stands a movable white marble vase for holding cut flowers. The inscription is as follows:

WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION OF OHIO

In Williams Street Methodist Church, Delaware, Ohio, June 3, 1874, was drafted the first State Constitution, giving name to the organization which grew out of the

WOMAN'S TEMPERANCE CRUSADE

Ratified at Springfield, Ohio, June 17, 1874, this became the basis of the Constitution of the

NATIONAL UNION

which consummated its organization, adopting the same name, at Cleveland, Ohio, in November, same year.

The entire tablet is finely polished, and it is considered an exquisite piece of workmanship. It is placed under the gallery terminal, at the right of the altar facing the audience, and just at the side of Williams street entrance.

This memorial, in its significant purity, will speak in silent words to coming generations, telling of the beginning of the great organization which, to-day, with its work and influence, is belting the globe.

Xenia, Ohio.

Woman's Ward.

Hospital Building.

Operating Room.

The Frances E. Willard National Temperance Hospital.

By Julia H. Thayer.

PERHAPS the most comprehensive and convincing object lesson as to what can be accomplished in the medical world without the aid of alcohol, is to be learned today at the Frances E. Willard National Temperance Hospital in Chicago.

The building on Sangamon street, just off Jackson Boulevard, originally a grand old mansion in a fashionable neighborhood, still offers to its inmates the advantages of plan and construction, comfort and convenience that were formerly enjoyed by its millionaire owner.

What impresses the visitor most strongly as she passes through the corridors and looks into the rooms and wards, is the spaciousness, airiness and wealth of sunlight in every apartment. The hospital feature seems nowhere visible. There is not one dark or gloomy spot in the great house. In nearly every room are three or four windows, and the wide outlook in all directions, including the beautiful sweep of green embraced in the ample grounds, must go far towards giving patients that freedom of spirit so recuperative in its influence and so well-nigh impossible in a cramped, depressing environment.

Good housekeeping is everywhere apparent in this model home for the afflicted. A close inspection of the rooms shows immaculate beds, bright screens, pretty sash curtains and cheery rugs, usually supplemented by an interesting individuality and a home atmosphere imparted by the occupants.

There are four wards: one for men, containing five beds, one for women, with seven beds, and others, with two or three beds. A pretty L. T. L. room, with two beds, is attractively furnished, and is kept in order by the L. T. L. of Los Angeles. Cal.

During the past year 315 patients have been treated, a large percent being surgical cases, with the result that the death rate has been only 4½ per cent.

As the medical staff is not a fixed body, but is composed of representatives of the Regular, Homeopathic and Eclectic schools,—patients choosing their own physicians—there is large opportunity offered for spreading the theories regarding non-alcoholic treatment. The hospital has the gratification of knowing that in adhering strictly to its principles, it has converted scores of physicians, changed the tone of medical journals and set an example which many other hospitals have in large measure followed. Better than all else, it has made thousands of converts in the home where the bottle has so long done its insidious work in the guise of healing.

Connected with the hospital is a training school for nurses, limited to twelve students. The course of study covers two years, and when the graduate leaves this school she ranks well with the nurse of the larger hospital and easily secures positions of responsibility and trust. She is often preferred by the staff physicians in private practice. Each nurse wears the white ribbon and receives education in Y work from the matron of the institution.

The hospital is largely supported by patients who come for board and treatment, but donations and free-will offerings are many, including even eggs, vegetables, canned fruits, jellies, towels, blankets and quilts. There are two endowed beds, one by the Illinois W. C. T. U. and one by Mrs. J. B. Hobbs, of Chicago.

A generous donation of $200, given in the name of Henrietta Skelton, came from California women early in the year, and the amount, with fifty dollars added, equipped the operating room with instruments and furniture necessary in major operations.

The periodic form of gossip to the effect that alcoholics are served to patients "on the sly," appears to have fallen into its own pit. Patients occasionally demand wine or brandy on the plea of their home physician's prescription, but to all such the hospital force turns a deaf ear, and when the patient will not yield the point she is quietly sent away.

During the past year the hospital has treated more patients than ever before, while many seeking admittance have been turned away for lack of room. The present quarters, admirable as they are in every way, are not sufficient for the ever-increasing demand upon them.

The hospital owns a five-thousand dollar piece of land, and its dream, sleeping and waking, is to erect thereon a building adequate to all its needs. Earnestly as such an end is to be desired, yet no structure built by man can ever approach in beauty and grandeur the temple of loving service and tender mercy which the Frances E. Willard Hospital has already reared in the hearts and lives of those who have found healing and light and truth within its sheltering walls.

Chicago.

Temperance and Medical Men. By T. D. Crothers, M. D.

THE medical profession in the last sixty years have on three distinct occasions publicly declared their views on the evils following the use of alcohol. The first declaration was published in 1839 and was signed by eighty-six physicians of England and Scotland. Many of them were leading men in the profession. The declaration consisted of a statement of the dangerous effects from alcohol when taken as a beverage, asserting that alcohol is not a food or tonic and should not be used except for special purposes. This was circulated, but received little notice at the time. The second declaration, published in 1847, consisted of four clauses. First, that a very large proportion of misery, crime, poverty and disease came from the use of alcoholic and fermented liquors as beverages. Second, that perfect health could come only from total abstinence. Third, advice to all persons to give up alcohol as the safest course to health. Fourth, that abstinence from the use of all alcohol as a beverage would contribute to the health, prosperity and longevity of the race.

This second statement was signed by 2,000 physicians, principally from the United Kingdom, India and on the continent. In this list there were names of more eminent men than in the first one. The third declaration appeared in 1871 and was signed by nearly 3,000 physicians, thirty-eight of whom were Americans; the number included many of the most eminent men in the medical profession. This declaration contained the same general statement as in the one published in 1847, only it was more emphatic in the condemnation of the use of alcohol as a beverage, and of its danger as a medicine, when used indiscriminately. It re-asserted the fact that alcohol had no food value, and that it is the source of more ill-health and disease than any other one cause.

At the time these statements were regarded as extreme by many persons, hence they did not attract much attention, but they served the purpose of showing that the profession recognized the great truths concerning the effects of alcohol.

Within the last twenty years several distinct medical associations have been formed for the purpose of promoting total abstinence and the growth of correct views concerning the effects of alcohol on the body. Four of the largest of these associations, namely, the British Medical Temperance Association, the American Medical Temperance Association, the Society of Medical Abstainers in Germany and the French Temperance Association, have arranged for a new statement the medical opinions concerning the action of alcohol. The purpose is to have a general agreement concerning certain great facts relating to the effects of alcohol, and publicly assert that these can be supported by statistical and other evidence. This manifesto has been signed by over 1,000 physicians, and it is being circulated freely in all civilized countries. The following is the text of the declaration:

In view of the terrible evils which have resulted from the consumption of alcohol, evils which in many parts of the world are rapidly increasing, we, members of the medical profession, feel it to be our duty, as being in some sense the guardians of the public health, to speak plainly of the nature of alcohol, and of the injury to the individual and the danger to the community which arise from the prevalent use of intoxicating liquors as beverages.

We think it ought to be known by all that:

1. Experiments have demonstrated that even a small quantity of alcoholic liquor, either immediately or after a short time, prevents perfect mental action, and interferes with the functions of the cells and tissues of the body, impairing self-control by producing progressive paralysis of the judgment and of the will; and having other markedly injurious effects. Hence alcohol must be regarded as a poison, and ought not to be classed among foods.

2. Observation establishes the fact that a moderate use of alcoholic liquors, continued over a number of years, produces a gradual deterioration of the tissues of the body, and hastens the changes which old age brings, thus increasing the average liability to disease (especially to infectious disease), and shortening the duration of life.

3. Total abstainers, other conditons being similar, can perform more work, possess greater powers of endurance, have on the average less sickness, and recover more quickly than non-abstainers, especially from infectious diseases, while they altogether escape diseases specially caused by alcohol.

4. All the bodily functions of a man, as of every other animal, are best performed in the absence of alcohol, and any supposed experience to the contrary is founded on delusion, a result of the action of alcohol on the nerve centers.

5. Further, alcohol tends to produce in the offspring of drinkers an unstable nervous system, lowering them mentally, morally and physically. Thus deterioration of the race threatens us, and this is likely to be greatly accelerated by the alarming increase of drinking among women, who have hitherto been little addicted to this vice. Since the mothers of the coming generation are thus involved the importance and danger of this increase cannot be exaggerated.

Seeing, then, that the common use of alcoholic beverages is always and everywhere followed, sooner or later, by moral, physical and social results of a most serious and threatening character, and that it is the cause, direct or indirect, of a very large proportion of the poverty, suffering, vice, crime, lunacy, disease and death, not only in the case of those who take such beverages, but in the case of others who are unavoidably associated with them, we feel warranted, nay, compelled to urge the general adoption of total abstinence from all intoxicating liquors as beverages as the surest, simplest and quickest method of removing the evils which necessarily result from their use. Such a course is not only universally safe, but is also natural.

We believe that such an era of health, happiness and prosperity would be inaugurated thereby that many of the social problems of the present age would be solved.

Hartford, Conn.

An Equal Suffrage Examination Paper.

IN TWO PARTS—PART I.

Answers by Ellis Meredith.

JUDGE BEN. B. LINDSAY, of Denver, Col., is one of the youngest men ever elected to the bench. As judge of the county court he has the reputation of having kept more boys out of the Industrial School—a reformatory institution—than any man in the state. His record is so well known that he ran some 1,500 votes ahead of his ticket. Women who were acquainted with what he had done, voted for him without regard to party, though his opponent was a gentleman of unusually fine character and standing. A judge who is an honor to his profession is sometimes called on to hand down decisions ex-officio, and this has been the case with Judge Lindsay. I quote the following letter because of its cordial endorsement of equal suffrage, and its bearing on what follows:

Denver, Colo., Dec. 20, 1902.

My Dear Miss Meredith:

Enclosed is a copy of a letter I have received from a student of the University of Kansas. Personally, I should like very much if you could answer, or get someone to answer, all of these inquiries for me or for the young gentleman. I understand there is going to be an effort to adopt woman suffrage in Kansas, and when I was in Lawrence recently (to deliver an address on the juvenile court and probation system at their State Conference of Charities and Corrections), I found the state university students there very much interested in the question, and I should like, for the good of the cause of woman suffrage—which I heartily approve of—to answer the communication satisfactorily. I am so terribly rushed here, however, that it occurred to me you might be able to attend to the matter.

The letter from the Kansan is the most searching thing in the nature of an examination paper that has come this way since the departure of M. Ferdinand Deschamps, who arrived in this country with a little list of 52 questions on the equal suffrage text, about half of them dealing with the relation which the vote has had on family life. He discarded them all within a week after his arrival, saying that they were quite useless, as, so far as he could learn, the franchise had in no way affected the family.

Inasmuch as this letter is a sample of dozens that are received right along, it may be of interest to know the questions that arise in the minds of the inquiring. I will treat the queries as if they were a regular examination, and fill in the answers, merely stating parenthetically that I do not approve of the examination system, and that I never was very good at these tests even when they were part of the unavoidable in life. The young man writes:

Judge B. Lindsay, Denver Colo.

Dear Sir:—As a student of sociology and of sociological problems in Kansas university, under Prof. Blackmar, I desire information concerning the status and practical workings of woman suffrage in Colorado. May I ask the favor of a reply to some or all of the following questions?

It may be a detail, but still it is worth remembering, that the name of the organization of women that secured the passage of the law enfranchising women is the Colorado Equal Suffrage Association. In our campaign we avoided talking of "woman" suffrage, woman's rights or even her wrongs. What we asked for was equality. Now for the questions:

Q.—"What is the attitude of the women themselves on woman suffrage—do they favor or oppose it?"

The vast majority favor it; some who did oppose it have changed their views; others have become confirmed in them. Some who were in favor, believing it would immediately bring about the millennium, are much disheartened because, as yet, when the lion and the lamb lie down together in Colorado, as elsewhere, the lamb is on the inside.

Q.—"Were they actively interested in obtaining the passage of the law in 1893?"

They campaigned the whole state, impressed everyone into the service, and never rested until the battle was won, the governor's proclamation made, and the first woman registered under the new law was Eliza F. Routt, wife of ex-Governor Routt.

Q.—"Do they take an interest in political questions, and do they keep informed by reading political newspapers?"

They do take an interest, and try to keep informed. Are there any unpolitical newspapers?

Q.—"In a general sense, do the women vote, and do they vote as their husbands, brothers or fathers vote?"

They do vote. Figures procured from the county clerk of Arapahoe and other county clerks prove this past dispute. They are not so partisan, as a rule, as are men, and they are apt to be very independent. So far, however, no woman has divorced her husband, beaten her brother or disinherited her father for voting the opposition ticket.

Q.—"What effect has their presence had on politics, in the primaries, conventions, political meetings, at the polls?"

In regard to primaries and conventions, it depends largely on the party managers. In the campaign of '99 Chairman Maloney refused to permit any primary to be held in or near a saloon. Men say, newspaper men who ought to know, that conventions now are tame affairs. What they must have been prior to '93 is beyond my imagination, but if they were any worse than now, only a menagerie turned loose in a lunatic asylum, to an accompaniment of red fire and "rag time" could surpass them. Among the laws for which the women declared, independent of party, in 1894, was a primary law, and at last the political leaders have gotten around to their way of thinking. We hope to get it this century.

Q.—"Are better men nominated for office?"

We haven't sent any public official to the penitentiary lately, but we ought to. There is an effort to put men of clean morals on the tickets, but a candidate is frequently better when he is seeking an office than after he gets it.

Q.—"What Colorado state offices are now held by women?"

Mrs. Helen L. Grenfell has just been re-elected for the third time state superintendent of Public Instruction. This is the only state elective office which has ever been held by a woman. There have been women members of the house of representatives at each session since that of '93.

Q.—"Is there any tendency to elect women to certain county offices, and, if so, to what ones?—for what ostensible reason?"

Over half the counties in the state have women superintendents of public instruction—for obvious reasons. There have been a few women elected as county clerks, and at least one as a county treasurer.

Q.—"What political reformations, if any, have resulted from woman suffrage?"

Only four of a purely political nature. First, election day is absolutely orderly and quiet, save in a few precincts where there are very few women. Disturbances have occurred in these downtown sections; but, taking it all in all, no more on election day than on other days. Second, the independent vote is larger. Third, the better class of men are coming to see how they have been ruled by politicians, and are revolting. Hence the general favor with which a primary law, something like that of Minnesota, is regarded. Fourth, the removal of the emblems from the Australian ballot.

Q.—"Have any class or other special laws been passed due to their influence?"

Yes; the following laws were endorsed by the women and passed largely by their efforts:

Women have been made co-equal guardians of their children.

The age of consent has been raised to eighteen.

A State Home for dependent children has been established, also a State Industrial School for girls.

The emblems have been removed from the ballots.

The Humane Society has been made a state institution.

Humane education is compulsory in the public schools.

Insurance companies that have to be sued to recover are compelled to stand the costs of such suit. This bill was endorsed by every woman's organization in the state and passed practically unanimously in 1901.

A law for the better preservation of forest trees was also endorsed by the women.

The Bi-Weekly pay-day was largely the result of the testimony of women before the committee appointed to investigate the condition of the coal miners.

The State Board of Charities and Corrections has been given the power to investigate private eleemosynary institutions, which has shut up at least two such alleged charities that had long imposed upon the public.

They endorsed a bill prohibiting the use of the flag for advertising purposes, another providing for a truancy or parental school, also a school for the feeble minded, neither of which have yet been established, a law making the ballot more truly secret, five of the six amendments, and several others among the one hundred and sixteen bills of the Thirteenth General Assembly. The five amendments endorsed by them, carried. The sixth, for a limited form of single tax, was endorsed by many women and opposed by more. It was defeated. The other five were for:

An eight-hour law; full citizenship as a qualification for voters; Home Rule for Denver, and the two bills necessary to establish biennial elections.

The only bill passed recently in spite of active opposition in which women generally took part, was the re-establishment of capital punishment.

The bills which they actively supported, but failed to get passed, were the primary election law, precinct option for the sale of liquor and the initiative and referendum.

Q.—"Has justice been more effective, or has woman suffrage interfered with it in anyway?"

Laws for the protection of women and children, prohibiting the employment of children under fourteen, furnishing seats for women clerks, etc., have been better enforced. There is no other preceptible effect, though some lawyers claim that the woman generally fares better than she used to before her enfranchisement.

Q.—"Do women sit as jurors, and how are they regarded in such capacity—fair and capable?"

Women have been "called" a good many times, but "few were chosen." In fact, only one woman has served on a jury. This was Mrs. J. S. Sperry, of Pueblo. She was drawn on a coroner's jury, November, 1889, and proved very acceptable.

Q.—"Are there more or a less number of criminals among the women in the state since the passage of the law in 1893?"

There are no more, unless we except the one woman arrested for repeating last fall. She had not realized the enormity of her crime, and she almost died of grief and shame when she did. In the meantime, at least 1,000 votes were cast by men repeaters who were not arrested. The Democrats who carried Denver will probably admit so much, while the Republicans who failed to carry it, claim that at least 4,000 illegal votes were polled. The "watchers" of both parties must have limited their efforts to this one lone woman.

Denver, Col.

(Continued in March Magazine Number.)

Mr. Milton George.

The Illinois Manual Training School Farm

By Stella Perceval North.

Mrs. Milton George.

THE homeless boy of the Twentieth Century has a better chance than ever before to grow to his full mental and physical stature, in spite of the seeming increase of crime and debauchery in large cities, and the Illinois Manual Training School Farm is a living demonstration that environment is the cause of nine-tenths of the good and evil in the world.

Sixteen years ago, Mr. Oscar Dudley conceived the idea of a refuge for dependent boys, and through his efforts a small home was started a short distance from Chicago. This site proving too close to the city and too small for the great work begun, Mr. and Mrs. Milton George, themselves lovers of unfortunate boys, gave for the institution their splendid farm of three hundred acres, located at Glenwood, twenty-four miles from Chicago. This gift was conditioned upon the raising of forty thousand dollars for building purposes, and today the beautiful acres, improved with twelve fine buildings, defy evil in the name of truth, cleanliness, wholesome food and congenial work.

The whole scheme of the institution is worthy of study by every large city where thousands of boys, through want and vicious companionship, are constantly swelling the records of the criminal court.

Leaving the train at Glenwood the visitor is surprised and delighted with the spectacle that meets his eyes. A gravel driveway leads to the handsome Administration Building which stands in the midst of the substantial brick structures, comprising seven cottages, a receiving cottage and hospital combined, Clancy Hall, School House and Manual Training Building. Each cottage is the home of thirty boys, presided over by a motherly matron, who looks after the cleanliness and daily habits of the inmates. The lower floor of these homes contains a library, sewing room and matron's room. The upper floor is devoted to sleeping rooms, six in number, with five single beds in each. The large lavatory has twelve stationary marble bowls, with a towel for each boy. The basement of the cottage is used as a play room in inclement weather. In point of absolute cleanliness and sanitation, these cottages are as well kept as any hospital.

The school is graded, and it keeps in touch with the public schools of the city as nearly as possible. Manual Training Building includes a carpenter shop, lathe room, shoe shop and forge. Here during the winter the boys spend half the day. They also assist in the laundry, bakery and in many other places, besides cultivating the large farm under the supervision of able directors. The Administration Building contains a fine circulating library, parlors and reception room, back of which are the dining room and kitchen.

If the visitor wishes to witness a sight which he will never forget let him stand at one end of the large dining-room just before the mid-day meal is served. The long tables are covered with spotless linen, a fresh napkin at each place. At half past twelve, while one of the teachers plays a march on the piano, the large doors are opened, and three hundred boys who but a short time ago were buffeted about the hard streets of a big city, with perhaps no better home than a barrel or a dry-goods box and possibly no food but that which was stolen—three hundred of these boys march quietly to their respective places at the tables. A prayer is sung and a blessing repeated in unison before a morsel from the bountifully spread tables is touched. It seems incredible that in so short a time these hungry boys can have been taught such self-control. Strong men and women turn away from this scene with tears in their eyes, realizing that for the best of us the path of integrity to high ideals is a strong one and that each of these three hundred faces shows a slowly awakening conscience that from now on must decide many a desperate battle between right and wrong.

ONE OF THE COTTAGES.

When asked how order is maintained among those devoid of all responsibility, the reply is that insubordination is unknown in the school. Occasionally a boy runs away, but truancy of this kind is to be found in the best families. Those in charge say that the secret of Glenwood discipline is constant, congenial occupation of mind and body, together with military training, utilized for teaching promptness, obedience and neatness; but every visitor will take with him a conviction that it is the spirit of love which dominates Glenwood.

HAPPY TIMES IN THE BIG DINING HALL.

A few facts gathered from parents, visitors, teachers and the boys themselves, give one the best idea of the inner workings of this place:

The general health of the school is good, there having occurred no death during the last year. A home feeling is created and cultivated. Sometimes boys wish to try the world for themselves, but they are always glad to return to the farm. One boy, now employed in a large dry-goods house, often visits the school, and he says he feels homesick when the time comes for him to leave and go back to the city. Generous givers, church and other sewing societies, make it possible to keep the clothes store-room piled high with substantial clothing. Of all the institutions of the kind in the United States, Glenwood has the lowest expense per capita. The institution is neither sectarian nor sectional. It is only a matter of time when the school will be run entirely upon the endowment plan, but until then citizens are called upon for assistance. Six hundred boys are cared for each year.

Some of the boys are more fortunate than others, being destined to homes of refinement after they have received training at the school, while others are sent out west to homes with thrifty farmers who promise schooling and religious teaching. A few of the boys start a business life in the city. There are Glenwood boys in positions of trust in many of Chicago's best business houses.

This placing of boys in good homes is a very delicate work for the mangement. The chief aim is to remove children as far as possible from their old environment and to find homes in each case suited to the individual boy, at the same time considering congeniality on the part of the new parents, in order that the most helpful associations may be insured on both sides.

Any one wishing to adopt or indenture one of these boys, may write to, or personally visit, the farm, giving a description of the kind of boy desired. The manager with the utmost care selects the boy who most nearly answers to the description, and after a three months' trial if, for any reason, the new parents are not satisfied, the boy may be returned and another one tried.

Nor is the welfare of the boy overlooked. Each application for a child must contain the names of at least two responsible citizens to whom the managers of the school may apply for references as to the ability of such person to care for and educate the child sought. When possible, brothers are placed in the same town, and watchful agents visit the new homes of children to see that the school's wards are happily and well placed, while both boys and foster parents are encouraged to keep up a correspondence with the school.

The following is one of the many letters received from those who have been placed in homes:

Dear Sir:—I thought I would write to you to let you know how I like this place. I like it very well, and I don't have to work very hard. It is just the same as home to me. I had a pretty fair education before I came out here and Mr. B. says he will send me to school one or two years more. I like to work on a farm very much as it gives me a chance to drive horses. Give my love to the boys.

Hoping this finds you well, I remain, one of your boys, Yours truly,

Peter P.

May soul riches be the heritage of those whose means and hearts make possible the constant growth and enlargement of this institution builded upon the rock of good citizenship!

Chicago.

UNDER THE WHITE RIBBON.

BY MARY HENRY-ROSSITER.

A Mother's Appeal.

THE Bible does not contain a great deal of specific instruction concerning the training of children. Christ himself taught not so much by precept as by example. Long ago we learned by studying Him that TO BE is better than any theory or system. We must ourselves be what we wish our children and our pupils to be.

On this point, moreover, as to what we must ourselves be, there is no lack in the Scriptures of the most definite information. Everywhere throughout both the Old and the New Testament we find the great fundamental principles of life and character, of truth, and growth, and purity, stated and emphasized, illustrated and reiterated, and there is one very beautiful expression in which all these principles are united in the most simple and graphic manner. We first find this expression in I. Cor., xvi: 29, the last clause, "Worship the Lord in the beauty of holiness." It is repeated in Psalm xxix: 2, and Psalm xcvi: 9.

The Bible abounds in poetic and picturesque symbols and characterizations—the concrete expression of abstract realities—but among them all none sets before us a more beautiful and inspiring ideal than this: The beauty of holiness.

Long ago we recognized the beauty of holiness—for old people. We often picture the aged, those who have passed through the storms of life and are safely at rest in the peaceful haven of old age. We often picture these as engaged in joyous meditation upon various high virtues, humility, meekness, unselfishness, holiness, as if they belonged exclusively to riper years, as if their possession and contemplation had nothing to do with youth and action. This, however, is a great mistake, and it seems to me of the greatest importance that our W. C. T. U. women should come to understand as never before how this particular virtue of holiness belongs especially to the young, and may be enjoyed and rejoiced in by them, as much as by any other class of people, if not more.

In the broadest sense, the word "holiness" has a twofold meaning. There is first the beautiful spiritual significance of purity, godliness, god-likeness. In this meaning it can belong only to those who have won it by prayer and sacrifice, by self-conquest and the baptism of the Holy Spirit. It is in this meaning exclusively, that most of us understand it and think of it.

But there is another and truer meaning, and, in fact, a more literal meaning, in which this word signifies nothing more or less than health, health of body as well as of mind, health of the whole being, the threefold unit, body, mind and spirit.

The word "holiness" comes from the Anglo-Saxon halig, from the root word hal, which means hale, hearty, sound, whole. The word "health" comes from the same root, is in reality the root-word with slight modification. This root word hal, our present word "health," and from which the word holiness is derived, signifies saved, saved because of hal-ness, or hole-ness, which is wholeness or holiness. So the very root idea of holiness is health, and the root idea of health is holiness.

The New Testament writers recognized this. In II. Cor., vii: 1, we read: "Dearly beloved, let us cleanse ourselves from all filthiness of the flesh and spirit, perfecting holiness in the fear of God." The flesh and the spirit are made coordinate, and both have to do with the perfecting of holiness.

The spiritual side of holiness is often brought to our attention, but the relation of physical conditions to purity and health of mind, to beauty and perfection of character, is not understood and emphasized as practically as it should be. This is something, however, that eminently concerns mothers and the teachers of children, for they control almost absolutely the physical conditions affecting their little ones.

It is in reality, the beauty of holiness that we desire for the precious children intrusted to our care. We all pray that our children be good. We all desire—if we do not pray—that they be healthy and beautiful. We ought to pray that they be healthy and beautiful just as earnestly as we pray for their goodness, for goodness, health, and beauty are one. Goodness is the perfection of character; health is the perfection of body. Neither is complete without the other, and beauty is the happy and perfect union of the two.

As we all know, to pray sincerely and effectively we must work to make the answer possible. If we would bring this principle of the beauty of holiness into our homes as a living agency for good, we must live the principle. We must realize its practical application to everyday life, its definite bearing not only upon our habits of thinking and reading and talking, but upon other habits equally important in the formation of character: habits of eating, of drinking, of dressing, of exercising, of sleeping. Fresh air and sunshine are just as essential to the promotion of holiness as is the reading of the Bible. Physical disease and suffering follow sins against the laws of nature just as inevitably as spiritual disease and suffering follow sins against the moral and spiritual law. The man who keeps late hours in the most righteous society and in the most uplifting occupation and the man who keeps late hours drinking and carousing must pay the same penalty so far as the late hours and loss of sleep are concerned. The woman who gives her children unsuitable food and trains them in unwholesome habits of living is as far from inculcating the beauty of holiness as is the one who gives them unsuitable mental food and who teaches false standards of morality.

I am emphasizing the physical aspects of holiness because we do not often think about them. We know in a general indefinite way that character is affected by bodily conditions, but that we are individually responsible for these conditions, hence for their influence upon our own characters and the lives of our children, is seldom suggested.

Too often we regard our state of health or disease as an inheritance, a gift or a curse of nature, a dispensation of Providence, something with which our personal conduct has no more to do than it has with our height or the color of our hair. We simply endure it or enjoy it; perhaps we grumble about it, as if it were a hump or a legacy. Sometimes we do worse than this; we laugh at our own and our neighbors' sins against physical law as if they had nothing in common with moral obligations. How often we say of some favorite drink or tempting dish: "I know it isn't good for me but I can't resist it," or "I can't give it up." We realize that sewing too steadily, or working too long indoors, or wearing tight shoes, makes us cross and despondent, but that it is a sin to eat things, or drink things, to wear things or do things, that make us irritable, lazy, or even sick, never enters our minds. But in the light of the true meaning of holiness there is no distinction between physical sin and moral sin. Indeed, the truest conception of man, made in the image of God, regards the soul and the body as one. The body is an integral part of man. It is the elemental part. It is his body that dintinguishes him from God and from the beast. Without his human body a man would not be man—we do not know what he would be. We do not know what he is to be in the life hereafter, under changed physical and spiritual conditions. We know simply this: that in all our acquaintance with him from the cradle to the grave, body and soul are closely united; the physical and the spiritual are so wonderfully and intimately blended that neither can ever in the slightest degree be disassociated from the other.

Sometimes we hear people say they shall be so glad to get rid of their bodies. Then the spirit can be free. This, however, is an impossibility. We never can get rid of our bodies. The physical habits we form shape inevitably and forever our characters. There is no escaping them. From their eternal and powerful influence the spirit never can be free.

This would be a terrible thought, a terrible fact, were it not for the ideal expressed in the true conception of holiness. We may, if we wish, make both soul and body holy. We must do this if we are to win immortal life.

Paul recognized the unity of the human life when he wrote to the Corinthians: "Know ye not that ye are the temple of God, and that the Spirit of God dwelleth in you?" and then again: "Know ye not that your body is the temple of the Holy Ghost?" Whether he said YE or YOUR BODY made no difference in the case.

Paul added to this solemn statement: "If any man defile the temple of God, him shall God destroy; for the temple of God is holy, which temple ye are."

The law of this world restrains us from tearing down our neighbors' houses, setting them afire, breaking in the windows. How careful we are not to destroy our own dwellings, not to mar or scratch or burn their beautiful woodwork, not to break their costly windows. Almost never do we hear of a human creature mean enough to desecrate a church. But many of us are daily and hourly injuring our bodies, these temples of the living God, with never a thought that we are sinning. We never can worship the Lord in the true beauty of holiness, and we never can make holiness seem beautiful and desirable to the young, until we do recognize in a practical way that the body is the temple of God and that true holiness includes physical beauty, perfection, and health.

Evanston, Ill.

It Is Common.

So are the stars and the arching skies,
So are the smiles in the children's eyes;
Common the life-giving breath of the spring;
So are the songs which the wild-birds sing—
Blessed be God, they are common.

Common the grass in its glowing green;
So is the water's glistening sheen;
Common the springs of love and mirth;
So are the holiest gifts on earth.

Common the fragrance of rosy June;
So is the generous harvest moon,
So are the towering mighty hills,
So are the twittering, trickling rills.

So unto all are the promises given,
So unto all is the hope of Heaven;
Common the rest from the weary strife;
So is the life which is after life—
Blessed be God, it is common.

—Selected.

"There is so little room for discouragement in life if we only determine to keep our standard high enough that the light from above can always illuminate it. If we study well the cause of much of our discouragement and discontent we will find it within ourselves. We have been forgetful, perhaps, of our high calling and the true object of all human life and have wasted our substance in those things that make for failure and breed remorse and the end was assured. But God's 'chances' are fitted to all such emergencies and we may measure up once more to our full stature if we are wise enough to seize them."

Old Amesbury Homestead.

My Whittier Days.

Amesbury—Oak Knoll.

By L. Mabel Freese.

Ruins of Amesbury Home.

I. Amesbury.

AN immortal day was added to my list when, in company with my uncle, a lover of Whittier, I visited the quiet village of Amesbury and the rambling house which was for so many years the home of our Quaker poet.

The day at Amesbury was not a sunny day, but one of a succession of uncertain, hazy days. Yet from the moment that we left the city of Haverhill, where Whittier attended the Academy and later edited The Haverhill Gazette, until the evening shadows fell and the trip was ended, a golden shower of hallowed influence was falling upon us.

The electrics run past the old homestead in East Haverhill, where Whittier was born and lived the greater part of the time until he was thirty years old. One cannot look at the wood-surrounded place without recalling "Snow Bound," the finely told tale of his early life, called by him "Flemish pictures of old days." As we continued, "The Barefoot Boy," with its cheery, glad ring came to mind, and we realized that Whittier's simple life, full of toil and near to nature's heart, has endeared him to all hearts as a life of luxury and ease could never have done.

Upon arriving in Amesbury we walked to the humble Quaker meeting house which was always the home church of the Whittiers. It is in a very retired spot, and all seemed so quiet and peaceful that we almost felt the orthodox slumber steal over us that Gail Hamilton wrote about when she once attended meeting there.

Leaving the golden silence of the little white chuch behind us, we passed down Friend street to the modest house which was the real home of the poet. On the front of the house is the inscription:

"Whittier's Home
1836–1892."

In response to our rap at the front door with the brass eagle knocker, Mrs. Emily B. Smith, president of the Whittier Home Association, greeted us with kindly courtesy and showed us over the house and garden.

The home and furnishings are the same as when the poet was there. In the parlor, which is at the right of the front door, are the pictures of his mother and his sister Elisabeth. He once remarked that his home was where his mother's picture hung, and at her death he wrote his friend Charles Sumner, "Half the motive power of life is gone." Elisabeth was the last of "the household hearts that were his own," and, in referring to the "Vanishers," the first poem written after her death, he said, "How strange it seems not to read it to my sister."

Two other objects of interest in the parlor are the statue representing slavery and the picture of Fisk Jubilee singers who came to sing to the self-sacrificing defender of anti-slavery principles.

In the sitting-room, Whittier's little bedroom for over twenty years, before the house was enlarged, is the desk on which for over thirty years his famous poems were written. In this room is the portrait of Harriet Beecher Stowe, "the stern water drinker," his album with the pictures of the friends so dearly loved, also his marked copy of Thomas á Kempis. Here, too, occupying a place of honor on the stand between the two windows, is the picture of Lady Henry Somerset, presented to Whittier by Frances E. Willard. As the handwriting was recognized, there came a glad thrill that these two were in such hearty accord on the temperance question. Some of Whittier's first writings were for temperance, and I recall one verse dear to white ribbon hearts, written of the donor of the picture:

She knew the power of banded ill
But knew that right was stronger still,
And organized for doing good
The world's united womanhood.

Ah, "Poet Laureate of New England," as Miss Willard called you, you were like her in more ways than one, and most of all in your blameless record and love for humanity.

Less than a month before Whittier died, he wrote the following letter:

To Frances E. Willard.

Hampton Falls, N. H., 8th mo., 11, 1892.

My Very Dear Friend:—I cannot let cousin Gertrude's letter go without expressing my deep and tender sympathy with thee. I know what it is to lose a mother—a loss I have never forgotten. But how much we have to be thankful for in the blessed assurance that all is well with our dear ones.

The Whittier Kitchen in Whittier's Birthplace, 1688, Haverhill.

Go, call for the mourner and raise the lament;
Let the tresses be torn and the garments be rent;
But give to the living the passion of tears,
Who walk in a valley of sadness and fears;
Who are pressed in the combat, in darkness are lost;
But weep not for those who shall sorrow no more,
Whose warfare is ended, whose trial is o'er.
Let the song be exalted, triumphant the chord,
And rejoice for the dead who die in the Lord!

I am sure the calling hence of thy beloved mother will only stimulate thee in thy work for the living. We can leave our dead with the Lord; they are safe with him. His blessing be with thee!

The room next to the little bedroom is now full of objects illustrating his poems. Among the excellent collection may be seen the cradle of old Capt. Bagley, some of Barbara Fretchie's embroidery, Mabel Martin's mug, an old footstool and warming pan, some eagles' quills from Lake Superior, and a blanket that his mother spun and wove. Hanging on the walls of this room is an unpublished poem written for an Amesbury Agricultural Fair, the closing verse of which reads,

Oh! hearts must break with pain and loss,
And mourners bow beneath the cross,
But well we know whate'er befall,
Thy love keeps watch above us all!

The study built out into the garden, and more commonly known as the Garden Room, is the room of the house. Here is where long stood the desk mentioned above, and it was in this room that he composed "Snow Bound" and the greater number of his poems.

His one extravagance was a wood fire, and he kept his wood in the closet opening out of this room, the floor of which is worn in places by his constant stepping back and forth. His hat and coat hanging on the hooks where he always hung them, and his rubbers lying in the covered basket where it was his custom to keep them, show his methodical ways.

There are marks of ink upon the table where he laid his pen when sitting in his rocking chair near the window, and his books and pictures are all around, until it seems that this poet of the heart and spirit, the kind, liberal, charitable man, must step in to greet us in his peaceful, friendly way, and say now, as he wrote years ago, the words true with reference to any form of slavery: "There can be no union with slavery. We must first be pure before we can be peaceable men."

In the garden room is the pressed gentian sent to him by Lucy Larcom which occasioned the poem by the same name. On the desk is Longfellow's picture, and hanging over it is Burns' and the heather sent to him from Scotland which prompted the poem on Burns.

Whittier said of this poet, who early influenced his literary life, "When I read Burns I thought I could become a poet because he wrote of common things."

As I sat awhile at the desk where the burning songs of freedom were written and some of the sweetest religious poems the world has ever known, my soul echoed the grateful tribute: "I am thankful for what I have lived to see and hear of the man who 'could not do without God."

With the spell of this room still upon us, we passed out into the garden from which the poet was buried, lingering among the flowers and apple trees and resting upon the rustic seat. Truly to those who visit the Whittier home, the words of "Snow Bound" come with a vital meaning.

Look where we may, the wide world o'er,
Those lighted faces smile no more.
We tread the paths their feet have worn,
We sit beneath their orchard trees.

We turn the pages that they read,
Their written words we linger o'er,
But in the sun they cast no shade,
No voice is heard, no sign is made,
No step is on the conscious floor!
Yet Love will dream, and Faith will trust;
(Since He who knows our need is just)
That somehow, somewhere, meet we must.

After a peep into the guest chamber where so many famous men and women have slept, and into Whittier's up-stairs bedroom, with books everywhere, we are presented a piece of the garden room paper as a souvenir, and we go away, on our lips that part of Whittier's "Our Master" which has been arranged into a hymn, and in our hearts an earnest of a better life.

Bangor, Maine.

Hymn. By Isabella Howe Fiske.

THOU who lovest man and sendest sorrow,
Teach us to trust Thee when the skies are gray,
Knowing there will be better life tomorrow,
Clearer horizons after storms today.

Bid the high hills share with our souls their vision,
Bid the green vales teach our hearts to be pure,
Bid the wide waters lend our lives ambition,
Bid the bright stars show us that Heaven is sure.

Let us draw near to Thee as to no other,
Glad to come forth from graves of doubt and fear.
And, in the need of each appealing brother,
Find that the brotherhood of Christ is near.

Shirking no burden that is ours to shoulder,
Shunning no joy Thou sendest for our own.
Grant to our souls by each day's length grown older,
To be so much the nearer to Thy Throne.

Wellesley Farms, Mass.

A Fight Against Odds

By Kate Anderson.

Copyrighted by Woman's Temperance Publishing Association.

(Synopsis of Preceding Chapters.)

[The Kilgour family, who have been bereft of husband and father by a railroad wreck caused by the blunder of a drunken engineer, are engaged in a desperate struggle to save the idolized youngest son, Claude, from the curse of cigaret smoking. The boy succeeds in completely deceiving them for a time, but is finally discovered to be a frequenter of the lowest dive in the disreputable city. At first he denies this, then admits that he was lying. His brother Ralph gives him a horsewhipping, and a systematic campaign is begun to keep him from the cigaret vice. He is deprived of money and liberty. Willie, another brother, is taken ill with typhoid fever. Claude steals money from his sister Alice's purse and smokes. His mother faints on learning what he has done. In the confusion he escapes.]

Chapter V.

WHEN Ralph returned in twenty minutes, Claude was gone. A quick and thorough search of the entire premises revealed no trace of the wretched boy. Returning to the room where Alice sat with her mother, he beckoned her out and despatched her for Clara Meredith, while he took her place by the bedside where the stricken mother lay motionless, save for an occasional anguished moan. Half an hour later, leaving Miss Mededith in charge of their mother, the brother and sister left the house to search for Claude.

"Hurry straight to Mr. Haverson's" (the Methodist minister), admonished Ralph. "He is discreet and is a good friend. Ask him to visit the railway stations, while I will try the ferry docks; then come right home and keep a sharp lookout, for it is just possible that Claude is hiding in some hole waiting for a good opportunity to escape."

Ralph proved, after all, correct in this latter conjecture, for when he and Mr. Haverson returned, about nine o'clock, they found that Allie had discovered Claude in an old unused coal bin down cellar. He had attempted to dash past her, but she was too quick for him and had him securely locked down by both doors. Hastily returning to the parlor, after seeing Alice, Ralph briefly explained to the minister that Claude had not left the house, after all. Mr. Haverson at once withdrew, waving aside all Ralph's broken attempts at thanks and assuring him that the unhappy circumstances would not be mentioned. Then he went down cellar, where Claude was rushing round like a wild animal, in an endeavor to work his way out. Ralph paid no attention to him but picked up a small bundle which Claude had evidently packed with haste. It contained some filthy pictures, two packages of cigarets, a suit of underclothing, two trashy, low, paper-covered novels, a ferocious-looking second-hand revolver, and about four dollars in money, besides some valuable Krueger coins which Ralph had brought back from Africa.

Then ensued a stormy scene, at least on Claude's part. The misguided boy broke forth in the vernacular of the literature upon which he had been feeding, threatening to shoot the whole family, to burn down the house, and like desperate measures. He tried to seize, from Ralph's hand, the already loaded revolver, and he bit his brother severely. Claude was, indeed, at that time, quite capable of putting his fearful threats into execution, and Ralph, whose strength, fortunately, was that of a young Hercules, carried him struggling up to his own bedroom and locked him in the closet, while he cleared the room of matches, razor, keys, and every article by which the crazed boy could either commit injury or effect an escape. He forced Claude to undress and get into bed. Then he carried away his clothes, with all of his own which were in the room, and went away, locking the door after him.

The next day Claude's mood had utterly changed. He was all sobs and penitence, ready to promise anything and everything in the way of future reform, and he expressed himself as only too anxious to submit to any measures and penalties in order to prove his contrition.

"Claude," said Ralph, "any measures and restrictions which have been, or will be, applied to you, are not, as you will understand, intended either as punishment or revenge for your misconduct. We have left your deserts out of the question in dealing with you, and we shall continue to do so. Our object is to employ any method that will cure you of this accursed habit, which has blunted, indeed, utterly destroyed all natural affections and impulses, robbed you of even an understanding of truth and honor, in short, has made you, at fourteen, a desperado, blackguard, and a low sneak thief—an all-round criminal of the lowest and most vicious type. I do not deny that vile company and viler literature have contributed to your downfall, but I still believe that had you never, in the first place, begun the use of cigarets, your moral sensibilities would never have become so dulled as to lead you, of your own accord, into these other vices.

"Everything has been tried with you; for a year you have watched our mother's hair turning white with anguish for her baby; you have seen your only sister change from a gay, light-hearted girl, to a grave, sad-faced young woman, weighted down with the responsibility of trying to make up in every way she can to your poor mother for the loss of a devoted and good father and the unspeakably more agonizing heartache of an unloving and wicked child. They have prayed with you, helped you, and loved you through everything. Our brother lies at the point of death, and through all his delirium he prayed that God would save Claude. As for myself, while I live, I shall never forgive myself for my wicked shortsightedness in allowing you to take that job at the hostelry—not that I think you encountered any temptations there, especially under my eye, which you would not have met with in any other situation, but you were not thrown into contact with Christian people, or even people whose general sympathies were on the side of the right. There was nothing there to uplift or to direct a boy's thoughts to the higher things of life; and I greatly blame myself. You can see for yourself, Claude, that a change has taken place in me. I have found poor Willie's Savior, and with His help I am resolved to devote myself to His service, and, so far as possible, atone for my past wicked carelessness. Claude, I pray that you may be led to seek and find the only sure way to rid yourself of this yoke.

"Now, I am going to keep you locked in here for a week, until I think what to do with you. I shall bring up your meals myself. The board partition between the clothes-closet and bathroom will be removed. The bathroom door will also be kept locked when not in use, and you can use the sliding panel from the closet, which I shall have fixed. I shall send up your dumb-bells and clubs, so I guess that for a week or two, at least, you will come to no serious harm for want of exercise. Your Bible and school books will also be sent up, together with Willie's tool-chest, with which you are quite handy, and materials to make a set of hanging shelves, with some pictures to frame and broken chairs which have been standing in the attic waiting to be mended.

"Now, Claude, we are all praying for you, and are going to visit you and help you all we can, but you must try to do your part. I must go now, as it is almost time to go to work, and I have had no dinner."

For the next week Willie made rapid improvement, and Doctor Meredith finally announced that with great care, the worst danger was now over and a recovery might safely be counted on. He, however, especially warned them that the only chance still lay in unremitting and watchful care, even more now than during the delirium.

In another week, Willie had so greatly progressed that the doctor permitted one or two devoted schoolmates to take turns in sitting up with him. The fourth night, it was Alf. Bristol who came. Alf. and Willie had been fast friends from babyhood, though Alf. had left school six months before in order to take a situation.

"Now, Alf.", explained Allie, "you know how wildly hungry typhoid convalescents are, but remember, when Willie wakes up, no matter how he begs, you must not give him more than half that arrow-root in the bowl on the little table in the hall. Don't let him see the other half, but you can give it to him when he wakes up early in the morning. Remember, Alf., the doctor says he can have all the drink he wants. Here it is in the pitcher with a glass beside it."

Alf. faithfully promised to follow these directions to the letter as he took up his watch by the bedside. About midnight he begun to feel very sleepy, and looked about for something to distract his attention. A brandy-bottle, kept to use in case of emergency, stood on the dresser. Alas! during the past few months, Alf. had learned to take the first glass, so he helped himself to a stiff draught from the flask, partly with the idea of bracing himself against drowsiness. The youth was not accustomed to take down brandy in this way, and the alcohol went to his head. A little later, Willie awoke and feebly asked for refreshment. Alf. hurried with a drink to him,—"Haven't you anything to eat?" murmured the sick boy, querulously. "Why are they always trying to starve me?"

Alf. hastened to the hall, and returned with the little bowl of arrow-root.

"Drink!" murmured Willie.

Alf. made a dash for the pitcher, and there stopped. His head was in a confused whirl. What had Alice said? Oh, yes; only give him half—yes that was it—half." With no steady hand he poured out half a tumbler-full and offered it to his patient.

"More!" said Willie with irritation.

"Come, now," coaxed Alf.," there ain't any more for you just yet. See, here is some stuff; try to take it."

Willie fretted and feebly abused his nurse after the irritable manner of fever patients, but was finally mollified by the nice little tray containing the appetizing and dainty pudding, with the little jug of creamy milk. Alf. fed him the last spoonful and poured out all the milk, which the thirsty convalescent eagerly drank.

"That's right, Billy, take all you can," admonished Alf., somewhat thickly—"Allie said to give you all you wanted."

Ill and feeble as poor Willie was, he vaguely realized that he at last was dealing with an "easy" person, and a look of deep cunning overspread his wan, corpse-like features.

"Say, Alf., wasn't I to have a potato and gravy?" (Willie had been begging for potatoes ever since his appetite had come.) "You're to let me have all I want; Allie said so. I guess I'll get up tomorrow, I'm feeling so well."

Alf. could remember nothing about a potato, and was inclined to divert Willie from the subject. But with the true pertinacity of a fully aroused convalescent, Willie refused to be cajoled or appeased. The poor boy had grasped the fact that his provisions were frequently laid out on a little long table in the hall, and he made a feeble movement and gesture towards the door.

"Just go and see if there isn't something more out there," he begged. "Remember, I'm to have all I want."

Merely to pacify him, Alf. stepped into the hall and glanced at the table. Sure enough, a plate and fork stood off at the further end, and—wonderful coincidence! it contained the greater part of a large, soggy, cold potato and a little butter. It was the remains of Claude's supper which had been inadvertently left in the hall by some one who evidently intended to carry it down later. But Alf., whose head had now reached a quite befuddled condition, could only realize that Willie had sent him to the hall for the potato. There it was, and Allie had told him to give Willie all he wanted. The hall lamp held a little contrivance frequently used for heating the sick boy's milk and broth, and on this Alf. placed the plate, bruising down and turning over the potato and butter till heated through, when he carried it back to his eagerly expectant charge, who swallowed it greedily, and soon after fell into a heavy slumber. At five o'clock Willie was still sleeping, and Alf.'s watch was relieved by Nurse Roberts.

When Willie awoke he was in a high fever accompanied by other alarming symptoms, and the doctor was hastily summoned.

"What have you been giving him to eat?" was the first question.

"We have followed your directions to the letter," was the reply of the nurse, at once confirmed by Mrs. Kilgour and Alice.

"You are positive he has had nothing within the last twelve hours except what I ordered?"

Miss Roberts testified to leaving a little food, prepared according to direction, on the stand the night before, to be given to him in two portions on awakening. The bowl and cream jug were found to be empty, but the little sauce-dish into which the portions were to be placed had evidently been unused.

"He's gone and given it all at once," exclaimed Allie, "and I explained so carefully. How could such a bright fellow as Alf. make such a mistake?"

"Still, I wonder a little at these desperate symptoms. The double rations would do him no good, certainly, but remember the time he managed to reach out to his stand and seize all the watermelon on the tray when I turned my back for two minutes, and it did him no particular harm," said Mrs. Kilgour tearfully.

"Send for that fool boy who sat up with him," sputtered the doctor. "He's probably been feeding him on peanuts and licorice tablets from his pockets."

"Alf. has plenty of sense," replied Alice; "surely he must know better."

(To be continued.)

Children's Cozy Corner

A Bird Lover. By Theresa Day.

IN New Orleans, in the sunny south, in the land of orange groves, birds and flowers, John James Audubon, the famous ornithologist, whom all children love, was born May 4, 1780. Very early in life he showed his love of nature, and with great patience he would watch the habits of birds. His indulgent mother allowed him to gather moss, birds' nests, and all the other specimens he desired. For three weeks he would lie under a tree and watch with a telescope the habits of a little bird, of the same color as the bark of the tree.

Before John James was very old his family returned to France, and as his father was not satisfied that his son should spend his time idly, as he considered it, John was sent away to school, where for a year he applied himself to mathematics, being allowed only an occasional ramble to gather specimens.

His father wished him to become a soldier under Napoleon, but finding him entirely unsuited to that profession, he sent him to America to oversee the property which he had purchased in Louisiana, Virginia, and Pennsylvania.

The youth said good-bye to France reluctantly, for here he had made sketches of two hundred birds from life, and he wished to continue his work. After a severe illness upon his arrival in New York, he took up his residence on his father's farm at Mill Grove, Pennsylvania. He was delighted with his new home for he was free to study the birds and all nature. "Here at Mill Grove, while yet a boy, he planned his great work, the 'Birds of America,' their habits and a description of them. This one idea dominated Audubon's life. Through poverty and suffering, this one desire was ever before him. It is well to plan early in life what we wish to do, and then do it."

One writer has well said of Audubon: "In all climates and in all weathers, scorched by burning suns, drenched by piercing rains, frozen by the fiercest colds, now diving fearlessly into the densest forests, now wandering alone over the most savage regions; in perils, in difficulties, and in doubts; with no companion to cheer his way, far from the smiles and applause of society; listening only to the sweet music of birds, or to the sweeter music of his own thoughts, he faithfully kept his path."

His life was full of hardship and poverty until he was forty-six years of age, when the tide turned and his genius and ability were recognized, and he was enabled to publish his book.

January 17, 1851, this wonderfully gifted man passed away surrounded by his wife and children.

A noted writer says of Audubon, in an admirable biography:

"While the towering and snow-capped peak of the Rocky mountains, known as Mount Audubon, shall rear its lofty head among the clouds, while the little wren chirps around our homes and robin and reed-bird sing in the green meadows, while the melody of the mocking-bird is heard in the cypress swamps of Louisiana, or the shrill scream of the eagle on the frozen shores of the Northern seas, the name of John James Audubon, the gifted artist, the ardent lover of nature, and the admirable writer, will live in the hearts of his grateful countrymen."

Atco, N. J.

A Dinner-Pail Story.

JESSIE JONES and Sallie Wattles lived so far from the school-house that every day they took their dinners with them. And such nice dinners, too—snowy bread, spread with sweet, golden butter; toothsome chicken or beef, or hard-boiled eggs; great pieces of pie or cake, sometimes both! a big apple or two, or peaches, plums or pears; sometimes grapes and sometimes strawberries; and pickles. Certainly the little girls never lacked for enough to eat, and almost always they ate together.

"I wonder why it is," asked Sallie Wattles one noon, "that Kittie Burns always goes off by herself all alone to eat her dinner?"

"It is funny," answered Bessie. "Only yesterday I asked her to eat with us, but she blushed as red as a peony, said something I could not understand, and then went off alone, and I thought she was crying after she left me."

"Perhaps she hasn't much to eat," exclaimed Sallie, "and is ashamed."

"Oh! and that makes me remember," said Bessie. "Once last week I saw her stub her toe, and all the dinner fell out of her pail. But there were only a couple of slices of bread, with no butter on them that I could see!"

"That's just it!" said Sallie.

For a moment the little girls lunched away, and then both spoke at once.

"I say, Bessie."

"I say, Sallie!"

Then they laughed, and Bessie said: "I know, Sallie, that you were going to say just what I was, that we'd take some of our fruit to poor Kittie Burns. There she is now by the big elm tree, and eating alone as usual."

After hastily brushing up the crumbs and putting away their pails, they ran over by the big tree.

"O Kittie," Sallie exclaimed, "here's a red apple, more'n we could eat, and you must help us out with it. And can't you come over Saturday afternoon and go with me to Bessie's? We'll have such a nice time."

Just then the teacher unexpectedly passed by; and whether she did it purposely or not I cannot say, but she was humming loud enough for the little girls to hear:

"Little deeds of kindness,
Little words of love,
Make this world an Eden,
Like the heaven above."

That noon hour was the beginning of a new life for Kitty, and wonderfully did she develop under its happy influence. And the widowed mother sang many a song when by herself alone because of what Sallie and Bessie had done for her little fatherless girl.—Zion's Herald.

My Valentine.

Ida B. Cole.

I feel the touch of Cupid's dart,
Your roguish eyes have won my heart,
And so I send you this wee line,
To choose you for my Valentine.

Whittier's Dog.

DURING one of the last birthday celebrations of the poet Whittier, he was visited by a celebrated oratorio singer. The lady was asked to sing, and, seating herself at the piano, she began the beautiful ballad, "Robin Adair." She had hardly begun before Mr. Whittier's pet dog came into the room, and, seating himself by her side, watched her as if fascinated, listening with a delight unusual in an animal. When she finished he came and put his paw very gravely into her hand and licked her cheek. "Robin takes that as a tribute to himself," said Mr. Whittier. "He also is 'Robin Adair.'" The dog, hearing his own name, evidently considered that he was the hero of the song. From that moment, during the lady's visit, he was her devoted attendant. He kept by her side when she was indoors, and accompanied her when she went to walk. When she went away he carried her satchel in his mouth to the gate, and watched her departure with every evidence of distress.—St. Nicholas.

PUZZLERS' PACKET.

Puzzles marked (*) are protected by copyright. Contributors will please keep matter intended for this department distinct from other correspondence, and address same to PUZZLERS' PACKET, THE UNION SIGNAL, Chicago.

20.—*Letter Removal.

With wailing infant in his arms
He walks the midnight floor;
With patience firm he walks about
Till baby's cry is o'er.

His papa's ease, this household king
Entirely disregards,
But cuddles down and much enjoys
Nocturnal promenades.

His pa, meantime, will TWO his time
To cheer his little son,
For to the baby's every whim
He is a faithful ONE.

21.—Grammatical Conundrums.

1. What pronoun and auxiliary verb joined will make an ancient goddess?
2. What two pronouns make an herb?
3. What auxiliary verb repeated will name a goddess?
4. The past tense of what verb affirming an everyday act will name another goddess?
5. What auxiliary verb doubled names a species of extinct bird?
6. What other auxiliary doubled names a low dance?
7. What auxiliary always comes in the spring?
8. What two pronouns separated by a verb showing a power of one of the senses and a preposition will name a Greek author and define a pair of spectacles?
9. What proncun and interjection name a maiden beloved by Jupiter?
10. What verb denoting power, when slightly transposed will name a murdered man?
11. What verbs are like teeth?

22.—*Charade.

Old Mr. Jones had toiled and saved
Throughout his useful life,
And had sufficient to support
Himself and his good wife.

He ne'er was known to ONE a cent
Unless the need was plain;
Ah, me! His labor and his TWO
At length proved all in vain.

His son liked not his father's ways,
Of prudence he made light;
And all his father's hard-earned wealth
This TOTAL wasted quite.

ETHYL.

23.—Initial Changes.

O, what a —— that boy is making! He has just been to the office and brought a —— of letters in his ——.

24.—*Numerical.

He who owns 1 2 3 4 5 6 and 3 2 1 4 5 6 them lest they be stolen from him, takes but scant comfort with them. I never had a 3 2 6 4 5 1 day than the one when I got the severe 3 1 2 4 6 5 on my hand.

R. H. E. T.

25.—Word Square.

1. To decree.
2. One of the ingredients of gunpowder.
3. A school book.
4. A trade.
5. Fretful.

26.—Anagrams.

(Names of flowers.)

1. Tares.
2. Alta Ann.
3. Rum pail.
4. Nay Poe.

C. A. A.

Answers.

14.—Philadelphia.
15.—1. Hawk (hock). 2. Swallow. 3. Crow. 4. Whip-poor-will. 5. Blue-jay. 6 Eagle (beagle).
16.—1. Penn-ant. 2. Tom-big-bee. 3. Cricket. 4 Mosquito (Moss, key, toe). 5. Fly. 6. Miller. 7. Tick.
17—Chanticleer.
18—A ring.
19—Resign reign.

FOR GOD AND HOME AND EVERY LAND

The UNION SIGNAL AND WORLD'S WHITE RIBBON

NATIONAL AND WORLD'S WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION

Official Organ of the WORLD'S AND NATIONAL WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION.

Published Weekly by the Woman's Temperance Publishing Association, Chicago.

EDITOR-IN-CHIEF, - - - - - - MRS. LILLIAN M. N. STEVENS.
CORRESPONDING EDITOR, - - - LADY HENRY SOMERSET.
MANAGING EDITOR - - - - - MRS. CORNELIA T. JEWETT.

CONTRIBUTING EDITORS:

MRS. SUSANNA M. D. FRY. MRS. KATHARINE L. STEVENSON.
MRS. CLARA C. CHAPIN. MRS. ISABELLA WEBB PARKS.

Address all letters and manuscript intended for the editors to, The Editorial Department, UNION SIGNAL. Unavailable manuscripts will be returned only when sufficient postage accompanies the request.

SUBSCRITIONS.

Subscriptions may commence with any issue.
The date on the label indicates when your subscription ends.
Papers will be discontinued unless otherwise ordered.
Remittances should always be made in the safest manner available to the remitter. Register cash remittances.
Change of Address.—Give both your old and your new address when you desire a change.
Change of Date.—It takes at least three weeks to change the date, after your subscription is renewed.

PRICE $1.50 PER YEAR IN ADVANCE.
FOREIGN POSTAGE $1.04 ADDITIONAL.

Address all Business Communications to
The UNION SIGNAL, 184 La Salle St., CHICAGO.....

Chicago, February 5, 1903.

"The women that publish the tidings are a great host."

Christian Patriotism.

IN this month of February our country pauses amid the rush and whirl of its strenuous life to pay affectionate and grateful tribute to the memory of its two greatest presidents.

"Devotion to one's country"—thus is patriotism defined. That Washington as father and Lincoln as saviour of his country exemplified this devotion in the highest degree, no one will deny. Their names stand to-day, and will stand for all time, as fit synonyms of patriotism, and they well serve to stimulate patriotic fervor in the breast of every American citizen—nay, of every member of the human family the world over.

We do wisely to commemorate the birthdays of these national heroes, to eulogize the lives and recount the deeds of Washington and Lincoln in mass meeting, in banquet hall and in the public school; but let us always remember that their greatness is due to the fact that, animated by a high and holy principle, they hesitated not to give their lives for the establishment of that principle in national life and law.

Liberty in one form or another has always been the slogan of patriots in every age and clime, and every high achievement which has brought more liberty to mankind is a part of the great emancipating process which began with "the fall" and which is to go on until every man is "free indeed."

In the history of the race we find love of country early developed. Even among the most primitive tribes the sentiment is not wanting, though it often exists in a form so crude as to be hardly worthy the honored name. As man grows upward and onward the idea becomes broader, more comprehensive, and with the advancement of civilization it takes on higher and nobler forms. The type changes, and patriotism must in the nature of things conform to the age in which it finds expression. The world is getting rapidly away from the notion that the shedding of one's own or one's brother's blood is a necessary part of patriotism. To stir the emotions to the point of mere daring is not to make a patriot (sometimes, indeed, it is quite the reverse), although the one so stirred may fondly imagine he feels the patriotic fire burn within him. Describing a visit to the spot where

> . . . "once the embattled farmers stood
> And fired the shot heard round the world,"

a young woman said she was so thrilled that "cold chills ran up and down her back," and she "felt so patriotic she could have shot anybody." She was informed, and very truly, that what she felt was not patriotism but pat riotism.

Every thinking person can but be profoundly impressed with the importance of so teaching our boys and girls, in the public schools and elsewhere, that they may be inspired not only with a fervent devotion to country and to its patriots, past and gone, but with a determination to express that devotion in accordance with the dangers and demands of their own generation. We would have the coming citizen so filled with love for his country that the patriotic fire shall burn in every fiber of his being, but we would also have him instructed as to the direction in which he will most likely be called upon in this Twentieth century to express that love in loyal service.

The nations are growing towards a type of patriotism unknown in the days before the light of the Christ gospel was shed abroad, a patriotism which says, "The world is my country and every man is my brother." Twentieth century ethics are already taking this growth into account, and Twentieth century political economy will adjust itself accordingly. A free country, demanded George Washington and the revolutionists; free men under that country's flag, said Abraham Lincoln and the boys in blue; freedom, more freedom, says the patriot of to-day—freedom for the white slave as well as for the black, for the masses as well as for the classes, freedom for men, women and little children from the greed of those who destroy soul and body, freedom to live as human beings not as machines.

It takes more real courage, more real patriotism, to go to the front in the bloodless battles through which our nation is working out its salvation to-day, than ever it took to face the cannon's mouth amid the exciting scenes of actual warfare. A love which lives and suffers reproach for country's sake is a higher and nobler type of love than that which gains glory by dying for it.

We are learning that to lay down one's life for one's friends does not necessarily mean to die for them. Many a man would cheerfully die for his country on the battlefield who is not willing to sacrifice even the least of his party traditions on the altar of his patriotism. Some heroic ones there are who nobly stand the severest test of loyalty to country, but these are "fanatics."

Thinking and writing about this subject of patriotism, of Washington, of Lincoln, our thoughts inevitably turn to another patriot, to her whose heavenly birthday we commemorate also this month. And what a patriot was Frances Willard! We can hardly realize as fully perhaps as those who will come after us, what her life and her work meant to this country and to the world. In the name of God and home and native land all sections of this country were first bound together in pure white bonds; then the gentle sway was extended until, in love of humanity, it was felt in every civilized country on the globe, and the white ribbon became the symbol of the most inclusive patriotism. Patriotism to her meant religion, and religion meant patriotism. Among her last words, as she lay waiting at the portals of heaven for the final summons, were these: "Oh, but I want our women to have a new concept of religion; the religion of the world is a religion of love, it is a home religion, it is a religion of peace, and tell them, oh, tell them not to forget it is a religion of patriotism. We have set up to be patriots, we white-ribboners, and we have fought amidst much ostracism."

God grant that we may live up to that high standard of Christianity and of patriotism which says, "It is not I, it is we, always we; it is OUR Father, don't forget that."

From Pulpit to Saloon.

FROM whatever point of view we may look at the case of the Rev. George K. McDonald, former pastor of Bethel Baptist church, Kalamazoo, his action is decidedly unique.

Actors have been known to leave the stage that their eloquence might adorn the pulpit. Drunkards, whose ribald songs and coarse oratory have fascinated their boon companions in the saloon, have been awakened to a sense of their degradation and have so changed the current of their lives that they have become shining lights in the church and as conspicuously leaders of others along the narrow path as they had formerly been on the broad road to destruction. But to leave the pulpit for the ownership and management of a saloon is a step so decidedly retrograde, that one may be excused for doubting the genuineness of Mr. McDonald's professions of Christianity. Surely, "If it be discarded now, who will not hold it feigned before?"

Mr. McDonald says, "I hate a hypocrite; I scorn a Pharisee."

While Mr. McDonald occupied the position of pastor of a Baptist church, one of his duties was to warn his people against the sin of hypocrisy. We would, therefore, ask the reverend gentleman if he discharged this solemn duty towards "men who stand high in the church" when they led him "surreptitiously to a sideboard, as if there were something shocking to be concealed?" In their own hearts, these hypocritical churchmen must have felt ashamed of their drinking habits and at the same time pretty sure that their pastor was one of themselves when they led him thither.

Unfortunately, the ex-pastor of Bethel Baptist church does not see himself as others see him and does not realize that for a minister to be an example to the flock of which God has made him overseer, he must avoid the appearance of evil. Drinking surreptitiously is perhaps a degree worse than drinking openly, inasmuch as the drinker, by seeking to hide his act, admits its sin; at the same time, Mr. McDonald, by his practice of using intoxicants and upholding their use, also by his openly frequenting saloons and seeking to justify his so doing, rendered himself unfit for the pastorate of any church.

He lays particular stress on his determination to make his new business a model saloon to which the odium of profanity or indecency shall not attach. He also assures us that his bartenders have instructions to refuse drink to anyone who is already intoxicated. As it is against the law to sell drink to intoxicated persons, in this case no other course was open, and we can only answer him by saying, "Do not even the publicans the same?"

Christians the world over are mourning the prevalence of saloons; surely they may clothe themselves in sackcloth and ashes when one of their number in highest office boldly leaves the church to prosecute the drink traffic. The greatest fall on record is that of the fallen angels; next to that, it is doubtful if there could be a greater one than from the pulpit to the saloon.

More Ammunition Needed.

Liquor men are fully alive to the importance of reaching the public through the printed page. The National Wholesale Liquor Dealers' Association has a "protective literary bureau" which devotes its time to the printing and distribution of liquor tracts. In a circular issued to the trade and calling for contributions the bureau says: "The money will go ten times farther in this way and do one hundred times more good than if spent in any other manner. . . . This education work yields the best results when kept up continually until it changes public sentiment. . . . We send you a package of pamphlets we have been sending to every voter in threatened districts [threatened with prohibition or local option]. . . . If the district in which you sell is not affected now, it is likely to be, as the professional prohibition agitators are active." The wholesale dealers are responding liberally, and enormous quantities of literature are going out all over the land "educating" the people through false statement and through half-truth (which is "ever the blackest of lies") in anti-prohibition doctrine. The only way to effectively counteract this influence is to send out prohibition literature in still greater quantities. It would seem that the most important work of the hour for the organized temperance forces, for the church itself, is the securing of stirring, up-to-date prohibition tracts and pamphlets and the distributing of them systematically throughout the country. Like the liquor men, and like the politicians on the eve of election, we should see to it that our literature reaches every voter personally, by mail or otherwise. In the threatened states and districts especially should we sow it knee-deep.

Each His Brother's Keeper. The duty of each to the other and of all to each is one of the fundamental lessons which the Son of Man came to preach and to teach. It is a lesson which the circumstances and conditions of complex modern life are forcing upon the attention of nations as never before. More and more, as time goes on, do we understand what the Master meant when he said: "Whosoever will save his life shall lose it, but whosoever will lose his life for my sake the same shall find it." More and more do we see that true individualism is attained only through altruism. That we are all members of one body and that no man, therefore, can live unto himself, is a scientific verity; and that we, collectively and individually, are ourselves responsible for conditions, good or bad, is a thought which is gathering force—concentering, solidifying, materializing. "In such a government as ours each of us must be in very truth his brother's keeper." The words, does some one say, of a prohibition crank, a fanatical reformer? Not at all. They are the words of the President of the United States and may be found in his message to congress a few weeks ago. He is speaking particularly of industrial problems. No patent remedy can be devised for them, he says, "but good will come even out of the present evils if we show by deeds and words our knowledge that"—it cannot be repeated too often—"in such a government as ours each of us must be in very truth his brother's keeper." That the ruler of the foremost nation of the world should thus, in a message to the country, voice the golden rule philosophy, is only another manifestation of the upward push of that power which is working without haste and without rest to fulfill the Great Purpose—a power which brings good out of evil and makes the very wrath of man to praise God. We do know—and the President speaks for the people—that each is his brother's keeper. What is needed is the application of this knowledge by those in power. The world is looking to our nation with all its great opportunities and privileges. Particularly at this time is it looking to the Fifty-seventh Congress. May our national legislators in very truth speak and act in accordance with the standard which their own knowledge and conscience, no less than President and people, demand of them.

A Guaranteed Article. Away down in the virgin land of Oklahoma there was recently given an illustration of what can be done by "the best whisky on earth." The occupants of a certain house in Billings were one evening startled by a loud knocking at the door. Upon opening it, a poor fellow mortal was found to be in sore trouble. He had lost his way, driven off the road, and finally steered his buggy into a peach tree in the orchard. The good Samaritan came at once to the aid of his unfortunate brother, put him in his buggy and sent him on his way. The next morning a letter from a whisky house was found on the ground where it had been dropped, which betrayed the cause of the catastrophe. They have wide, safe roads down there, but they are no match for a dark night, supplemented by the brain-dulling qualities of the ne plus ultra of the liquor traffic.

Personal Mention.

The editors have been given glimpses of "life in the field" of late, by the flying visits of National workers en route to other states. Mrs. Callie Howe, to Vermont, Mrs. Mary E. Teats, to Michigan, and Mrs. Anna Simmons, who is off to Ohio shortly for an extended itinerary. Mrs. Caroline M. Woodward and Mrs. Evalyn N. Graham, past and present superintendents of the department of Work among Railroad Employes, also made us a friendly call.

We learn with regret of the recent death, at her home in Princeton, Mass., of Mrs. S. A. Gifford, one of the original Crusaders who has long been lovingly known as "Mother" to the white ribbon sisterhood. Mrs. Gifford was the first president of Massachusetts state union; she was present at the organization of the National union and was made the vice-president from Massachusetts. In local work her labors were long and abundant, and she has entered into life eternal with the consciousness that "She hath done what she could."

President's Letter.

My Dear Comrades: I hope the local unions throughout the country are planning for a Frances E. Willard commemorative meeting on February 17, or as near that date as they can conveniently arrange.

I wish that this year at all of these meetings there might be sung "Nearer My God to Thee," "Home, Sweet Home," and "My Country, 'Tis of Thee," having in mind the National W. C. T. U. motto, given to us by Miss Willard, "For God and Home and Native Land."

Sing also, "All Round the World the Ribbon White is Twined," emphasizing the fact that Miss Willard was the founder of the World's W. C. T. U., and did more than all others to encircle the globe with temperance truth as understood by the W. C. T. U.

Since we have continualy new members, and possibly some of these and others may not know the life story of Miss Willard, it is well at these meetings to have given always a brief sketch of her life and her achievements. In making a plea for the offering of $2 from each union, to be used in extending and perpetuating the work of the W. C. T. U., it may be well to quote from the report of Mrs. Fry, superintendent of organization, as given at the last National Convention, thus showing how the Memorial Fund is used and how necessary it is to have it in order to successfully carry on the great work. Each local union that conforms to the National plan is blessed by the meeting and blessed by the giving of the Memorial offering.

I am again in Vermont and Miss Gordon is here also, having come from Evanston to assist in these last days of this important campaign. I confidently expect that on February 3 there will be a majority vote for prohibition. Judging by the character of the Vermont people as I have come to know them—and I have always known much about them—there is little danger that they will long submit to a reign of license even should it be thrust upon them temporarily by the liquor element. Undoubtedly the efforts to overthrow prohibition in Vermont, Kansas, Maine and elsewhere, emanate in large degree from the liquor makers and liquor dealers' associations, and the anti-prohibition literature which is widely circulated is in accordance with resolutions adopted by these associations.

The prohibitory law in Maine is being well enforced in nearly every section of the state. Prohibition in Maine is a success; but we still have a few unsuccessful officers, a smaller number than usual however, and it is being well said that the state motto, "Dirigo" may now be pronounced "Dry-i-Go," and thus it will continue to go in Maine.

We heartily appreciate the prompt action of the state presidents and other white ribboners in protesting against the bill for the restoration of the army canteen. It was well to let the congressmen know that there is even a stronger public sentiment today in favor of the Anti-Canteen Law than existed when the law was enacted, and we are grateful that we have not to battle further with this question, at least during this year.

It is to be hoped that the bill favorably reported by the House judiciary January 26, regarding original packages, may become a law, thereby greatly assisting in the execution of the prohibitory law in states when such laws exist.

As temperance reformers we have much to encourage us, but let us remember, especially when there is seeming defeat, that, after all, righteous reforms never swing backward, but always onward, always keeping pace with advancing Christian civilization. They who think differently do not know how to take correct measurements. He whose measuring line is straightened by the rule of God can plainly reckon that notwithstanding some knots and some deviations, "each tomorrow" does find us "further than today."

L. M. N. Stevens

En route in Vermont, Jan. 28. 1903.

Monthly Bible Reading.

TOPIC: Stewards, or Thieves?

By Rev. Frances E. Townsley.

WHAT IS STEWARDSHIP? I. COR. IV: 2.

In the apostolic times a steward was often entrusted with large estates, left entirely under his control, but for the use of which he was likely at any time to be called to render his account. He might cultivate the lands, develop the possibilities of the soil, or lease to others under him portions of his master's property. But recall Paul's declaration, "It is required in stewards that a man be found faithful." He might not be placed over as much property as another steward cared for, but he must be "faithful."

The truth that every Christian is a steward of his Master and owns nothing only in trust for Him, has had some faithful but exceptional adherents through the centuries, till of late, a great reviving of this too long neglected doctrine has visited the church. "Tenth Legions" all over the land, with "Christian Stewardship Leagues" and the like are proof of this reviving. Let us go back to an early tithe-payer: Gen. 28: 20-22.

"And Jacob vowed a vow, saying, If God will be with me, and will keep me in this way that I go, and will give me bread to eat, and raiment to put on, so that I come again to my father's house in peace; then shall the Lord be my God; and this stone which I have set for a pillar, shall be God's house; and of all that thou shalt give me I will surely give the tenth unto thee."

Where did our hero get the idea of tenth-giving? Quite a long time after Jacob, we find Moses giving Israel the positive statement of Leviticus, 27:30, "The tithe is the Lord's." Not "may be," "ought to be," but is the Lord's.

And all the tithe of the land, whether of the seed of the land, or of the fruit of the tree, is the Lord's; it is holy unto the Lord. Also the tithe of the herd and flock.

But before Moses and before Jacob we read of Abraham paying tithes to Melchizedek. At the council of Seville, 590 A. D., we find noted divines contending that Cain's error in part was withholding the Lord's tenth, in his professed offering of the fruits of his labors. The reading of Genesis, 4:7, in the Septuagint, is noticeable:

"If thou hast offered aright and hast not divided aright hast thou not sinned?"

In short, there seems to be something inherent in human nature from the first that acknowledges tithes as the real right of any god to whom worshipers bow. For not alone Jehovah-worship implies tithe-offering, but Phœnicians, Romans, Greeks and Carthaginians paid tithes to their gods; in short, though historians tell us that though nations are sometimes found who did not offer sacrifices in worship, no one has yet been recorded who did not offer tithes to the deity worshiped.

No verse in Holy Writ has been more persistently misinterpreted than Malachi, 3:10, beginning, "Bring ye all the tithes into the storehouse." It did not, does not, can not refer to spiritual offerings under a figure. We may use the text figuratively, but only after we have complied with its original meaning. This word related strictly and solely to the neglect of what every true Jew held as a sacred obligation—the yielding to God His very own tenth of grain and fruit and all increase. What had been the result of sore neglect in this matter? Years of blight and mildew, with famine and desolation and poverty. So God cries, "Bring ye all the tithes into the storehouse and prove me now withal." He promises to "pour out a blessing" so large that they should hardly know what to do with it. Then, unpaid tithes meant poverty; paid tithes, prosperity.

It is so today. Many letters in my desk declare the temporal prosperity of men and women of today who have obeyed this rule of the tenth.

Some may say, "My income is so small that its tenth would not count."

Yet, if the tithes of the net incomes of our poorer Christians were given to God, we should be done with church fairs, suppers for "pay," and the thousand devices which make the impenitent worldlings who patronize them disgusted with our money-raising methods. How about the well-to-do? Here's a problem in simple arithmetical proportion:

$500 (a poor man's yearly income) is to $75,000 (a rich man's yearly income) as $1 (a poor man's offering to some good cause) is to X—that is the amount the rich man should give—proportionately, is $150 to the poor man's one dollar.

How many of the rich give on that scale? Let the testimony of those who do join that of the poor who are tithing unto the Lord, and hear their shout, "It pays! I am happier, richer financially, surer of a share in God's work and kingdom than ever before. I am a stockholder with the Son of God."

(To be continued.)

Vassar, Mich.

OFFICIAL COMMUNICATIONS

REST COTTAGE. THE WILLARD.

GENERAL OFFICERS:

President,
MRS. LILLIAN M. N. STEVENS, Portland, Me

Vice-President-at-Large,
MISS ANNA A. GORDON, Evanston, Ill.

Corresponding Secretary,
MRS. SUSANNA M. D. FRY, Evanston, Ill.

Recording Secretary,
MRS. CLARA C. HOFFMAN, Kansas City, Mo.

Asst. Recording Secretary,
MRS. FRANCES E. BEAUCHAMP, Lexington, Ky.

Treasurer,
MRS. HELEN M. BARKER, Evanston, Ill.

Headquarters National W. C. T. U., Evanston, Ill.

Corresponding Secretary's Notes.

DEAR SISTERS: Ohio and Illinois have kindly furnished me with their new Plans of Work for the year. I can, therefore, send samples to states which would like to compare notes and are on the lookout for something better, possibly, than they now have. Some of the unions have sent me their annual programs, but I wish more of them would do so. I have very frequent requests for sample programs and am always glad to send several to inquirers, that they may get all the help possible for their own work.

The W. T. P. A. has gotten out the new W. C. T. U. Pledge Card of which I spoke several weeks ago. They are adorned with a small cut of the head of Miss Willard and are very pretty. I hope the unions will order quantities of them and enter upon enthusiastic pledge signing campaigns.

Doubtless you were all happy to read in THE UNION SIGNAL that the Military Committee has decided not to present the bill repealing the anti-canteen law during this session of Congress. We are hoping this will hold good. On the other hand you may have been equally displeased with the fact that Mr. Smoot has been elected United States Senator by the Utah Legislature. We will probably have more to say about this later on when a line of action is agreed upon. In the meantime I hope the states will not be presuming, as some of them seem to be, that they can secure the services of Mrs. Weed next fall, or at any other time except the few months which are now definitely arranged for. As her salary is provided by another organization we cannot promise anything in the distant future. I would like to hear from those who wish her services during the last half of February and in April.

I hope all of you read the last paragraph on the first page of THE UNION SIGNAL of January 22d. I have spoken before of the chain letter scheme of this anti-cigaret league. A new phase of it came to us lately in the shape of a postscript in which the writer said that she had been asked to send the letter to a National W. C. T. U. superintendent. Mrs. Ingalls and her assistant, Mrs. Cole, have no knowledge of this matter and we are believing that none of our superintendents would advocate chain letters of any kind, and certainly not for an enterprise concerning which they are not thoroughly informed.

This reminds me to speak of a circular letter sent out from Baltimore, signed by a man purporting to be a minister and to be publishing some kind of a reform paper. He asks for a thanksgiving offering for his personal use, says his need is very urgent, and, to my mind, casts a reflection upon all other ministers by saying, "Will you help one preacher stand for the right?" I do not undertake to sit in judgment as to the man's needs, or the good he proposes to do, but it would seem that the day ought to have passed for sending broadcast such begging personal letters. Some of our sisters want something done about the many appeals that come to them of this character, but I assure them that the only thing that can be done is to pass them by in silence. No power can prevent individuals from sending out begging letters if they choose to do so, and certainly most of our women have had so much experience that they will not easily be influenced by unknown parties who make such appeals.

Miss Gordon has been at National Headquarters for a few days, but is now with Mrs. Stevens in Vermont, where they will work day and night until the final vote is taken on the question of prohibition.

Yours cordially,
SUE M. D. FRY.

The Mother's Friend
when nature's supply fails, is Borden's Eagle Brand Condensed Milk. It is a cow's milk adapted to infants, according to the highest scientific methods. An infant fed on Eagle Brand will show a steady gain in weight.

Superintendents.

Work Among Foreign Speaking People.

THE state superintendents of "Work Among Foreign Speaking People" will be reminded once more of the necessity of immediate action on receiving documents on the bills abolishing the sale of liquor at the ports and in government buildings. This battle was fought almost single-handed and the victory won by our former National superintendent of this department, Mrs. Sophia F. Grubb. It was a sore disappointment to her, after years of temperance and the peace it brings, to again have this curse to contend with. Our missionary at the port of New York has seen a man reading a tract or Testament held in one hand and in the other a mug of beer. If he thinks at all he must think Christian America has a muddled way of offering the gospel.

This time it is not a single-handed fight, but a harder one, for the iniquity has gained strength with years. So many are asked to help, and we among them. All the superintendents from whom an answer has come have done the work promptly and we trust the rest will. Let us do this for the work's sake and in memory of the founder of this department, "the best friend of the foreigner," as Frances Willard designated Mrs. Grubb.

Miss Orr reports last year as the banner year of the many she has served at the port of New York. She notes the great amount of work done and speaks wth gratitude of the help she has received. New York and New Jersey helped the National work by paying part of the salary of the missionary, besides a liberal donation for free literature, while many of the unions have sent barrels, boxes and bundles of books, reading matter, clothing and toys to gladden the hearts of the children. As a result of this added giving the women have done a blessed work in giving themselves, very much to the joy and appreciation of our faithful worker, Miss Orr. They have found that their presence is a great help in the advancement this last year. We are very apt to give ourselves to whatever we give our means in this world. For all this added work and enthusiasm I would like to return thanks both for Miss Orr and the department, hoping this good beginning may reach many of the states and unions, for she is "our missionary" and we have reason to rejoice in her self-sacrificing and never-ending work.

Of one thing I would remind our good women: When conferring these gifts please remember that Miss Orr has no contingent fund from which to draw; her salary is small, and out of this salary must come all charges, expenses and cartage, unless paid at the other end. As you are "the other end," sisters, please see to it that these little bills are paid, that the accumulated burden does not fall to her share as well as too much work.

The department is offering the German and Norwegian literature at a reduced rate. This literature, though fine, is getting shelf-worn and we wish to have it distributed and fresh material put in its place, that we may make improvement constantly.

A new language has just been added to the eighteen already on hand: "Intemperance," "The Evils of Intemperance" and "Intemperance and Vice" are the three tracts we have in Arabic. There have been several demands for the tracts.

A little idea of the demand for this foreign literature can be had from the fact that in this city of Pueblo alone every one of the nineteen languages have been used, and one more demanded than we have—Greek.

As stated in the National report, this department desires to be on a stronger, better basis. We need a woman for each of these languages, one versed in the language and needs of the people, and the tracts kept new and fresh on a subscription instead of a sale basis. Spanish is as yet the only language on this basis, and the fact that one-third of the income from tracts was from the Spanish proves very thoroughly that literature subscribed for and issued regularly is much more popular than buying a little, distributing it, and letting the fire of enthusiasm die out, as it must if not supplied with fuel.

Last year was the best in all respects since the department changed superintendents. Let us make this year still better. MRS. ANNIE G. DARLEY.

413 W. 12th St., Pueblo, Colo.

Fairs and Open Air Meetings.

PRIZES FOR 1903.

THE banner now held by Ohio will be given to the state securing the largest number of new members during the year. Honorary members count in this contest.

Five dollars in gold will be awarded to the state superintendent sending in the best report of Open Air Meetings numbering over thirty, held in the state, giving date, place of meeting, speaker's name, number of new members secured and approximate number of people present.

Five dollars in gold will go to the state reporting the largest number of Senior L. T. L. members engaged in work at Fairs and Open Air Meetings.

Report the kind of work, such as distribution of literature, securing new members, conducting gospel meetings, song services, or closing immoral shows. Report if gambling devices were suppressed or gamblers arrested, if the illegal sale of liquor was stopped or the distribution of impure literature.

Five dollars in gold will be given to the state sending in the largest number (over one hundred) of honorary members secured during the year.

All membership cards properly filled, should reach me in time to decide before the next National Convention to whom the prizes should be awarded. Use only department cards, which I will supply at 20 cents per hundred. Each state superintendent should form them into a chain, by running blue ribbon through the perforations in the cards.

AIMS OF THE DEPARTMENT:

To make known to the masses of people who never come to our meetings, the principles of the W. C. T. U. We endeavor to accomplish this by sending our best speakers to the great gatherings held in the open air, to tell the people of our work, and by the distribution of literature, to send the message to the homes.

The establishment of Day Nurseries

(Continued on page 17.)

Fed the Doctor.
How He Made Use of Food.

Sometimes it is the doctor himself who finds it wise to quit the medicines and cure himself by food.

"In looking around for a concentrated palatable prepared food I got hold of Grape-Nuts and immediately began using it four times a day, exclusively for breakfast with milk; for luncheon and dinner as dessert, and a cup on retiring," says a physician of Mt. Zion, Ill.

"I had had nervous dyspepsia for over a year. My normal weight is 140 pounds, but I had been steadily losing flesh until a month ago I only weighed 122 pounds. I concluded it was time to throw 'physic to the dogs' in my case. Twenty-four hours after starting the Grape-Nuts regime the fullness and distress after eating had ceased. The heartburn, waterbrash, palpitation of the heart and other symptoms that had reminded me for over a year that I had a stomach, soon disappeared and I can now eat a square meal and feel good afterwards.

"I weighed yesterday and was surprised to find that I had gained 18 pounds in a month, and the end is not yet.

"The nervous symptoms have entirely disappeared and I am stronger than I have been for two years. I thank you for placing Grape-Nuts at the disposal of those suffering with nervous dyspepsia." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

HOW MANY HANDS

do you suppose dip into that bulk coffee before you buy it?

Lion Coffee

comes in sealed, air-tight packages; no chance for handling, or dirt or things to get in.

Clean, Fresh and Fragrant.

New England Conservatory of Music has now the finest building devoted to music in the world. Founded 1853. Unsurpassed advantages in composition, vocal and instrumental music, and elocution.

George W. Chadwick, Musical Director.

Pupils received at any time. For year-book address

FRANK W. HALE, General Manager, Boston, Mass.

$1.50 SAMPLE OUTFIT FREE to Agents selling our Flavoring Extracts, Toilet and Laundry Soaps. Large cash profits or elegant premiums easily earned. No money required in advance. Particulars free. KIDD & CO., State and Taylor Streets, CHICAGO, ILLINOIS

THE HOME MAKER

A Monthly periodical by Mrs. EMMA F. A. DRAKE, M. D., author of "What a Young Wife Ought to Know," "What a Woman of Forty-five Ought to Know," and other books. Formerly principal and physician of Mr. Moody's school, at Northfield, Massachusetts.

This magazine deals principally with the problems of parents and children, heredity, environment, purity, child culture, exercise, dress, food, etc.

Every man or woman interested in the making of a True Home, should have this magazine. February number just out.

Subscription $1.00 a year, 25 cents for three months. Send for sample copy today, 10 cents stamps or coin.

Reliable agents wanted everywhere.

THE HOME MAKER, Mack Block, Denver, Colo.

(Continued from page 16.)

at Fairs keeps us in close touch with the mothers. The Emergency Hospital is appreciated by the sick or injured. The Rest Room is well patronized. The Check Room is a convenience, and the lunch room, with the carefully prepared menu, a pleasure to patrons.

WHERE TO WORK.

The scope of this department is far-reaching and many-sided, as it opens the way for all departments to make known their aims and methods, either by addresses or by the distribution of literature at Street Fairs, Reunions, Camp Meetings, Chautauquas, Grand Army Encampments, picnics, Fourth of July celebrations, state and county fairs, and expositions, and other anniversary celebrations.

By applying in time, you can secure a place for one of our speakers on the official program of the organization holding the meeting.

At expositions, state and county fairs, you can make this department a source of revenue, and at the same time be looking after the enforcement of laws relating to gambling, the illegal sale of liquor, and preventing the sale or giving away of impure literature, and suppressing immoral shows.

LEGISLATION.

An effort should be made to have laws enacted to prohibit the sale or giving away of intoxicants on fair grounds and in city parks.

Seventeen states have such laws at the present time. Will not others try to protect the young people by having such laws passed in the states which have no prohibitory laws relating to fairs and city parks?

A SPECIAL EFFORT.

Make this the banner year. Do not confine your work to the distribution of literature and giving away of ice water. Try some of the suggestions in Plan of Work to interest the people, so as to gain new members, for remember, increased membership will be the key note of this department this year. Supply workers with cards. Report promptly.

Mrs. H. T. Guild.

Sedalia, Mo.

W. C. T. U. Notes.

Cambridge and Brockton, Mass., unions celebrated the twenty-fifth anniversary of their societies last month.

Allegheny county, Pennsylvania, distributed 5,000 text cards among railroad and trolley car men on New Year's day.

A Lady Henry Somerset afternoon is an attractive topic for a local union meeting. The one held at Bangor, Me., brought out a large and responsive audience.

Wisconsin is abounding in National speakers this year. Mrs. Florence D. Richards of Ohio, Mrs. Helen G. Rice of Massachusetts, Mrs. Nelle Burger of Missouri and Mrs. Maria Weed of Chicago are all engaged for service in the state.

The District of Columbia reports a Cradle Roll of thirty-seven members and a fine lot of young boys in the "Wage Earners' Club." This club has earned and given $25 to the building for headquarters the union is paying for. A School of Methods is being planned for, to be held soon.

The unions at Reading, Mohrsville and Boyertown, Pa., were strengthened spiritually, intellectually, financially and numerically by the services of Mrs. E. Norine Law of Detroit, Mich. She expects to return to the same county for work in the spring.

Mrs. A. C. Zehner, state evangelist of Texas, gave two addresses at Sedalia, Mo., adding twelve new members to the union. She was invited by the Ministers' Alliance of Sedalia to conduct union services the week of prayer, but other engagements prevented.

White-ribboners of Caroline county, Virginia, are rejoicing because the county has cast a majority of 459 votes for no license. The Richmond Dispatch said of the election: "The drys swept everything. Ten precincts did not cast a single wet vote. Every precinct had a majority for the drys."

Eau Claire has been chosen as the next convention city of the Wisconsin W. C. T. U. The dates are June 2, 3 and 4. Mrs. Nelle Burger has been invited to be the principal speaker. A diamond medal contest is planned for one evening and a department demonstration for another. The state will have an exhibit at the St. Louis exposition.

Mrs. Emma Bourne, state president, was present at the Essex county, N. J., mid-winter conference. An address on "Mormonism and Its Attendant Evils," by Mrs. C. C. Coffin, a plea for combined work by Mrs. Bourne, a children's rally talk by Miss Victoria Bell, were helpful and interesting. Mrs. J. K. Barney was invited to lecture in the county.

Dr. Anna M. Dorr Bryant intends holding a series of mothers' meetings in Boston. She is the local superintendent and sees the need of teaching mothers how to clothe their children, what to provide for food and to do away with overindulgence. She says the Back Bay mothers as well as the North End mothers need instruction.

Miss Marie C. Brehm, president of the Illinois W. C. T. U., has been talking temperance in Milwaukee. She spoke on "Ideals" in the Baptist church Saturday night, on "The Light of the World" at the Park Place M. E. church Sunday morning, and in the afternoon told the old soldiers at the National Home how they might assist in the work of the W. C. T. U.

The union at Waterloo, N. Y., keeps after the violators of the excise law. A vote was taken by every pastor asking those to rise who favored enforcing the law. The union also circulated a petition for presentation to the president of the village and the board of trustees requesting them to exhaust every possible means to rigidly enforce the law, and giving those officials assurance that they will be supported in any action in prosecution.

Mrs. E. T. Scott, National lecturer and organizer, sends this item for W. C. T. U. Notes: "Since coming to Kansas from southern California late last November I have organized five unions, an L. T. L., addressed a number of local unions, adding members to most of them. At Coffeyville, where I organized a strong, efficient W. C. T. U., I also formed a woman's anti-joint association as auxiliary to a similar one composed of men only—legal voters. I have given full lectures in towns in no less than nine counties. My plan is to organize after a sentiment is made, then spend a day or more to instruct the new union how to work."

It is understood that the railway companies are making thorough preparations for the meeting of the Presbyterian General Assembly at Los Angeles, in May, and a most enthusiastic reception is to be given to the assembly by the citizens of Los Angeles. The rate as announced by the Chicago & North-Western sometime since is to be $50 round trip from Chicago. Low rates from all points will be announced by the Eastern lines. The great attraction of California scenery and its delightful climate, together with the wonderfully increasing importance of Pacific coast points in the commercial expansion of our nation, has created a notable increase in the amount of travel to the Western coast. To effectively meet the increasing demands of the traveling public the transcontinental railways have been active in supplying the most complete and luxurious service and the North-Western Line has ever been in the lead.

Significance of the Word "Woman."

Professor Scott of the University of Michigan told the Modern Language Association at Harvard that there are one thousand persons in Michigan who object to the word "woman."

In this age of salesladies, washladies, scrubladies and so on it is hard to conceive why the rest of the unclassified ladies should take up arms against that honest old Anglo-Saxon word "woman." Etymologically, it signifies the happy state to which every female looks forward, namely, the state of matrimony. The woman is the wife-man. So long as a man is proud to be called a man, why should a woman be ashamed to be called a woman? Sometimes the word is found in bad company and assumes an invidious color from the context, but that does not derogate from its worth as a word. "And the rib which the Lord God took from man, made he a woman." Not a female or a lady, mind you, but a woman.—Detroit Journal.

Cancer Microbe Said to Have Been Discovered.

The Cancer Germ said to have been discovered by an Eastern Physician caused great surprise. Heretofore this disease was supposed to be caused by a cell growth. Careful experiments are being made. Dr. Bye, the Eminent Cancer Specialist, of Kansas City, Mo., is being besieged by hundreds of people suffering with this dread disease. The Doctor is curing many cases, thought to be incurable, with the combination of a Medicated Oil. Persons suffering or having friends afflicted should write for an illustrated book on the treatment of cancer, tumor, ulcer, piles, fistula and all skin and womb diseases. Address Dr. W. O. Bye, cor. 9th and Broadway, Kansas City, Mo.

Boys who make Money after School Hours

Over 3000 Boys in various parts of the country are making money in their spare time selling The Saturday Evening Post. Some make as much as $10.00 and $15.00 a week. Any boy who reads this can do the same.

IN A DAINTY little booklet, which we will send to any boy free, the most successful of our boy agents tell in their own way just how they have made a success of selling

The Saturday Evening Post

There are many stories of real business tact. Pictures of the boys are given. Send for this booklet and we will forward with it full information how you can begin this work. No money required to start. We will send Ten Copies of the magazine the first week free. Write to-day.

The Curtis Publishing Company, 451 Arch Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

KINDLY MENTION THE UNION SIGNAL WHEN WRITING ADVERTISERS.

Copyright, 1902, by The J. L. Mott Iron Works.

DRINKING FOUNTAINS FOR MAN AND BEAST.

Catalogues mailed on request, and special prices given to all Charitable and Temperance Societies.

MANUFACTURED ..BY..

THE J. L. MOTT IRON WORKS,

84-90 Beekman St. NEW YORK.

KINDLY MENTION THE UNION SIGNAL WHEN WRITING ADVERTISERS.

OIL--SMELTER--MINES.

Dividend-Paying Mining, Oil and Smelter Stocks, Listed and Unlisted, our Specialty.

DOUGLAS, LACEY & CO.,

Bankers & Brokers, Fiscal Agents, Members N. Y. Consolidated Stock Exchange.

66 BROADWAY & 17 NEW ST., NEW YORK.

Booklets giving our successful plan for realizing the large interest and profits of legitimate mining, oil and smelter investments, sub. blanks, full particulars, etc., sent free on application.

KINDLY MENTION THE UNION SIGNAL WHEN WRITING ADVERTISERS.

STOP Making Medicine Sharks Rich.

Taking drugs and Nostrums, Indian and old woman discoveries. Your stomach is for food not "poisons." Cleanse your system by Nature's Drugless Method. Get into a Vapor Bath Cabinet, steam and sweat the poisons from the blood and system by opening the millions of skin pores, equalizing the circulation. Remove the load and Nature will do the rest. Astonishing are the results. 10 days' trial will surprise you. Physicians and best hospitals cure acute, chronic cases by this method. Delightful bath for men, women and children. Harmless, exhilerating. Write for "New Book" just out FREE. Prices reduced. $5.00 Cabinet $3.50. $10.00 Cabinet $6.10. Catalogue free. Agents Wanted. Big Wages. Address, WORLD MFG. CO., 618 World Bldg., CINCINNATI, O.

KINDLY MENTION THE UNION SIGNAL WHEN WRITING ADVERTISERS.

$20 A WEEK Straight salary and expenses to men with rig to introduce our Poultry Mixture in country; year's contract; weekly pay. Address, with stamp, Monarch Mfg. Co., Box 1166, Springfield, Ill.

KINDLY MENTION THE UNION SIGNAL WHEN WRITING ADVERTISERS.

LADIES to do piecework at their homes. We furnish all material and pay from $7 to $12 weekly. Experience unnecessary. Send stamped envelope to ROYAL CO., Dept. U.S., 34 Monroe Street, Chicago, Ill.

KINDLY MENTION THE UNION SIGNAL WHEN WRITING ADVERTISERS.

Home Treatment For A Cold.

By Cordelia A. Greene, M. D.

THE condition of ill-health commonly termed "a cold," usually arises from one or more of three causes: Prolonged exposure to cold which produces congestion, invariably at the weakest point, arrested circulation from clogging of one or more of the waste avenues, and the mischievous endemic influences in which microbes play so important a part.

Persons who have a clear and active condition of the functions of nutrition and waste, are usually only slightly affected by exposure to changes of temperature or any of those forms of disease induced by microbes. Where there is an obstructed condition of the liver, kidneys, skin and other waste avenues, obstinate and serious congestion is sure to come from slight depressing causes and makes a predisposition to influenza, la grippe or even pneumonia or diphtheria.

Early Care of a Cold.

If colds were properly managed during the first twenty-four hours, much after suffering would be averted.

Perspiration should be induced if possible the first night before retiring. An hour before supper, take a heaping teaspoonful of the phosphate of soda dissolved in nearly a pint of hot water. The supper should consist largely of liquid food, hot milk, rich broths or gruels. Just before retiring take a deep capsicum foot-bath 112 degrees, adding hot water three or four times during ten minutes. Before drying the feet, rub them several times with a towel wrung dry from cold water. Drink while in the foot-bath and after getting warmly into bed, two doses of the "Diffusible Stimulant." Drinking the full amount of hot water doubles its power. It flushes the kidneys, quickens the circulation, opens the pores of the skin, dissolves the thickened secretions and hastens resolution in the congested localities. The next morning, in a warm place, rub the entire body thoroughly with a warm, coarse, bath-towel.

The stimulant should be taken an hour before each meal and before retiring until the cold has quite abated.

This method of treatment is far superior in its present and after effects, to the home use of hot slings made from any form of alcoholic stimulants. These or Jamaica ginger, which is largely alcohol, or the large doses of quinine so commonly used, expend their force largely upon the brain and nervous system, often causing head trouble and greatly aggravate it when it exists. The use of quinine even in malarial climates should be left to the prescription of a physician. Far too much of it is needlessly and carelessly taken, as a domestic remedy.

Increasing pain in the chest and difficulty of respiration in the beginning of a cold are indications that a physician should at once be called.

MUSTARD PASTE.

Where there is a strong tendency to congestion about the head and chest, prompt applications of mustard are of great value. The mustard should be spread hot upon thick manilla paper, ten inches long by eight wide. The paste should be eight by six inches. Cover with cheese cloth. Apply to the legs and arms, confined by bandages. As soon as keen smarting ensues, move to a new position downward until the entire surface has been nearly covered. Place on chest and spine when needed. This method of applying mustard has a powerful derivative influence for diverting the blood from the chest and head.

THE POCKET INHALER.

When the air passages are obstructed so as to prevent nasal breathing, a small pocket inhaler may be advantageously used. Fill the center third of the inhaler loosely with absorbent cotton. Pour upon this ten drops of the inhalant. Remove the corks from both ends of the inhaler and sniff the vapor powerfully through the obstructed nostril. Replace the corks when the inhaler is not in use. It should be cleansed and its contents renewed, every day, if it is frequently used. It aids much in securing nasal breathing during the night.

CATARRHAL COLDS.

If the nasal and other passages should be very irritable and there should be heavy discharges, flush the mucous surfaces of the anterior and posterior nasal passages well with the "Antiseptic Wash." Bending over a bowl, close one nostril, bury the other beneath the liquid and draw it through the nostril freely into the mouth, without sound or the admission of air. Eject it from the mouth. Use a pint of the "Antiseptic Wash" each time. It is really more effective applied in this way than by the siphon or nasal douche.

List of Remedies Advised and Method of Preparation.

DIFFUSIBLE STIMULANT.

"Diffusible Stimulant" is a combination of "ginger syrup" and "ammoniated capsicum." It is a most valuable remedy for chilliness, weakness from exhaustion or a severe cold. It can be made at home as follows:

GINGER SYRUP.

Dry a pound of ginger root in a warm, not hot place. Pound it in a mortar until the pieces are like grains of wheat. Cook slowly in two quarts of water for four hours, simmering in a closed vessel of tin, porcelain or iron. Strain off the liquid. Add two quarts of water to the ginger and steep again one hour. Strain off the liquid. A double cheese cloth makes the best strainer. Put the two strained liquids together, simmer to two quarts. Add to this four pounds sugar. Cook slowly until the sugar is thoroughly melted and the syrup boiling hot. Can in pint glass cans or bottles sealed—the same as fruit.

AMMONIATED CAPSICUM.

To two tablespoonfuls of the tincture of capsicum add two tablespoonfuls of the purest aqua ammonia and thirty grains of fresh crystals of muriate of ammonia. Put all in a two ounce glass stopped bottle. Shake well together until the crystals are all dissolved.

DIRECTIONS FOR USE:

For one dose, pour on one tablespoonful of the syrup a glass of very hot water and add three drops of the ammoniated capsicum. Drink one hour before each meal and at bedtime.

If chilliness is severe and perspiration is desired, three doses may be given at intervals of one-half hour. For children under twelve years of age use only one-half the amount. The medicine must not be given without the full proportionate amount of hot water.

Applications of heat to the extremities and painful localities should always be made.

FOR ABDOMINAL OR PERIODICAL PAIN FOR WOMEN OR MEN.

In cases of severe abdominal or periodical pelvic pain, the "Diffusible Stimulant" may be given every half hour. Swallow, just before taking the stimulant, a five-grain capsule or tablet of ammonol.

AMMONOL.

Obtain one drachm of ammonol and a box of five-grain capsules. Divide the ammonol into twelve portions and fill one dozen capsules.

PHOSPHATE OF SODA.

Phosphate of soda, four ounces. Dissolve one heaping teaspoonful in a little hot water. Fill the glass full of hot water. Take once a day, an hour before the meal. This acts gently upon the liver and stimulates all the intestinal secretions.

CAPSICUM FOR FOOT-BATH.

Steep one pound of capsicum in one quart of vinegar for two hours. Add a little boiling water, so as to have one quart of the liquid when finished. Put up in tightly corked bottles. A large tablespoonful is sufficient to add to ten or twelve quarts of hot water for a foot-bath. The thick portion at the bottom of the bottle may be spread upon paper hot and covered with cheese cloth and used effectively for little children instead of mustard paste, as it will irritate but not blister.

ANTISEPTIC WASH FOR THE NASAL PASSAGES.

Procure two ounces of fresh crystals of chlorate of potash. Rinse clean in cool water. Pour off. Put in a pint bottle, fill with water and shake well. In twenty-four hours it is a saturate solution. As long as there are crystals remaining at the bottom, the bottle can be refilled.

To one pint equal parts of milk and water, milk warm, add three tablespoonfuls of this saturate solution of chlorate of potash. Flush the nasal passages according to directions given under "Catarrhal Colds."

INHALANT:

Four teaspoonfuls oil of peppermint; three teaspoonfuls oil of eucalyptus; one teaspoonful aqua ammonia. Mix and keep in one ounce glass-stopped bottle. Place eight drops on the absorbent cotton in the inhaler.

NOTE:—A pocket inhaler for use in colds, or to relieve obstruction in the nasal passages, may be procured by sending 20 cents in stamps to Cordelia A. Greene, M. D., Sanitarium, Castile, Wyoming County, N. Y.

If You Are Sick

Don't Wait Longer—Write For My Book.

You see this offer everywhere—all the time, and every week thousands accept it. Don't you know that I must be curing those thousands, else the offer would ruin me?

Will you let me cure you, too?

I will mail you an order—good at any drug store—for six bottles of Dr. Shoop's Restorative. You may take it a month on trial. If it succeeds, the cost is $5.50. If it fails, I will pay the druggist myself—and your mere word shall decide it.

No matter about your doubts.

You at least must know that I have faith in my treatment, when I make an offer like that.

I know what the remedy will do, and you don't. For your own sake, let me convince you. Then if it fails, let me pay.

My success comes from strengthening the inside nerves, which alone operate the vital organs. I have spent my life in learning how to do it. A weak organ means weak nerve power. It is like a weak engine that needs more steam. To doctor the organ is useless; what it needs is power to act. My Restorative alone brings back that power, and in most of these diseases no other way can cure.

My book will tell you why.

Simply state which book you want, and address Dr. Shoop, Box 948, Racine, Wis.

Book No. 1 on Dyspepsia,
Book No. 2 on the Heart,
Book No. 3 on the Kidneys.
Book No. 4 for Women,
Book No. 5 for Men (sealed).
Book No. 6 on Rheumatism,

Mild cases, not chronic, are often cured by one or two bottles. At all druggists.

STALL'S BOOKS

DR. STALL

A Man with a Message

Millions of people always await the man with a real message. Dr. Stall has found it so. His books are already circulated in every land.

275th thousand in English.

They are being translated into several languages in Europe and two in Asia.

THE SELF AND SEX SERIES
has the unqualified endorsement of

Dr. Joseph Cook	Bishop Vincent
Rev. C. M. Sheldon	Anthony Comstock
Rev. F. B. Meyer	"Pansy"
Dr. Theodore L. Cuyler	Frances E. Willard
Dr. Francis E. Clark	Lady H. Somerset

Eminent physicians and hundreds of others.

4 BOOKS TO MEN. By Sylvanus Stall, D.D.
What a Young Boy Ought to Know.
What a Young Man Ought to Know.
What a Young Husband Ought to Know.
What a Man of 45 Ought to Know.

4 BOOKS TO WOMEN. By Mrs. Mary Wood-Allen, M.D., and Mrs. Emma F. A. Drake, M.D.
What a Young Girl Ought to Know.
What a Young Woman Ought to Know.
What a Young Wife Ought to Know.
What a Woman of 45 Ought to Know.

$1 per copy, post free. Send for table of contents.

Vir Publishing Co. 78 Real Estate Trust Building, Philadelphia

REPETITION

is the life of advertising—It is also the life of the largest mail-order seed trade in the world—

BURPEE'S!

Were it not for repeat-orders every year from satisfied planters we could not supply the Best Seeds that Grow

at such moderate prices. We want every one who appreciates quality to write for Burpee's Farm Annual for 1903. Long known as "the Leading American Seed Catalogue," it is better now than ever before. An elegant book of 184 pages, with beautiful colored plates and hundreds of illustrations, it tells the plain truth. Write to-day! Do not delay! It's FREE.

W. ATLEE BURPEE & CO., Philadelphia

PAPER JARDINIERES, a New

Flower Pot Cover Adjustable to any size Flower Pots, (large or small). A pretty device to hide the unsightly appearance of the common flower pot. A protection from frost or heat. One dozen assorted colors and designs in neat folding box, convenient for mailing. Sent to any address,

Postpaid 30c per doz

Send coin or money order. No stamps.
STRONGHURST M'F'G. CO. Dept. G, Stronghurst, Ill., U. S. A. Agents wanted

Grand Canyon of Arizona

A book about it. Send 50 cents in coin or stamps to W. J. Black, Gen. Pass. Agent, A., T. & S. F. R'y, 1312 Great Northern Building, Chicago, for copy of notable new book entitled "Grand Canyon of Arizona," graphically describing world's greatest scenic wonder.

Contains special articles by Hamlin Garland, Chas. Dudley Warner, Joaquin Miller, John L. Stoddard, Major J. W. Powell, and other noted writers; 124 pages with map and cover in colors and many beautiful half-tone illustrations. Worthy a place in any library.

This titan of chasms may easily be visited any day in the year in connection with California trip over the Santa Fe.

On the Santa Fe

LADIES—STUDY AT HOME

TRAIN TO NURSE

Use leisure hours to become independent. Every woman inexperienced or experienced in nursing should receive a thorough course of theoretical training before assuming the responsibility of ministering to the sick. Our course universally endorsed by physicians and surgeons as practical and easy of comprehension. Our faculty, leading physicians and surgeons of Chicago. Our scholars enthusiastic in our support. Diploma. Catalogue free.

American Cor. School for Nurses, O—167 Dearborn, Chicago.

Responsive Readings

Published Monthly.

Designed for the use of local unions and of great aid to workers, as they contain information wholly upon the work of the departments of the W. C. T. U.

SUBSCRIPTION PRICE:

Single Copies, per year	$ .10
13 Copies, per year, to one address	1.00
100 of this issue	.50

Subject for February Reading,

Work Among the Indians.

By Mrs. Dorothy J. Cleveland.

Woman's Temperance Publishing Association,

184 LA SALLE ST., CHICAGO, ILL.

Post Check Currency.

THE persistence with which great numbers of people send small sums of money by mail, notwithstanding the obvious risks of loss, is a sufficient indication of the need of some form of easy and safe remittance of small amounts. It is greatly to the discredit of the government that after so many years of experience with post-office money orders, the system in use is still unsatisfactory.

There is something like genius in the novel but exceedingly simple proposition to issue small bills with a blank in which the name and address of a payee could be written and thus instantly transform an ordinary bill for $1 or $2 into a check or a draft on the government for that amount, payable only to the payee named, but on which he could get his money at any postoffice where he could be identified, as readily as if it were a New York draft for the same amount. Notwithstanding the simplicity of the plan, Congress has failed to adopt it. Any enterprising business house to which an improved method of so great value should be suggested would unhesitatingly and enthusiastically adopt it.

The only valid objections to the plan are that it might make some additional work in the treasury department. If that is a sufficient reason why millions of people should be denied the advantages and conveniences which this simple method offers, the proposition should be abandoned. If not, Congress should make short work of the matter. If congressmen take an intelligent interest in the question long enough to understand what the measure is, we shall soon have the most important and widely appreciated improvement to our postal system that has been made in many decades.

Citizens should request their representatives in Congress to see that more convenient money is furnished the people.

The Editor's Brain

Did Not Work Well Under Coffee

A brain worker's health is often injured by coffee, badly selected food and sedentary habits. The experience of the Managing Editor of one of the most prosperous newspapers in the Middle West, with Postum Food Coffee illustrates the necessity of proper feeding for the man who depends on his brain for living.

"Up to three years ago," writes this gentleman, "I was a heavy coffee drinker. I knew it was injuring me. It directly affected my stomach and I was threatened with chronic dyspepsia. It was then that my wife persuaded me to try Postum Food Coffee. The good results were so marked that I cannot say too much for it. When first prepared I did not fancy it, but inquiry developed the fact that cook had not boiled it long enough, so next time I had it properly made and was charmed with it. Since that time coffee has had no place on my table save for guests. Both myself and wife are fond of this new cup which 'cheers but does not inebriate' in a much truer and fitter sense than coffee. My stomach has resumed its normal functions and I am now well and strong again mentally and physically.

"I am confident that coffee is a poison to many stomachs, and I have recommended Postum with great success to a number of my friends who were suffering from the use of coffee." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

Parliamentary Difficulties

Conducted by Mrs. A. S. Benjamin

QUESTION: (a) Does the fact that a member of a local union has been made a life member of the state organization in any way alter her obligation to the local union? (b) Should she pay local dues, as formerly? (c) If so, is the union under obligation to pay state dues on said life member? It does not seem possible, as the state would then be receiving dues twice.

ANSWER: (a) It does not. (b) She should. (c) They are.

These questions are, of late, becoming so frequent that I venture "to explain" as follows: Membership in a local union consists in taking the total abstinence pledge and the payment of annual dues. That holds throughout our entire territory. In the majority of the states each local union pays out of such annual dues a certain amount to each of the ranking organizations, county, district and state. This is law. It is an honor to be a life member of state or nation. Each guarantees a copy of annual report, a copy of program, and so forth. If every member of state and nation, or state and station, were absolved from dues during the remainder of life, we should soon have but a small paying membership. A principle is involved. What holds true of a single member would logically hold true of any number of members, and, as can be readily seen, by-and-by we should all go bankrupt. If life memberships constituted an endowment fund it would be a little different, but they are used both in state and nation for the extension of our work, and every loyal woman should deem it a privilege to contribute either from her own purse or by the generosity of others so much as is involved in the life fee.

QUESTION: We are in the sorest sort of trouble. It all came through trying to "take from the table" what we ourselves "laid on the table." If there is any way to make the following plain, you will receive the heartiest thanks of a dozen of the best parliamentarians in our county, to say nothing of the poorest. Here it is: There was a motion and an amendment; then there was a motion to refer to a committee, and that was amended by adding, with instructions; this was followed by a motion to indefinitely postpone, with an amendment as to time (did you ever see such a muddle?) and then there was a motion to table, which carried. In the afternoon there was a motion "to take from the table," which carried, and then no one could tell where we "were at." Roberts' Rules don't tell, and not one of us could tell. If it takes a whole page of THE UNION SIGNAL, please say what was before us after we voted to take from the table.

ANSWER: This "Chair" rules that the principal motion with its amendment was before you. It is true that Roberts' Rules do not make it clear, for they say next to nothing about it, but the following seems the common-sense way to reason it out: The motion to commit, if carried, would have deferred action on the main question; if the motion to definitely postpone had carried, that would have deferred action; the motion to table ranks higher than either, or both, and as that was carried, when it was voted to take from the table there was before the "body" simply the original motion and its amendment. It is true that there was a motion to commit and a motion to definitely postpone (each with an amendment), but when the motion to table was carried, the "house" virtually said (by vote) that to table was the desired method to delay action on the main question. If the assembly had preferred the definite postponement they would have voted no on the motion to table, and aye on the postponement. If they had wished to defer action by referring, they would have voted no on both tabling and postponing and aye on the motion to commit. Perhaps it will make it clearer and plainer to say that of all the proposed methods of delaying action, the one evidently preferred was tabling.

It is very common to table, as we all know, and there was no "muddle" in making, or in entertaining, the several motions, for each outranked the one that preceded it, but it certainly was a little perplexing to amateurs, after the vote was taken from the table. I confess frankly that just such a complication has never occurred either in my teaching or practice, but I feel positive that the above is the correct rendering. If not clear, we will try again.

QUESTION: We are at loggerheads on "questions of privilege." (a) Do they not demand immediate attention? Then is it not true no subsidiary motion can ever be applied to such a question? If there can be, will you please give an illustration in THE UNION SIGNAL, something that really might happen in a convention or a union?

ANSWER: (a) Questions of privilege do require immediate attention, but that does not prove that a dilatory motion cannot be applied. Suppose a motion, we will say with amendments, is before the house. In the discussion two of the members became involved in an unseemly war of words. A member rises to a question of privilege and moves that both members be publicly censured. Suppose this is amended by striking out "publicly censured" and inserting "required to make immediate apology." A motion to table would then be entirely in order, which if carried, would of course take to the table the question of privilege with its amendment; or, instead of tabling, a motion to refer to a committee would have been equally correct. Do you not see that the question has received immediate attention and is, for the present, disposed of, so that the main question with its amendments is again before the assembly?

It is easy to see, not only by the foregoing questions, but by many others heretofore answered, and still others that will appear as soon as space can be given, that our members are rapidly progressing in parliamentary law. When a complication arises, there are in nearly every convention or local union some who will not rest until they get at the root of the whole matter. This is most gratifying, and great regret is hereby expressed that it is simply impossible to reply to all in THE UNION SIGNAL. The allotted space is not elastic and in many cases the private letter must be final.

The "study," so much desired, will certainly appear in March and will be so arranged as to meet the needs of at least several of the inquirers.

Portland, Mich.

Relieve Asthma, Bronchitis, Catarrh.

BROWN'S BRONCHIAL TROCHES

Cure Coughs, Sore Throat, Hoarseness.

Nothing excels this simple remedy.

Very Few People

Are Free From Some Form of Indigestion.

Very few people are free from some form of indigestion, but scarcely two will have the same symptoms.

Some suffer most directly after eating, bloating from gas in stomach and bowels; others have heartburn or sour risings; still others have palpitation of heart, headaches, sleeplessness, pains in chest and under shoulder blades; some have extreme nervousness, as in nervous dyspepsia.

But whatever the symptoms may be, the cause in all cases of indigestion is the same, that is, the stomach for some reason fails to properly and promptly digest what is eaten.

This is the whole story of stomach troubles in a nutshell. The stomach must have rest and assistance and Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets give it both by supplying those natural digestives which every weak stomach lacks, owing to the failure of the peptic glands in the stomach to secrete sufficient acid and pepsin to thoroughly digest and assimilate the food eaten.

One grain of the active principle in Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets will digest 3,000 grains of meat, eggs or other wholesome food, and this claim has been proven by actual experiment, which anyone can perform for himself in the following manner: Cut a hard boiled egg into very small pieces, as it would be if masticated; place the egg and two or three of the tablets in a bottle or jar containing warm water heated to 98 degrees (the temperature of the body) and keep it at this temperature for three and one-half hours, at the end of which time the egg will be as completely digested as it would have been in the healthy stomach of a hungry boy.

The point of this experiment is that what Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets will do to the egg in the bottle it will do to the egg or meat in the stomach, and nothing else will rest and invigorate the stomach so safely and effectually. Even a little child can take Stuart's Tablets with safety and benefit if its digestion is weak, and the thousands of cures accomplished by their regular daily use are easily explained when it is understood that they are composed of vegetable essences, aseptic, pepsin, diastase and Golden Seal, which mingle with the food and digest it thoroughly, giving the overworked stomach a chance to recuperate.

Dieting never cures dyspepsia, neither do pills and cathartic medicines, which simply irritate and inflame the intestines.

When enough food is eaten and promptly digested there will be no constipation, nor in fact will there be disease of any kind, because good digestion means good health in every organ.

The merit and success of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are world-wide and they are sold at the moderate price of 50 cents for full sized package in every drug store in the United States and Canada, as well as in Europe.

EVERY LADY should have our skirt and waist supporter. Sample and 350 page illustrated catalogue for 30 cts. MAMMOTH SUPPLY HOUSE, Department 30, 4815 Champlain Avenue, CHICAGO.

YOU CAN Wash Your Fat Away WITH HOWARD OBESITY OINTMENT

Simple, Harmless and Inexpensive

EXTERNAL REMEDY

It removes fat from that part of the body to which it is applied—restoring the natural bloom of youth, leaving no wrinkles or flabbiness.

No nauseous drugs that ruin the stomach; no dieting; no change of habits whatever.

The application is simplicity itself. You merely apply the ointment to the part you wish reduced, then literally "wash the fat away" without injury to the most delicate skin.

WE GUARANTEE RESULTS.

On receipt of request, we will send you our book on obesity, which gives cases and facts of the new discovery—a cure by absorption.

THE HOWARD CO.,

Suite 74 No. 6 West 22d Street, New York.

Among the New Books

Concerning the little volume, TEMPERANCE HELPS FOR PRIMARY TEACHERS by L. Mabel Freese, there are only words of commendation. A successful teacher writes:

"I have found the book, 'Temperance Helps for Primary Teachers,' to be indeed a help. Every primary teacher should have it, and its helpfulness is by no means confined to primary teachers; all teachers who desire to carry out the provision of the law requiring temperance instruction in the public schools should be furnished with a copy of this book, and, more than this, teachers who have a real desire that their pupils be rightly instructed on a question that has so much to do with their well being and well doing should have a copy of this book."

Regarding the manner in which these teachers can be reached, Mrs. L. M. N. Stevens, president of the W. C. T. U., says:

"One of the best ways would be for the local union in every town to 'see to it' Please remember that it is not a TEXT book, but just as its name indicates, a help to teachers. A prominent educator recently said that the W. C. T. U. is largely responsible for the enactment of the Scientific Temperance Instruction laws, and this society should do all it can to help and encourage the teachers, many of whom have not been trained to total abstinence principles and therefore find it difficult to properly teach the nature and effects of alcohol. I believe the local union could do no better work than to present each teacher in the town a copy of this book. It is an interesting reading book also and might profitably be placed in all public school and Sunday School libraries, reading rooms, etc. It would be of great assistance in preparing for the Frances E. Willard Memorial meetings, and in other ways can be utilized by temperance workers."

The twelve suggestive lessons are bright with poems, anecdotes, stories, games and blackboard outlines for original reproductions. Among the subjects demonstrated are "Frances Willard," "The Apple and Cider," "Our Bodily House," "Tobacco," "Patriotism" and "Kindness."

The work is a labor of love, having been developed from personal experience in the schoolroom. To examine this little volume is almost certainly to possess it, for few can resist its fascinating pages. (Chicago: Woman's Temperance Publishing Association.)

The book, HIS WILL BE DONE, by Verona Hamilton, ought to be in the hands of all our young people, and in every Sunday school library in the country. The story is a true one, and no person can read the book without being greatly benefited. The chapter devoted to the wonderful reclaiming of a drunkard and his associates, gives some very practical hints to workers in temperance reform. Every W. C. T. U. worker should possess a copy, and pass it on to all the young people of their acquaintance. (Chicago & New York: Henneberry Company. 75 cents.)

Every American boy has a desire to know all about the President of the United States, not alone because he himself expects to be President, but because he is wonderfully fascinated by the qualities which build up that certain type of manhood. In the life of the twenty-sixth president THEODORE ROOSEVELT, as told by Charles Eugene Banks and Le Roy Armstrong, the youth finds to a remarkable degree the best characteristic of the typical American, and he is quite ready to repeat with dramatic fervor the prefaced lines of Grace Duffie Boylan's

"Who goes there? An American!
Man to the core, as men should be.
Let him pass through the line alone,
Type of the sons of Liberty.
Here, where his fathers' fathers dwelt,
Honor and faith for Roosevelt."

So rapid is the action of this narrative that one finds himself mentally substituting for the given sub-title, "A Typical American," the more familiar and eminently characteristic, "A Strenuous Life." As thrilling as any tale of adventure and as varied, it is none the less fascinating because it is true. The scope of this life story is tersely given in the chapter subjects: College Life, New York Assemblyman, Ranching in Bad Lands, Home Life and Religious Tendencies, Crusade for Merit System, Purifying Politics, Assistant Secretary of Navy, Formation of Rough Riders, Service in Cuba, Governor of New York, Chief Executive of Nation.

No boy could follow the remarkable career of Theodore Roosevelt without a deep realization that unswerving devotion to the right was the quality above all others that brought him to noble accomplishment.

There are introductory chapters by Joseph Wheeler and Opie Reed. Besides a full-page portrait as frontispiece, many photographic illustrations give intimate views of the President, including Harvard days, home life at Oyster Bay, Cuban experiences and life at Washington. This volume should be found among the text-books of every young American patriot. (Chicago: S. Stone.)

AN UNCROWNED QUEEN, by Bernie Babcock, is the story of the life of Frances E. Willard, told in an attractive, simple, readable manner. The book is small and solves the problem of how to get Miss Willard's work and life before those people who would not be able to read the larger published volumes.

The story deals with the five important eras in the life of Miss Willard, and is divided into Play-Days, School Days, The Teacher, The Traveler, The Reformer. All the most important features of these days are given, and while little heretofore unpublished is contained in these pages, still the fresh, invigorating style of the author makes the subject matter seem like new material. As a gift book this volume is most desirable. Young people will read its pages with delight. It will be a practicable aid for a busy pastor who wishes to speak on Miss Willard's life, or for the leader of a young people's society who would give an evening to temperance and reform work. A ready sale is predicted for this work, especially among white-ribboners who appreciate anything concerning the life of Miss Willard.

The somewhat crude phraseology of the first chapters is forgotten in the exquisite touches found as one reads further into the story. The mechanical execution of the book is all that could be desired. The paper is heavy, the print clear and the green cloth cover bears one of Miss Willard's best pictures. (Chicago, New York, Toronto, London and Edinburgh: Fleming H. Revell Company. 75 cents.)

A small book of quite unique interest is CHINESE HEROES, a Record of Persecutions Endured by Native Christians in the Boxer Uprising, by Isaac I. Headland, author of "Chinese Mother Goose Rhymes," etc.

The narratives of these persecutions and martyrdom is given in the words of the Chinese themselves, who either experienced or witnessed them. There is no attempt to tell all that happened. The more hideous aspects of the case are discreetly left untold. The several simple, vivid accounts put together show plainly enough the horrible frenzy of the hour, but at the same time they reveal with convincing and touching beauty the genuine victory of the true martyr spirits on the part of a great number of native Christians; men and women, and even children, who bore testimony to their faith in Christ so sublimely that the Chinese character will be the richer for it for generations to come.

One who reads this admirable little book, and especially as he looks into the faces of these Christian Chinese families, as shown in the very numerous photographs here given of them, cannot fail to conceive not only a new respect but a fresh sense of love for them. It is wonderful how when the gospel really gets hold of them, it transfigures their very faces. And not a few of these Chinese faces are distinctly beautiful. (Eaton & Mains. $1 net.

The John G. Woolley YEAR BOOK for 1903 has a fine new picture of Mr. Woolley on the first page, and a quotation from his writings for each day in the year. Mrs. Woolley is the compiler of these selections, and the arrangement is convenient and artistic. Inspiring, comforting, and helpful in every way are the thoughts left with one as the pages are turned and the messages read. This year book is a wall calendar, but the leaves will be turned back for future reading, not torn off, since their sentiments are too valuable for one reading only. This work is a typographical as well as a literary credit to its designer and compiler.

Here are a few of the bright and apt epigrams:

"A missionary is one sent—who went."

"It stands to reason that when one is harkening to sounds outside he will not hear, or will hear imperfectly, the still, small voice within."

"To be free for service is simply to be fit for it."

"Alcohol is expressed decomposition It is fluid old age—the rigor mortis of vintages past and gone."

"We cannot all play the same instrument, but we can all be in the right key."

"An unfinished thought is little better than none—if thrown aside."

The Writer of Books.

By Isabella Howe Fiske.

TO the sculptor his white from Carrara, wherein his art may see
Leaping and struggling figures that cry him to set them free;
To the painter his tube of cobalt that shall wrap in its azure fold
The blue-eyed fair Madonna, or the angel crowned with gold.
But mine is the spoken language, the sounds of joy or pain,
The words that are uttered by love, or by wrath and the greed of gain,
Done by no painter's brushes, but a ready writer's pen;
Cries of the street are my chisel, sharp with the oaths of men,
My rose-tints children's laughter, and the mother's cradle-song—
Then judge ye if such as these in the halls with the rest belong.

Wellesley Farms, Mass.

The Kind of Seeds That Yield.

Like everything else there are good seeds and bad seeds. Seeds that grow and seeds that don't grow; seeds that yield and seeds that don't yield, and a little thought given now to the selection of the seed you'll need will be found time well spent, though realized much better at the harvest if you select the world-famed Ferry's Seeds—the kind that always yield. For nearly half a century Ferry's Seeds have been known and sown wherever good crops are grown, until farmer and gardener alike have learned to depend upon their wonderful reliable growing and yielding qualities, year after year, to the exclusion of all others.

Unfortunately the seed seems to afford a business means for many unscrupulous people, who aim to blind the unwary to quality, through littleness of price and boastful claims; who in reality have nothing to substantiate their claims, no reputation at stake, no past record as proof. It is better to pay at little more for the seed and be assured of a great deal more at the harvest by sowing Ferry Seeds. The 1903 Seed Annual, which is sent free, postpaid, will be found unusually interesting and instructive. Write for it to-day. Address D. M. Ferry & Co., Detroit, Mich.

Have You Got Rheumatism

You Can Be Cured;

FREE, A Scientific Discovery.

It is now possible to be cured of any form of rheumatism without having your stomach turned upside down or being half choked to death and made to vomit, and every sufferer from rheumatism should welcome this new and marvelous discovery with open arms and give it an honest trial. This new remedy was discovered by John A. Smith, Milwaukee, Wis., who is generous enough to send it free to every sufferer who writes at once. It is a home treatment and will not keep you from your work.

As you know, if you've tried them, every so-called rheumatic remedy on the market to-day, except this genuine cure, will cause you violent stomach pains an' vomiting, and some of them are so dangerous they will cause heart trouble. And the worst of i' is they never cure. When a person has rheumatism the constitution is so run down that he should be very careful what he puts into his stomach.

It therefore gives me pleasure to present a remedy that will cure every form and variety of rheumatism without one single unpleasant feeling. That remedy is

"GLORIA TONIC."

Before I decided to tell the world about the discovery of "Gloria Tonic" I had it tried on hospital patients, also on old and crippled persons, with perfect success. But some people never will believe anything until they know it from experience, so the best and quickest way is for you to write me that you want to be cured, and I will send you a box of "Gloria Tonic" free of cost. No matter what your form of rheumatism is—acute, chronic, muscular, inflammatory, deformant, sciatic, neuralgia, gout, lumbago, etc., "Gloria Tonic" will surely cure you. Do not mind if other remedies have failed you, nor mind if doctors say you are incurable. Mind no one, but write me to-day sure. "Gloria Tonic" will stop those aches and pains, those inflammations and deformities, and cure you so that life will again be worth living. This offer is not for curiosity seekers, but is made to rheumatics only. To them I will send a trial box of "Gloria Tonic" free.

Never before has a remedy been so highly indorsed as "Gloria Tonic." It has been indorsed by such world-noted men as Dr. Quintero of the University of Venezuela, Hon. E. H. Plumacher, United States Consul, Maracaibo; Prof. Macadam, of Surgeons' Hall, Edinburgh; the famous magazine "Health," London, and a column of others.

If you are a sufferer send your name to-day and by return mail you will receive "Gloria Tonic," and also the most elaborate book ever written on the subject of rheumatism, absolutely free. This book contains many drawings from actual life and wil tell you all about your case. You get "Gloria Tonic" and this wonderful book at the same time, both free, so let me hear from you at once and soon you will be cured. Address JOHN A. SMITH, 1164 Germania Bldg., Milwaukee, Wis., U. S. A.

FOR EATING DRINKING AND COOKING
ALWAYS USE
Huyler's
PINK WRAPPER
VANILLA CHOCOLATE
IT IS UNEQUALLED IN PURITY AND DELICIOUSNESS OF FLAVOR
YOUR GROCER SELLS IT

These trade-mark crisscross lines on every package.
GLUTEN FLOUR For DYSPEPSIA.
SPECIAL DIABETIC FLOUR.
K. C. WHOLE WHEAT FLOUR.
Unlike all other goods. Ask Grocers.
For book or sample write
Farwell & Rhines, Watertown, N. Y., U.S.A.

For nearly half a century
Ferry's Seeds
have been growing famous in every kind of soil, everywhere. Sold by all dealers. 1903 Seed Annual postpaid free to all applicants.
D. M. FERRY & CO.
Detroit, Mich.

SPECIAL
Anti-Cigaret
NUMBER OF
The Young Crusader
WILL BE THE
February Issue
Place your orders at once so that the papers for distribution on ANTI-CIGARET SUNDAY, March 1st, will reach you promptly.
Price, $2.00 per hundred
Woman's Temperance Publishing Association,
Chicago, Illinois.

Have you ever attended a
NATIONAL W. C. T. U. CONVENTION
Here is Your Opportunity to be Present at the Next One
We have a plan whereby you may obtain a round trip ticket without any outlay of money, provided you are willing to work and secure NEW subscribers to THE UNION SIGNAL. You will be greatly interested in our proposition, and we will be glad to communicate with you, giving full details of our plans. The work should begin at once : : : : : :
CIRCULATION DEPARTMENT
UNION SIGNAL
184 La Salle Street, CHICAGO

Practical Talks with Housekeepers.

By Mrs. L. W. Mitchell.

THERE is something distinctly unattractive in the sound of stew and hash, more especially the latter. The atmosphere of the second-rate boarding house seems to surround them. Frequently, on the home table, they are regarded in the light of necessary evils, and mute confessions of the limitations of the family purse—economical makeshifts, to be endured with a martyr's passive resignation.

As a matter of fact, both stew and hash may be prepared and placed on the table as excellent and appetizing dishes—occasional dishes, if you please, not stand-bys.

The concoction of "left-overs" into well-appearing dishes, entitled to a certain dignity of their own, is in reality an art, and one deserving more serious study.

In Mother Goose times, you remember, that "what they did not eat that night, the queen next morning fried," and very good it proved—I dare say, even better, as is sometimes the case, than the original dish. A queen to be proud of; a woman of resources; a woman of sense and thrift! One must imagine her as carefully dusting her crown every night and putting it under a glass case. What they did not eat in the morning may be surmised as giving body to the muffins served for the royal luncheon, and so on.

Seriously speaking, the care and disposition of left-overs is an important and telling factor of domestic economy, so easily can a woman prove the truth of the gibe that a woman can throw out with a teaspoon faster than a man can put in with a shovel.

In the present unsettled condition of domestic service, it is rare to find a servant whose personal interest in her temporary employer's affairs goes any further than the matter of her own wages and evenings out. "Waste not, want not," is applied nowhere and means nothing to the majority of cooks, peripatetic and not "standing on the ceremony of going," but "going at once." Therefore the sour milk is thrown out, cut bread accumulates and molds, cold cereals and the various odds and ends of cooked and uncooked meats and vegetables heap up the garbage box.

The mistress must bear these things in mind, supervise the gathering up of the "fragments that are left," give orders as to their disposal, and see to it that these orders are carried out.

The woman who cooks in person for her household has here a broad field for the exercise and development of any special talent she may possess along this line—a field for delightful creative work, where one may feel the thrill of the artist in her fingers as truly as the pianist or the painter of pictures. Also she has her rewards: She sits at the table and hears the praises of muffins or pancakes sung on every side. She knows they owe a large part of their construction to yesterday morning's mush, patties filled with remnants of Sunday's roast chicken, and a pudding contrived of sponge cake, like the "porridge in the pot"—nine days old!

In all these transformations, these magic feats of cookery, American women are somewhat behind their French and German sisters, but they are making rapid progress, and by their native wit they will be able to adapt from them as they choose, to suit the American cuisine.

Through her practice with "left-overs" a woman comes to a full realization of the importance of keeping up the pantry supplies along the line of condiments, sauces and seasonings of various kinds. Vinegars flavored with mint, tarragon, garlic, etc., are most useful. Catsups, capers, olives, herbs, and flavoring oil or extracts are the greatest help in dressing cold viands for a second presentation.

Salad dressing is an all-the-year-round indispensable, for a salad supplies an extra course for a meal, in an unexpected-company-crisis with slight expense of time and trouble, provided the dressing is ready for use. Bare is the pantry, low the larder, which does not show forth the wherewithal for a salad—that delightful improvisation from "left-overs."

The care of dripping is not known at all in many households. The surplus fat from meats, skimmings from soups, etc., make quite an accumulation in the winter, even in small families. Clarified drippings are much more wholesome than lard. By the aid of a can of lye, and according to the directions thereon, the saved up fats, otherwise thrown away, may be converted into excellent hard soap.

Instead of throwing away the cold coffee, it may be stiffened with gelatine, strained and molded, and when turned out and served with sweetened whipped cream, furnishes a dessert acceptable to most palates. In fruit cakes and puddings, it is a substitute for brandy, which should never, under any circumstances, be used by women of temperance principles.

The juice of canned fruit may also make the basis of gelatine puddings, or thickened with a little corn-starch, may be served warm with hot steamed or baked puddings. A rich fruit syrup is, like honey, a delicious accompaniment to hot griddle cakes and waffles.

Dry bits of cheese can be used to advantage in many other ways, besides the well-known methods of preparing baked macaroni. In sandwiches, or crackers, grated over rice or scalloped potatoes, it suits the taste of many. It may be mixed with salad dressing, after it is grated, formed into small balls, and served with the salad.

Small bits of cold meat, or a saucerful of canned peas, left from dinner, make a heartier dish of the breakfast omelet, by adding when the eggs are set in the pan, and then folding over. Let the mistress daily inspect her pantry shelves and ice-box, if she is conscientious in her endeavor to administer wisely and well the affairs of her household.

The following recipes will be found useful and economical. From various odds and ends of previous meals, they provide dishes good enough to set before a king and for which grace may be said with truly thankful hearts:

HAM SALAD: Take one cup cold, boiled ham which has been chopped with a little of the fat, mix with an equal quantity of cut celery, line a dish with lettuce, fill with the mixture, and pour over a mayonnaise dressing; sprinkle with capers.

HAM PATTIES: One pint cooked ham chopped fine, mix with an equal amount of bread crumbs wet with milk; fill this into buttered gem pans, break one egg on top of each, sprinkle with bits of butter and pepper, bake until brown.

POTATO PUFF: Add to two teacups cold, mashed potatoes, one half cup milk, pinch salt, tablespoon butter, two tablespoons flour, and two eggs, beaten to a froth. Mix thoroughly, put into a buttered pudding dish, spread the top with butter, and bake a golden brown. The success of the puff depends upon having the eggs beaten exceedingly light.

BREAD OMELETTE: Crumble a cup of stale bread-crumbs, and soak them in half a teacupful of hot water. Beat smooth, add teaspoon of butter and half teaspoon of salt, then five well-beaten eggs. Butter a shallow pudding dish, pour in the mixture, and bake about ten minutes. Serve at once, in the same dish, sending it to table with a napkin pinned around it. Grated cheese is a nice addition, if relished.

JELLY PUDDING: Soak one pint bread crumbs in one quart milk, add yolks of three eggs, rind and juice of one lemon, two cups of sugar; bake, and when cool, spread the top thickly with currant jelly, and cover with a meringue of the egg whites. Eat cold, with cream, whipped or plain.

Evanston, Ill.

What Sulphur Does

For the Human Body in Health and Disease.

The mention of sulphur will recall to many of us the early days when our mothers and grandmothers gave us our daily dose of sulphur and molasses every spring and fall.

It was the universal spring and fall "blood purifier," tonic and cure-all, and mind you, this old-fashioned remedy was not without merit.

The idea was good, but the remedy was crude and unpalatable, and a large quantity had to be taken to get any effect.

Nowadays we get all the beneficial effects of sulphur in a palatable, concentrated form, so that a single grain is far more effective than a tablespoonful of the crude sulphur.

In recent years, research and experiment have proven that the best sulphur for medicinal use is that obtained from Calcium (Calcium Sulphide) and sold in drug stores under the name of Stuart's Calcium Wafers. They are small chocolate coated pellets and contain the active medicinal principle of sulphur in a highly concentrated, effective form.

Few people are aware of the value of this form of sulphur in restoring and maintaining bodily vigor and health: sulphur acts directly on the liver, the excretory organs and purifies and enriches the blood by the prompt elimination of waste material.

Our grandmothers knew this when they dosed us with sulphur and molasses every spring and fall, but the crudity and impurity of ordinary flowers of sulphur were often worse than the disease, and cannot compare with the modern concentrated preparations of sulphur, of which Stuart's Calcium Wafers is undoubtedly the best and most widely used.

They are the natural antidote for liver and kidney troubles and cure constipation and purify the blood in a way that often surprises patient and physician alike.

Dr. R. M. Wilkins, while experimenting with sulphur remedies, soon found that the sulphur from Calcium was superior to any other form. He says: "For liver, kidney and blood troubles, especially when resulting from constipation or malaria, I have been surprised at the results obtained from Stuart's Calcium Wafers. In patients suffering from boils and pimples and even deep-seated carbuncles, I have repeatedly seen them dry up and disappear in four or five days, leaving the skin clear and smooth. Although Stuart's Calcium Wafers is a proprietary article, and sold by druggists, and for that reason tabooed by many physicians, yet I know of nothing so safe and reliable for constipation, liver and kidney troubles, and especially in all forms of skin disease as this remedy."

At any rate people who are tired of pills, cathartics and so-called blood "purifiers," will find in Stuart's Calcium Wafers a far safer, more palatable and effective preparation.

ILLINOIS CENTRAL — CENTRAL MISSISSIPPI VALLEY ROUTE — RAILROAD
New Line Fine Service.
Minneapolis and St. Paul
Fast "Limited" night train, with stateroom and open-section sleeping car, buffet-library car, and free reclining chair car through without change. Dining car service.
A. H. HANSON, G. P. A., CHICAGO.

CHIRON LUBRICATING PILE CONE
A small, hollow, perforated wooden cone, filled with the Chiron Ointment, especially prepared for the purpose. Perfect and continuous lubrication by soothing and healing ointment directly to the sore spots. Endorsed by physicians. Immediate relief and a certain cure for ALL KINDS OF PILES. By mail, securely sealed in plain wrapper, with extra box of ointment, $3, P. O. or Exp. Order.
The CHIRON Mfg. Co., Plainfield, N. J.

25 CTS. PISO'S CURE FOR CONSUMPTION 25 CTS.
CURES WHERE ALL ELSE FAILS.
Best Cough Syrup. Tastes Good. Use in time. Sold by druggists.

Free to Everyone.

A Priceless Book Sent Free For the Asking.

Piles Cured Without Cutting, Danger, or Detention From Work, by a Simple Home Remedy.

Pyramid Pile Cure gives instant relief and never fails to cure every form of this most troublesome disease. For sale by all druggists at 50c. a package. Thousands have been quickly cured. Ask your druggist for a package of Pyramid Pile Cure, or write for our little book which tells all about the cause and cure of piles. Write your name and address plainly on a postal card, mail to the Pyramid Drug Co., Marshall, Mich., and you will receive the book by return mail.

"This for That" Trade anything you have for anything you want. Get our gigantic paper that prints thousands of exchange ads. 6 mo. 10c. "THIS FOR THAT," 272 Star Building, Chicago.

$5 PER 100 For addressing envelopes. Send dime and stamp for material and instructions. Steady work. C. E. Miller, Dep. 12, Ely Bldg., Chicago

THE DOOM OF KING ALCOHOL

By Mrs. Clara Drake.

A DELIGHTFUL DRAMA FOR AN EVENING'S ENTERTAINMENT

Young People's Societies

Will find this especially adapted to their work

Price, 10 cents.

Woman's Temperance Publishing Ass'n,
CHICAGO.

Ye
Hatchet Partie

A Popular Temperance Entertainment for Washington's Birthday

Price, 5 Cents Each

Woman's Temperance Publishing Association
Chicago, Illinois

W. C. T. U. BADGES.

SILVER PIN.

A bow pin of white enamel on sterling silver. Very dainty, with a strong, firm clasp.

Price, 60 Cents. Per Doz., $6.50.

A STICK PIN.

With small dainty bow of white enamel on sterling silver.

Price 40 Cents.

Honorary Members' Pin.

Similar to stick pin, with letters H. M. making an excellent scarf pin for the gentlemen.

Price, 40 Cents.

WHITE RIBBON

Best quality, in bolts of 10 yds., 35 cts. each.

Woman's Temperance Publishing Ass'n,
CHICAGO, ILLINOIS.

About Women

Kansas, Illinois, Wisconsin and Minnesota are a few of the many states where the women are working for advanced legislation on the suffrage question. Each year seems to bring more favor and less opposition to this important measure.

An oil company has been organized for the development of oil lands in the Tennessee valley. The unique feature of this company is that it is officered entirely by women. The president is Miss P. Collings, sister of the lord mayor of London.

Idaho has a new state superintendent of schools, Miss May L. Scott. Colorado's superintendent is Miss Helen Grenfell. In Kansas and California the women candidates made a good showing with their large votes. Miss Jennie G. Kieth has been elected recorder of Wright county, Iowa.

A cemetery association in Hagerstown, Ind., is a unique woman's club. The men of the town not having public spirit enough to care properly for the village cemetery, the women took the matter in hand, spaded, dug, cut the grass and transformed the neglected place. It is now a source of pride to the town.

An Old Woman's Home association has just been organized in Jackson, Miss., with Mrs. Marian B. Longino, wife of the governor, as president. One of the ladies interested in it somewhat quaintly said that they were going to push the movement until Mississippi has a nice, comfortable home for her old and indigent women.

"Ithink a girl who can bake can make a better living than if she tries to earn it as a clerk or stenographer, and, besides, domestic duties are more within a woman's sphere." So says Miss Ocie May Hazzard of St. Paul, Minn., who has for several years earned $3,000 a year. She is a graduate of Hamlin University and has studied domestic science in the East.

Mrs. Turner, wife of the United States consul general of Canada, has been decorated with the Canadian Humane Society's medal for bravery in saving the life of Chief Game Warden Cormler, whom she rescued from the attack of a captive bear. The medal was pinned on by Lady Minto, wife of the governor general, who warmly complimented Mrs. Turner on her pluck and presence of mind.

Standing committees on home economics have been appointed by thirty-one out of the thirty-nine state federations of women's clubs. The growing demand for teachers of domestic science and managers to take charge of large institutions is marked, and shows the increasing popularity of the study. Not only to know how to cook and sew is implied by household economics, but the knowledge of food values is also necessary.

Two young women graduates of Radcliffe College have established a hygienic bakery at Cambridge, Mass. They make, bake and sell their scientific bread themselves and all Cambridge is enjoying it. They have now six assistants and wagons of their own, by which they deliver not only in Cambridge, but in Boston. They soon expect to enlarge their quarters and keep their ovens going all the time.

A special committee of the British Woman's Temperance Union is preparing a statement with a view to induce Parliament to adopt measures abolishing barmaids once and for all. There are 80,000 barmaids in the British Isles. 15,000 of them being in the metropolitan district. One of the problems the crusaders have to face is employment for these young women after their customary occupation has been taken from them.

There appears to be no end to the avenues in which the women of today find scope for their energies and activities. Pottery making is the latest industry in which they have made their mark. The famous Rockwood works were started by a woman, and many women are now turning their attention to the possibilities of the wheel, combined with deft fingers and delicate fancy, in the manipulation and designing of clay.

Miss Hannah Staegeman won a prize offered in Atchison, Kan., for being the most popular girl clerk. She and her sister Elsie are clerks. They keep house for their father, their mother being dead. They do the washing, ironing, baking and cleaning, cook two meals a day and put up their own luncheons and their father's every day. They do their own sewing and are at the store every morning at 8 o'clock. On washdays they get up at 4 a. m. and have their washing on the line when they go to the store. The ironing they do the following evening.

The woman's auxiliary of the Church Temperance Society of New York city has a substitute to the saloon in seven luncheon wagons kept on the streets in desirable locations. Nothing is sold costing more than 10 cents; thus they cater to the men who would be most tempted to seek refreshments in a saloon. These little wagons are at present near the homes where large entertainments or receptions are in progress, and coachmen and cabmen are supplied with hot coffee and sandwiches paid for by the hostess. Two fire wagons are always in readiness to attend fires and furnish coffee to the firemen.

Cooking and housekeeping have been added to the list of American educational attractions for the Japanese. Misona Hama, who will soon be graduated from the New York cooking school, has acquired all the knowledge she can about American cooking and housekeeping. The Empress of Japan is interested in introducing American fashions, and when Misona Hama returns to Japan the empress will doubtless establish her in a cooking school. Miss Hama has decided that while it is very well to study in a cooking school, the best way will be for her to live with an American family as a cook. Although there was no lack of funds, she will complete her education by actual experience.

Miss Susan B. Anthony says: "The progress in education is so marked and so well understood as to need but little comment. When, in 1851, Mrs. Stanton, Lucy Stone and I made a demand that girls in the state of New York should be permitted an opportunity for a college education, there was not even a high school open to them in the whole United States. Oberlin, Ohio, was the only college they could enter, and there were no preparatory schools to fit them for that institution. At the present time they are admitted to all the state universities except those of Virginia, Georgia and Louisiana, and to all the large universities of the Middle and Western States. There are now 3,500,000 women wage earners in this country, and the occupations in which they engage are with few exceptions the ocupations of men. The laws, taken as a whole, are by no means exactly just to women, but there is a steady tendency toward justice and practically no retrogression."

The women citizens of Colorado had a hand in the recent senatorial contest. Mrs. Alice M. Ruble, before the House of Representatives, made the following nomination: "In the name of the womanhood of this, the greatest state of the Union, in the august name of liberty for the oppressed of all the earth, in the name of justice, I nominate one who has forgotten self in the service of the commonwealth, who has added glory to the name of Colorado in the United States, and whose name is known around the world, Henry M. Teller." This is the first time in history that the nomination of a United States Senator has been made by a woman.

"O mother," cried a youngster who had been visiting an elder brother in school, "I learned lots to-day."

"What was one thing you learned?" asked the parent.

"I learned in the 'rithmetic class," was the reply, "that the square of the base and perpendicular of a right-handled triangle is equal to the sum of the hippopotamus."

This Man was perfectly and permanently cured from Rheumatism by The Jebb Discovery, after suffering for twelve years.

This man says: "For twelve years I suffered fearfully with Rheumatism. My back was so affected that I was nearly doubled together, my head and shoulders being lower than my hips. Thanks to The Jebb Discovery, I now walk erect, and though years have elapsed, I have never felt a return of Rheumatism."

The Jebb Discovery for Rheumatism is sent under a guarantee to cure. Two of the best banks in the state of Michigan vouch for the reliability of our Company. A Free Trial Treatment of this wonderful remedy sent postpaid to any address.

THE JEBB REMEDY CO., LTD.
244 Main Street, Battle Creek, Mich.

IS YOUR HUSBAND, SON OR FATHER A

Drunkard

If so, send us your name and address with 4 cts. to cover postage, packing, etc., we will send you a package of our "Secret Cure" free, in a plain package with full directions how to give it secretly in tea, coffee, food, etc. It is odorless and tasteless and will cure this dreadful habit, quietly and permanently without the patient's knowledge or consent. It is a positive and permanent "Secret Cure" for the Drink Habit, and will cost you nothing to try it. Good for both sexes.

MILO DRUG CO., Dept. 137 St. Louis, Mo.

A New Pledge Card

PLEASE SIGN THIS CARD AND KEEP IT

Woman's Christian Temperance Union

Pledge

I hereby solemly promise, God Helping Me, to abstain from all Distilled, Fermented and Malt Liquors, including Wine, Beer and Cider, as a beverage; and to employ all proper means to discourage the use of and traffic in the same.

NAME .....

Date..... 190.....

Price, 50 Cents per 100.

When ordering, kindly state the card containing pledge with words "as a beverage" is desired.

Woman's Temperance Publishing Association,
Chicago.

Signal Notes

At the Republican state convention of California, smoking was prohibited.

Lord Milner has issued an order giving local option to the Transvaal and prohibiting the employment of barmaids.

Another prison to do away with the lock-step, shaved heads and striped clothing is the New Jersey state penitentiary.

The call is out for a State Temperance Union convention, to be held in Topeka, Kansas, February 10 and 11. Dr. F. E. Clark of Boston is the principal speaker. The W. C. T. U. is well represented on the program.

A new germ called uncinariasis has been discovered by Dr. Charles Wardell Stiles. It is called the bacilli of laziness. Dr. Stiles says it makes laziness an abnormal and not a normal condition. He is looking for a remedy for it.

Bishop Cosgrove is in arms against vice in Davenport, Iowa. The segregation and licensing of the social evil which has continued through successive political administrations, with the apparent consent or toleration of the people, is the evil at which he is crusading.

The police of Brooklyn have discovered an illicit distillery in the cellar of a private house in that city. They found in a wagon just leaving the house twenty-gallon milk cans filled with whisky, these covered by bags of coal. The men driving the wagon were arrested and a raid made upon the house.

Rushville, Ind., is rejoicing in a "close" town. It is said that not in twenty years have the saloons been compelled to live as closely to the law as at the present time. There have been more convictions in the police court since the present city administration came in last September than in the previous two years combined.

The local option bill to be introduced into the next New Jersey legislature provides that upon application of not less than one-fourth of the legal voters the judge of the Supreme Court of the circuit shall pass upon the express wishes of the people of a community and order an election to decide whether the community shall have licensed saloons.

Naval and army officers who are charged with bringing into Porto Rico cigars and liquors on government vessels without reporting or paying duty, will receive no clemency from the treasury department. Offers of compromise made by some of the indicted officers will not be entertained, and all persons implicated in smuggling will be prosecuted.

The public school teachers of Whittier, California, are so aroused because of the tobacco habit among the boys of their grades that they have united in an earnest plea to the merchants in the town not to sell tobacco in any form to boys under sixteen. The plea has been published in the papers and it is hoped will awaken a crusade in the town.

The National and International Good Roads Convention will be held in St. Louis April 27 to May 2. The deliberations of the convention will comprehend discussion upon scientific methods of common road construction, including plans for providing for mean cost and maintenance, together with recommendations for practical public road legislation.

The consumption of alcoholic liquors in Belgium is on the increase. Whereas for fifteen years the population has only increased fourteen per cent, the consumption of alcohol has increased thirty-seven per cent, and with it insanity has increased forty-five per cent, crime seventy-four per cent, suicide eighty per cent and poverty 150 per cent.

An effort for early closing of business places in Erie, Pa., is being made. It has been quite noticeable that those representing the saloon interests are the most active in the work for early closing. It is, therefore, suggested by many citizens that the saloons also close their doors at 7 p. m., that the only open door on the streets may not be the saloon door.

Dr. Hutchinson, physician of the Kansas reformatory for boys, who, by the way, is the husband of the W. C. T. U. president of that state, produces figures in his annual report showing that cigarets are the cause of the downfall of more inmates in that institution than all other vicious habits combined. Of the 350 inmates in the reformatory last year 236 claimed that the cigaret had driven them to crime.

Clubs are going to have hard work in North Dakota, with Judge Pollock to interpret law for them. The state Supreme Court has affirmed Judge Pollock in a decision in a peculiar violation of the prohibitory law, so says the "White Ribbon Bulletin." A farmer named Thoempke and some friends of his chipped in and bought beer which they drank at Theompke's home, he acting as treasurer. Complaint was made to the "sessions" held there, and Judge Pollock fined the farmer $200 and costs and sentenced him to ninety days in jail.

"A prohibition election for Dallas county, Texas," "an anti-saloon war in Sioux City, Iowa," "A new temperance law in Tennessee"—these are some of the headings that greet the eye of the reader of the daily papers. And this could be multiplied many times over by the movements against the liquor traffic in every state. Each year sees more and more territory come under prohibition restrictions.

A petition in behalf of the negroes has been addressed to Congress, protesting against the granting of unconditional statehood to Oklahoma and Indian Territory. Congress is urged not to make any change in the legal status of the Indian Territory that would confer upon state or local authority the power to remove the existing federal restraint on the sale of spirituous liquors. They claim that these territories are the last refuge of the colored people fleeing from injustice and oppression practiced on account of race prejudice in some of the reconstructed states.

"The Emancipator," organ of the Illinois Anti-Saloon League, has been consolidated with "The American Issue," retaining the name of the latter. The new paper will be published weekly by the Anti-Saloon Publishing Company from Chicago and Columbus, O., as the official organ of the Anti-Saloon Leagues of Illinois, Ohio and Indiana. Rev. J. C. Jackson of Columbus, present editor of the "American Issue," will be managing editor, and William H. Anderson and Rev. E. G. Saunderson, superintendents of the Illinois and Indiana leagues, respectively, will be associate editors and assistant managers.

The teetotalers of France (French Anti-Alcoholic Association) have been holding a congress at Brest, under the presidency of Dr. Legrain. An active part in the proceedings was taken by Admiral Reveillere and by General Gonard. Resolutions were carried calling on the government (1) to direct that the inspectors of elementary schools should put, at every examination of the children, at least one question bearing on Temperance; and (2) to rescind the recent decree which restored the custom of serving a ration of brandy to the troops during the annual maneuvers; and (3) to facilitate the employment of distilled spirits in manufacturing operations, so as to enable them to be utilized otherwise than for human consumption.

A father fearing an earthquake in the region of his home sent his two boys to a distant friend until the peril should be over. A few weeks later, the father received this letter from his friend: "Please take your boys home and send down the earthquake."

THEY GUARANTEE TO CURE RHEUMATISM. SEE AD OF JEBB REMEDY CO., Battle Creek, on page 22.

The Editor's Question Box.

THE editors of THE UNION SIGNAL desire to know positively just what features of the paper are pleasing to its readers; whether or not it is meeting the needs of the great organization it represents. To this end we solicit definite answers to the list of questions appended herewith. We desire the suggestions, commendations, criticisms, complaints and requests of our subscribers, that we may be mutually benefited.

1. Which of the four numbers of THE UNION SIGNAL published in December did you like best, and which did you like least, and why?

2. Which article in these four numbers did you like best, and which did you like least, and why?

3. Which feature of the Magazine number, January 1, did you like best, and which did you like least, and why? Would you like to have the Monthly Magazine number continued?

4. What feature of THE UNION SIGNAL do you find most helpful, and what, if any, feature is not to your liking, and why?

5. Have you approved of the changes in the typographical appearance of THE UNION SIGNAL during the past six months, and do you wish to have it continued in its present form?

6. What suggestion can you make that, in your opinion, would improve THE UNION SIGNAL and make it more valuable to its readers?

7. Is every member of your Union a subscriber to THE UNION SIGNAL, and, if not, why not?

8. Has every member of your Union been asked to subscribe to THE UNION SIGNAL under the various special offers made? If not, why not?

9. Has every member of your Union seen a copy of THE UNION SIGNAL during the past six months? Sample copies may be had for the asking.

10. Have you, as an interested worker, made an effort to extend the influence of your National Official Organ, and if so, how? What plan would, in your opinion, be most effective in adding 50,000 new subscribers to our list?

To secure these replies promptly we make the following offers, good until February 15, 1903:

For the best answer to the set of ten questions, $5.00.

For the second best answer to the set of ten questions, $3.00.

For the third best answer to the set of ten questions, $2.00.

These answers will be carefully considered by a committee of three and the awards will be announced in our March Magazine number.

Answers received later than February 15 cannot be entered. Address all communications on this subject to Editor's Question Box, UNION SIGNAL Office, 184 La Salle St., Chicago.

Publishers' Notes.

The Y. W. C. T. U. Manual.

The Department Manual of the Y. W. C. T. U., by Frances J. Barnes, has been brought up-to-date by the addition of a page of errata prepared by Mrs. Clara Parrish Wright. To those newly entering the Y this manual will give the information they are so eagerly seeking. The first pages contain a full history of the Y branch. The purpose and plan of the organization, the preliminary work necessary, and how to organize are clearly treated. Constitutions, programs, socials, department work suitable for the Y's and much more valuable instruction, is given in the little book. The price has been reduced from 25 cents to 15 cents, which is an especial offer. All Y's should possess this book.

A Word to the Wise.

We quote from one of Michigan's most active and earnest workers and one who knows the value of THE UNION SIGNAL to the worker. Speaking of the special offer she says: "Every one of these ten cent subscribers ought to take the paper the whole year. I'm ashamed and grieved that women who 'belong' don't interest themselves enough to become intelligent and keep posted about our work."

Work Among Indians.

Much interest centers around the February Responsive Reading, because it is the first reading ever written upon the department, Work Among Indians. This is one of the newest lines of work adopted by the National W. C. T. U., the department having been adopted at the Fort Worth Convention in 1901.

The reading is written by Mrs. Dorothy J. Cleveland, National superintendent of the department and one well versed in this subject. Church societies will find this reading one of especial service in home missionary meetings. Price 50 cents per 100.

Temperance Talks.

In the pamphlet entitled "Temperance Talks," or John Harbor's Children, will be found choice quotations from Socrates, Demosthenes and Pythagoras down to Terence V. Powderly, and all are powerful testimony against the drink curse, which will be found very helpful in arranging a great variety of programs. Price: Each, 5 cents; 10 or more, each, 3 cents; per 100, $2.50.

An Hour in Babyland.

"An Hour in Babyland," by Ada Wallace Unruh, is a plain talk with mothers, and as needful to fathers as well. The language of the book is chaste and tender, and the message is strong and true. Mothers cannot read and follow its teachings without being better mothers to the coming children, to the babies already here, and better advisers concerning the growing lads and lassies who are beginning to think about entering upon the new duties of married life. We would like to introduce this booklet into every W. C. T. U. home in our land. Nature studies, examples that have come to her notice, and confidences from mother hearts, all enrich the pages of Mrs. Unruh's book. The price is 25 cents.

WOMAN'S TEMPERANCE PUB. ASSN.,
184 La Salle St., Chicago.

"Who was George Washington, Nellie?" asked the teacher of a little girl in the primary department.

"He was Mrs. Washington's second husband" was the truthful but rather unexpected reply.—Pittsburg Press.

PERSONAL MAGNETISM

How Prominent Men Develop This Power and Use it to Influence Others—Women, Too, Adepts in This Mysterious Art.

A Reporter Makes Astounding Discoveries—Secret Methods Which Charm and Fascinate the Human Mind.

High Priests of the Occult Reveal Jealously Guarded Secrets of Years—A Wonderful New Book by Prominent New York Men.

A wonderful new book entitled, "The Secret of Power," has just been issued, at an expense of over $5,000, by one of the leading colleges of the City of New York. This book is from the pen of the ablest specialist of modern times. The authors gave away the copyright on conditon that 10,000 copies should be distributed to the public free of charge. The Columbia Scientific Academy is now complying with this contract, and until the editon of 10,000 copies is exhausted you can get a copy of this book absolutely free. The book is profusely illustrated with the most expensive half-tone engravings. It is full of wonderful secrets and startling surprises, and thoroughly explains the real source of the power of personal influence. It fully and completely reveals the fundamental principles of success and influence in every walk of life. The hidden mysteries of personal magnetism, will power and scientific character reading are explained in an intensely interesting manner. Two methods of personal influence are described, which positively enable any intelligent person to exercise a marvellous influence and control over any one whom he may wish. These methods are entirely new and have never before been made public. A reporter has tried them personally and can vouch for their wonderful power.

The book also describes absolutely certain methods by which you can read the character, secrets and lives of every one you meet. No one can deceive you. You can tell what vocation is best for you to follow. You can know the power by which minds of human beings are charmed and fascinated. The newest, latest and best system of physical and mental culture and magnetic healing is fully explained and illustrated by beautiful half-tone engravings. No such book has ever before been published. No such wonderful information has ever before been placed in the hands of the public. On account of the mighty power and influence placed in one's hands by this book, the Legislature of the State of New York debated whether or not the State ought to permit its promiscuous circulation; but it was finally decided the good it would accomplish would greatly overbalance the ill, and its distribution was not interfered with.

Not along ago John D. Rockefeller, the richest man in America, said, in talking to a Sunday school class, that he attributed his success in life largely to his ability to influence others. Lincoln, Lee, Napoleon, and Alexander the Great all won fame and renown by their wonderful powers of personal influence. Jay Gould piled up millions by this same power. J. P. Morgan organized the billion dollar steel trust and enriched himself by millions simply by his marvellous ability to influence others. There are today thousands of men with the brains and education of Mr. Morgan who are practicaly paupers. They have the ability to organize a trust, but they have not sufficient power of personal influence. Personal influence, will power, stamina—call it what you will—has from the creation of man been the subtle force that has brought wealth, fame and renown to those who are fortunate enough to possess it. This strange, mysterious influence is inherent in every human being. By the late methods explained by the New York specialist in human culture any intelligent person can develop a wonderfully magnetic personality, and learn how to read the character, secrets and lives of others in a few days' study at his own home. You can use this marvellous power without the knowledge of your most intimate friends and associates. You can use it to obtain lucrative employment, to secure an advance in salary, to win the friendship and influence of others, to obtain a greater share of happiness from life. You can be respected, honored and become a leader in your community.

If you are not fully satisfied with your present condition and circumstances; if you long for greater success or more money; if you are not able to influence others to the extent you desire, the reporter would advise you to write at once for a free copy of this great work, now being given away by the Columbia Scientific Academy.

Mrs. C. Richmond Duxbury of 472 A Green Ave., Brooklyn, N. Y., the authoress of "New England Folk," recently sent for copies of the books; after carefully examining them and testing the methods of personal influence on her friends and associates, she makes the following statement in a letter to a friend: "Nothing could induce me to part with the advantage that my little knowledge of your books has given me. Any student can acquire it and will be fascinated and delighted with the result."

Fred. Perkins, of South Haven, Mich., says:—"I have been in great demand since I read the work of the Columbia Scientific Academy. People are amazed and mystified at the things I do. I believe I could make $25 per day reading character alone if I were to charge for my services. If any one would have told I would receive so much wonderful information I would have thought him crazy."

Mrs. M. Effie Watson, of Martinsville, Ind., says:—"Could I have had access to such information in past years I could have avoided many misfortunes. This work of the Columbia Scientific Academy shall be my guiding star the remaining days of my life."

If you will send your name and address to the Columbia Scientific Academy, Dept. 213 R, 1931 Broadway, New York City, this book will be sent to you absolutely free, postage prepaid. On account of the great expense involved in preparing this book, the Columbia Scientific Academy requests that only people who are especially interested write for free copy—only those who really desire to achieve greater success and better their condition in life.

Programs Wanted

Our Red Letter Day Calendar was adopted for the purpose of enabling local union members to become familiar with W. C. T. U. history by making special observance of certain important events connected therewith A program for each Red Letter Day is usually given in The Union Signal to aid local workers in presenting our cause before a public audience. In order to learn the exact needs or ideas of the local worker in this particular respect, we solicit programs for all the Red Letter Days on the following terms: We will pay $5 for the best program for any Red Letter Day in the calendar; $3 for the second best program for any Red Letter Day. These programs must be practical enough to be adapted to local needs, and they should average about 1,800 words in length. Send to National Headquarters, The Willard, Evanston, Ill. (inclosing stamp), for a copy of the Annual Leaflet, which contains the Red Letter Day Calendar as well as much other necessary information. Send to the W. T. P. A., 184 La Salle Street, Chicago, Ill., for literature bearing on the work of the departments represented in these special days, and for the leaflet on suggested programs, by Mrs. Mary D. Tomlinson, National Superintendent of Social Meetings and Red Letter Days. A state president says in a recent letter: "My people perish for lack of knowledge!" Let there be such a general reading upon the literature of all our departments of work, such a careful study of the Annual Leaflet, that our members will not only be qualified to make programs but to carry them out, to our mutual benefit. Programs for Neal Dow Day should be in the editor's hands by March 1. The offer for the rest of the Red Letter Day programs is open until March 15. The awards will be announced in our April magazine number. Stamps should be enclosed for the return of unavailable manuscript.

NOTE OUR SPECIAL OFFER FOR UNION SIGNAL DAY!

FOR GOD AND HOME AND EVERY LAND.

The UNION SIGNAL AND WORLD'S WHITE RIBBON

NATIONAL and WORLD'S WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION

Entered at Chicago Postoffice as Second-class Matter.

"Thou hast given a banner to them that fear thee: that it may be displayed because of the truth."

Vol. XXIX.—No. 7. Issued Weekly. | CHICAGO, FEBRUARY 12, 1903. | Price, $1.50 Per Year in Advance.

Notice.

THE UNION SIGNAL for $1 to clubs of ten during the first week in March, to commemorate UNION SIGNAL DAY, March 1, the birthday of our National President and Editor-in-Chief, Mrs. L. M. N. Stevens.

Contents of This Number.

CURRENT TEMPERANCE NEWS 2, 3
YOUNG WOMAN'S BRANCH 4
CONTRIBUTED:
Reminiscences of Manila. By Mrs. Cornelia Moots—Intemperance in Disguise. By David Paulson, M. D. 5
After Five Years. By Antoinette A. Hawley. A Fight Against Odds. By Kate Anderson 6
CHILDREN'S COZY CORNER 7
EDITORIAL:
Vermont Under Eclipse—The Privileges of Citizenship—"The Cry of the Children" 8
Toward the Sun-Rising 9
PRESIDENT'S LETTER 9
OFFICIAL COMMUNICATIONS 10
W. C. T. U. NOTES 11
WOMAN'S INVASION OF THE INDUSTRIAL FIELD—THE PROHIBITION AGAINST BAR-MAIDS IN INDIA RESCINDED 12
FEBRUARY MAGAZINES 13
PROGRAM FOR UNION SIGNAL DAY 14
ABOUT WOMEN 15
SIGNAL NOTES—PUBLISHERS' NOTES 16

Red-Letter Day.

February 17, Frances E. Willard Thankoffering Day.

THE HEAVENLY BIRTHDAY OF MISS WILLARD.

News of the Week.

The woman suffrage bill has been defeated in the Montana legislature.

A thousand lives lost as result of hurricane and tidal wave which swept over South Sea Islands.

Ex-United States Senator Henry Laurens Dawes, Massachusetts, died at Pittsfield, aged 86 years.

Charles B. Hart, United States minister to Colombia, resigned, and was succeeded by A. M. Baupre, secretary of legation.

J. Edward Addicks, who has prevented the election of a United States Senator from Delaware for three years, withdrew as a candidate.

The Martha Washington Hotel, for the exclusive use of women, completed in New York. Five hundred guests have engaged rooms.

The Adams Bill, permitting cities of 5,000 population to re-incorporate under the four-mile law, has been signed by the governor of Tennessee.

The French chamber of deputies appropriated $240,000 over the protest of the minister of war, for the purpose of supplying the troops with wine.

The anti-trust bill introduced by Representative Littlefield, of Maine, passed the House without opposition. Monopolists lobbying to prevent favorable action in the Senate.

Operators and coal miners' conference reached agreement on wage scale, which will give an average advance of 14 per cent; will benefit over 300,000 men, including 40,000 in Illinois.

New York Central railroad company assigns sixty surgeons to sections of its line, and emergency outfits are to be carried on all passenger trains, as part of plan to reduce deaths by accident.

Great Britain said to have consented to submission of Venezuela case to The Hague to prevent continuance of negotiations. Minister Bowen unable to come to any agreement with the powers.

Evangelist G. Campbell Morgan secured subscriptions amounting to $100,000 for the erection of an auditorium at St. Louis, Mo., in which to conduct religious services during the World's Fair.

Compromise on statehood bill reached, but democratic resentment at Senator Quay may cause defeat; four territories would be admitted as two states, to prevent election of eight democratic senators and only four or five republican representatives.

A Good Standing Place for Both. Mr. Carroll D. Wright very correctly holds up the decalogue as the best labor platform. The same rule of conduct may, with equal propriety, be recommended to the corporations. Then when labor and capital come together in one great combination, each co-operating in its proper sphere to mutual advantage, neither will have to revise its platform.

Memorial Day February 17. All those who cherish the memory of Frances Willard, acknowledging the debt that every individual owes to her influence, should esteem it a privilege to share in practically expressing that indebtedness in the form of a thankoffering on Memorial Day, February 17. Two dollars mailed to our National treasurer, Mrs. Helen M. Barker, Evanston, Ill., will aid in sending out workers into the unorganized parts of the country. In contributing to this cause, the giver is doubly enriched, laying a tribute at the feet of her who lives eternally as a type of Christian womanhood and at the same time perpetuating her memory in a deathless multiform charity.

Send in Your Petitions. There is a growing sentiment outside strictly prohibitionist ranks that for our government to sell liquor in the National Capitol and other of its buildings or grounds—military posts included—is not consistent either with its own dignity or with justice to its citizens. Many American voters and taxpayers, who oppose prohibition as a principle and regard the liquor traffic as a necessary source of revenue, are awakening to the fact that it is rather disgraceful for Uncle Sam to carry on the saloon business in his own buildings, that he makes a sorry appearance behind the bar, and that by using property which belongs to the whole people for such purpose he is virtually making liquor sellers of all American citizens whether they will or no. The people are going to put a stop to the indignity and injustice. Voters, make your wishes known to your Senators at Washington. Ask them to vote for the McCumber bill and for the measure forbidding the sale of intoxicants at immigrant stations.

Not Weary in Well Doing. Reformers are in no wise dismayed at statistics showing increase in the consumption of liquor in this or in any other country. If it is true that the drink business is more flourishing than ever, it is also true that there are more total abstainers, more prohibitionists, than ever before. We remember that that other great iniquity, human slavery, was never more dominant, more intrenched in the national life, than when the hour struck for its abolishment. There were years of sentiment-making, of patient, persistent agitation and education, before final victory was possible, and it was the growing magnitude of the evil, the increase, not the decrease, of the slave traffic, which brought about its destruction. Intemperance may be increasing, but the liquor traffic is doomed. Christian temperance workers have abundant reason for hope and cheer, and never were they in better trim to go on agitating, educating, and—some say—irritating. The mission of white-ribboners was aptly described by Miss Willard when she said: "While the enemy has brewed beer, they have brewed public opinion; while he distilled whisky they distilled sentiment; while he rectified spirits they rectified the spirit that is in man."

The Vermont Campaign. A memorable feature of the recent campaign for the retention of the prohibitory law in the state of Vermont, was the heroic work of our National speakers. They endured all manner of discomfort by exposure to storms and severe cold, never faltering in the discharge of their self-imposed labors. Miss Gordon addressed an audience of 2,000 children at Burlington, February 2, and the badge pinned on each—a white ribbon bearing the words, "Vote NO for my sake"—will have a lasting significance for the little ones whose appeal was ignored. It is impossible to regard all this unselfish, exalted effort in the light of failure. The state has been aroused as never before, and the interest awakened will not again lose consciousness, but will cry to heaven until God hears and rights this wrong.

An Important Case. An interesting question pending before the United States Department of Justice is, Shall South Carolina pay the government license as a liquor-seller? The state asks for the return of some $20,000 paid under protest to the internal revenue department for liquor licenses during the eight years' operation of the dispensary system. The matter was decided against the state by the internal revenue commissioner and is sure to be argued before the court of claims. The counsel for the state contends that the United States liquor tax law applies to persons and not to states, that the dispensary system is not a commercial enterprise, that the state is not in the business for profit, that the law is purely a police regulation and intended simply to minimize the evils of the liquor traffic. The government's representative, the special attorney of the department of justice, opposes the return of the tax money on the ground that Carolina is operating the dispensaries on business principles and deriving profit therefrom, state reports showing that in one year the profits amounted to $545,248. The point at issue is a significant one, and the effects of the decision of the court of claims will be far-reaching.

Union Signal Day. Following closely upon the heavenly birthday of our first National President and Editor-in-Chief, comes the natal day of her worthy and beloved successor, Lillian M. N. Stevens. This day, March 1, has been designated "UNION SIGNAL DAY," in honor of the present Editor-in-Chief, and on or near that date every local union is expected to hold a meeting which shall be given to a study and discussion of the official organ, and an active canvas for subscriptions. There is no dearth of material for such meetings. Note the call of our National superintendent of the department of Red Letter Days and Social Meetings, on page 10, and send for her "Suggested Programs," or utilize the program on page 14 of this issue, prepared by our National Press superintendent, Mrs. Minnie Barker Horning. In order to make this a real Red Letter Day, the publishers of THE UNION SIGNAL will renew the $1 offer for clubs of ten, for the first week in March. Hold your meeting early in the week to insure the orders reaching us by March 7, when the offer closes. Let us make this birthday a notable one to our self-sacrificing National President by extending the circulation of the paper through which she speaks directly to her loyal constituents.

U. OF M. LIBRARY

Noted Senators on the Mormon Question.

Margaret Dye Ellis, Correspondent.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Feb. 7.—Early in the week I wrote Senator Hoar of Massachusetts who as a member of the Committee on Privileges and Elections would be in a position to understand the case, regarding a popular protest against the seating of Mr. Smoot, the newly elected Senator from Utah, and received the following reply; it covered the ground so well, I begged the favor of publishing it in THE UNION SIGNAL, to which he readily gave consent:

"MY DEAR MADAM: The Constitution of the United States determines the qualifications of Senators, the Senate sits as a court. Now if the three hundred thousand members of your organization can present any argument as to the constitutional question of the validity of Mr. Smoot's election, or as to his qualifications, it is quite desirable that they should be presented. They ought to have, and will have, just the same attention if presented by one woman or man, as if presented by three million. You will judge if anything occur to you or to any of your associates which you think a good legal argument. If so, I would advise you by all means to present it. I do not think, to answer your question, that a popular protest would have, or ought to have, any weight. A Senator who would give any weight to a popular sentiment in such a matter would be violating his oath of office to support the Constitution.

You further say, 'If it is a foregone conclusion that he will take his seat, and that all opposition will go for naught, we do not care to enter into it.' I do not suppose that the members of the Senate, in general, have come to any conclusion about the matter. They will wait until they get the evidence, and wait until they hear the arguments. As one member of the Senate, and a member of the Committee of Privileges and Elections, I shall take that course myself.

There is a singular delusion that seems to prevail in the minds of many good people, that in deciding such a question a Senator should be governed by his opinion as to whether the person claiming a seat is a person who ought to have been chosen.

The Senate has nothing to do with that question. That is settled by the state legislature. All we can do is to say, as a court, whether the person chosen has the constitutional qualifications and was duly elected. The court might as well say that you should not have your house, because in their opinion, you were not a suitable person to keep it, as to say that you should not have a seat in the Senate, if duly chosen and qualified. I hope some day women may have seats in legislative bodies. But I should be very sorry to have every one who thinks that a bad plan, vote against a lawfully elected woman, for that reason.

I am with high regard, faithfully yours,

(Signed) George F. Hoar."

The Mormon question has been having such a ventilating in the Senate this week as it never had before, through the discussion on the statehood bill, which drags its weary length through each day's session. Senator McComas of Maryland brought out most emphatically the weak points in the anti-polygamy amendments in the bill to admit Arizona and New Mexico, styling them, "Flimsy barriers against polygamy put in this omnibus statehood bill; it does not prohibit polygamy, it simply prohibits the celebration of the rites of the ceremony of plural marriage."

It was shown that the populations of Arizona, Wyoming, Idaho and of course Utah, were largely made up of Mormons, while Colorado and New Mexico have large colonies of the same.

Senator Dubois, of Idaho, upon being questioned very closely by his fellow Senators, stated that, "No Mormon holding high ecclesiastical position, can aspire to any political office without first gaining the consent of the first presidency of the Mormon Church."

The "first presidency" consists of the president, and two councilors, who are selected from the Apostle quorum of twelve, and who are called the second and third presidents. This triumvirate is vested with supreme power. It is understood that when the "first presidency" sends out its orders, they are to be absolutely obeyed. The Mormon church still holds that kind of allegiance which makes the church higher than the government. Senator Hale, of Maine, very rightly remarked, "This is a very serious condition which the Senator (Dubois) has stated to us, that this silent authority, accountable not to the state, not to the nation, but to the central, controlling, potential force represented by the first president and his associates in Utah, raises a very profound problem for the Senate to deal with. It has been one of the most difficult things to deal with people who hold any allegiance aside from that to the government, an allegiance which may be an oath bound allegiance, and it presents to my mind as never before, the danger of the influence of the Mormon church in those localities in the future, as a dark element that cannot be penetrated by that light that usually illumines and enlightens communities generally in the states. It is an outside influence. It is pernicious and may be fraught with the most serious mischief."

Last Saturday, January 31, Hon. J. J. Jenkins, of Wisconsin, chairman of the House Judiciary Committee presented the following joint resolution in the House, and yesterday, Senator Hansbrough, at my request, presented the same in the Senate; both are now in the hands of the Judiciary Committees, Senator G. F. Hoar, chairman of the Senate Judiciary.

57th CONGRESS, 2d Session. H. J. RES. 258.

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,

January 31, 1903.

MR. JENKINS introduced the following joint resolution, which was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary and ordered to be printed.

JOINT RESOLUTION

Proposing an amendment to the Constitution of the United States prohibiting bigamy and polygamy.

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled (two-thirds of each House concurring therein), That the following amendment to the Constitution of the United States be adopted according to law:

ARTICLE XVI. "No person shall willfully and knowingly contract a second marriage while the first marriage, to the knowledge of the offender, is still subsisting and undissolved.

"Any person who shall willfully and knowingly contract a second marriage while the first marriage, to the knowledge of the offender, is still subsisting and undissolved shall never thereafter hold, occupy, or enjoy any office of honor or profit under the United States.

"Congress shall make all laws necessary and proper to carry the foregoing powers into execution."

Senator Hansbrough also presented a bill to appropriate two million dollars for the benefit of Army Posts, Garrisons, etc., which was finally cut down to another half million dollars. All these helps will have a tendency to sound the death knell of the army canteen, for a better environment for the soldier means a contented, satisfied man, with so much to hold and to occupy, so much to elevate and enlarge, that time will not drag, but every hour will be full.

The Secretary of the House Military Committee very justly complained the other day at the continuance of letters sent the committee concerning the repeal of the anti-canteen law, and broke out with, "Confound it, can't your people read? Don't they know that a resolution was passed by this committee over three weeks ago, not to do anything with it this session? Then why do they keep on writing?"

The interstate-commerce bill relating to original packages which passed the House so overwhelmingly last week, is now in the hands of the Senate Inter-State Committee, and needs telegrams, letters, etc., to cause the members to realize that the people demand its passage.

Only a short time now, less than four weeks, before this session closes. What is done must be done IMMEDIATELY.

Legislative Hearing On Resubmission In Maine.

AUGUSTA, Me., Feb. 5.—The Committee on Temperance in the Maine legislature gave a public hearing today in the House of Representatives, to arguments for and against the resolution introduced by a Democratic member, Mr. Davis, of Waterville, to submit to a vote of the people the question of continuing the present prohibitory law. The remonstrants were led by Mrs. L. M. N. Stevens, of Portland, President of the National W. C. T. U., who said, in part:

"We are opposed to resubmission. We do not believe the best people of the state want resubmission. I should, however, make exception of the comparatively few temperance people who no doubt honestly believe that it would aid in the enforcement of law if voters should again declare at the polls in favor of prohibition. But we think the same amount of time and labor that a resubmission campaign would call for applied on law enforcement lines would bring far better results. It is on this ground very largely that Congressman Littlefield is opposed to resubmission. He says he does not believe in 'devoting time and energy to issues that tend to divert attention from the real question—the nomination, election and support of officials who will strictly enforce the law.'

"I need hardly call attention to the large number of remonstrances from every section of the state which have been presented nearly every day since the resubmission resolve was introduced. These remonstrances represent the best people of the various communities. The absence of petitions in favor of the resolve has been conspicuous until yesterday when petitions from several places, bearing in all 942 names were presented. Notwithstanding the steady stream of remonstrances up to yesterday we find that to offset these 942 petitioners of yesterday favoring the resolve there were presented yesterday 3,034 remonstrants to say nothing of several churches, philanthropic societies, who by the way, have been remonstrating all along. How many ministers or churches or philanthropic or educational societies can the petition for resubmission report? None have been in evidence thus far."

Other speakers for the remonstrants were Chas. Dunn, Jr., of Portland, who succeeded the late Rev. S. F. Pearson, as the prohibition sheriff, Rev. A. S. Bisbee of Brunswick, prohibition candidate for sheriff in Cumberland county at the last election, Rev. Wilbur F. Berry, president of the Maine Wesleyan Seminary at Kents Hill and secretary of the Christian Civic League of Maine, Ex-Representative Frank N. Bennett of Hollis. The hearing lasted all the afternoon, and until 7 o'clock this evening. The committee took the case under advisement.

It is generally believed that the legislature will vote against resubmission by a large majority.

Mexico Takes An Advanced Step.

Addie Northam Fields, Correspondent.

SAN JUAN DE LETRAN, Mexico, Feb. 5.—Acting Governor of the Federal District of Guillermo, Landa y Escandon, has just issued an important decree in view of the manifest abuse of intoxicating liquors, occasioning grave offenses against police regulations and continued violations of the penal laws. The following telegram from Edward C. Butler to an American paper gives the text of the decree:

"On Sundays barrooms and pulque shops will close from midday, and establishments for the retail sale of wines, liquors and beer, suspend their sale same hour, even if they remain open for the sale of other articles, while in restaurants drinks will be served only till two o'clock in the afternoon and from seven to nine at night.

"During week-days barrooms will close at nine p. m. and establishments for retailing suspend sales same hour, even if they remain open for the sale of other articles. Penalties range from ten to two hundred pesos, doubled for second offense, and in latter case forfeiture of license. Licenses for extra hours will be forfeited. Decree effective February first.

"Eighy-five thousand gallons of pulque are consumed daily in this city; consequence, disorders, fights and murders, and Belem Prison, capable of holding 3,000 men and women, full nearly all the time. Mexico has four hundred thousand inhabitants, with one saloon for each four hundred and seventy-three people, and one pulqueria for each two hundred and sixty-six. Of the fifteen hundred saloons, eight hundred by special licenses are open day and night, but this special license revoked under decree.

"Mexico is the only city in civilization where such restrictive legislation is not in force. Eleven years ago Jennings Demorest, of New York, came here to agitate prohibition movement, but failed. Two years ago Mrs. Fields, representing Woman's Christian Temperance Union, United States, located here, and has pursued quiet but effective campaign. In his capacity as mayor of this city, Mr. Landa y Escandon recently visited the principal cities of Europe and the United States to study municipal reforms, and this is the first arrow from his quiver. Other reforms promised. Measure hailed by community, except saloon men. Latter held meeting yesterday at Riva Palacio theatre, another meeting today, and propose to memorialize Secretary Interior and Governor Federal District, but authorities have studied question thoroughly and will not be influenced by memorialists. This morning's 'Imparcial',' voicing public sentiment, hails the new measure in behalf of the working classes, who will now be able to utilize Sunday as a day of rest, to recuperate from week's toil."

West Washington Work.

Blanche Buell, Correspondent.

EVERETT, WASH., Feb. 9.—King county unions held a very successful semi-annual convention December 22-23; nineteen unions were represented. Mrs. Platt and Mrs. Munns had just returned from Portland and all were eager to hear more than they had time to tell of the great National Convention. Needless to say they returned with renewed strength for the work. Papers were read, and five ministers assisted in the program.

The children's meeting on Wednesday afternoon was largely attended and a contest on the last evening proved, as usual, a very attractive feature.

Tacoma recently held a matron's contest. The Everett union is meeting with success in its efforts, holding mothers' meetings, gospel temperance meetings, and prison work. Puyallup and Arlington unions report a white-ribbon tea.

The Shelton union took advantage of the presence of the Misses Page in the neighborhood and received much help from them.

Minnesota's Work for the Indians.

Mary E. Hoover, Correspondent.

Minneapolis, Minn., Feb. 2.—The department of Work Among Indians was taken up by the state a year ago, and Mrs. I. F. McClure, the state superintendent, has made a brave beginning. She has sent out an appeal to the unions for helps in sending organizers into the reservations who will assist the missionaries in their arduous labors. No literature has yet been prepared but, by correspondence with numerous schools on White Earth, Red Lake, and Leich Lake Reservations, Mrs. McClure has learned the crying need of this work. One superintendent writes her: "I have never, in all my six years of Indian service, seen the evil as it exists here as a result of the drink habit; the women are almost as much given to the accursed habit as the men."

Mrs. I. F. McClure.

Unions near the reservations have special opportunities to do practical temperance work among these people, who may prove more receptive than the gospel-hardened, white drinker, and while the missionaries are carrying education and enlightment, may it not be the work of the W. C. T. U. to emphasize the need of cutting loose from drink and its accompanying impurities?

At the state convention at Redwood Falls, it will be remembered, workers went out to the Indian reservation and organized a strong W. C. T. U., thus giving an example of the work to be done. A study of the state minutes containing the superintendent's earnest appeal must touch all hearts desirous of putting down evil and raising all classes to a higher plain of living. Mrs McClure is doing valiant work as superintendent, and in her own local union at Hubbard is most earnest in promoting its activities, and is, withal, a forceful, cheerful W. C. T. U. exponent. With a happy family about her, her heart goes out to the sin-hardened and sorrowful of her larger home—the world.

L. T. L. Work in Connecticut.

M. Josephine Lockrow, Correspondent.

Meriden, Conn., Feb. 2.—A Loyal Temperance Legion was organized at Galesville January 24, by Mrs. Clara Leete, superintendent of the Wallingford Legion. They signed the pledge, adopted the constitution and by-laws, elected officers and started with fifty-four members. Two school Legions have been very recently organized, one at Hanover with twenty-five members, and one at Palmertown, seventy-six members.

Mrs. Grace Curtis Platt.
State L. T. L. Secretary.

Milldale, though a small union, has issued printed programs for the meetings until next July. Many of the subjects were chosen with a desire to interest the young women. The literature superintendent has charge of a rack at the tramway station, keeping it filled with good reading. The union subscribed to The Union Signal, "Saturday Evening Post" and "Success," for that purpose. As the company's office is in the same building it becomes a waiting place for motormen and conductors (most of them young men), as well as for passengers. Flower mission work is kept up this winter.

A new union was organized at Brookfield, January 15, with a good membership.

A Forward Movement in West Virginia.

Mrs. V. E. Mohler, Correspondent.

St. Albans, West Va., Feb. 9.—The midwinter meeting of the state executive committee of West Virginia was held at Clarksburg, January 29th. The members were entertained by the local union.

It was decided that a Demorest Contest and L. T. L. instructor should be put to work as soon as a suitable one can be obtained. An organizer is to be placed at once in counties that are yet unorganized and where unions are so scattered as to be of no help to each other. A number of prizes will be offered to individuals and unions for gains in membership.

A bill introduced into the legislature by Hon. Stewart H. Bowman, regarding C. O. D. express packages of liquor, is heartily endorsed and all support possible will be given him. The bill is as follows:

"A bill regulating the shipment and sale of intoxicating liquors contrary to law, and providing a remedy therefor.

"Be it enacted by the Legislature of West Virginia.

"1. That any agent or employe of any person, firm or corporation carrying on the business of a common carrier, or any person, who, without a state license for dealing in intoxicating liquors shall engage in the traffic or sale of such liquor, or be interested for profit in the sale thereof, or act as the agent or employe of the consignor or consignee of the same, or who shall solicit or receive any order for the sale of any such intoxicating liquors or deliver to any person, firm or corporation any package containing such intoxicating liquors, shipped 'C. O. D.,' except to a person having a state license to sell the same or to the bona fide consignee thereof, who has in good faith ordered the same for his personal use, shall be deemed to have made a sale thereof, contrary to law, and guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction therefor shall be fined not less than ten, nor more than one hundred dollars and may at the discretion of the court be imprisoned in the county jail not exceeding six months.

"2. If any person shall make affidavit before any justice that he has cause to believe and does believe any spirituous liquors, wines, porter, ale, beer or drink of like nature, are being held, sold or delivered in violation of the provisions of this section, such justice shall issue his warrant as provided in Section 23 of Chapter 32 of the code, and like proceedings shall thereupon be had as provided therein."

Bi-County Convention In Ontario.

M. H. Poole, Correspondent.

St. Catharines, Ontario, Feb. 9.—The county convention for Lincoln and Welland counties, Ontario, Canada, was held January 29-30 at St. Catharines. Representation was good considering stormy weather. Both counties did most excellent work in the recent campaign to oust the barrooms from Ontario.

Many comfort bags were sent to the lumber camps; prizes were given pupils for papers on the use and abuse of alcoholics. This was thought to be an excellent way to promote scientific temperance enthusiasm. In remote country districts respectable reading rooms have taken the place of questionable and disreputable clubs of boys.

Drunken officials have been replaced by sober ones; the anti-cigaret movement has received a great impetus, and delicacies have been sent to the Girls' shelter in Toronto. Considerable money has been donated to various missionary causes. Though much pledging has been done in Sunday-schools and otherwise, we pray for a revival of work among children and the young women. We need some vigorous Ys.

A Protest from the District of Columbia.

Mrs. Clinton Smith, Correspondent.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 9.—I have learned that the hubbub created by the newspapers over the removal of a picture called "Love and Life" from the Corcoran Gallery of Art in this city to the White House, is, by many, attributed to the W. C. T. U. of the District of Columbia.

It is too bad to allow a body of good women to rest under an imputation so trivial, therefore I wish to say to our workers that the W. C. T. U. of the District of Columbia was never in the least interested in the picture, never said anything about it and did not know that its position had been changed until we read in the papers that the W. C. T. U. was in "a furore" over it. The story was a newspaper canard pure and simple.

Leonora M. Lake in Illinois.

Mary E. Hopper, Correspondent.

Chicago, Feb. 9.—The outlook throughout the state is most encouraging. Unions are being organized and members gained. The newest union is at Lockport, organized by the state president. Letters and literature have been sent broadcast, and the most cheering news comes from the field. County Institutes are being located and much interest is manifested in this department of work. The state legislature being in session, plans are complete for work in the interest of any measure in which our organization is concerned.

A bill is to be presented giving the ballot to taxpaying women. The superintendents of Scientific Temperance Instruction and of Temperance and Labor, are putting forth herculean efforts in their departments. Leonora M. Lake will address a labor meeting Sunday afternoon, February 15, at Aurora, and one in Elgin the same evening.

The superintendent of white-ribbon cradle roll reports unusual gains this year. Members of that department are being graduated into the Junior Loyal Temperance Legion.

A delightful Hospital meeting was held in Evanston at the home of Mrs. D. D. Thompson. The state superintendent, Mrs. T. C. Reiley, introduced the president of the board, Mrs. M. Inglehart, who spoke of the beginning of the work when Frances Willard conceived the plan of a practical demonstration of no alcohol in medicine. The hospital has now room for twenty-five patients. The prospect for a new and larger building is bright. During the year fifty-one outside physicians have pledged to abstain from use of alcohol in treating patients they have brought to the hospital.

Tennessee's Liquor Question.

Nashville, Tenn., Feb. 6.—The House of Representatives to-day passed the bill which provides that an election shall be held in cities of 150,000 inhabitants and under to decide whether or not liquor shall be sold. Should a majority vote against liquor, none can be sold except by manufacturers in wholesale packages. The bill will now go to the Senate, which has a large majority against the sale of liquor. A bill recently passed and signed by the governor prohibits the sale of liquor in all except eight cities and towns in the state, the people being allowed to vote on the question. The bill passed today applies to every city and town in the state.

Seed Sowing In Kansas.

Mrs. Jennie M. Kemp, Correspondent.

Le Loup, Kans., Feb. 9.—In a state so large as Kansas, one where public sentiment is ever at white heat and must be constantly moulded along temperance lines, the field workers are important factors. Under our excellent lecture bureau system the work is planned and controlled so that no part of the state is neglected.

Mrs. Minnie Johnson Grinstead.

One of our most popular and successful speakers is Mrs. Minnie Johnson Grinstead, of Larned, who was made a National lecturer and organizer at the Portland convention. A Kansan by birth, a teacher by profession, she felt the call to the W. C. T. U. work. With indomitable energy she has surmounted many obstacles, and we have no speaker who is more welcome or does more to advance our work on every line. She is not unknown in Colorado and Oklahoma, having given faithful service in both places.

The many-sided nature of the work is clearly shown in a recent twenty-five day's trip, taken by Mrs. Grinstead. She preached five sermons, delivered twenty-two lectures and conducted four afternoon meetings. Having been for twelve years a teacher she does not forget the boys and girls, and, whenever possible, visits the schools and addresses the pupils. Over one thousand miles of railroad travel, and sixty miles over rough wagon roads through storm and cold were invested in this itinerary. As a result Kansas has not only the rousing of public sentiment in the twelve places visited, but four new unions, well officered and already at work. There are also two new Loyal Temperance Legions. Sixty-five new members were added to our unions, forty honoraries have agreed to "stand by" and forty-five boys and girls swell the ranks of our marching army of Legioners. Is not such work as this worth while? Quite a number of subscriptions to National and state papers were secured, as Mrs. Grinstead is ever a loyal friend to the W. C. T. U. press. She is now engaged in assisting a pastor in conducting revival services at Goddard. Already twenty conversions are reported.

Mrs. E. T. Scott, one of our National lecturers, is assisting her husband in conducting a field campaign for the State Temperance Union. Mrs. Scott is true to her W. C. T. U. allegiance and already four new vigorous unions are reported as the result of her work.

Mrs. Eugenia St. John, National evangelist, has recovered from a severe attack of pneumonia and is lecturing in southern Kansas. Miss M. Southard, Y secretary, has been conducting evangelistic services and has added several new stars to the Y galaxy. Fine reports are received of the field work being done in western Kansas by Mrs. Sena Hartzell Wallace, state organizer. Besides winning new members and organizing unions she is securing many subscribers to The Union Signal and "Our Messenger."

The state is greatly aroused, as a result of the threatened attempt to secure resubmission. More than the 20,000 signatures asked for, to the protests against resubmission, are already waiting to be presented and more coming in every mail. While the threatened resubmission resolution has not yet been presented to the legislature, there is no certainty what a day will bring forth. Both local option and constitutional convention bills are in, either of which is only a disguise under which resubmission lurks. The bill for conferring presidential suffrage on women received scant courtesy in the senate. Some little hope is felt for its ultimate success before the close of the session.

YOUNG WOMAN'S BRANCH.

Conducted by Mrs. Clara Parrish-Wright, General Secretary.

Suggestions for Special Work.

MY DEAR YOUNG WOMEN: Once more I am compelled to dictate my letter to you from my couch, but the good doctor assures me it can scarcely occur again. There is such an accumulation of things about which I want to write you, too, but again I must be brief.

First of all, please note that Mrs. Barnes remains with the Branch as our Honorary General Secretary, so her name will continue to stand at the head.

Then I wish to tell you that it seems to me the outlook for the Branch was never so bright. All the young women associated with the National as organizers, lecturers and evangelists who desire to be afield and are equal to the task, ARE afield. Miss Stewart is in the extreme north; Miss Hollister in the extreme west, and Miss Mosher in the extreme south; while Mrs. Burger, Mrs. Seberry and Miss Southard are working in their own states. In addition to these no fewer than sixteen state secretaries and organizers are either visiting, and forming new unions now, or plan to be doing so in the spring. In Ohio unusual plans are being laid by the state officers. In Illinois both the state secretary and assistant will be afield the major part of the year, and the Institute program outlined by the state president provides for the organization of a Y in every county seat where none now exists. In the extreme west there was never such activity as at the present time, the recent changes in state secretaries making a large number of young women available for field work. As you will have noticed elsewhere, in Iowa where progress has been slow for so long, we have five new societies. Our interests in Wisconsin are looking up. This is true also of Texas, Louisiana and other parts of the south. True, in some of the states the work is at a standstill, but the leaven which is working must eventually leaven the whole, and the "go-a-head-a-tive-ness" of such states as New York and Illinois, each of which boasts of at least a dozen new unions, will pave the way for a general grand march forward. I know this is true, for I have never had so many pledges from state leaders or sympathetic letters from state presidents. May every young woman who leads a division of this "grand army" and all her "aids de camp" be abundantly blessed. I would not fail to mention here the work of our dear English comrade, Miss Christine Tinling, who is constantly on the wing and winning hundreds to our cause. She adds much to our own efficient force.

Many unions have reported that they are going to observe February 17th. When these meetings are out of the way I want you to begin to think about April 14, our World's Missionary Day and birthday of Mrs. Barnes. I should like to suggest that you give, at this time, the program outlined in the Year Book, or "At the White Queen's Court," to be had of the W. T. P. A. for ten cents. Let every local president send for a copy at once and decide.

Miss Smart needs our financial co-operation at once and I am going to propose that we shall at least pay for her interpreter. May I not count upon the sympathetic help of each one? One word more, especially to state secretaries. The Y Manual has been brought up to date by a page of "Errata" and the W. T. P. A. is now offering it at 15c. Will you not co-operate with me in getting it into the hands of local presidents? It contains so many excellent things that they can get in no other way. Write your state president and ask her if it will not be possible for the state to make a small appropriation for this purpose. I sometimes think we do not get what we want because we do not ask for it.

Thanking you in advance for all the help which I am sure you will give, I am most appreciatively yours,

CLARA PARRISH-WRIGHT.

Paris, Ill.

Vermont has two new Y unions, and the work is in better shape in that state than it ever has been before.

Gleanings.

Evanston, Ill., has a new Y.

One of the most active Missouri Y's is that at Cole Camp.

Lancaster, Ohio, has a new Y organized by Mrs. Conklin.

The Springfield, Mass., Y has been "graduated" into the W. C. T. U.

Arizona has two new Y's, the result of Miss Louise Hollister's work.

The Y's at Baltimore filled baskets for the poor on New Year's day.

The largest order for Year Books from any local society is that of Orange, N. J. They use thirty copies.

Miss Olivia A. Thomas, of Ohio, recently organized two new Y's, one at Scotch Ridge, the other at Edon.

The April number of "Our Messenger," the state organ of the W. C. T. U. of Kansas, is to be a special Y issue.

A very neat folder, containing pledge, time and place of meeting, etc., is issued by the Watertown, Mass., Y.

Virginia has four new Y's. Miss Elizabeth Gordon and Miss Christine Tinling have each given a month to the state.

Miss Clara M. Sears, Indiana's faithful Y secretary, has again been chosen as one of the county Institute leaders.

Miss Harriet Montgomery, Nebraska's Y secretary, is leading in an interesting Y contest in her home town of York.

Lynn, Mass., Y presented the Thurman Y of Tillotson College, Texas, with a copy of Miss Willard's "How to Win."

The Paragould, Arkansas, Y gathered supplies of food and clothing and distributed among the poor Christmas week.

The Thurman Y of West Washington has made the National General Secretary a life member of the state W. C. T. U.

The Washington City Y unions hold monthly religious services in the Florence Crittenden Home the fourth Sunday in each month.

En route home from the National convention, Miss Grace Van Vleet, of South Dakota, organized Y's at Canton, Ill., and California, Ia.

Miss Madeline Southard has organized two new Y's in Kansas, each of which was preceded by evangelistic services for two weeks.

The Mechanicsburg, Ohio, Y has $200 in the treasury from a lecture course. Is there any suggestion in this for you, dear other Y?

Iowa has five new Y's, which is a wonderful advance for this state, and Mrs. Dollie Burgess, the new secretary, is much encouraged.

The new Ohio "Hand Book for Workers" gives much space to the Young Woman's Branch. With an equal amount of concern on the part of all state officers we should need no further agitation.

If you want an inspiration that will enable you to undertake a great work, send to Miss Caroline M. Caswell, 24 South Russell St., Boston, Mass., and get a report of the "Frances E. Willard Settlement" work.

The W. C. T. U. of White Water, Wis., has been asked to take charge of the Epworth League meeting the first Sunday in March, and they have decided to make it a time to present the work of the Young Woman's Branch.

St. Paul Y at Wilmington, Del., held a very successful "Echo" meeting after the National Convention. They hold a monthly religious service at the Florence Crittenden Home. At the Christmastide they distributed coal and other comforts to the poor.

South Dakota has two new Y's, one composed almost entirely of Norwegian girls. Miss Smart has set the stint for her home state at a thousand new members and Miss Van Vleet is determined that the girls shall do their part.

Miss Florence Hammond, of Maryland, is planning to make the memorial meetings of February 17th co-operative with other Young People's societies. In this way she hopes that thousands besides "our own" will hear of the beautiful life of our promoted leader.

The Frances Barnes Y of Orange, N. J., recently closed a successful membership contest with a banquet to the winning side and the new recruits. This society disposed of sixty-five Y Almanacs; this including one to every woman in the penitentiary. A personal letter accompanied each one.

Y work in Delaware is growing rapidly under the leadership of Miss Janie Wilson. Some of the societies of the state have started out to observe every Red Letter Day, thus making their work more educational and putting less emphasis on social functions. Just now they are circulating petitions for local option.

The World's Y Almanac is constantly growing in favor. Notwithstanding the fact that an extra thousand was printed this year the edition was exhausted some time ago. Dr. Yarnall has sent out requests to state secretaries who ordered in large numbers asking them to return any left-overs, so it is barely possible that a few small orders may yet be filled.

On the account of the delicate health of a beloved daughter, Mrs. Patterson, Y secretary of Colorado, has been compelled to resign. Her successor is Miss Rose Adele Davidson, of Colorado Springs, who gained her enthusiasm for Y work when a member of the large Somerset Y of the Ohio Wesleyan University. The state officers planned for her attendance at all institutes in the spring. They are expecting great things of her.

The following letter reads so much like a beautiful story, and shows so clearly the possibilities where the heart is thoroughly enlisted that I cannot refrain from giving it in full. It is from Mrs. Lottie Hannon, of Golden Dale, West Washington, who was the organizer and successful leader of the Kimball, Minn., Y.

My Dear Mrs. Wright:

In your letter you expressed a wish that I should organize a Y here as soon as I became acquainted. Little did I think then that the way would be so wondrously opened to me as it has been. I felt so incompetent and unequal to the work, but it just seemed as though I could get no rest till I made the effort, which I finally did with splendid results.

I knew that the work was new to the young people here and it seemed to me it would be impossible to organize without some more experienced person to tell them of the work. But knowing that to be out of the question at the present time, I concluded to do the best I could alone. So I invited, through the pulpits, all the young people to come together at a certain time and place, who were interested in temperance work.

Of course I did not expect a crowd and neither did I get one, but sixteen came, and after telling them about our work they all gave their names. Then right there we decided to have a membership contest, and after three weeks we had eighty members. Among the honoraries are ministers, professors in the academy, principal of the public schools, county auditor and many such, but we have others who will have to be mothered and prayed for. Our watchwords are, Education and Consecration. Just now we are planning for a home for ourselves where we can have reading and rest rooms. This will take time, but it will give us something definite to work for. We have taken up in addition, Contest work, Anti-Narcotics, Scientific Temperance Instruction and Press work, keeping a column filled in two weekly papers. The program for one month is made out, but we will wait for the 1903 Year Book before completing it for the year. Shall have a memorial meeting February 17, and on the 22nd will give 'Ye Hatchet' party.

This letter ought to help those who desire to organize without spending much money. Mrs. Hannon has certainly told how it can be done.

Reminiscences of Manila.

BY Mrs. CORNELIA MOOTS.

DURING those busy months of 1900, when we were daily visiting the hospitals, carrying testaments, literature and stationery to the sick soldiers, writing letters, talking, and praying, there was little time to chronicle any of our experiences for the home papers. Possibly a few short reminiscences would be interesting.

One beautiful morning Mrs. Thornbury—then Miss Genevieve Cutler—and I started for a visit to Calamba, a military station on the south shore of that lovely sheet of water, Lagona de Bey. Taking the little steamer moored at the foot of one of Manila's busy streets, we were fortunate to secure chairs in the bow of the boat.

It would be difficult to find streams more winding than those in the Philippines, and the Pasig river is no exception to the rule. As we move up the river the same landmark often appears, now straight ahead, now to the right, again behind, then to the left, by reason of the deep circling bends of the stream.

The beautiful scenery is indescribable, with its variety of palms, graceful bamboo thickets, and the brown nipa houses, with here and there dashes of color as seen in the native costume while we pass between these banks covered with their perpetually green foliage. Buildings, trees, flitting people, seem one harmonious whole, and it is hard to realize that not many months before our soldier boys had marched along this same river margin fully armed.

After two hours up the river we entered the lake—a veritable silver gem in a setting of emerald mountains. Two hours more brought us before Calamba, where a mile or more of water stretched between us and shore. But here come scores of bancas of various sizes, and we two travelers with eleven Filipinos and Chinese are soon settled in one of the boats.

Looking shoreward we saw that our banco could not be brought up to the land. Men who did not wish to wade were being carried on the shoulders and backs of natives. How were we to land? We have since learned that in such cases it is customary for two natives to clasp their hands together, thus making what we, as children, called a "chair," the woman sitting on the clasped hands and putting an arm around each carrier's neck. We were spared this!

Down the hill from the hospital, comes the ambulance. It is driven out into the lake, and with one great sigh of relief we are at last within its safe shelter.

Half an hour later we are eating dinner in the dining room of the nurses' quarters, from the windows of which are some of the finest mountain views we have ever beheld.

Our papers, magazines and testaments had been brought to us, and the next hour we spent in the hospital with the sick soldiers, who were glad to talk with American women. They had seen no women of their own race for many months until they were brought to this hospital, where about ten faithful, gentle women nurses were doing all they could to alleviate suffering.

Mrs. Cornelia Moots. Mrs. Genevieve Thornbury.

Here, as is now customary in many places, the church and convent had been taken for hospital and nurses' home, and at the time of our visit there were about two hundred and fifty patients. We talked with each one. The next day we took the same little steamer, on its down trip, and before nightfall we were again in Manila.

What do I recall concerning the canteen in the Philippines? Just this fact: All that unprincipled men can do to restore the liquor feature of the canteen in the army will be done.

That the drink sold thus was a detriment to the soldier, no fair-minded person who has had opportunity to know, can doubt. Young men who desire to be temperate, and who dare speak their convictions are often sorely annoyed and subjected to petty persecutions by those of their company who are angry because the canteen was abolished. I have seen and heard things to make me know the above statement is true. Boys have been driven to drink by the taunts of others that they were glad to eat the good things the liquor fund provided without furnishing a money equivalent.

The boys do not all want the canteen. I have talked with very many who do not and who have been convinced that in many cases the profits have not all gone into the company fund, but have enriched some officer's pocket.

The statement that outside drinking places have increased in every case, since the abolishing of the canteen, is absoluely false, as has been proved by actual count taken by missionaries in Manila, around Malata barracks, and one other—I think it was Cuartel de Meisic.

Good officers—and there are many such—can do great good among their men. Bad officers—and there are such in the army—can, and do infinite evil to those under their care.

And, furthermore, a post exchange or canteen without intoxicating drinks can be made to pay a good percentage over expenses, and at the same time be a pleasant and decent recreation place for the soldiers.

Captain Potter of the Fourth infantry began one such in San Francisco de Malebon on the island of Luzon. They borrowed quite an amount to begin with, but they very soon paid all and had a good sum ahead when the troops were ordered to leave. This was not the only successful one.

Although officers are not allowed moneyed interests in saloons it has come to my certain knowledge that commissioned officers have had such interest.

A W. C. T. U. woman, mother of a young officer in the army, came to Manila to spend a few months. A captain's wife, not knowing that this woman was a temperance worker, told her how her husband, a captain in the regular army, was making money in a drinking place where liquor was sold to soldiers, and how he worked it to just evade the law, and not get into trouble.

When liquors were sold in canteens the establishment of canteens was urged, if not forced, in many companies, and they were multiplied throughout the islands. When the law was repealed the establishing of post exchanges was not only not urged, but was discouraged.

The fact is, there are so many Americans both inside and outside the army in the Philippines, who are there solely for gain or for ambition, and who care nothing for any human being only so far as that person can be made to contribute to their advantage, that we stand at present as a nation disgraced before the world. This condition of things must change or the Almighty will remove from us the power and place which we have gained.

Tucson, Ariz.

INTEMPERANCE IN DISGUISE.

By DAVID PAULSON, M. D.

WE are likely to believe that we live in an age free from the tyranny of superstition, but the superstitious reverence that tens of thousands of people attach to a bottle filled with some mysteriously compounded nostrum, is the only evidence needed to convince us that we have not made the progress in this direction that we have in other ways.

If the greatest harm in the patent medicine evil consisted merely in palming off a few cents' worth of some inert substance for a considerable sum of money, it would simply emphasize the truthfulness of the great showman's words: "The American people like to be humbugged." But there is a more serious phase to this question which creates anxiety in the heart of every true and intelligent physician and demands the earnest attention of every genuine temperance reformer. The enterprising patent medicine manufacturers are beginning to discover that extravagant advertising and false pretenses are not sufficient in themselves to maintain permanently the prestige of their so-called remedies, so in many instances they are now adding liberal quantities of morphine, cocaine, alcohol and other narcotizing substances, which produce their characteristic effects. This is what furnishes the foundation for a large number of the apparently sincere testimonials that are given, testifying to the efficiency of these drugs.

Some of the widely advertised catarrh snuffs contain cocaine, and they are already producing a prolific crop of cocaine victims. A well advertised cough syrup has been found to contain one-fourth of a grain of morphine to every two ounces of the drug.

Dr. Bumgardner reports in the transactions of the Colorado State Medical Association that a two-ounce bottle of one of the most extensively advertised soothing syrups contains one-half a grain of morphine, consequently this soothing syrup must have been responsible for the deaths of more innocent children than Herod ever undertook to slay.

In the advertising columns of any one of our popular magazines may be found from six to a dozen, or even more, "cures" for morphine, cocaine and other drug habits. In an editorial in a leading daily, it is stated that there are more than a million drug fiends in the United States. It is to be hoped that this estimate is entirely too large, but every physician of extensive experience knows that the victims of drug habits are increasing at an appalling rate.

What else is to be expected when the innocent child in its cradle is introduced to the bewitching effects of these drugs, and its nerves are made to demand unearned felicity even before it is old enough to call for it? The Scriptural admonition, "Train up a child in the way that he should go, and when he is old, he will not depart from it," is just as true when the child is trained in the wrong way as when it is trained in the right way.

Of a list of the eleven sarsaparillas, bitters, tonics, and compounds that are most widely advertised, Dr. Bumgardner found that the smallest amount of alcohol in any one of them was seventeen per cent, while the highest was forty-four per cent. Yet in the past year, men who are doing good work for God and humanity have written unqualified testimonials extolling the virtues of these very remedies, thereby allowing the influence of their names to assist in forging the shackles of drunkenness upon the rising generation.

Ordinary beer contains only from two to five per cent of alcohol, yet all true men stand shoulder to shoulder uncompromisingly opposed to its use. How much greater reason there is for discouraging the sale and use of compounds which contain more than ten times this amount of the same kind of alcohol!

We must not forget that the alcohol which is sold by the druggist is as great a curse as that which is served over the bar by the saloonkeeper. Its physical and moral effects are just as disastrous and it paves the way just as speedily to the drunkard's grave.

Chicago.

U. OF MICH. LIBRARY

After Five Years. By Antoinette A. Hawley.

FIVE years since we have clasped those helpful hands
Whose touch has thrilled the hearts of many lands!
Think you their power in yon celestial clime
Is lessened? Nay; but, freed from thralls of time,
With glad, new strength, they find their glory still
In doing there, as here, the Master's will.

Five years since heard was that persuasive voice
Whose eloquence has made a world rejoice
That God had such a witness here, who knew
One only law; the being simply true!
Think you, dear friends, the music of her tone
Is ended there before the great white throne?
Nay, verily; but, winged as ne'er before,
Her strong, sweet message from that other shore,
Rings out so joyfully, so crystal clear,
We whisper to each other, "She is here."

Five years since left us that clear-visioned soul,
That saw the start, the race, the distant goal,
And, far ahead, with many a peerless word,
Our lagging feet to eager action stirred!
Think you that teeming brain has fully wrought
Its purpose in the realm of human thought?
Nay; her freed spirit still, our plumed Navarre,
Shall lead us in victorious, peaceful war.

Five years since ceased to beat that loving heart
Where every human interest had a part!
Where every heavenly influence was nursed,
That might help heal a race by sin accursed.
Yet can she be less tender, strong and brave,
Less eager to redeem, and guide, and save,
Than when we smiled back in her sunny face,
So dear, so dear in all its saintly grace?
I think not; ours it is on Faith's broad wings
To grandly rise above the show of things
And grasp the precious truth, that now, and here,
Our Frances Willard lives, to bless and cheer.

Denver, Colo.

A Fight Against Odds

By Kate Anderson.

Copyrighted by Woman's Temperance Publishing Association.

Synopsis of preceding chapters.

[The Kilgour family are engaged in a desperate struggle to save the idolized youngest son, Claude, from the curse of cigaret smoking. After various drastic measures and sickening failures, Claude is locked in his room. His brother Willie, who lies at the point of death, after living through a dangerous attack of typhoid fever, has been thrown into a relapse through the weakness of a schoolmate watcher, who, after taking a drink of brandy, gives to him the remnants of Claude's supper.

Chapter VI.

WHEN Alf was summoned the truth was learned. The young man's utter misery and distress were touching when he realized his fatal mistake. He stammered and stumbled for a possible explanation, but finally broke down and confessed the true one. "So help me, God, I have taken my last drop of the accursed stuff!"

To Ralph and Alice the verdict was tenderly and pitifully given by the sorrowing physician.

"O Ralph, Ralph, how can we tell mamma?" moaned the devoted and heart-broken sister.

"Alice, dear Alice; don't give way like this. You have been the bravest of us all," begged Ralph, as he supported the half-fainting and grief-crazed girl to a couch.

Mrs. Kilgour herself, pale and dry-eyed, entered the room at that moment.

"I know all, my dear children," she said calmly. "Ralph, dear, go and tell Claude." She went to the couch and took the slight, trembling form of her daughter to her heart.

"My child, my little girl; would that mother could comfort you now as you have tried to comfort her all these months. Hush, hush, child! There, lay your head down."

"Mother, mother, can you know? Have they told you?"

A strange light burned in the mother's eye. "Thank God!" she exclaimed without a tremor. "One child safe, safe, safe! One dear child safe forever from the snares and sorrows of this wretched earth! Yes, my boy is safe—'safe in the arms of Jesus.' Would that every child's future were as safe as our Willie's to-day."

Her mother's unnatural calm and strange words quickly distracted Alice from her own abandonment to grief.

"Mamma, darling mamma, you are ill; let me call the doctor."

"No, dear, I am perfectly myself; but you cannot as yet understand the depth of a mother's love and a mother's woe until (though God forbid it!) you shall yourself be brought, some anguished hour, to the point of cheerfully, resignedly preferring to part with a child, knowing that he is safe in the Heavenly Father's arms rather than to see him live on, to face the fatal temptations of this life. There are worse sorrows than this of losing our darling Willie who is so ready and ripe for heaven that God is taking him to Himself, where I shall never be parted from him through all eternity. But Claude—Claude—"

At last came a flood of agonizing tears, not for the dying, but for the living.

And so Willie Kilgour passed beyond. Thus was prematurely cut off the earthly course of one of the most winsome souls, ere nineteen years had been counted over his head.

One more innocent victim of the fell destroyer—drink! Was it some strange premonition of his own fate which had, less than two years before, instilled that vague horror of the accursed thing into Willie's soul, even before that soul had become awakened to God's truth?

Claude's two-weeks' confinement before his brother's death, during which he had been absolutely and relentlessly cut off from even the slightest whiff of the narcotic which had become to him a crying physical necessity, had been days of unspeakable physical and mental misery. Though he had entered willingly and resignedly into his imprisonment, the first day had scarcely passed before he would have moved heaven and earth, had it been in his power, to gain his liberty, if only long enough to secure one smoke. With all the cunning of a fox he watched for a chance to escape. He was convinced that ere long, by patience and ingenuity, he would attain his ends, as he had never, sooner or later, failed to do. But Ralph had been aroused to the utmost precaution and determination. It was his theory that could Claude be kept, if only by force, from indulgence for a few short weeks, until the first acute stage had passed, he would then be sufficiently strengthened to help in the cure by an effort of his own will.

The family had been obliged to take Miss Roberts, the nurse, into their confidence, and in that determined and strong-minded young woman they had found an invaluable ally. Not once did Claude succeed even so much as in gaining the hallway, or in surreptitiously sending a note to one of his choice friends, though the ingenious and various methods he tried were innumerable. At times, his narcotic-wasted and evil passions being roused to a pitch of defiance and hatred, he would not have hesitated to set fire to the house, or, like his favorite character, "Bold Ben, the Dauntless Darer," to have fought his way out with knives and pistols, but by his utmost wiles he could not even secure a match. On second thought Ralph had changed his mind about allowing him the tool chest, and had securely nailed the diamond-paned window, allowing only a slit at the top for air. Ralph slept with him at night, and a lamp was never brought into the room. These precautions were all observed, although Claude was shrewd enough never to betray by word or look aught but humble resignation to his lot, and the most apparently sincere wish on his own part to aid in curing himself of the habit which his family were endeavoring to break by the use of such extreme measures.

At the end of ten days, Claude was reasonably chastened and had passed through the first agonies of total abstinence. Better thoughts were straying on the surface of his perverted nature, and as much as possible he was touched by the love, prayers and unfaltering kindness of his devoted mother, sister and brothers. He made up his mind that he now would really give up the use of cigarets. He was getting along very well without them, and he would not miss them at all in another week. He was glad Willie was getting better. He was so sorry for the grief he had caused his dear mother. Never mind, he would make it all up doubly to her, and everything would be happy again.

Willie's unexpected death stirred to the depths what remained of Claude's originally tender and noble nature. It intensified his somewhat shallow remorse and also sincerely strengthened his good resolutions.

Although strictly watchful eyes were upon him during the day of the funeral, he was allowed to be present, as he had been allowed out of his room on the day of his brother's death, which had occurred within twenty-four hours after the fatal meal of which he had partaken. It was, therefore, with the sincerest and most tender resolves that he put his arms round his mother's neck and sobbed: "O, mamma, I am going to be good—I am, I am—just like Willie. I'm going to take his place to you, and I'm going to be just as I used to be. Please pray with me that God will help me."

"Claude," said his mother earnestly, "if you keep your word I shall never again question or rebel against any sorrow that God sees fit to send me."

"Claude means well," remarked Ralph to Alice, after he had been talking with his brother, "but there is one thing about his penitence which makes me uneasy as to his power of carrying out his resolves."

"You mean that he is no longer capable of maintaining strength of will and resolution, or depth of resolve?"

"Exactly; I can't just put it into words, but I mean that something is not in him. There is no ground to work on, no depth to grow from. Take a naturally well-principled and honest drunkard, who had fallen so low—apart from all Claude's other wickedness, such as his having been a steady pilferer and sneak-thief, taking every cent he could find from his self-sacrificing mother's hardly-gathered little hoards and a working sister's little savings, besides every other cent he could lay his hands on about the house, or whatever he could find not belonging to him that he could turn into money—why, I tell you that drunkard, when sobered up, would want to go and bury himself in a hole in a very agony of remorse. He could not look a fellow-being in the eye for shame. He would beg to be sent where he might not meet the gaze or hear the voice of an honest man. But, although I give Claude credit for being as remorseful as it is now in him to be, he is not weighted down with horror for the past. He actually doesn't seem to realize the awful depth of mire into which he has sunk. When I talk to him he can discuss openly and almost cheerfully his misdeeds—at least those which have been found out—but I do not believe a word he says about having made a full confession of everything. He seems to me the most baffling, unconcerned and artful liar I ever knew."

"Can it be that Claude is one of those natural criminals, or degenerates—sort of moral idiots whom we often read about nowadays?" queried the sad-faced sister.

"That question has often presented itself to me," answered Ralph. "Claude is now at an age most trying to all youths, good and bad. It is at this crossing-place from boyhood to manhood that character is more rapidly moulded and developed than at any other time. Everything depends at this period upon careful, prayerful, healthful influence and environment in order to establish a character of permanency for good or evil. In the case of his being a moral degenerate to start with, it would be at this period of his life that natural evils which had lain dormant during his childhood, would now assert themselves. Still I greatly doubt Claude's having any screw seriously loose in his natural moral capacity. The very shape and expression of his head, features, hands and eyes would cry down that theory. By the way, have you noticed the physical change in him during the last year or two—the narrowing forehead, brutal expression, shifty eyes, and bold yet slouching gait? I admit that Claude may have lacked stamina, may not have had a sufficiently deep and serious appreciation of right and wrong—you know it always seemed to be his nature to do the right thing without effort or consideration—as a child, evil never seemed to have any attraction or temptation for him. If he only had been a soundly-converted follower of Christ, with soundly-engrafted principles on the subject of smoking and other evils which lie in wait to trip the unwary, it would all have been so different. But those deadly cigarets got hold of him before he had left his careless childhood behind and got in their work during the character-forming, mind-forming, and body-forming period, and now all we can do is to pray for a miracle of grace."

Claude was a problem to the family. What could be done with him? They dared not let him take a situation of any kind and expose him to outside temptation in his present weakened moral state. School was out of the question for the time being. There were other boys who smoked, and Claude would be sure of a chance to break out again, and thus undo the weary work of weeks. Besides, he was incapable of serious study. Keep him at home and watch him? Idleness was the very gravest danger of all, and even in this alternative Claude would be able to elude all, did he so desire. They could not always keep him imprisoned in his room. However, after the funeral, he was put back to that refuge for another fortnight, as Ralph was anxious to give him every possible opportunity to complete the beginnings of a cure, and he had learned better than to take any chances on either Claude's promises or his undoubted desire to reform. Anti-narcotic remedies were also employed to facilitate the cure, and of course Doctor Meredith and his daughter, Clara, were in the Kilgours' confidence. Strangers and acquaintances who missed Claude were told, where evasion of questions was impossible, that he was under treatment for nervous disorder (which was strictly true, as his nerves were shattered) and must be kept quiet for a few weeks, without seeing people. A report, naturally enough, crept about that Claude Kilgour had an attack of St. Vitus' dance, and the family were only too thankful that the neighbors had found so satisfactory a solution to the problem of Claude's temporary disappearance from society.

The experiment did Claude a world of good, at least so far as his appetite was concerned. He had actually passed more than a month without inhaling a solitary whiff of the destroyer. He was a little pale and languid from his long confinement, but was not at all seriously injured, for Ralph, busy young man as he was, had the window thrown open

(Continued to first column on page 12.)

Children's Cozy Corner

One Valentine's Day. By Clara E. Miner.

"DING-A-LING-LING!" said the telephone.

"Yes, this is Mrs. Pratt. Oh, it's Miss Case! Good morning. Yes, the children's colds are better, thank you, but the wind is so sharp that I think it isn't best for them to go to kindergarten this morning. Sylvia 's just broken hearted over it, and Aurel and John are crying half the time. What's that? We can have a kindergarten Valentine's Day at home over the 'phone and do just what the other children at school are doing? That would be lovely. Thank you very much, Miss Case. When you are ready, call me up, please. Good-by."

"Now listen," said mamma.

"What do you think, children? We're going to have a regular kindergarten Valentine's Day at home," said Mrs. Pratt turning to the three little ones who had been eagerly listening to every word. "Miss Case is going to telephone me just what the children at kindergarten are doing, and we'll do the same things at the very same time. Won't that be nice?"

A noisy burst of delight was the answer.

"Tan we eat, too?" asked John. "They always eat in tinderdarten."

"Yes, we're going to have a tea-party and make valentines and play games just when the children at kindergarten do."

In a few minutes the little people sat around a tiny table in Mrs. Pratt's library waiting for the clock to strike and the telephone bell to ring.

"Ding-a-ling-ling."

"Yes," said Mrs. Pratt at the 'phone; "we're all ready."

Then three heads bowed reverently, while three baby voices sang a simple prayer.

"Now, listen," said mamma, "and as Miss Case tells the story of Saint Valentine to the kindergarten children, I'll tell it to you.

"A very kind man once lived who dearly loved children. They used to go to him with all their troubles and he would comfort them. After awhile so many children came to him that he couldn't see them all, but he was so kind hearted that he couldn't turn any one away. So he asked the children to write letters to him and send them to him on his birthday, which was this very day of the year. After he read the letters he put them into the fire, for he said the smoke that they made would go into the air and carry his answers with his love to each little boy and girl who had written to him. He started the first love messages on Valentine's Day. And now we remember his kind heart by sending love messages to each other on his birthday.

"To-day we're going to make valentines for the poor little hospital children who can't run and play as we can, but have to stay in bed away from home and mamma and papa. Before we begin our valentines, children, Miss Case says we are to take hold of hands and skip round the table for a few minutes, to rest us."

After the skipping, Mrs. Pratt brought in some colored paper and some small pictures that had been sent by Miss Case, and the work began.

"I want my valentine to go to the little girl that's broken her arm," said Sylvia. "Miss Case told us about her."

"I want mine to go to the baby what cries all the time," said Aurel.

"Mine ith for de 'ittle tripple boy wif de so' foot," lisped John.

"Now the children are going to play a few games and then they will have their tea-party," said mamma.

So the children played bird and squirrel and frog until mamma said the kindergarten piano had sounded for all to take their places at the table. Then at the kindergarten and at Mrs. Pratt's home the little dishes were brought out and all the children ate sandwiches and drank cocoa together even if they were a mile apart.

Afterward they all sang the good-by song and made their little bows to each other. Last of all, the home children bowed to the telephone, and, strange to say, just at that moment it answered with a ring. Miss Case wished to speak with the children, so each stood upon a chair and talked with the teacher and a number of the kindergarten children.

About this time the door bell rang and a little boy with a big box under his arm came into the hall smiling and asked for the valentines the children had made to send to the hospital. What a scampering there was to get the treasures, and how carefully and joyously they were placed in the box!

At the lunch table three merry little folks chatted away like a good-sized kindergarten.

"I never enjoyed myself so much in all my life," said staid Sylvia.

"No, nor I, either. Did you, John?" chimed in Aurel.

"'Deed—I—didn't," was the quick assent between mouthfuls of cake and jam, while all agreed, mamma included, that a kindergarten valentine party over the telephone wasn't the dullest thing in the world.

Evanston, Ill.

PUZZLERS' PACKET.

Puzzles marked (*) are protected by copyright. Contributors will please keep matter intended for this department distinct from other correspondence and address same to PUZZLERS' PACKET, THE UNION SIGNAL, Chicago.

Prize Offer.

For the best lot of original puzzles (not fewer than three) received during February, a desirable and attractive prize is offered. All puzzles submitted to be accompanied by answers, and subject to our use whether winning prize or otherwise.

1.—*Charade.

A dreary, dismal ride we had,
And longed for ONE to light the gloom,
Yet on we rode, and told ourselves,
"Ere many hours we'll be at home."

Our spirits then became more TWO,
More TWO around us seemed the night;
We chanced to look off towards the east,
And there beheld a wondrous sight.

The ONE was there, and in its place
Was glowing like a silver sheen,
While TOTAL floated like a veil
Above the fair nocturnal scene. Ethyl.

2.—Charade.

My ONE is loved by all;
And makes my TWO quite gay.
Small boys and girls may ONE
In TWO most any day.

My WHOLE in several states
We find both East and West,
In one state 'tis where solons sit
By this time you have guessed.

3.—Conundrums.

1. How can you mark your table linen without ink?
2. What is better than small understanding?
3. Define a matchless story.
4. A man of what trade is always in want?
5. What is only a question of time?
6. When can one be every inch a king?

C. S. S.

4.—Anagram.

(One word.)

Bless and trip poor Sonie. —I. W.

5.—Combination Puzzle.

1. Behead a dish, and leave slow.
2. Behead slow, and leave the past tense of a verb describing an every-day act.
3. Behead a genus of birds, and leave a much used contraction.
4. Behead veracious, and leave a bitter herb.
5. Behead to lift, and leave to laud.
6. Behead a filament, and leave a tune.
7. Behead an edible grain, and leave a product of winter.

From the removed heads form the answers to the following square and diamond:

(Square.)

1. A plan.
2. Unwilling.
3. The aromatic principle of flowers.
4. Yourself.

(Diamond.)

1. A consonant.
2. To expel.
3. An instructor.
4. The highest part.
5. A consonant.

Answers.

17.—Telegraph, telephone, graphophone, phonograph.

18.—Temperance (Temper, ants).

19.—Cow, Co. 2. Calf, Cal. 3. Colt, Col. 4. Dog, do.

20.—Apple. (1. Peal. 2. Ape. 3. Leap. 4. Pea. 5. Lea.)

21.—Bridge, bride, bide, bid, I'd, I.

Grandma's Valentine.

By A. M. Thomson.

BUSILY mending, the dear grandma sits,
While in through the window the bright sunlight flits;
And as if it could find nothing lovelier there,
It lingers awhile on her face and her hair.

At her feet is wee Gilbert, amusing the cat;
Ruth, dressing her doll, leans and gives him a pat,
And she says in a happy, mysterious way,
"Say, dear, do you know it is Valentine's Day?"

Just then a loud knocking is heard at the door—
Both children jump up from their play on the floor.
'Tis the postman who greets them, "Here's valentines—two—Yes, one for the boy there, and one, Ruth, for you!"

"What's a valentine, Gamma?" the wee darling cries,
As he looks in her face with his earnest blue eyes.
"From someone who loves you it comes, little dear,
But Grandma's too old to have one, I fear."

"Why, I'll be your valentine, Gamma," he said,
As quick to her arm he joyously sped.
"I love you des lots, and Dod sent me here, too.
Ain't I a nice valentine, Gamma, for you?"

Morgan Park, Ill.

Queer Answers by Pupils.

SOME exceedingly ludicrous answers to examination questions by young pupils are recorded in the Boston Traveler. "In a training school for girls," says the journal, "one maiden said that a robin had web feet, and that a sparrow had eyes on both sides of its head to enable it to see around a corner." In political and legal lore the pupils were all at sea. One said a "bill" is permissible when it is allowed to pass for the first time; it is retrospective when it has to be considered again. Charlestown was said to be a naval arsenic. Children, too, give some queer difinitions. Backbiter was said to be a flea. Blacksmith is a place where they make horses, because you can see them nailing the feet on. A horse is an animal with four legs, one on each corner. Ice is water that went to sleep in the cold. Little sins are cracked commandments. The nest egg is the one the hen measures by. The four seasons are pepper, salt, mustard, and vinegar, and stars are the moon's eggs."

—Selected.

FOR GOD AND HOME AND EVERY LAND — The UNION SIGNAL AND WORLD'S WHITE RIBBON — NATIONAL and WORLD'S WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION

Official Organ of the WORLD'S AND NATIONAL WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION.

Published Weekly by the Woman's Temperance Publishing Association, Chicago.

EDITOR-IN-CHIEF, - - - - - - MRS. LILLIAN M. N. STEVENS.
CORRESPONDING EDITOR, - - - LADY HENRY SOMERSET.
MANAGING EDITOR - - - - - MRS. CORNELIA T. JEWETT.

CONTRIBUTING EDITORS:

MRS. SUSANNA M. D. FRY. MRS. KATHARINE L. STEVENSON.
MRS. CLARA C. CHAPIN. MRS. ISABELLA WEBB PARKS.

Address all letters and manuscript intended for the editors to, The Editorial Department, UNION SIGNAL. Unavailable manuscripts will be returned only when sufficient postage accompanies the request.

SUBSCRIPTIONS.

Subscriptions may commence with any issue.
The date on the label indicates when your subscription ends.
Papers will be discontinued unless otherwise ordered.
Remittances should always be made in the safest manner available to the remitter. Register cash remittances.
Change of Address.—Give both your old and your new address when you desire a change.
Change of Date.—It takes at least three weeks to change the date, after your subscription is renewed.

PRICE $1.50 PER YEAR IN ADVANCE.
FOREIGN POSTAGE $1.04 ADDITIONAL.

Address all Business Communications to
The UNION SIGNAL, 184 La Salle St., CHICAGO.....

Chicago, February 12, 1903.

"The women that publish the tidings are a great host."

Vermont Under Eclipse.

VERMONT, "the star that never sets," has gone into eclipse!

After its fifty years' maintenance of prohibition, it has voted, by the narrow majority of about 1,000 to abandon, for the time at least, as a state, the prohibition of the saloon. Is this only a temporary obscuration, or is the disastrous eclipse to be final?

We do not believe the first result of this popular referendum in Vermont on the grog shop question is a finality. For the moment, the liquor interests profess to be jubilant. They call it a defeat; they claim it for a victory, and declare the Prohibition sun has set for good and all. One of the ablest and most successful lawyers in Chicago, when a case, for the moment, seemed to be going against him, used to say: "The jury may think better of it, yet!"

In the first place the majority for the state's abandonment of its prohibition policy was nothing like so large as the special advocates of the measure had expected, and boasted that it would be. In the next place, the special features of the new license law have been framed with an atrocious contempt for any real and effective safeguards of any town or city that may vote for "license" against the grossest abuses of the licensing power.

Again, during the brief term allowed for the campaign of information and the popular arousement, the grand work was but imperfectly done.

All honor to the clear-seeing, the good and brave men and women in all sections of the state, who showed both by word and action how justly and profoundly they sensed the pending situation and its consequences. People of that sort have not been stricken with moral paralysis; they will be heard from again.

Always, however, in almost every community there are some excellent people who are mortally slow to wake up. It takes them a good long spell to think the matter over and all round, before coming to their better senses, their really illuminated final judgment. Here, too, there are still others who mean to be on the right side of all just issues, but who are too sluggish or apathetic to take the necessary action in the time for it. If this, all too-numerous, class had wakened more promptly and done their duty, the result at the polls would have gone the other way.

In a state like Vermont, those who believe in the rightfulness, the duty, the high and commanding expediency of state prohibition, should stand by their colors courageously, tactfully, unitedly, and now more than ever before. They should neither allow themselves to be daunted by any form of bluff, nor wheedled or confused or misled by any trickery of specious argumentation, however plausible may seem the face of it.

There is too much intelligence, too much conscience, too much enlightened state-patriotism in Vermont to allow this action to be final. There are too many weak and temptible men who need safeguarding; too many homes that ought to have secured to them protection against the always-curseful saloon, to permit this paramount controversy to go to the bad by default.

Make sure of the next legislature.

The Privileges of Citizenship.

ANNUAL reports are not always interesting reading, but the report just issued by the Hyde Park Protective Association telling of the work done during the year ending January 20, 1903, is not only a valuable addition to the temperance and reform literature of the day, but it chronicles some events of municipal history which should be read by every intelligent citizen of our large cities. During the twelve and a half years of its existence this association has shown itself to be possessed of splendid enterprise, indefatigable energy and an utter incapacity for defeat. A partial resumé of the work accomplished during that period is the most eloquent commentary possible upon its character.

Hyde Park, a suburb of Chicago, covering twelve square miles, since its annexation to Chicago, has, by special provision of the legislature, been a prohibition district. It has been the effort of this association to make it a prohibition territory not only in name but in fact. The work of the organization also has to do with adjacent territory covering thirty-four square miles, where local option law is in force. During the life of the association five cases of violation of the law have been carried to the Illinois Supreme Court, and have been won. About 350 persons have been prosecuted for the illegal sale of liquor in the prohibition districts. Seventeen saloon keepers in the local option district have been proceeded against because of the illegal character of their petitions upon which licenses were granted or because of the bad character of the places, and in addition evidence has been furnished by the association against four commanding officers of the Hyde Park police force for use in their prosecution in the criminal court or before the civil service commissioners.

During the past year the association has conducted a vigorous investigation among the numerous beer gardens, saloons and road houses in the strip of local option territory north of Washington Park. This was undertaken with a view to discovering whether the proprietors of these resorts had complied with the requirements of the ordinance in submitting a petition signed by a majority of the frontage on both sides of the four streets surrounding the proposed site of the dram shop. In many instances it was found that to secure these petitions fraud of various kinds had been resorted to, such as purchase of frontage, shortage of legal frontage, or the use of signatures of individuals who never had owned a square inch of ground in the neighborhood. By vigorously and persistently presenting these facts to the proper municipal authorities, as well as by securing a strict construction of the ordinance mentioned by the Supreme Court, they finally obtained from the mayor a revocation of the licenses fraudulently obtained. The methods used by the liquor dealers in securing these licenses are shown by the testimony of their attorneys to be thoroughly unprincipled.

No less zealous has been the attack on "blind pigs" and gambling places. Not only is the association a self-constituted bureau of information at the disposal of the mayor and police department, but upon certain occasions, finding that the information which it has furnished has been indefinitely pigeon-holed, it has taken matters into its own hands and organized raids, secured evidence and vigorously prosecuted to a successful finish a large number of offenders.

In the course of these prosecutions there have been brought to light certain facts which ought to be of vital interest not only to the city officials of Chicago but to every citizen who values the safety of himself and family, namely, that the men who are paid to guard and protect citizens are in league with the law-breakers, are frequenters of the "blind pigs" and have been seen taken from these resorts intoxicated. In one well-proved instance a guardian of the peace was known to have perjured himself that he might assist in obtaining a license. The association draws from these facts the somewhat startling but logical inference, that "an officer who will for money go into partnership with a 'blind pig' keeper or gambler, will, if there is enough money in it, go into partnership with any sort of criminal," and they cite as an example the recent conviction of Policeman Mahoney, a Chicago patrolman, on the charge of burglary.

The work done by the association is notable not only for the thoroughness with which it has cleared the district of "blind pigs" and kindred establishments, but it is equally remarkable as an illustration of the ability of a citizens' movement to inject energy into a somewhat languid municipal executive force and to stimulate it to activity. While the majority of Chicago's citizens have been content to sit in their comfortable homes and criticise the city officials, the members of the association deemed it wiser to try to supplement whatever qualities might be lacking in the executive department of their city.

In short, having a name, the citizens of Hyde Park, acting through this organization, proposed to live that name, and what is more, proposed and insisted that every individual conducting business within its boundaries should live it as a law-abiding citizen of a prohibition district, even though it were at the expense of wearying the mayor and corporation counsel and chief of police to the verge of nervous prostration.

It is quite possible that the men who compose this association have done no more than their plain duty as citizens in using their individual time and effort in seeing that existing laws and ordinances were enforced, but doing one's plain, ofttimes unpleasant, duty in municipal matters, is so rare a virtue that it gives occasion for comment.

The work of the association merits cordial and substantial support. It deserves the emulation of every thoughtful man and woman to the extent that he shall go and do likewise in his own district and that he shall lose no time in the doing of it.

"The Cry of the Children."

THE lamentable conditions and extent of child labor in Pennslyvania, as revealed by the recent testimony before the strike commission, has aroused the ardent sympathies and activities of the intelligent, mother-hearted women of that wealthy and conservative state.

The forward movement cannot fail to be successful, inaugurated by such public-spirited leaders as Mrs. Campbell, state president of the Pennsylvania Federation of Women's Clubs; Mrs. Schaff, president National and State Congress of Mothers; Mrs. Mary Mumford, Civic Club; Mrs. Rachel Foster Avery, of the Suffrage Association, and representatives of the W. C. T. U. and other leading women's bodies.

Pennsylvania ranks twenty-first among states as regards the number of illiterate children. There is need of action, when the chief factory inspector of the state boasts in a large public meeting that he himself went to work at nine years of age, learned a trade, and never went to school, and adds that he is as good a citizen of Pennsylvania as if he had an education.

Under these circumstances it is not surprising that the official whose duty it is to enforce the child-labor law in the state, is proud of the fact that there are 36,000 children at work in Pennsylvania, and is lax and unconcerned in seeing that the age limit is observed.

Large as is this number of working innocents, it does not include the wretched breaker-boys in the coal-mining regions whose sad condition is now known all over the country. The additional fact recently made public that thousands of little girls are working at night in the mills of Pennsylvania, has stirred the latent activities of the thoughtful people of the state.

About fourteen years ago a movement for better legislation, on the part of Philadelphia women, for factory inspection and the prohibition of child-labor in Pennsylvania, headed by Mrs. Florence Kelley, now secretary of the National Consumers' League, resulted in a law which forbids the employment of children under thirteen years of age—a law, however, which lacks the modern, essential enforcement features such as obtain in Massachusetts, New York, Connecticut, Ohio and Illinois, the leading states in child-labor regulation.

It is appropriate and auspicious that this special work in the interests of the childhood of the great commonwealth should be taken up by women, who, in the very nature of things, are vitally concerned in matters pertaining to child-life and the best interests of children. Undoubtedly they will receive the support of the thoughtful men of the state, and Pennsylvania will take a place high in the advanced line of states in this important matter of child-labor regulation.

The Way Grows Better.

Harper's Weekly is of the opinion that if we cannot trust our safety to drinking men we are in a bad way. There are few abstainers, it says, among the men who rule the country, and it does not believe there is one in the President's cabinet or on the bench of the Supreme Court. Well, are we not continually being told that the country IS in a bad way? And not by reformers and professional agitators only, but by the politicians and the newspapers? The Democrats tell us the country is going to ruin because the Republicans are handling the reins. The Republicans say it is in danger because it is drifting towards tariff reform and other democratic doctrines. Conservatives in both parties sound the alarm because of growing socialistic tendencies. The liquor power would have the people believe that they are in a VERY bad way because prohibition sentiment is growing, and that the country is coming to a pretty pass when "petticoat influence" can abolish drink from this or that place under government control. Prohibitionists warn us of the bad way we are in by reason of rum rule, but point to the cheering fact that we are getting into a better way because total abstinence and antagonism to the liquor power are much more general than they used to be; because we, the people, the real rulers, are, like many of the great corporations, awakening to the fact that the safest and most efficient service is only to be secured by total abstinence on the part of the employe; that if non-alcoholized brain and nerve is needed in a railroad man, it is needed in a soldier, also in the man to whom is committed any part of the important duty of steering the ship of state. Our country will have taken a long step towards being in the best way when all who represent us in government, from the President down, are total abstainers and avowed foes of the legalized liquor traffic.

The Physician's Influence.

Perhaps no class of people can be of more practical help to the temperance cause than the members of the medical profession. Merchants, manufacturers and railroad managers forbid the use of intoxicants among their employes and thus "lend a hand," but the physician, the medical adviser of the family, has but to speak and his word carries weight in all the homes of his clientage. When conservative medical associations issue declarations against the use of intoxicants and thousands of eminent medical men of these associations sign them, as we are told, in our last issue, by Dr. Crothers in his article on "Temperance and Medical Men," an influence greater than can be estimated must go out all over the world into non-temperance homes. This last manifesto is being signed only by physicians who are total abstainers, which rule has not obtained in the past, and has already over 1,000 signatures, of which ninety-nine are from Germany, thirty-nine from Russia, thirty-five from Switzerland, seventeen from Austria-Hungary, fifteen from Sweden, and thirteen from Denmark.

The Illegal Traffic Comes High.

That "prohibition is practically free rum" no one really believes—not even those who make the statement as an argument for license, and least of all the rumseller himself. The "blind tiger" man has, first of all, to square himself with Uncle Sam, who must have his license fee whether the business is legal or not. Then somebody (very likely several somebodies) nearer home must be "fixed" before he can secure the privilege of violating, in more or less secret manner, the prohibitory law of his state or district. If prohibition means free rum it is strange indeed that liquor sellers and their following so vigorously combat it and declare so strenuously for license. If free rum is an evil, a legalized rum traffic is an infinitely greater evil.

President's Letter.

My dear Comrades:—Miss Gordon and I reached Portland from Vermont late last evening. An hour after our arrival we received a message from a prominent Vermont editor to the effect that the "Yes" vote had carried by a majority of 1,500. Four cities in the state gave about 5,000 majority for the "Yes" vote, thus plainly showing that two hundred and more towns were for prohibition. The first twenty towns heard from gave a very large majority "No" vote, which, however, was quickly offset by one city with its purchasable and many other votes that were influenced by ways well known to the liquor fraternity. There are, moreover, many comparatively new-comers to our country who think that any kind of prohibition is an interference with their personal liberties. Such votes are, of course, largely centered in the cities.

There is no doubt that the temperance people of Vermont were "caught napping," or resting complacently on their oars, enjoying the blessings which prohibition had brought them for the past fifty years, and the enemy, which is always alert, won the day temporarily last December and again on February 3. Vermont has too many noble men and women to meekly accept the domination of evil brought about by an unholy political alliance, aided by the foes of righteousness from without as well as from within the state. The question is not yet settled. The Vermont W. C. T. U. had already decided that whichever way the vote should go they must work for the repeal of the law adopted by the Vermont legislature last December, and so with their faces turned towards the hills and their hearts lifted to God, they will press bravely on working for Vermont's redemption. The agitation and education of the splendid campaign they have conducted during the past two months will greatly aid to this end.

* * *

Cincinnati W. C. T. U. has invited the National W. C. T. U. to hold its next Convention (1903) in Cincinnati, and the invitation is accepted provided a suitable building can be satisfactorily secured for desirable dates. We think we may be able next week to finally announce the dates and that the place is Cincinnati.

After a day at our desks at Portland we go to Augusta, Maine, for the legislative hearing on the Resolve to repeal the prohibitory clause of the Maine Constitution. The Maine legislature is not likely to vote in favor of any such measure, but biennially we have to meet the proposition, which is always defeated, and this year will be no exception.

Truly and affectionately yours,

L. M. N. Stevens

Portland, Maine, Feb. 4, 1903.

"A LARGE UPPER CHAMBER, WHOSE WINDOW OPENED TOWARDS THE SUN-RISING. THE NAME OF THE CHAMBER WAS PEACE." PILGRIM'S PROGRESS

"Acquaint now thyself with Him and be at peace."

If God be God, He will do all He can for us without the asking. I do not believe prayer makes any difference." The words fell from the lips of a young woman in the shadow of a great grief.

"But," urged her friend, who had learned many precious lessons in the school of suffering, "Don't you see that He is able to do much more for one who has come into the relation of close personal friendship with Him?"

"That seems impossible to me. He is Law, and Law is inexorable."

"But He is Love as well. Some day, dear," was the gentle reply, "you will know that Love and Law are one, and you will believe that the universe is filled with God's brooding tenderness. A mother's love is only a faint type, a dim shadow of His infinite yearning over all."

"Well, if that be so, how can I know that out of the 'all' He knows my heart and loves me, and cares? No, I cannot believe that."

"Get acquainted with Him, dear child."

"How?"

"As you would with me—with any friend. Talk with Him; tell him, without a shadow of reserve, all your heart; your longing for peace, your doubt of His personal love for you, your questioning of His providence."

"The way is so dark."

"He knows and longs to comfort you. Let your Savior have His way with you; wait before Him, for His answer. He will talk with you, heart to heart, as friend with friend, and lead you into the light."

"If I could only believe! Why, that is—"

"Prayer. Do you begin to understand? 'Acquaint now thyself with Him and be at peace.'"

A Year Later.

"I want to tell you, dear friend, in this first hour of the New Year," wrote the younger woman from her distant home, "that I am acquainted with my Lord. I can never thank you enough for your helpful words a year ago. Conditions have not changed. Perhaps the shadow will never be lifted here, but I walk with Him, and the way that must look desolate to others, is often shining with His presence. How patient he has been with me! I cannot tell you in how many ways He has proved His love for me—me, chosen out of all His universe to be His friend. I am reminded of Bunyan's sweet old story, and I verily believe I have found a place in the chamber that looks towards the sunrising, the chamber called Peace.

"What I see in the growing light I may tell you another time. My heart is too full now—overflowing with gratitude. Prayer, my greatest joy, is more thanksgiving than petition to-day. Help me to praise. Gratefully, joyfully yours, Ruth."

Another Year.

"The passing year brings special thought of you, dear friend, to whom I owe so much.

"I have made a wonderful discovery. My cloud has not a silver, but a gold lining. I wonder now that I saw only its blackness (and I cannot think of that without a shudder), and was wholly blind to the light flashing behind it, out beyond its border line. The cloud is still there, but I live, most of the time, on the other side of it.

"Last summer I climbed a high mountain. We had a glorious day; above us was the blue, unflecked sky, while far below a delicate mist trailed over the valley, like woven sunshine. That night, in the valley, a friend said to me, 'I am sorry the clouds spoiled your day.' She had seen only the shadow of the glorified mist that lay beneath our feet.

"You knew all this long ago, but there has come to me a great longing to help other despairing hearts to know, as you have helped me.

"'Ask what ye will.' The tender words float down the years. In our agony we do not hear, we will not understand. Now I know that sorrow, deep, impenetrable, is surely God's call of love, and if we answer ever so faintly the Lord Himself will run to meet us—seeing us afar off—to bring us unutterable comfort. Bernard of Clairvaux sang it centuries ago. The blessed words sing themselves over and over in my heart to-day:

"O hope of every contrite heart,
O joy of all the meek,
To those who ask, how kind Thou art!
How good to those who seek!

"But what to those who find? Ah, this,
Nor tongue nor pen can show:
The love of Jesus, what it is,
None but His loved ones know.

"I hear the echo of your voice—'None but His loved ones know.'

Ever gratefully and lovingly yours, Ruth."

OFFICIAL COMMUNICATIONS

REST COTTAGE. THE WILLARD.

GENERAL OFFICERS:

President,
MRS. LILLIAN M. N. STEVENS, Portland, Me.
Vice-President-at-Large,
MISS ANNA A. GORDON, Evanston, Ill.
Corresponding Secretary,
MRS. SUSANNA M. D. FRY, Evanston, Ill.
Recording Secretary,
MRS. CLARA C. HOFFMAN, Kansas City, Mo.
Asst. Recording Secretary,
MRS. FRANCES E. BEAUCHAMP, Lexington, Ky.
Treasurer,
MRS. HELEN M. BARKER, Evanston, Ill.

Headquarters National W. C. T. U., Evanston, Ill.

Organizers.

DEAR SISTERS:—I write you today from the Green Mountain state, which is now the battlefield of prohibition. Only those who have been on the field, or have had a like experience, can fully appreciate all that the struggle here means. The license element is hard at work, doing all it possibly can to open the saloon in this fair state. Our blessed W. C. T. U. women, led by the faithful state president, Mrs. Read, are working as they have not worked for years to retain the prohibition law. While no one can say positively what the result will be, yet we, who are on the ground, fully expect the "No" vote to prevail, and the prohibition law to be retained.

From Portland I went to New Hampshire, where I spent some time, mostly visiting existing unions, strengthening and encouraging them. I organized two new unions, then came to Vermont for my second visit, and remained two weeks, speaking before the temperance committee of the legislature against a proposed license bill, and later, speaking at a legislative hearing, where another license bill was under consideration. Just before Thanksgiving I turned my face westward. I spent a few days in Bolivar, N. Y., where I spoke once, for the union. A hurried visit in my old girlhood home, with the aged father, then on to my own "Home, Sweet Home!" The holiday time, always spent by my own fireside, stands out as a bright spot in the year. My home union, St. Joseph central union, suffered the loss of our president, Miss Anthony, just at this time, and by her request, the union was to have charge of the funeral exercises, and I was permitted to assist in this sad rite. January 7 found me once more on my way to Vermont. A part of a day was pleasantly spent at headquarters, in Evanston, en route, and on January 11 I spoke at North Bennington. Every day since that time has found me afield, although the weather was quite "bracing" one or two days, when the mercury dropped to twenty-five below zero. Yet every appointment has been met. Attendance has been good, with but very few exceptions, and interest in present conditions here is on the increase.

I trust all of the organizers are busy and that many of you are organizing new unions and adding new members. My work here has been of a different nature, and consisted in addressing the VOTERS, so it does not give unions and members to report; yet I have taken a delight in it, and have been wonderfully blessed.

February 3 I leave New England, going direct to Mississippi, where they are just about to open a campaign for state prohibition. One month is to be given to this work in Mississippi, then a little time in Louisiana to help along our W. C. T. U. lines. Am to have a little rest at home after that, then away to Mississippi and North Dakota if health and strength permit. I have enjoyed the letters I have received from the organizers, and would be glad to hear from every one of you. May He who holdeth life, strength and wisdom in His hands, give to you abundantly, and may you reach to greater spiritual heights this year than ever before, is the sincere wish of

Your Comrade,
CALLIE H. HOWE.

DEAR COMRADES:—It seems a long time since I was with you at Portland, but the days have not been passed in idleness. After two months of continuous work in the east, ending with the National Convention, I felt entitled to one day of rest, so I hied me to Old Orchard Beach, where, the season being closed, I was the only guest and for twenty-four hours had the whole Atlantic Ocean (or as much as I could use) to myself. Refreshed by the sea breezes, I journeyed on to the quaint village of South Berwick, Maine, for two meetings on Sunday that were well attended.

From there it was a long journey to southern Ohio, where I spent nearly three weeks of November at work in Clermont and Clinton counties. The weather was on its best behavior and the roads excellent, so that I really enjoyed the one hundred and forty miles which I traveled across the country as well as the hospitality of white-ribboners along the way. Much of the time I was among friends, and I found them such in spirit as well as in name. New unions were organized at Owensville and Cuba; schools, parlor meetings and receptions were addressed, lectures delivered each evening and many new members secured.

The most interesting meeting held in Ohio was at Milford, Sunday evening, November 2. On account of the no-license campaign, much interest was felt by the citizens and an audience of five hundred assembled in the Town Hall. Decorations of palms and chrysanthemums, bright lights and splendid music by a choir of forty voices, from all the churches in town, inspired the speaker to do her best and was a delightful contrast to the dark, dreary, little meetings that sometimes fall to the lot of the organizer.

It was pleasant indeed after my long absence to have a brief respite at home and to join the family group at Thanksgiving dinner. But lest such delights prove enervating, on the day following I left for a three weeks' campaign in Nebraska, where snow and ice and cold, stormy weather did their worst to bring to grief the well-laid plans of the state officers. In spite of all, twenty-seven meetings of various kinds were held, one union organized, a Y re-organized, many calls made and subscriptions secured. The most difficult work, and most enjoyable, too, was that of the last week, when I was accompanied by the state Y secretary, Miss Harriet Montgomery, who had her first taste of organization. We worked up our own meetings, interviewing ministers, janitors, and refractory church trustees, advertising through schools, visiting homes, tramping miles through snow, riding on freight trains, stopping at hotels when no one seemed to want us, and having a jolly time overcoming difficulties. A school-room motto which we discovered, "Not I can't, but I will,"—we adopted for our own.

I've been at home since Christmas and congratulating myself every time I hear a train because I'm not on it.

CARRIE LEE CARTER.

Dexter, Mo

A Fine Kidney Remedy.

Mr. A. S. Hitchcock, East Hampton, Conn. (The Clothier), says if any sufferer from Kidney and Bladder Disease will write him he will direct them to the perfect home cure he used. He makes no charge whatever for the favor.

Superintendents.

Social Meetings and Red-Letter Days.

MARCH 1. THE BIRTHDAY OF MRS. L. M. N. STEVENS.

MY DEAR SISTERS: Since the Red-Letter Days were added to my department, I have been frequently requested to furnish programs and selections touching the lives and work of the persons whose birthdays we celebrate. I have, therefore, prepared a booklet that can be read March 1st, the birthday of our President and editor-in-chief of THE UNION SIGNAL, Mrs. L. M. N. Stevens, who kindly furnished me some material, and gave me permission to cull from THE UNION SIGNAL such help as I desired.

We trust that a special effort will be made to secure subscribers for our National organ at this time, for no member can be an intelligent worker without it. The Bible and THE UNION SIGNAL should be in our homes to be studied by each member of the family.

Do not neglect the opportunity to solicit members for the local union. If each of the 10,000 unions were to hold a meeting March 1st, and gain one new subscriber to this valuable paper, and one new member to our organization, our President and editor-in-chief would truly appreciate these, as the richest gifts that we could bestow upon her; so please carry out the program that is in the booklet, which may be secured of the W. T. P. A., or of me; price 10 cents. Send also for "Why we Belong," and "Our Work." These can be read on any of the Red-Letter Days; price 10 cents each.

These four leaflets, "Social Meetings and Red-Letter Days Suggested Programs," "What? When? Where? Who? Why? Suggested Programs," "To Hold and To Gain," "Do and Don't," can be obtained from me, two cents each; four for six cents; forty cents per hundred.

Remember that all of the Red-Letter Days observed are to be reported to me as the National corresponding secretary does not now include it among her questions. I hope that each state president will see the necessity of electing a state superintendent of Social Meetings and Red-Letter Days, that the work may be pushed and reported.

Yours for subscribers and members on March 1,

MARY D. TOMLINSON.
212 La Grande Ave., Plainfield, N. J.

Sabbath Observance.

DEAR CO-WORKERS:—The "Call" for the annual week of prayer for the Sabbath is now ready. Send to me or to your state superintendent for it and give it a wide circulation. Have it published in your local and church papers. I need not suggest that you publish it in your state and county temperance papers, for you always do that.

Send copies of it to your pastors with requests for sermons and special prayer services, to your Sabbath school superintendents when asking that special teaching on Sabbath Observance be given in the school. See that the young people's societies are supplied with them. Do not forget to make the observance of the Sabbath the theme of your talk in the L. T. L. this week, let every union make this department the subject for consideration, and be sure to pray much for the objects named in the "Call."

Those who love the Lord's Day and desire to have it preserved will, if they believe in the efficacy of united prayer, be sure to raise their hearts and voices to God for an outpouring of the Holy Spirit. This week of prayer has been observed for a quarter of a century, but not so generally as it should be, and we earnestly desire that every white ribboner should observe it this year. It has been adopted by the General Assembly of the Presbyterian church, and we confidently expect that other churches will follow their example.

A bill is now before the legislature of New York to make liquor selling on Sunday lawful. A similar bill was defeated last year largely through the efforts of the white ribbon women, and we trust they may again win the day. To this end let us work and pray.

Bishop Cheney, of Chicago, said in a sermon some years since: "If ever this country shall be the spot of revolution, the calamity will be seen to have entered through these rents of Sabbath desecration."

These rents are growing wider and wider with each succeeding year, and we shall do well to heed this timely warning.

Yours for a Holy Sabbath,
VARILA F. COX.

Tabor, N. J.

The Lunch Question.

How a Big Chicago Firm Solved It.

So many employes "bolt the lunch" and eat what they should not, that they soon show the effect in nervousness and dyspepsia. This has attracted the attention of managers of the big stores and shops. In one Chicago firm an experiment on some of the girls resulted in a complete solution of the question.

The woman that made the experiment tells the tale as follows: "About a year ago I became alarmed at the state of my daughter's health. She was employed by a big firm here and for some reason steadily lost flesh, grew very nervous, had no appetite and could not sleep.

"Questioning her I found she ate but little lunch for at that busy hour she was seldom served promptly and the time being short she just 'bolted' the food and rushed back. She ate very light breakfasts and I could see she suffered from lack of nourishment. I felt responsible for this and finally got her some Grape-Nuts for breakfast.

"I also got a neat leather case holding two pint flasks. One I filled with milk, the other with cold Postum Coffee which had been properly made. She also carried a package of Grape-Nuts. The Postum she drank iced with a dash of lemon. She followed the Grape-Nuts with some fruit and this made up her lunch.

"In spite of the warm weather she improved greatly in two weeks' time. She gained in flesh, her nerves were steady and she slept sweetly at night. She never felt the old weakness from hunger.

"In a short time a few other girls in the office tried it and the effect was so marked upon all that still others were persuaded. Finally a room was cleared out and the one hundred and odd girls were served daily with Grape-Nuts and hot Postum. It was a revolution, but the manager saw the good result and adopted the plan, greatly to the benefit of the health of the employes and at a saving in expense." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

BOYS WANTED!

We want a boy in every town to work for us after school hours and on Saturdays.

Over 3000 boys now at the work. Some make $10.00 to $15.00 a week.

ANY BOY who is willing to devote a few hours each week to this work can earn many dollars selling

The Saturday Evening Post

Among neighbors and relatives. He can begin at once. Absolutely no money required to start. Write us to-day and we will send the first week's supply of ten copies free. These are sold at 5 cents each, and will provide capital to order the next week's supply at wholesale rates.

$225 in Extra Cash Prizes Next Month

Booklet containing photographs of some of our most successful boy agents, with letters telling how they work, sent free.

The Curtis Publishing Company
451 Arch Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

CHIRON LUBRICATING PILE CONE

A small, hollow, perforated wooden cone, filled with the Chiron Ointment, especially prepared for the purpose. Perfect and continuous lubrication by soothing and healing ointment directly to the sore spots. Endorsed by physicians. Immediate relief and a certain cure for ALL KINDS OF PILES. Regular price, $3. SPECIAL PRICE (for 30 days only), $1. By mail, sealed in plain wrapper.

The CHIRON Mfg. Co., Plainfield, N. J.

Grand Canyon of Arizona

A book about it. Send 50 cents in coin or stamps to W. J. Black, Gen. Pass. Agent, A., T. & S. F. R'y, 1312 Great Northern Building, Chicago, for copy of notable new book entitled "Grand Canyon of Arizona," graphically describing world's greatest scenic wonder.

Contains special articles by Hamlin Garland, Chas. Dudley Warner, Joaquin Miller, John L. Stoddard, Major J. W. Powell, and other noted writers; 124 pages with map and cover in colors and many beautiful half-tone illustrations. Worthy a place in any library.

This titan of chasms may easily be visited any day in the year in connection w th California trip over the Santa Fe.

On the Santa Fe

SPECIAL

Anti-Cigaret

NUMBER OF

The Young Crusader

WILL BE THE

February Issue

Place your orders at once so that the papers for distribution on ANTI-CIGARET SUNDAY, March 1st, will reach you promptly.

Price, $2.00 per hundred

Woman's Temperance Publishing Association,
Chicago, Illinois.

W. C. T. U. Notes.

Rev. Berthe J. Bowers is at work in St. Louis covering a long list of appointments.

A new union has been organized at Winnipeg, Manitoba, by Mrs. Chrisholm, provincial president.

Mrs. Mary E. Teats is doing evangelistic work in Michigan, but her permanent address is Fremont, Neb.

Mrs. Sarah L. M. Dousereaux, Owosso, Mich., wishes to know where she can secure the poem "Farmer Brown and the cider barrel."

The members of the West Side union of Green Bay, Wis., supply reading matter to the reformatory. A medal contest is being arranged for.

Members of the Gray, N. Y., union at a late meeting pledged themselves not to trade at grocery stores where intoxicating liquors are sold.

Mrs. Alice Shamleffer, county president of Butler county, Kansas, was the guest of honor at a delightful reception given by the Augusta, Kan., union.

"An hour with the State Report" is a good way to educate and interest the members of a local union. This was the program of the Newburgh, N. Y., union at one of its regular meetings.

The union at Springfield, O., held a suffrage parlor meeting with great success. Sketches of prominent women were given. New members and new subscribers to THE UNION SIGNAL were secured.

A monster petition is being prepared to present to the Ottawa government soon after the opening of the Federal parliament, by the Dominion W. C. T. U. It will ask the prohibition of manufacture and sale of cigarets.

The Harrisburg, Pa., union voted money to the building fund of the R. R. Y. M. C. A. of Pennsylvania, and aid to the rescue home of the Salvation Army. Of course their pledges for their own work are paid first, or should be.

At a matron's medal contest held in Peoria, Ill., Mrs. Eva Kinney Miller won the medal with the charming little fragment written by Mrs. Marian B. Baxter, "Only a Little Popcorn Girl." The contest was a great success.

A committee of the Milwaukee W. C. T. U. visited the school board rooms and suggested a plan to some of the school directors which provides for giving a series of temperance lectures in the public schools. A petition will follow the suggestion.

The unions in Phillips county, Kans., are raising money to purchase a tent, to be used in county work. They recently presented Mrs. Anna M. Tracy, the county president, with a beautiful gold watch, as a token of appreciation of her faithful leadership.

The union at El Dorado, Kansas, is growing in efficiency and membership. They find a system of monthly reports both interesting and helpful. A recent meeting was held as a Mothers' Conference. "A large attendance and a glorious meeting" is reported.

An interesting Matron's Contest was held at Vrooman, Pa. "A Political Parade" recited by Mrs. Bertha Kerr won the medal. The honorary members were so interested in the contest that they are arranging for another, to be held soon.

Mammoth temperance mass meetings are being held in Long Branch, N. J., under the auspices of the W. C. T. U. and Law and Order league. Rev. S. H. Haun, of Camden, is the speaker. These organizations are bound the law shall be enforced at Long Branch.

The W. C. T. U. of Trenton, N. J., has arranged with some of the physicians of the city to give lectures during February every Tuesday morning, at 11 o'clock, upon important subjects to women, which will be followed by a practical lesson by the physical director, Miss Lawrence.

A School of Methods will be held by the Castle County, Del., W. C. T. U., in February. Mrs. Thacher will be present. March is the date set by the Wilmington union for the purpose of fighting against the sale and use of the cigarets. The county convention will be held in April at Mt. Salem, addressed by Mrs. Margaret Dye Ellis.

The result of the inauguration of W. C. T. U. Institutes in New York state is very encouraging. Mrs. Boole and Mrs. Graham attended the meetings in Allegany and Cattaraugus counties. At the former 200 delegates were present, and 175 at the Cattaraugus Institute, and in each place the towns people were greatly interested.

Colonel C. J. Holt, of Chicago, continues his phenomenally successful meetings on the Pacific coast. Large and aggressive unions resulted from his meetings at Rockford and Farmington, Washington. At the latter place one saloon was closed in forty-eight hours and the remaining one will soon be closed. Colonel Holt is now at Fairfield.

A newspaper dispatch from Tacoma, Wash., says: The Woman's Christian Temperance Union of this city has inaugurated a crusade against the social evil along new ideas. Instead of persecuting the unfortunate young women and driving them out of the city, prominent members of the union will take them into their own homes, on promise of reform.

A union at Hempstead, Texas, of thirty members was organized by Mr. J. B. Rayner, who also did good work among the voters. He hopes to organize soon in his home town, Calvert. As stated in a former issue of THE UNION SIGNAL, Mr. Rayner will be glad to receive temperance literature, papers or any good reading matter to distribute among the negroes.

A schedule of W. C. T. U. Institutes covering every county, organized or unorganized, in the state, has been arranged for Illinois by the state president, Miss Marie C. Brehm, who is also state superintendent of Institute work. The helpers from outside the state will be Miss Anna Quinby and Miss Frances Ensign of Ohio, and Miss Permelia C. Mahan, of Missouri.

Crowned.

The Lodi, Wis., W. C. T. U. reports the death of a valued member, Mrs. Elizabeth Whipple, who passed away December 31, 1902. She was a lifelong temperance worker and dearly beloved by her comrades.

Mrs. Etta Sheldon, of Mahaska, Kan., was called home Nov. 28, 1902. By her death a loving husband and five little boys are left to mourn for wife and mother. The Mahaska union mourns the loss of one of its most faithful members.

BROWN'S BRONCHIAL TROCHES

Neglect of a Cough or Sore Throat may result in an Incurable Throat Trouble or Consumption. For relief use BROWN'S BRONCHIAL TROCHES. Nothing excels this simple remedy. Sold only in boxes.

The Strength of the coffee you buy adds to its value in the cup.

Lion Coffee

comes to you fresh and of full strength, always in sealed, air-tight packages. Bulk coffees lose their strength, deteriorate in flavor, and also gather dirt.

Uniformity, freshness and full strength are insured to users of Lion Coffee.

KINDLY MENTION THE UNION SIGNAL WHEN WRITING ADVERTISERS.

Important Notice to Investors.

The great prosperity of this company has become so well known that nearly the entire amount of our treasury stock has been subscribed for. The stockholders will vote the last of February on an increase of capital. In the meantime, orders will be filled in the sequence they are received, until the few remaining shares are sold. Our stock now pays ten per cent annually, and owners of live stock on our ranches have made over thirty per cent on their cattle and sheep. Present list of stockholders furnished upon application.

Montana Co-Operative Ranch Co.,
GREAT FALLS, MONT.

KINDLY MENTION THE UNION SIGNAL WHEN WRITING ADVERTISERS.

$5 PER 100 For addressing envelopes. Send dime and stamp for material and instructions. Steady work. C. E. Miller, Dep. 12, Ely Bldg., Chicago

KINDLY MENTION THE UNION SIGNAL WHEN WRITING ADVERTISERS.

ILLINOIS CENTRAL — CENTRAL MISSISSIPPI VALLEY ROUTE — RAILROAD

New Line Fine Service.

Minneapolis and St. Paul

Fast "Limited" night train, with stateroom and open-section sleeping car, buffet-library car, and free reclining chair car through without change. Dining car service.

A. H. HANSON, G. P. A., CHICAGO.

KINDLY MENTION THE UNION SIGNAL WHEN WRITING ADVERTISERS.

LADIES—STUDY AT HOME

TRAIN TO NURSE Use leisure hours to become independent. Every woman inexperienced or experienced in nursing should receive a thorough course of theoretical training before assuming the responsibility of ministering to the sick. Our course universally endorsed by physicians and surgeons as practical and easy of comprehension. Our faculty, leading physicians and surgeons of Chicago. Our scholars enthusiastic in our support. Diploma. Catalogue free. American Cor. School for Nurses, O—167 Dearborn, Chicago.

KINDLY MENTION THE UNION SIGNAL WHEN WRITING ADVERTISERS.

Don't Pay Double.

We'll sell you a better hatcher for the money than any other incubator concern on earth. New improved regulator, that can't get out of order. Big book—200 illustrations free.

SURE HATCH INCUBATOR CO., Clay Center, Neb. or Columbus, Ohio.

KINDLY MENTION THE UNION SIGNAL WHEN WRITING ADVERTISERS.

LADIES to do piecework at their homes. We furnish all material and pay from $7 to $12 weekly. Experience unnecessary. Send stamped envelope to ROYAL CO., Dept. U.S., 34 Monroe Street, Chicago, Ill.

KINDLY MENTION THE UNION SIGNAL WHEN WRITING ADVERTISERS.

$20 A WEEK Straight salary and expenses to men with rig to introduce our Poultry Mixture in country; year's contract; weekly pay. Address, with stamp, Monarch Mfg. Co., Box 1166, Springfield, Ill.

KINDLY MENTION THE UNION SIGNAL WHEN WRITING ADVERTISERS.

Responsive Readings

Published Monthly.

Designed for the use of local unions and of great aid to workers, as they contain information wholly upon the work of the departments of the W. C. T. U.

SUBSCRIPTION PRICE:

Single Copies, per year	$.10
13 Copies, per year, to one address	1.00
100 of this issue	.50

Subject for February Reading,

Work Among the Indians.

By Mrs. Dorothy J. Cleveland.

Woman's Temperance Publishing Association,
184 LA SALLE ST., CHICAGO, ILL.

A Fight Against Odds.

(Continued from page 6.)

wide for half-an-hour at morning, noon and evening while he accompanied the prisoner in brisk club and dumb-bell exercise, which with Claude's cold bath and plenty of simple, nourishing food kept him sufficiently invigorated. Besides, Alice and her mother saw to it that he was not left alone for any length of time and that he was provided with constant reading and employment.

"Only let us get the habit fairly broken," said Ralph, "and his mind and heart will gradually recover sufficiently for us to begin a reform in earnest, but we must be patient."

One thing greatly encouraged them—while it could hardly be expected that Claude's morals and mentality had made more than a forced and temporary start, the boy himself was enthusiastically determined on the resolve never to let another cigaret pass his lips. The horrible longing was past now, the suffering broken, even all ordinary desire gone, and Claude had sufficient wit and sense left to resolve mightily that he would never again be criminal enough voluntarily to re-enslave himself.

(To be continued.)

I Will Cure You of RHEUMATISM

Else No Money is Wanted.

Any honest person who suffers from Rheumatism is welcome to this offer.

I am a specialist in Rheumatism, and have treated more cases than any other physician, I think. For 16 years I made 2,000 experiments with different drugs, testing all known remedies while searching the world for something better. Nine years ago I found a costly chemical in Germany which, with my previous discoveries, gives me a certain cure.

I don't mean that it can turn bony joints into flesh again; but it can cure the disease at any stage, completely and forever. I have done it fully 100,000 times.

I know this so well that I will furnish my remedy on trial. Simply write me a postal for my book on Rheumatism, and I will mail you an order on your druggist for six bottles Dr. Shoop's Rheumatic Cure. Take it for a month at my risk. If it succeeds, the cost is only $5.50. If it fails, I will pay the druggist myself—and your mere word shall decide it.

I mean that exactly. If you say the results are not what I claim, I don't expect a penny from you.

I have no samples. Any mere sample that can affect chronic Rheumatism must be drugged to the verge of danger. I use no such drugs, and it is folly to take them. You must get the disease out of the blood.

My remedy does that even in the most difficult, obstinate cases. It has cured the oldest cases that I ever met. And in all my experience—in all my 2,000 tests—I never found another remedy that would cure one chronic case in ten.

Write me and I will send you the order. Try my remedy for a month, as it can't harm you anyway. If it fails it is free.

Address Dr. Shoop, Box 948, Racine, Wis.

Mild cases, not chronic, are often cured by one or two bottles. At all druggists.

Woman's Invasion of the Industrial Field.

By Jane A. Stewart.

A WRITER in a current magazine who has been studying figures to some purpose gives an idea of the extent to which women have entered the gainful occupations during the decade covered by the last census.

Twenty years ago, the number of women at work was but 2,647,157; now women workers number 5,319,912, and are increasing twice as fast as the population. These figures, it should be understood, cover only women at work for wages, and take no account of the millions of wives and mothers whose work, it is conceded, is worth all the more because there can be no money value placed upon it.

That women workers are invading every occupation is the most significant fact attested by the census. In only a few of the 303 separate occupations listed are there no women recorded. These few include soldiers, sailors, marines, employed by the United States government; city fire departments; street car driving; telegraph and telephone linemen; helpers and apprentices among roofers and slaters, and steam boiler makers.

The figures afford a revelation as to the hitherto unthought of directions in which women may turn their energies.

There are 153 women employed as boatmen and sailors. There are as many women workmen in iron and steel as there are women clergymen, 3,370. There are hundreds of women policemen, watchmen and detectives; two women motormen and 13 women conductors; 2 women are working as roofers and slaters; 126 as plumbers; 45 as plasterers; 167 brick and stone masons; 241 paper hangers; 545 carpenters and joiners, and 1,759 painters and glaziers. It is a surprise to learn that there are 193 women blacksmiths; 571 machinists, 100 lumbermen and raftsmen; 113 wood choppers; 904 draymen and teamsters; 323 undertakers; 143 stone cutters; 63 quarrymen; 65 whitewashers; 11 wellborers, and 177 stationary engineers and firemen—all women.

While rejoicing in the advance we regret to note that 440 women are serving as bartenders and 2,086 women are keeping saloons.

Despite the great expansion of opportunity, it is significant that there is no diminution in the time-honored lines of employment for women. Domestic service, in spite of its problematic aspect, still claims the largest percentage of the entire body of women wage-earners—1,283,763, or ¼ of the whole.

Next in order are agricultural labor, 663,209; farming and planting, 307,706; dress-making, 344,794; laundering, 335,282; trading, 327,614; textile manufacturing, 277,972. There are 22,556 telegraph and telephone operators.

The writer does not note the 1,293,600 public school teachers. Other professions, in general, do not seem to have enlisted large numbers of women. Medicine leads with 7,387; the ministry is next, numbering 3,373. Journalism has 2,193; architecture, 1,041; law, 1,010, and dentistry, 786.

These figures are thought-provoking and full of meaning. They are significant and reassuring, for though so many women are earning wages in the various pursuits and proving their ability as head and hand laborers, there is still a satisfactory proportion left for the lines of essential though unrecognized labor long since conceded to be the peculiar province of womankind. Only 18.8 per cent of the women above 10 years of age are at work as compared with 80 per cent of men.

The progress that women have so far made points the truth of the prediction made by our late prophetic leader, Frances Willard, who was an enthusiastic believer in women's latent ability and power to take an active part in the work of the world. It is fast being realized, as she declared, that there should be no handicap on women's opportunity to make the most of her inherent strength and power. "Women will make homelike every place they enter," she said, "and they will enter any place on the round earth."

Philadelphia, Pa.

The Prohibition Against Bar-Maids in India Rescinded.

(From Advance Sheets of the "National Advocate.")

IN a former issue of the "Advocate", we called attention to the orders issued by the Lieutenant-Governors of Bengal and Burma prohibiting the employment of females as barmaids in hotels and saloons. Today, we are sorry to report, that the Viceroy (Lord Curzon) has rescinded these orders. The only reason given by the Viceroy for this action was that there were legal difficulties in maintaining it. But it is no secret that the action of Lord Curzon was in response to memorials from the proprietors of liquor bars in Calcutta and Rangoon.

The removal of the barmaids it appears was to them a great loss in trade; the following clause in their petition shows this and explains the action of the Viceroy. That petition says:

"In compelling your memorialists and other hotel keepers in Calcutta to dismiss their female employes, you have caused, and are causing, a heavy financial loss to your memorialists and other license holders on the capital they have laid out both in acquiring and improving their said premises, and in engaging the services of their former female employes. The exclusion of females from such employment has also lessened the legitimate profits of your memorialists and other license holders in Calcutta from the lawful sale of refreshments and wines and spirituous liquors." And further on they say: "The licensed houses of your memorialists are houses of entertainment, where many European men, who rarely have an opportunity of conversing, come to the said houses to refresh themselves, and to enjoy the society and conversation of the said females."

Some of the places where barmaids are employed though nominally hotels, are in reality mere drinking saloons. While during the day numbers of idle men may be seen lounging about there, it is at night that the business is at its height and its worst. Then clerks, shopmen, commercial travelers and sporting men, and some of them quite young men, are to be seen chaffing with the barmaids who serve them with their drink.

It is the habit of some Calcutta wine merchants to bribe the Hebes serving in these co-called hotels to "push" the various brands over which they preside. Thus should an enterprising "salesman" desire to gain popularity for a certain whisky, he will make arrangements with the young woman employed in the saloon which he supplies, to ask the infatuated youths, who come every evening, to pay their court to this particular beverage. These young fools, who are only too ready to make themselves agreeable, willingly fall into the trap.

At the end of the month the barmaid reports to the manager that the chief demand has been for this particular whisky. He accordingly orders a fresh supply—greatly to the satisfaction of the wine merchant, who, making the promised gift to the barmaid, spurs her on to continue making fools of the clerks and others who bask in her smiles day by day.

For the present the liquor dealers have won and that too by the action of the royal representative of Christian England.

The Value of Charcoal.

Few People Know How Useful it is in Preserving Health and Beauty.

Nearly everybody knows that charcoal is the safest and most efficient disinfectant and purifier in nature, but few realize its value when taken into the human system for the same cleansing purpose.

Charcoal is a remedy that the more you take of it the better; it is not a drug at all, but simply absorbs the gases and impurities always present in the stomach and intestines and carries them out of the system.

Charcoal sweetens the breath after smoking, drinking, or after eating onions and other odorous vegetables.

Charcoal effectually clears and improves the complexion, it whitens the teeth and further acts as a natural and eminently safe cathartic.

It absorbs the injurious gases which collect in the stomach and bowels; it disinfects the mouth and throat from the poison of catarrh.

All druggists sell charcoal in one form or another, but probably the best charcoal and the most for the money is in Stuart's Absorbent Lozenges; they are composed of the finest powdered Willow charcoal, and other harmless antiseptics in tablet form, or rather in the form of large, pleasant tasting lonzenges, the charcoal being mixed with honey.

The daily use of these lozenges will soon tell in a much improved condition of the general health, better complexion, sweeter breath and purer blood, and the beauty of it is, that no possible harm can result from their continued use, but, on the contrary, great benefit.

A Buffalo physician in speaking of the benefits of charcoal, says: "I advise Stuart's Absorbent Lozenges to all patients suffering from gas in stomach and bowels, and to clear the complexion and purify the breath, mouth and throat; I also believe the liver is greatly benefited by the daily use of them; they cost but twenty-five cents a box at drug stores, and although in some sense a patent preparation, yet I believe I get more and better charcoal in Stuart's Absorbent Lozenges than in any of the ordinary charcoal tablets."

BIG WAGES TO MEN and WOMEN

Mr. Tassell made $1,500 the first five months Mr. Wise, of S.D., $12. 1st day. Mr. Clay, of Vt., $9 first day. Mr. Doerge, of Me., $10 one afternoon. Mr. Elliott, of Pa., $17 first two days. Mrs. Howard, of Ia., $59.50 in one week. Hundreds of others making big money selling and appointing agents for Quaker Vapor Bath Cabinets. Prices reduced. Let us start you. We furnish everything. Anyone willing to work can make $20 to $40 a week easy. Greatest money-maker known. Just what everybody needs. Wonderful Seller. We're old firm. Capital $100,000.00. Write for New Plan, Terms, Etc., FREE. Address. WORLD M'F'G CO., 619 World Bldg., Cincinnati, O

PAPER JARDINIERES, a New

Flower Pot Cover Adjustable to any size Flower Pots, (large or small). A pretty device to hide the unsightly appearance of the common flower pot. A protection from frost or heat. One dozen assorted colors and designs in neat folding box, convenient for mailing. Sent to any address.

Postpaid 30c per doz

Send coin or money order. No stamps.
STRONGHURST M'F'G. CO. Dept. G.
Stronghurst, Ill., U. S. A. Agents wanted

LEARN PROOFREADING.

If you possess a fair education, why not utilize it at a genteel and uncrowded profession paying $15 to $35 weekly? Situations always obtainable. We are the original instructors by mail.
HOME CORRESPONDENCE SCHOOL, Philadelphia

All Y Workers
READ THE
Y MANUAL
BY
Mrs. Frances J. Barnes.

Price, 15 Cents

Woman's Temp. Pub. Ass'n,
CHICAGO.

25 CTS. PISO'S CURE FOR 25 CTS.
CURES WHERE ALL ELSE FAILS.
Best Cough Syrup. Tastes Good. Use in time. Sold by druggists.
CONSUMPTION

Twentieth Century Temperance Crusade.

By James B. Dunn,
Secretary Press Committee.

THE pledge signing crusade is still spreading. Every mail brings new applications for pledges and fresh volunteers for the work, the applications for pledges numbering in the thousands. Yesterday's mail brought from one town application for 3,000 pledges. One in West Virginia writes that the 1,200 pledges sent there have all been signed and 1,200 more are asked for. Massachusetts reports 25,000 signatures secured and the friends there aim to secure for their quota during the year 250,000. We sent the other day to Boston 15,000 blank pledges and 50,000 to the Catholic Total Abstinence Union in answer to requests for those numbers. All temperance organizations as well as religious bodies co-operate in this work. Among the most earnest workers are those in the Salvation Army, and the W. C. T. U. The Symposium on, "How to Solve the Problem of the Drink Evil," running through the "New York American" and other papers, has accomplished great good. Over thirty articles by leading friends in the United States and Great Britain, have been published. We will shortly publish the whole in book form with portraits of the writers and a sketch of the steps leading up to the crusade.

It should be borne in mind that these articles are also published in some fifty or sixty leading daily papers throughout the country. There is lying on my desk now, copies of the latest one published, from some fifty leading daily papers covering great cities from Maine to California.

Already we have sent out over 2,500,000 pledges and 350,000 four-page leaflets. We are now sending out 240,000 one-page no-license leaflets.

No. 3 East 14th St., New York City.

One Week.

Postum Coffee Remade the Dominie in a Week.

Where a person has no troubles excepting those caused by coffee Postum Food Coffee if faithfully used will usually act with remarkable quickness. Here is an example even where the coffee habit has been one of long standing.

"I had been a coffee drinker for 20 years and until recently regarded it as one of the 'stays of life,'" writes a Tennessee clergyman.

"About a year ago an attack of malaria impaired my digestion and I began to use more coffee than usual thinking it would help my system throw off the malady. During that year I suffered indescribable agonies of nervous indigestion. Finally I noticed that every time I drank coffee for dinner or supper I was much worse. I told my wife I thought it was coffee and that I would quit it and use hot water. Then I thought we would try the Postum we had heard so much about.

"From the very day I left off coffee and introduced Postum I began to improve and at the end of one single week I did not have even the slightest symptom of nervousness and dyspepsia left. It is many weeks now since then and I have not only gained in flesh but am entirely free from indigestion and am strong and happy. My wife had been nervous and her stomach in bad condition and when she saw the change wrought in me, followed my example and after using Postum a short time extremely beneficial results followed.

"I am a Methodist minister in charge of a church at Graysville, Tenn." Name furnished by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

February Magazines.

THE most practically valuable article in PEARSON'S is "In Case of an Accident," by an ambulance expert, and profusely illustrated with photographs. It tells just what to do in all manner of emergencies, and how to treat almost every kind of accident or sudden injury. This article should be preserved for future reference. "Farming by Steam," by Day Allen Willey, shows how modern machinery is able to do nearly all the work hitherto done by human and animal labor on the great up-to-date farms of the Pacific coast. The department, "Mainly About Women," is of unusual interest, including a paper by Mrs. Dimies T. S. Denison, president of the General Federation of Women's Clubs and president of Sorosis; "A Notable Invention by a Woman," being a scientific bread machine, the device of Mrs. Lydia Coale Sharpless, which bids fair to revolutionize both domestic and commercial bread making; and an elaborate paper by Ellis Meredith, entitled, "What Colorado Women Have Done to Save the Remains of the Cliff Dwellers."

"The Surgery of Light" is the striking title of an article in MCCLURE'S that will attract wide attention, dealing as it does with the remarkable discovery of healing rays by D. Niels Finsen, of Copenhagen. An introduction by Jacob A. Riis, his fellow countryman, tells about Finsen as a man. This is followed by a short story of Finsen's wonderful achievement, by Cleveland Moffett; the Finsen System in England, by Alfred Harmsworth; the Finsen System in America, and its use in combination with the X-ray, by Dr. George G. Hopkins; "Children of the Coal Shadow," by Francis H. Nichols, enlightens the reader as to child labor in the coal regions, being the result of a thorough investigation of the conditions given. The author has presented only facts, believing that these facts will speak more eloquently than can any embellishments of literary style. The first paper of "A Century of Painting in America" begins with "The Fathers of the Art in America," illustrated with reproductions of the work of Symbert, West, Copley, Peale, Trumbull and Stuart.

The methods and exercises of yellow journalism are discussed in the ATLANTIC, by George W. Alger, in a notable article entitled "Sensational Journalism and the Law," especial stress being laid on its efforts to influence legislation. "Academic Freedom in Theory and Practice" is a strong and important article by President Arthur T. Hadley. and will gain thoughtful attention. A chapter of unusual interest is the present number of "My Own Story," by J. T. Trowbridge, recounting his first experience as a writer. There are the usual number of critical and literary articles which make this magazine the distinctive possession of the student and book lover. Exquisite poems are interspersed throughout the number and illuminate the pages with flashes of lyric beauty. It would be difficult to suggest any improvement in the methods of the broad, philosophic, aesthetic standard of literary taste and culture as exemplified by THE ATLANTIC MONTHLY.

A novel and attractive feature of ST. NICHOLAS is an operetta in three acts by Catharine C. Lovell, entitled "Prince Charming's Fate," the scenes of which are laid in the Kingdom of Imagination. Part second of Howard Pyle's "The Story of King Arthur and His Knights," tells of the Sable Knight and how Arthur fought with him. Jack London's "In Yeddo Bay" will delight all American lads who love adventure. Nature and Science, Books and Reading and the St. Nicholas League are full of information and brightness. Special cash prizes and badges are offered each month for the best photographs of wild animals or birds, "to encourage the pursuing of game with a camera instead of a gun." The letter and riddle boxes are old yet ever new favorites. The League has already passed the forty thousand mark.

The wonderful color pictures in the CENTURY are from studies of the aurora borealis made by Frank Milbert Stokes, while in the Arctics in the fall of 1892. For the first time in the history of a popular magazine are reproduced in tint the startling effects of the aurora. "The Overshadowing Senate," by Henry Loomis Nelson, is a somewhat uncomplimentary presentation of the workings of the most powerful body in the government, showing its preference for the material to the moral advantages of the republic. Lillie Hamilton French's winter night dreams over the ashes in her "Old Maid's Corner," are sweet, wholesome and tenderly sympathetic. Story, poem, article and illustration are fully up to the high standard of this magazine.

"More Physical Vigor for All," is the Home Problem topic of THE CHAUTAUQUAN, suggestively presented by Caroline L. Hunt, formerly the instructor of domestic economy in the Lewis Institute of Chicago. A paper of literary value is "Reporting and Correspondence," a practical study in English, by Benjamin A. Heydrick, formerly on the staff of the "New York Mail and Express." The series of "True Stories of Heroic Living," is bringing out many fresh stories of human interest. The prize story of the month is called "An Unsuspected Hero." Editorial comment, as usual, deals with subjects of vital interest, handling them with dispassionate and wise judgment.

In THE REVIEW OF REVIEWS George Perry Morris writes an appreciative character sketch of Alice Freeman Palmer, the former president of Wellesley College and for many years an active leader in philanthropic and intellectual movements. Another discriminating tribute is written by Edward M. Shepard, the subject being Hon. Abram S. Hewitt "New York's greatest citizen." There is an interesting paper giving the latest developments in wireless telegraphy. "Some Taxation Problems and Reforms" is the subject of a comprehensive article by Secretary Commons of the Natio l Civic Federation. A valuable survey of important happenings at home and abroad is given by the editor.

Feature articles in THE WOMAN'S HOME COMPANION which will interest every patriotic American are "Lincoln's Neglected Birthplace" and "The Birthplace of the American Flag." Mrs. Herrick's cooking article, Martha Worthing's Answers, Miss Sweet's American Girl and Miss King's Home Health Exercises are some of the titles that suggest the value of the contents. The cover design of the Companion is a skating scene by Charles Grunwald.

AINSLEE'S is preeminently a magazine of fiction. A long table of contents offers stories galore to suit every taste. "A Romance of the Thirties," by Caroline Duer, is a short drama of clever sentiment. Poems of superior merit are by well known writers of the day.

Knows No Distinction.

Rich and Poor Alike Suffer From Catarrh in This Climate.

All observant physicians have noticed the enormous increase in catarrhal diseases in recent years, and the most liberal and enlightened have cheerfully given their approval to the new internal remedy, Stuart's Catarrh Tablets, as the most successful and by far the safest remedy for catarrh yet produced.

One well-known catarrh specialist, as soon as he had made a thorough test of this preparation, discarded inhalers, washes and sprays and now depends entirely upon Stuart's Catarrh Tablets in treating catarrh, whether in the head, throat or stomach.

Dr. Risdell says, "In patients who had lost the sense of smell entirely and even where the hearing has begun to be affected from catarrh, I have had fine results after only a few weeks' use of Stuart's Catarrh Tablets. I can only explain their action on the theory that the cleansing and antiseptic properties of the tablets destroy the catarrhal germs wherever found because I have found the tablets equally valuable in catarrh of the throat and stomach as in nasal catarrh."

Dr. Estabrook says, "Stuart's Catarrh Tablets are especially useful in nasal catarrh and catarrh of the throat, clearing the membranes of mucus and speedily overcoming the hawking, coughing and expectorating."

Any sufferer from catarrh will find Stuart's Catarrh Tablets will give immediate relief and being in tablet form and pleasant to the taste, are convenient and always ready for use as they can be carried in the pocket and used at any time as they contain no poisonous drugs, but only the cleansing, antiseptic properties of Eucalyptus bark, blood root and Hydrastin.

All druggists sell the tablets at 50 cents for complete treatment.

W. C. T. U. BADGES.

SILVER PIN.

A bow pin of white enamel on sterling silver. Very dainty, with a strong, firm clasp.

PRICE, 60 CENTS.
PER DOZ., $6.50.

A STICK PIN.

With small dainty bow of white enamel on sterling silver.

PRICE 40 CENTS.

Honorary Members' Pin.

Similar to stick pin, with letters H. M. making an excellent scarf pin for the gentlemen.

PRICE, 40 CENTS.

WHITE RIBBON

Best quality, in bolts of 10 yds., 35 cts. each.

Woman's Temperance Publishing Ass'n,
CHICAGO, ILLINOIS.

BURPEE'S SEEDS ARE THE BEST THAT CAN BE GROWN

If you want the choicest vegetables or most beautiful flowers you should read BURPEE'S FARM ANNUAL FOR 1903,—so well known as the "Leading American Seed Catalogue." It is mailed FREE to all. Better send your address TO-DAY. W. ATLEE BURPEE & CO., PHILADELPHIA.

FREE Comfort Cough Tablets cure a cough in one day. Sell 12 Boxes at 10 cents a box; send us the money and we will mail you these TWO PRESENTS, SOLID GOLD LAID Ring with Turquoise centre, surrounded by brilliants and Lady's Neck Chain 4 ft. long. No money wanted till tablets are sold. We take back all not sold. Address, Comfort Medicine Co., Providence, R. I.

Program for Union Signal Day.

BY MRS. MINNIE B. HORNING.

1. Singing, "Bringing in the Sheaves."
2. Scripture Reading, Romans x: first eighteen verses.
3. Prayer.
4. Solo, "There's a Wideness in God's Mercy."
5. Twenty years with THE UNION SIGNAL, 1883-1903. Retrospective. By an old subscriber.
6. A sketch of the Editor-in-Chief, Mrs. L. M. N. Stevens. This is given in a booklet just issued by Mrs. Mary D. Tomlinson, National superintendent of the department of Social Meetings and Red Letter Days. It can be secured of the W. T. P. A., 184 La Salle St., Chicago, for 10 cents.
7. The Business Manager's Diary.
8. Solo or instrumental selection.
9. An Interview with "Mother Experience." Reminiscent.
10. The story of a bit of "copy."
11. Our Duty to Our Official Organ. By each member present, illustrated by subscription lists.
12. Singing "Revive us Again."

The proper setting for a program of this nature is the place where you can get together the largest company, the most popular home that is open to you, or the parlors of a friendly church. This program is adapted to a parlor or social meeting either in the afternoon or in the evening, and will offer, if carried out as suggested, entertainment to those outside our ranks as well as to our own members. It will surely fail of its purpose if the invitations sent out are not general and urgent and are not largely accepted. White ribboners are not all wise on the points that will be brought out at this meeting, and in order to increase our working force and to make intelligent members, the reading of the official organ must be insisted on and its claims pushed to the utmost limit.

In the Scripture reading emphasize the fact that the good periodical in the home is one kind of preacher. The pith of the chapter for our purpose is contained in verses fourteen and fifteen. Make the eighteenth the closing verse and a prophecy for the future of THE UNION SIGNAL. "But I say, have they not heard? Yes, verily, their sound went into all the earth, and their words unto the ends of the world." Such is the condition that ought to be true of the official organ of the World's and National Woman's Christian Temperance Union.

Numbers seven and nine of the program are of a purely imaginative nature, and no assistance is needed for their composition. Careful readers of THE UNION SIGNAL have entered into the experiences of "Mother Experience" and can write an interview that will relieve some of the heaviness of a program and be amusing and interesting.

The Business Manager's diary can be omitted or can also be originated by an imaginative writer. The Business Manager has her bright days when subscriptions come in, orders are large, and words of cheer are plenty. She has also her dark days, when criticisms of the advertising columns, complaints about non-receipt of the paper, discontinue notices are the order of the day. So her diary would be a picture in sunshine and shadow.

This also is left to the imaginative pen of the local writers.

"Our duty to our Organ," should be a winning appeal for members, by a winning member, this to be followed by a canvas of the company for new subscribers. Use the subscription blanks furnished by THE UNION SIGNAL and offer to all persons present the privilege of adding their names to the list of 50,000 new members to be sent in during 1903.

Again let it be urged that you work hard in advance to get the people, and be energetic at the time to get the subscriptions.

Twenty Years with The Union Signal. 1883-1903.

TWO decades have passed since the sturdy little eight-year-old daughter of the National W. C. T. U., called "Our Union," came from the east to make her home with her vigorous three-year-old sister of the west, "The Signal."

They then united their names and their fortunes, and for these twenty years have jogged along together through rain and shine, through summer and winter, through well and ill, and through prosperity and adversity.

Twenty years have wrought many changes in the fortunes of THE UNION SIGNAL, and now a retrospect must bring out the brightness and the darkness. The one who stood for so many years as its editor-in-chief, has passed into the beyond, and her bright touch to its pages, her great mind on its force, will be forever missed. Mary Allen West too was called away after long service in thoughtful care for the interests of our organ.

The editor of "Our Union" before the consolidation was Mrs. Jennie Fowler Willing; she is now working in New York city along reform lines. Mrs. Mary Bannister Willard was editor of "The Signal" twenty years ago, and edited the consolidated paper for several years. She is now at the head of a "Home School for Girls" in Berlin, Germany. Among other editors whose pens have enriched these pages are Mrs. Elizabeth Wheeler Andrew afterwards associated with Dr. Kate Bushnell in the third round-the-world missionary enterprise of the W. C. T. U.; Miss Margaret Sudduth, now living at Springfield, Ill.; Miss Jane Stewart, of Philadelphia, and Mrs. Ada Melville-Shaw, of Chicago, who are engaged in successful literary work; Mrs. Clara C. Chapin, of Boston, who still finds time amid the responsibilities of a charming home to do regular work for THE UNION SIGNAL and serve her state as Press superintendent; Mrs. Harriet B. Kells, of Mississippi, and Mrs. Katherine Lente Stevenson, of Massachusetts, who are presidents of the W. C. T. U. in their own states; and Mrs. S. M. D. Fry, National corresponding secretary.

Newer faces and younger hands are now directing the progress of the paper, with brains no less clear and minds equally well-trained. Mrs. Cornelia T. Jewett, the present managing editor, is no novice in the newspaper world. For many years journalism has been her work although she is still a young woman. THE UNION SIGNAL has had her forceful help for six years, and now it is her skillful hand that wields its fortune. Having had wide experience in the varied lines of W. C. T. U. work as carried on by the local, country, district and state union, she has always been a valuable member of the editorial force of the paper. Now that the heavy responsibilities of managing editor have been put in her hands she brings to the position the mind and hand trained in both these requisites, a personal knowledge of the organization from her own experience and the ability of a thoroughly trained journalist.

Miss Alice M. Krimbill, who is an associate editor of THE UNION SIGNAL and office editor of "The Young Crusader," has been on the staff for nearly three years. She gives to both papers invaluable service and the managing editor expresses the opinion of every member of the office "family" concerning Miss Krimbill, in these words: "Faithful to duty under any and all circumstances."

Miss Julia H. Thayer, THE UNION SIGNAL's "reader" and literary critic, is at the head of the department of Literature of the Chicago Auditorium Conservatory, and she has an enviable reputation in this particular field. A teacher of journalism for many years she is eminently qualified for the important position she holds, and she gives to our National organ not only skilled but loving service for she esteems it a privilege to thus serve the "cause."

Our twenty-year-old daughter has had many new dresses in the years that have passed, and many a different "makeup," but each one we have considered becoming and the last one is always the best of all.

It is interesting to look over the old files and note the changes that succeeding years have made in form and size. The "Watch Tower" was a department enjoyed in the old days and the words of "On Duty" were eagerly looked for, but now their places are taken by other departments and newer methods. The most progressive change is in the form and substance of "Field News." Now we read the second and third pages knowing that we will find an up-to-date chronicle of the "doings" of our workers in the various states.

Through the pages of THE UNION SIGNAL a large constituency receives the marching orders of the army given by the officers of the organization, the organizers relate their victories and achievements, and the National superintendents outline their plans for the state and local workers. It is a necessary weapon for the well-equipped white-ribboner.

The illustrated magazine number of twenty-four pages we now feel that we could not get along without. We need not do without it, and many new features will be awaiting us in improvement and advancement, if we secure those 50,000 new subscribers the publishers ask for this year. We can get them if we are as "good natured as sunshine, as persistent as fate" in securing subscriptions, for in the words of Miss Willard's Yorkshire proverb, "It's dogged as does it."

The Story of a Bit of "Copy."

I CAME half way across the continent to visit THE UNION SIGNAL. I was as good looking a piece of "copy" when I reached the editor's desk as you would wish to see—typewritten, rightly spelled, correctly paragraphed, my i's dotted and my t's crossed. I thought, in my untutored mind, that there was no chance for improvement in my appearance. My opinion was soon changed on that subject. Some of my words were marked out with a blue pencil, then whole paragraphs. I was cut apart here and pasted together there. My name, even, was changed, and when that editor finished with me I was about as discouraged a looking manuscript as was ever seen. But this is not all. She (the editor) sent me by a boy to another building, and there I received some more adornment in the way of inky finger-marks and torn-off corners, to say nothing of the printer's hieroglyphics. Here they set me up in type and I was no longer "copy," but metal. The type was set by a man playing on a big machine, but what all this was for I did not know. Then what they called a "galley proof" was taken of me; after having been read and corrected by a proof-reader, to my surprise I went back to that same editor, both my poor, deformed original self and my printed double. Again that blue pencil did its fatal work, but I could see improvement this time, as the printer had misspelled some of my words, had left out some of my punctuation, and all these things were corrected by the woman with the pencil. Back I went to the man who took the impression, and he corrected the mistakes the blue pencil pointed out, and returned me again to that editor. I couldn't help wondering how long that game of tennis was going to last! Finally I was marked "O. K." and then my metal was sent in a big box to the foreman of the printing office, all ready to be locked up in the form for pages. Then they found I did not fit, so back I went to the editor to have some more of me cut out. This accomplished, the forms were locked, sent to the foundry for electrotyping, and then they said the paper had "gone to press."

The next I knew I was being admired by thousands of readers, and while I did not look just as I did when I left the home of my birth, still, with my dainty head lines, the small vignette picture of my author, my neatly leaded and symmetrical columns, I was good to look upon, and very proud of my appearance, gained as it was by many hardships, through many hands and by much labor. Do you think of that when you read the final result of a "bit of copy"?

Colored Goods

I prefer PEARLINE to any other powder I have used. I do not think it will injure colored clothes, which is more than I can say for most other washing powders.

Mrs. Rev. M. E. M.

One of the Millions. 688

THE DOOM OF KING ALCOHOL

By Mrs. Clara Drake.

A DELIGHTFUL DRAMA FOR AN EVENING'S ENTERTAINMENT

Young People's Societies

Will find this especially adapted to their work.

Price, 10 cents.

Woman's Temperance Publishing Ass'n,

CHICAGO.

Ye Hatchet Partie

A Popular Temperance Entertainment for Washington's Birthday

Price, 5 Cents Each

Woman's Temperance Publishing Association

Chicago, Illinois

About Women

The Chicago Business Woman's Club is prospering. A recent report shows nearly $6,000 in the treasury net gain for six months.

A colored girl whose father is a politician, has been appointed night watch at the city hall in St. Joseph, Mo. She carries a revolver and knows how to use it.

The will of Rebecca C. Ames, filed at Boston, contains a bequest of $50,000 to Harvard, the income to be devoted to poor students, and gives largely to charities.

Mrs. Eliza C. Hendricks, widow of ex-Vice President Thomas A. Hendricks, has presented to Hanover College, Ind., a gift of $25,000 for the erection of a library in memory of her husband.

Mrs. Mary W. Woodburn, who has been for fourteen years matron at the county jail in Minneapolis, has been reappointed. She received also a handsome gold star, as an emblem of her authority as police matron.

Mrs. Vinnie Ream Hoxie has presented Cornell University with a life-size bust, her own work, of Ezra Cornell, founder of Cornell University. The gift is made on the condition that the figure be transferred to bronze.

Miss Mabel Chenoweth and Miss Mary Brice, two young women from Missouri, now residing at Fort Collins, Col., aged 24 and 21 years respectively, are working a copper mine in Laramie county in the centennial state, and doing all the labor themselves.

Mrs. Lucy McDowell Milburn, wife of Rev. Joseph A. Milburn, pastor of Plymouth Congregational church, has won fame by her book "Lost Letter from Lesbos." She is a fine Greek scholar, and this book is of letters supposed to have been written by Sappho. They are thoroughly Greek in every part and particular.

The Awdiffred prize of $30,000 has been awarded to Mme. Meyrier, wife of the French consul at Diarbekir, Turkey, for her heroism during the Armenian massacre in 1895. In the consulate building more than seven hundred Armenian refugees were fed and sheltered by Mme. Meyrier, and M. Meyrier and his staff again and again repulsed the Turkish assailants.

Miss Julia Bracken was one of the artists intrusted with the decorative work for the Chicago World's Fair, and a few days ago was appointed by Carl Bitter, director of sculpture of the Louisiana Purchase exposition in St. Louis, one of the five American sculptors commissioned to execute a group of portrait statues to be placed in front of the Educational building at St. Louis.

More than 6,000 club women of Kansas have united in an effort to have manual training introduced into the public schools of the state. The movement is begun under the auspices of the social science department of the state federation. If the plans of the committee are carried through manual training will be a feature of the school life of children from the kindergarten to the college.

Susan B. Anthony will place all her books, pamphlets and other documents relating to the "woman question" in a special alcove which has been set apart for the purpose in the congressional library. The collection will be catalogued separately and an appropriate book plate will be provided. Many of the books are rare copies, some out of print, and others with the author's names on the title page.

Miss Taka Nawa, daughter of a well-known Japanese editor and entomologist, is herself an entomologist of no small attainments. She paints with skill and has made many colored plates of native insects, especially butterflies and moths. She shares her father's interest in photography and has assisted him in his greatest work of photographing the life histories of most of the Japanese insects injurious to agriculture.

Perhaps the most important of inventions by women is the Coston signal lights. They were the invention of Mrs. Martha J. Coston. The Coston lights consist of a combination of three colored lights—white, red and green—indicating the numerals, and by their use a great number of messages may be conveyed. The invention was used with great success during the Civil war, and has since been adopted by other powers. It is of great use at sea as a means of signal exchanges, and is one of the fixtures of every well regulated life saving station.

In 1790 the United States Patent Office was established. In the same year, according to tradition, a woman took out the first patent ever granted to one of the fair sex. Since then, and up to 1892, just exactly 3,458 patents were taken out by women, and since 1892 more than 500 additional patents have been granted to women of inventive inclinations. The first woman of whose patent there is any authenticated record was Miss Mary Kies, who, in 1809, perfected a device for weaving straw with silk and thread, which was quite successful.

Mrs. L. H. Grenewald of York, Pa., is the only woman weather forecaster in the United States and has just completed her sixteenth year as the official observer at that meteorological station. She is thoroughly versed in the science of meteorology, and comparative climatology and has the best equipped observing station in the volunteer department. She is an enthusiast upon all the sciences pertaining to her work and is a close student. She keeps a full station record of weather and climate upon the same plan as that of the regular weather station, and is an authority for all past extremes of meteorological data.

"Faith and a world of energy," plus a bit of vacant ground and twenty-two thousand young pineapple plants, have combined to make a snug living for Mrs. Ella Williamson, of Arcadia, Fla. Most of the necessary work, including the setting out of the plants, has been done by Mrs. Williamson's own hands. The business has increased so now, however, that a man is employed to gather the fruit from the forest of tall plants. This "pineapple patch" covers about a third of an acre and is entirely under sheds, as in Florida the plants need a great amount of shade to grow their largest, juiciest and tenderest. Mrs. Williamson has been practically unaided in her venture, which covers a vacant block in the heart of the town, and includes besides pineapples, a number of marketable vegetables, fruits, etc.

Sixty-five years of sock knitting and quilt piecing is the unique record of the lifework of Miss Lucy Read, of Danby, Vt., who has been blind since her tenth year. Previous to that she had lost both hearing and speech also. When about fourteen Miss Read was sent to Boston to be educated, where for a time she was the friend and companion of Laura Bridgeman. Since then her time has been given to the making of mittens, socks, quilts and fancy articles. Miss Read designs her own patterns for all her work, doing all the cutting for patchwork without assistance. Different colors she assorts by the sense of taste or smell, and rarely if ever makes a mistake, even in the threads used, and she also threads her own needles.

As sanitary inspectors women are rapidly gaining ground in London. They were utilized as inspectors of the slums of the overcrowded city of Glasgow many years ago, but it was not until 1893 that London followed the example. The vestry of Kensington appointed two in that year. They have been found such a success that there are now twenty-two women employed in that capacity under the borough councils, at salaries ranging from $400 to $750 a year. The work consists in the inspection of all public places where women work, including homes where they take in outside work, tenement house visiting, and last, but by no means least, the investigation of causes of infectious disease. These inspectors must be trained and undergo an examination before being eligible for a berth. Their training embraces the study of physics and chemistry in relation to air, water, soil and ventilation, also municipal hygiene and building construction.

"An Entire Medicine Chest"

All any woman requires if she suffers from headache, nervousness or sleeplessness, is Doctor Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It just suits her womanly needs.

Miss MAYME A. LIDDIE,
Treasurer Independent Order Good Templars.

Weak and sick women who are suffering from womanly diseases are advised to use Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It establishes regularity, dries unhealthy drains, heals inflammation and ulceration and cures female weakness. If "Favorite Prescription" does not act as promptly as desired, weak and sick women are invited to consult Dr. Pierce by letter, free. All correspondence is held as strictly private and sacredly confidential. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

The "Favorite Prescription" is a true temperance medicine, containing neither alcohol nor narcotics, and is a purely vegetable preparation. No woman can be beautiful, have ruddy cheeks and round form who suffers from disorders of the feminine organs. The "Prescription" gives vigor and vitality to the organs of womanhood and builds up the whole system.

The offer of medical advice made by Dr. Pierce is a genuine offer made by a physician whose experience and success in the treatment and cure of womanly diseases has placed him in the front rank of physicians who successfully treat the diseases peculiar to women.

World's Dispensary Medical Association, Buffalo, N. Y.:

Gentlemen—I owe my excellent health to Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, and gladly do I give you full credit of the same. Two years ago I had serious trouble at stated periods, and doctored for this many months without getting any better. I had hot flushes, headache, nervousness and sleeplessness, but a few bottles of your medicine cured me. Whenever I have felt worn-out or badly during the last year, a few doses of "Favorite Prescription" was all I needed to make me well. I have no other medicine in the house and do not need any. This "Favorite Prescription" is my "entire medicine chest," and it keeps me in perfect health. Accept my heartfelt thanks for this fine remedy.

Yours very truly, Mayme A. Liddie

502 D Street, S. E., Washington, D. C.

SEND to Dr. R. V. PIERCE, Buffalo, N. Y., for a FREE copy of the "People's Common Sense Medical Adviser." For paper-covered copy enclose 21 one-cent stamps to cover mailing only. Cloth-bound, 31 stamps.

Signal Notes

Nottingham, Ohio, won for local option by a majority of forty-seven, out of 241 votes cast.

The civic officers of Brookfield, Mo., have closed every gambling house in town and propose to keep them closed.

The election under the Beal law held in Edon, Ohio, resulted in a vote of 128 to 79 in favor of good government.

The people of Danville, Va., are going to vote on the question of stopping the issuance of liquor licenses within the corporate limits.

Sixteen indictments for illegal liquor selling have been brought against two well-known citizens of Rileyville, Va., by the grand jury of Page county.

As a result of a raid made on the "blind tigers" in New Orleans, forty-four quarts of whisky were poured into the street. Two men were arrested and fined.

An exchange says: "At a secret meeting in Louisville twenty Kentucky distillers decided to fight proposed anti-liquor legislation especially in northern states."

The hearing of the Jerome bill, to open the saloons of New York City on Sunday between the hours of one and eleven p. m., will probably be on February 24th. The state W. C. T. U. will be represented at the hearing.

On the 1st of March the Japanese government opens the largest exposition it has ever held and invites American manufacturers to send exhibits. It will be located at Osaka, a city of 300,000, which has often been called the "Chicago of Japan."

Representative Yates, of Philadelphia, has introduced a bill in the Pennsylvania legislature for the establishment and licensing of saloons in public parks of cities of the first class, subject to approval of applicants for such licenses by the Park Commissioners.

The Supreme Court of Iowa has decided that the law levying a tax of $300 a year on cigaret dealers was constitutional and valid, that the subterfuge of the "original package" rule is an attempt at fraud, and the cigaret business cannot be thus protected.

Just as the February issue of Woman's Temperance Work, the New York State W. C. T. U. paper, was going to press, fire destroyed the printing plant of its publishers. Fortunately the property of the paper was saved and the regular number appeared after slight delay.

Bishop Cosgrove, of the Catholic diocese of Davenport, Ia., ordered all Davenport priests to preach against wine rooms, gambling and all-night saloons, and as a result Davenport's vice is meeting with opposition. As a further result letters have been received threatening death to the Bishop, and declaring that within thirty days the homes of all the priests would be blown up.

The project of erecting a suitable memorial to Thomas Jefferson, author of the declaration of independence, has taken definite form by the organization of a memorial association headed by Admiral George Dewey. Representative citizens in every state in this Union have been chosen vice-presidents to assist in raising funds. A suitable memorial will be erected in the national capital. It will be built by popular subscription entirely and nothing will be asked from congress or the government.

Publishers' Notes.

Unicn Signal Day.

Desiring to co-operate to the fullest extent in the celebration of our coming Red Letter Day, March 1st, which in honor to our National president and editor-in-chief, has been named Union Signal Subscription Day, by the National W. C. T. U., and to offer every possible aid in the consummation of the purpose for which this day is set aside, namely, the increased circulation of our official organ, the publishers will during the FIRST WEEK IN MARCH, accept subscriptions IN CLUBS OF TEN at the $1 RATE. Since the closing of all special offers, January 31st, many letters have been received asking for an extension of time in which to complete the formation of clubs. As the offers positively closed on January 31st, the extension of time could not be granted, but this special subscription season of March 1st to 8th will give to every one having an incomplete club an opportunity to perfect it, and at the same time aid in the celebration of the National Red Letter Day. To the legion of "ten weeks subscribers" this will also furnish an opportunity to place your name upon our regular subscription list for the year at $1.00 instead of the regular rate of $1.50. This offer will not be in force before or after the date mentioned and only from March 1st to March 8th.

Red Letter Days.

There comes from the pen of Mrs. Mary D. Tomlinson, National superintendent of Social Meetings and Red Letter Days, the first of a series of little booklets, which shall contain material for programs for the various Red Letter days. The first of these is prepared for March 1st, UNION SIGNAL Day, and contains an outline program together with a poem by Anna A. Gordon, and a fine sketch of Mrs. Stevens. This booklet will also be found a delightful little souvenir to be used on UNION SIGNAL Day. Price Ten cents.

Anti-Cigaret Sunday Crusader.

The February YOUNG CRUSADER is a keen weapon against the cigaret. Its sixteen pages of original testimony presents the best scientific thought concerning the evils of cigaret smoking. Educators, ministers, physicians, business men and athletes speak to the American boy and girl in clear, unmistakable argument. Among the many contributors are Prof. Burt G. Wilder, of Cornell University; Dr. Nathan S. Davis, Chicago; Charles H. Blanchard, president of Wheaton College, and F. H. Yost, trainer, University of Michigan. This number of the CRUSADER is just what you need for the coming Anti-Cigaret Sunday. An extra large edition will be issued to meet the demands of L. T. L. workers. Our last Anti-Cigaret CRUSADER was exhausted while calls for more were still coming in. Send your orders early. Remember there are special Anti-Cigaret Programs and all material necessary for use on Anti-Cigaret Sunday. This is an Anti-Cigaret-Sunday CRUSADER. The price is $2 per hundred.

The Y. W. C. T. U. Manual.

The Department Manual of the Y. W. C. T. U., by Frances J. Barnes, has been brought up-to-date by the addition of a page of errata prepared by Mrs. Clara Parrish Wright. To those newly entering the Y this manual will give the information they are so eagerly seeking. The first pages contain a full history of the Y branch. The purpose and plan of the organization, the preliminary work necessary, and how to organize are clearly treated. Constitutions, programs, socials, department work suitable for the Y's and much more valuable instruction, is given in the little book. The price has been reduced from 25 cents to 15 cents, which is an especial offer. All Y's should possess this book.

Work Among Indians.

Much interest centers around the February Responsive Reading, because it is the first reading ever written upon the department, Work Among Indians. This is one of the newest lines of work adopted by the National W. C. T. U., the department having been adopted at the Fort Worth Convention in 1901.

The reading is written by Mrs. Dorothy J. Cleveland, National superintendent of the department and one well versed in this subject. Church societies will find this reading one of especial service in home missionary meetings. Price 50 cents per 100.

An Hour in Babyland.

"An Hour in Babyland," by Ada Wallace Unruh, is a plain talk with mothers, and as needful to fathers as well. The language of the book is chaste and tender, and the message is strong and true. Mothers cannot read and follow its teachings without being better mothers to the coming children, to the babies already here, and better advisers concerning the growing lads and lassies who are beginning to think about entering upon the new duties of married life. We would like to introduce this booklet into every W. C. T. U. home in our land. Nature studies, examples that have come to her notice, and confidences from mother hearts, all enrich the pages of Mrs. Unruh's book. The price is 25 cents.

WOMAN'S TEMPERANCE PUB. ASSN.,
184 La Salle St., Chicago.

PATTERNS.

The patterns here shown are cut by one of the most reliable pattern houses in the country, and are of the very latest and newest design. These patterns retail at from 25 to 35 cents each, but by special arrangement with the manufacturers, we are enabled to supply them to readers for only 10 cents each prepaid.

Full directions, quantity of material required and illustration of garment with each pattern.

Order patterns by their numbers. Give bust measure for ladies' upper garments. Give waist measure for skirts. Give both age and breast measure for misses and children.

8838—Five Gored Pedestrian Skirt with Slot Seams.
22 to 32 in. waist.

8850—Dress.
6 to 12 years.

8846—Apron.
2 to 14 years.

Cut out and send this coupon.

UNION SIGNAL, CHICAGO, ILL.:

Enclosed find 10 cents for which send Pattern Number.....,

Waist measure....., Bust..... If child's pattern give age..... to

Name.....

Street.....

City..... State.....

Latest Leaflets

Home Leaflets For Mothers' Meetings

No. 3 The New Century for Mothers. Mrs. Nettie B. Fernald.

No. 13 Why a Mothers' Meeting? Mrs. J. H. Myers.

Price, 3c. each; 50, 50c.; 100, 75c.

Mothers' Meetings, Purity Leaflet

No. 3 Safeguard the Home. Mrs. Emma W. Shores.

Price 2c. each; 100, 50c.

National Leaflets

No. 2 Suggestions for Treasurers. Mrs. Helen M. Barker.

No. 31 The Philosophy of Fashion — What Shall We Wear? Louise C. Purington, M. D.

No. 94 American Liberty—Will Alcohol Help the Soldier Maintain It? Mrs. Mary H. Hunt.

No. 95 A Double Jury on Woman Suffrage. Amos Wells.

No. 96 A Lesson in Finance. Mrs. Helen M. Barker.

Price, 3c. each; 50, 50c.; 100, 75c.

Department Leaflets

Y. W. C. T. U.

No. 56 The Ideal Y. Member. Miss Laura Smith.

L. T. L.

No. 182 A Study in L. T. L. Methods. Mrs. Helen G. Rice.

School Savings Banks.

No. 222 How School Savings Banks are Run. Mrs. S. L. Oberholtzer.

Soldiers and Sailors.

No. 192. What Makes a Good Soldier. Lord Roberts.

Parlor Meetings.

No. 242 How to Win. Mrs. Mary D. Tomlinson.

Narcotics.

No. 47 Why is the Cigaret more harmful than Tobacco used in other ways?

Price, 50, 15c.; 100, 25c.

Total Abstinence Leaflet

No. 18 Experience. The Schoolmaster.

Signal Lights.

No. 4 How Can I Win New Members? Mrs. M. B. Platt.

Price, 25c. per 100.

Miscellaneous Leaflets.

God's Nobleman,
White Cross Movement,
The White Shield Society; Its Purpose and Membership,
High Ideals for Schools,
Practical Benefits of the Curfew Law,
Consider the Lilies,
The Power of the White Ribbon,
A Mother's Letter to the Y Girls.

Price, 50c. Per 100.

Woman's Temperance Publishing Ass'n,

184 La Salle St., CHICAGO.

NOTE OUR SPECIAL OFFER FOR UNION SIGNAL DAY!

FOR GOD AND HOME AND EVERY LAND.

The UNION SIGNAL AND WORLD'S WHITE RIBBON

NATIONAL and WORLD'S WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION

Entered at Chicago Postoffice as Second-class Matter.

"Thou hast given a banner to them that fear thee: that it may be displayed because of the truth."

Vol. XXIX.—No. 8. Issued Weekly. | CHICAGO, FEBRUARY 19, 1903. | Price, $1.50 Per Year in Advance.

Notice.

THE UNION SIGNAL for $1 to clubs of ten during the first week in March, to commemorate UNION SIGNAL DAY, March 1, the birthday of our National President and Editor-in-Chief, Mrs. L. M. N. Stevens.

Contents of This Number.

CURRENT TEMPERANCE NEWS 2, 3
CONTRIBUTED:
A Mother's Meeting—Program. By Mrs. McVean-Adams .. 4
Pen Sketches of State Presidents 5
Frances E. Willard. By M. H. Edmunds—A Figh Against Odds. By Kate Anderson 6
THE SENIOR L. T. L.: 7
EDITORIAL:
The Prophet Without Honor—Prohibition in the Drug Traffic—Tracing a Responsibility 8
Toward the Sun-Rising 9
EXPERIENCE CORNER 9
OFFICIAL COMMUNICATIONS 10
W. C. T. U. NOTES 11
HOME TREATMENT FOR A COLD 12
HOW WE KEPT WASHINGTON'S BIRTHDAY, 1903 13
UNION SIGNAL DAY PROGRAM, NO. 2 14
SIGNAL NOTES—PUBLISHERS' NOTES 16

Red-Letter Day.

March 1, Union Signal Subscription Day.

BIRTHDAY OF MRS. L. M. N. STEVENS.

News of the Week.

Treaty for arbitration of the Alaskan boundary dispute is ratified by Senate.

Dr. Randall Davidson, of London, enthroned as Archbishop of Canterbury, February 12.

Fifth anniversary of blowing up of battleship Maine is observed at Havana by memorial exercises in honor of victims.

Kansas equal suffrage bill defeated by house vote of 62 to 51; popular election of United States senators urged by senate vote.

House passes Elkins anti-rebate bill, completing program of party leaders for trust legislation. It will be signed by the President.

Bill allowing Sunday baseball is defeated in Indiana senate by action of one member in keeping pledge to wife and refusing to vote.

Protocols raising Venezuelan blockade and referring question of preferential treatment for allies' claims to The Hague signed at Washington.

Prominent Utah citizens send protest to Senator Burrows against seating Senator-elect Smoot on the ground that he is an apostle of the Mormon church.

A bill to regulate the liquor traffic was introduced in the Indiana legislature, and, it is claimed, would reduce the number of saloons in the state one-half.

Three women inspectors boarded Atlantic liner Ivernia by rope ladder during storm in New York bay and looked after welfare of unprotected women passengers on landing.

Deadlock over the statehood bill in the Senate shows no signs of yielding, and Senator Quay intends, it is understood, to force an extra session unless his measure is voted on.

The anthracite coal commission closed its open hearings February 13, after being in continuous session at Philadelphia for three months. The commission will meet in Washington February 19 to begin consideration of its award.

Great religious convention held in Chicago; 375 delegates representing twenty denominations in twenty-seven states were present. "The Religious Education Association" organized with Dr. Frank Knight Sanders, dean of the Yale University Divinity School, as president. It is expected that the new association will co-operate with the International Sunday School Association and supplement its work.

To National Superintendents

The change in our make-up, which transfers "News From the Field" from the back to the second and third pages of THE UNION SIGNAL, leaves at the disposal of National superintendents, almost unlimited space for outlining their plans of work. This being the case, shall we not have a general revival of enthusiasm in all departments, stirring up the workers, state, district, county and local, to renewed vigor which shall tell in a greatly increased membership at our next National Convention?

Union Signal Subscription Day.

We print in this issue another program for a local union meeting in the interests of the official organ. The material provided this year is of sufficient variety to meet the needs of every union, and we hope to receive prompt reports concerning the observance of the birthday of our editor-in-chief. The special club offer ought to result in a substantial increase in the subscription list, with a corresponding increase in membership, which, as Mrs. Stevens has repeatedly assured us, is the most gratifying gift that we can offer her. Do not let the first week of March pass without recognition.

Addendum by Dr. Greene.

Owing to the omission of a paragraph from the original "copy" of Dr. Cordelia Greene's article, "Home Treatment For a Cold," in our February Magazine Number, the article is reprinted in this issue for the benefit of the mothers who will wish to preserve it for reference. The paragraph in question relates to the administering of ammonal in five-grain capsule doses, and this careful physician would guard against the possibility of an error. We again call attention to the value of this article in our work of demonstrating the principle of non-alcoholic medication.

The Cecil Rhodes Scholarships.

The representatives of twenty-four western universities met in Chicago last week to confer with Dr. George H. Parkin concerning the allotment of the Cecil Rhodes scholarships. The provisions agreed upon are as follows: Young men to be eligible must be at least twenty-four years old, unmarried, and not less than juniors in college. There will be two scholarships for every state, to continue three years, and to be worth $1,500 a year each to the holder, who will spend three-fourths of his time at Oxford university learning English. customs, and spend his summers studying in Europe. The holders of the scholarships must be legal residents of the state for which they are chosen.

The Army's Dishonorable Discharge.

The War Department is not in favor of allowing soldiers who have been often convicted of drunkenness to escape with merely a dishonorable discharge. Major-General MacArthur, in an order issued from the headquarters of the department of the lakes, says that this kind of policy encourages soldiers to sacrifice a good character in order to sever their connection with the service, and he affirms that this is gravely opposed to public policy. General MacArthur is right; the soldier should not be discharged, but he should be retained, punished and reformed. A better way to solve this problem is not to let him get liquor in the first place, much less put it before him.

Petition for the Hepburn Bill.

According to Washington despatches to the Chicago papers, agents of the big brewing combinations and of the several national associations of distillers and wholesale liquor dealers are pouring into the capital to secure, if possible, the defeat of the Hepburn bill, which, if it should become a law, "will deprive them of the benefits of the 'original package' decision of the United States supreme court." The purport of this bill has been fully explained by our Washington correspondent, and the names of Senators given who have the bill in charge. Wire AT ONCE to your representative in Congress, urging the passage of this bill.

The Spirit of Kindness.

The world is surely growing kindlier and better. This truth was recently emphasized when the city authorities of Chicago stopped a noisy trip-hammer in order that a sick girl might take the sleep necessary to save her forlorn, poverty-stricken life. The great city has a big heart for its poor, after all. The noisy hammer was stopped at a great loss to its owner, but it was stopped without a protest. There is legislation enough and spirit enough to make things go right. People do a deal of carping and growling, but they also strive, and they sometimes indulge in a little praise. The scolding, the working and the praising all together do their share in helping the good along.

W. C. T. U. Ethics.

"We believe that each man's habits of life should be an example safe and beneficent for every other man to follow," says the W. C. T. U. Declaration of Principles. It is this same altruistic spirit which inspires all effort for legal prohibition of intoxicants the world over. It is not that we would make men sober against their will, not that we would curtail personal liberty, but that we would protect our homes from the ravages of a destroyer, that we would secure to all mankind the most wholesome and helpful environment possible—moral, mental, physical. We would pledge every man to total abstinence, not only upon the ground of duty and service to self, but upon the ground of duty and service to others. Total abstinence leads naturally and inevitably to total prohibition of the liquor traffic by the state, and later to its total prohibition by the governments of the world.

Wine Is A Mocker.

It is a well known fact that when alcohol enters the body, one of the first organs to feel its influence is the organ of the mind, the brain. The perceptive faculty is beclouded, the reason dethroned, and the moderate drinker never knows the exact moment when the sceptre passes into the hand of the arch-deceiver. In fact, such is the illusive nature of strong drink that the drinker often imagines that a "proper and legitimate" use of the same stimulates and sharpens the intellect. We find among the friends and supporters of the liquor traffic very few total abstainers. The moderate drinker, on the other hand, is found characterizing liquor as a necessary evil and apologizing for the saloon as the poor man's club, which goes to prove that even a "temperate" use of intoxicants is apt to be productive of queer fancies and dangerous fallacies in the mind of even a good lawyer, an able editor or an eminent clergyman.

Hearing on the Interstate Commerce Bill.

Margaret Dye Ellis, Correspondent.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Feb. 16.—Friday, February 13, we were granted a hearing on the Hepburn bill, viz.: in the interest of interstate commerce, and transportation of liquors, by the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee; nine out of the thirteen comprising the committee were present.

The friends of the measure were marshalled under the able leadership of Rev. E. C. Dinwiddie, legislative superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League, while the other side was represented by Mr. Kendall of Connecticut, president of the National Brewers' Association, and Mr. R. Crain of Baltimore, attorney for the National Brewers' Association, and another lawyer representing the National Distillers' Association. Two speeches on either side were heard, as but forty minutes was granted each; on our side, Mr. Dinwiddie introduced the subject in a thoughtful, forceful manner, and Andrew Wilson, Esq., a bright young lawyer of this city, closed the argument; Mr. Kendall and Mr. Crain speaking in the interest of the liquor fraternity. The stock arguments of an "infringement of personal liberty," encroaching on "a man's personal rights, as to what he shall eat or drink," were as usual brought forward, but I don't know that I ever heard of temperance legislation preventing "one's storing wine in a cellar for their posterity." Too bad that the children and the grandchildren should not have grandfather's wine, as well as "grandfather's clock."

They claim hundreds of thousands of patrons in prohibition states. Judge Goddard, of Portland, Maine, was quoted as scoring temperance reformers for their "unwise and altogether unsuccessful striving after prohibition." And yet, this very week there was a far less number of votes in the Maine legislature for re-submission, than last year, and never was prohibition on so sound a basis in that grand old pioneer state as now.

They mentioned with fervor "the recent effort on the part of Vermont to throw off the yoke of servitude," and dwelt upon the fallacy "of a handful of physical weaklings who degenerate into unfortunate conditions, preventing the many from satisfying the natural craving for alcoholic stimulants."

The second speaker spoke mainly from a legal standpoint, but was brought up with a round turn several times by Senators Tillman of South Carolina and McLaurin of Mississippi bringing him back to the main question; for he would stray off to dwell on the "dangerous rocks ahead if this mischievous bill should be allowed to pass."

Not a little humor was called forth by Senator Tillman telling how liquors were traced and seized in depots, and storehouses and express offices, down in South Carolina. "Why," said the senator, "we've seized as many as fifty barrels of liquor at a time."

"What could you do with all that liquor?" was asked by a brother senator.

"Oh, we drank it," he facetiously rejoined, and everybody laughed.

Mr. Andrew Wilson, who closed the hearing, began his argument by saying, "Not only re-formation is needed, but formation." He quoted at considerable length from legal authorities, showing that "such legislation as was sought by the passage of this bill would be covered by the decisions of the Supreme Court, and greatly aid in the enforcement of state prohibitory law." Another hearing may be granted us next week.

Illinois Mid-Year Executive Meeting.

Mary E. Hopper, Correspondent.

CHICAGO, Feb. 16.—The state executive committee met in Springfield February 10, Miss Brehm, state president, in the chair. Many matters of interest were discussed, perhaps of equal, or greater importance, was one authorizing the presenting of a bill to the legislature to strike out the word male from the constitution, where it abridges in any way the political equality of women. The committee also pledged itself to work for the bill now before the legislature giving a restricted right of suffrage to tax paying women.

A telegram from the city council of Chicago inviting the next state convention to that city, was read, and an invitation presented by the W. C. T. U. of Cook county, also inviting the convention to the city. The invitations were accepted with thanks.

Arrangements were completed for the series of Institutes covering every county of the state.

A mass meeting in the evening was well attended at Representative Hall, addressed by Mrs. Ella Orr in the interest of Scientific Temperance Instruction, Mrs. Ella Stewart on "Why women should have the ballot on equal terms with men," and a short but telling address by Representative Oliver W. Stewart. In conclusion Miss Brehm gave one of her convincing addresses, and the meeting adjourned amid cheers and congratulations. Upon the speaker's desk were bouquets of flowers, presented by the state executive committee.

A motion was made and unanimously carried that Illinois furnish a speaker for the grand diamond contest to be held at National Convention, and that Miss Brehm write the oration.

The work is growing in Illinois, accessions to the membership are being received, new unions are constantly being organized, and a spirit of hopefulness is everywhere prevalent. Your correspondent organized a union at Bradley of fourteen members, on the return trip from the executive meeting. Churches are being opened, and requests for speakers are being received in unusual numbers. Pledge signing in the Sunday schools is noticeably on the increase. Our state motto, "All Illinois for God and Temperance," is nearing a full realization.

World's Convention News.

Agnes E. Slack, Correspondent.

RIPLEY, DERBYSHIRE, ENGLAND, Feb. 3, 1903.—The trip so ably planned by Mrs. Horning for the American delegates to Geneva will, I hope and believe, prove to be as attractive as it deserves, including as it does our World's convention, to meet in one of the loveliest, most historic spots in the world. As usual we look forward to our strongest delegation coming from the U. S. A.

You will be glad to know the most able committee of Swiss women at Geneva is making admirable plans for us in every way. In order to attract the attention of the nation to our convention the committee on its own responsibility is printing a pamphlet in French for circulation in Switzerland giving a history of the World's W. C. T. U.

I feel more and more that we are carrying out Miss Willard's wishes for she had the continent of Europe greatly in her mind and she wished us to make a pioneer move in that direction. This Convention will destroy the somewhat prevalent idea that the W. C. T. U. is an Anglo-Saxon organization as hitherto our Conventions have all been held on the American continent or in Great Britain and always among our English-speaking people. At Geneva the Convention business will be conducted in English, but at the two great public meetings to be held in La Salle de la Reformation the speaking will be interpreted into French.

This morning I had a bright letter from the daughter of the celebrated historian of the Reformation, Miss D'Aubigne. She writes from Italy saying how much interest she is taking in our plans and that she will do all she possibly can to forward them on her return to Geneva in April. The prominent Swiss people to whom we have written are all replying, asking for more information about our work, and all express interest in our white ribbon cause. Yesterday I heard from Madame Durant, giving news of the recent committee at Geneva and of the advance it is making in Convention plans.

We shall gather by the shores of Lake Leman at the best time of the year, before the Genese leave for the mountains and before the rush of tourists makes traveling difficult. The Swiss comrades tell us Geneva will be at her very best, and the climate will be delightful before the intense heat of summer begins.

No Use for the Dispensary Bill.

Mrs. Geo. W. Oliver, Correspondent.

WINNIE, VA., Feb. 16.—The state dispensary bill is now before our legislature and the Virginia W. C. T. U. is fighting it, knowing well its terrible power for evil.

At a recent meeting of East End W. C. T. U., Richmond, the following resolution was adopted:

"That all proposed legislative enactments, which compromises the no-license principle of our union as well as that of all organizations of practical temperance reform, must be vigorously antagonized. It is but natural that the enemies of our own cause should seek to stem the great tide of public opinion against the traffic by suggestions of compromise; but we urge all friends of society's highest interest not to be deceived by any subterfuge, or consent to any compromise, and that our shibboleth must continue to be 'No License.'"

The meeting was a very enthusiastic one. Reverends Spooner and Wiley and Mesdames G. M. Jobson, M. W. Newton and W. M. Bickers made very interesting talks.

Mrs. Newton, state organizer, has been doing a grand work in and around Richmond, an account of which will be furnished later. Our state president and her husband have also been at work in the capital city and accomplished much for the Master. They have also been afield and held Institutes at Warrenton and Bilona. They hope soon to begin an itinerary of the state in Institute work and we believe the work and workers will be greatly benefited by their efforts.

Miss Christine Tinling, of London, has given a month's successful work at various points and greatly pleased all who met her.

Liquor Men in a Panic.

NASHVILLE, TENN., Feb. 12.—Bills have been introduced in both houses of the general assembly prohibiting the use of screens, frosted windows or anything else that obstructs the view of saloon bars from the public. The charters of Dayton, Trenton, Union City, Pulaski, Morristown and Doublesprings were abolished yesterday, so that those towns may take advantage of the no-saloon law. The liquor and brewing interests in the state are in a panic.

The Prohibitory Law of Maine.

Anna A. Gordon, Correspondent.

THE large hall of the Maine House of Representatives, at Augusta, was the scene of the liveliest "hearing" of this session of the legislature, when on the afternoon of February 5th the question of resubmission was debated before the joint Committee on temperance. The hearing was called for at 2 p. m., but the morning business of the House was not over until that hour, and many who left the hall for a lunch, intending to return, could not gain admittance, so great was the crowd that immediately preempted even the standing room. An enthusiastic crowd it was, staying through the five hours of pros and cons and hugely enjoying the good-natured sparring between the advocates of license and of the prohibitory law.

The Democratic representative who advocated the repeal of the prohibitory law read for forty-five minutes. He told the committee that his resolution for resubmission had behind it, by way of emphasis, twenty years of constitutional prohibitory law, fifty years of statutory law, and eighty-three years of ever-varying form of option and license laws, across every one of which must be written in characters large and plain, FAILURE. Here are a few other samples of his argument:

"Prohibition makes the claim that it has closed the brewery and the saloon, and taken down the signs; the friends of resubmission claim that the breweries across our borders and the dealers of other states are supplying our demands, and that the sign has been removed to the back door.

"Prohibition points to our smaller towns and their freedom from the saloon as a result of law; we say the sentiment which has grown up there as a result of education is superior to law, and would hold these towns in the temperance column, regardless of what we enact here.

"Resubmission if need be, would take the signs from the back doors of thirty dives in a town of ten thousand inhabitants, close them up, and put those signs upon the front doors of five first-class saloons, with the perfect assurance that it had made a distinct gain for the cause of temperance, and in so doing it would simply be emphasizing the law of expediency, which the friends of prohibition have always believed in—a law which they invoke in Chapter 366 of the laws of 1885, remitting imprisonment and fines to the drunkard who would betray his druggist.

"Let us be clear in the discussion. There is no crime or immorality in the manufacture, sale or use of liquor any more than there is in the manufacture of coffee, arsenic or fifteen-inch guns; it is only when these agencies are allowed in the hands of men who divert them from their legitimate use they become dangerous to the public safety. It is here that good citizenship steps in, and it is here that good citizenship says: 'A traffic which the people will not annihilate must be regulated. Instead of making a criminal of your druggist or your innholder, take care of the man who has by his involuntary act become a nuisance to society.'

"It is the sole purpose of resubmission to make it possible to regulate locally a traffic which has run riot, and in our large cities and towns is breeding criminals and outcasts faster than all other agencies combined. This can be fully substantiated by the police records of your cities."

This gentleman, Representative Davis, of Waterville, assured us at the close of the hearing that he thoroughly believed in Scientific Temperance Instruction in the schools. I expressed surprise that he should desire to have the youth of the state taught the nature and injurious effects of alcoholic drinks and at the same time should do all in his power to substitute for a prohibitory liquor law one that would put the state into partnership with the traffic in these same harmful beverages.

"Yes," he replied, "I would rather trust my boy with five licensed saloons in the city of Waterville today than with fourteen places where it is clandestinely sold."

I could not advise this anxious parent to hasten out of Waterville to one of the many Whisky-villes in my native state of Massachusetts, where his boy could be safeguarded by licensed saloons, because, alas! he would find the illegal places of sale in such communities also.

Thomas N. Doutney, an out-of-state lecturer, was introduced by Mr. Davis as one who was thoroughly familiar with every phase of the liquor question. Mr. Doutney's speech, addressed to the audience rather than to the committee, abundantly proved that he knew very little about the Maine law, and he failed to impress either the audience or the committee. Two other gentlemen spoke briefly on their own motion in advocacy of resubmission, both claiming to be temperance men, one charging the prohibitory law with emptying churches, and the other lamenting it as the cause of "crowded insane asylums." As Maine's churches are reasonably well filled and her asylums for the insane not overcrowded, the committee failed to make any note of these remarkable statements, and the case of the petitioners closed on this high key.

(Continued on Page 15)

State Executive Meeting in New Jersey.

Emily Ruth Kirby, Correspondent.

WOODSTOWN, N. J., Feb. 16.—The state corresponding secretary, Mrs. Isabella Hammond-Demarest, who has been marshalling the state's forces against the repeal of the anti-canteen law, is a native of New Jersey. She joined the W. C. T. U. in 1890, was elected state recording secretary in 1892, and corresponding secretary in 1896 in place of Margaret Dye Ellis, resigned.

One of the state's young women, who buckled on the harness as she ran, is Miss Alice Borton, daughter of Friend Joel Borton, of Woodstown. She became a member of the local union in September last, at one of Miss Kearney's lectures, attended the state convention at Cape May as a delegate in October, was appointed superintendent of Medal Contest work in November, took up her work "after a plan" in December, and had a crowded Opera House at her first medal contest in January, the receipts being $78.20 for local work.

Mrs. I. H. Demarest

Mrs. Emma Bourne.

Miss Alice Borton.

At the state executive committee meeting held in Trenton, February 4, Mrs. Emma Bourne, state president, earnestly recommended that every union in the state observe "Foreigner's Day," at least once during the year. When metropolitan New York City is taken into consideration, one realizes the grave need of active work in this department.

The Civic Federation of New Jersey composed entirely of earnest, clear-brained men, invited the state W. C. T. U. through its president, to unite with their organization. The invitation was accepted, which gives us a representation of three at their annual meeting in January. One of their six standing committees to influence clean legislation, etc., is their temperance committee. Rev. Adolph Roeder, Orange, N. J., is president.

Mrs. Bourne organized a Willard union at Trenton with eleven members, after the executive.

Mrs. I. H. Demarest addressed the Business Girls' League, which is mothered by Trenton Union No. 1, on the evening preceding the executive meeting. The girls became enthusiastic in their appreciation, so direct was the address along the lines of their needs.

A children's rally was the crowning feature of the state meeting. About six hundred children flocked in from the public schools, under the leadership of Miss Elizabeth S. Bailey, to join in the rallying songs, recitations and chalk talk by Miss Alice M. Guernsey.

North Carolina Thurman W. C. T. U.

S. M. Stevenson, Correspondent.

SALISBURY, N. C., Feb. 16.—The anti-saloon and anti-distillery movement now going on in the state is creating more interest than ever before. The temperance people are rejoicing and full of hope that the present legislature, now in session, will grant the law asked for.

The authorities in Oxford refused to grant license, December last, for open saloons, or dispensaries in that town

The midwinter executive committee meeting of the Thurman W. C. T. U. was held in Salisbury December 31. Many plans for the work were made. March 23 is to be "Treasurer's Day," and is to be observed by all the unions. A special program is to be carried out, and a free-will offering asked for, to help further the temperance work. Mrs. Lawson, National organizer, will be in the state March 16 for a month's work.

Plans have just been perfected to hold the first Y inter-collegiate conference and oratorical contest. The first will be held at Winston, Good Friday. We are expecting representatives from all the colleges in the state. We are hopeful of great results from this and the following meetings.

The reports from the different unions show that much is being accomplished in the various departments of the work. The report from some of the college Y's is most gratifying. The corresponding secretary's report of the Salisbury union shows that they have good reason to feel encouraged. Crusade and membership week was observed by holding meetings every afternoon in the public hall. Twenty-one new members were gained. World's Temperance Sunday was observed in all the churches as never before, seventy-five children signed the pledge in the Sunday schools. A successful "W. C. T. U. Tidings" contest has been held. Our president has sent out strong letters urging the union to observe Feb. 17.

Delaware State Temperance Alliance Before the General Assembly.

Lila Wilson Aron, Correspondent.

WYOMING, Del., Feb. 16.—The Delaware State Temperance Alliance, organized six weeks ago, met in convention in Dover last week, completed their plans and selected their speakers to represent them in the legislature in the afternoon, when they were granted a hearing. The speakers were two prominent men from the Republican party, two from the Democratic party, and a member of the W. C. T. U., Mrs. Jennie C. S. Price, of Smyrna. All the speeches were clear, sound and forcible, and it seemed to those present that they must be effectual.

The House was crowded with spectators and a round of applause went up when the petition from Sussex county alone was unrolled and stretched across the house, about twenty-five yards in length. And this represented mainly the town people, as the country districts had not been reached on account of bad weather. In all 1,505 signatures had been received, and the president of the Alliance, Rev. V. S. Collins, in a most eloquent and earnest presentation speech, implored that honorable body on behalf of the people to give them a right to say at the ballot box whether Delaware shall or shall not grant licenses to rum-sellers.

The state executive committee of the W. C. T. U. met at the home of the state president in Dover, January 21, and made plans for the county conventions to be held in April.

Smyrna has sent for 100 copies of THE UNION SIGNAL to be sent to members who do not take it and others interested outside.

Good Work in Iowa.

Clara P. White, Correspondent.

VOLGA, Ia., Feb. 16.—Miss Addie M. Estey, president of the Eighth district, is engaged in a canvass of her territory, visiting every union and town that is unorganized with a view to securing new unions wherever possible.

Miss Addie M. Estey

Our state president, Mrs. Dunham, is offering prizes to the two unions securing the greatest number of new subscribers to THE UNION SIGNAL.

Through an oversight your correspondent recently credited Scientific Temperance work to Mrs. Dunham, which was due to Mrs. Louise K. Flower, our new superintendent of that department.

Temple Union, of Des Moines, is specially active in prison and jail work; a circulating library has been started at the city jail, in addition to other literature that is regularly distributed.

Willard Union, Des Moines, has inaugurated an L. T. L. crusade in the Sunday schools, under the leadership of Mrs. Hettie Haines. Lucas union reports a new L. T. L. and over ninety signatures of boys and girls to the pledge as some of the results of Evangelist Pierce's work at that place. At a union meeting, conducted by Rev. A. J. McColl in January, at Storm Lake, a large amount of temperance literature was distributed, a good sum of money collected, and about 500 signatures to the pledge secured.

Iowa Falls union is rejoicing over nine new members resulting from Rev. A. J. McColl's labors in that city. Hon. J. C. Rankin has just closed a week's meeting in Marion, adding fifteen new members to that union.

Louisiana Has Speakers in the Field.

Lucy Gould Baldwin, Correspondent.

BALDWIN, La., Feb. 16.—Mrs. Callie H. Howe, National organizer, will spend the month of March in the Fourth and the Fifth districts, Mrs. Mae A. Davis and Mrs. Annie L. Wilson, district presidents. Mrs. Clara C. Hoffman, National recording secretary, will speak at several points in southwestern Louisiana in her southern itinerary. She will be in New Orleans during the first week in March and will also speak at Hammond in the First district.

Mrs. N. E. Oliver, state organizer, spent fifteen days in the field with favorable results. Mrs. Oliver urges the unions everywhere not to neglect the spiritual part of their work. She is confident that interest has been awakened and that new zeal for the cause will follow.

Mrs. Teats in Michigan.

Mrs. R. W. Harwood, Correspondent.

PLAINWELL, Mich., Feb. 16.—Notwithstanding the severe weather which is very trying to one accustomed to the climate of California, Mrs. Mary E. Teats is daily meeting her engagements. In Plainwell, January 27, she addressed a parlor meeting in the afternoon, with great profit to all present, and gave a public lecture in the evening, resulting in the accession of seven active and honorary members to the union. February 1 and 2 she gave three lectures in Coopersville, and addressed a large Sabbath school, adding sixteen active and honorary members to the union and organized a Y. W. C. T. U. of twenty-seven members. Three of the officers elected are school teachers. At the close of her lecture in Benzonia, the union received twenty active and fifteen honorary members.

Election Day in Vermont.

Mrs. Mary Spencer Morgan, Correspondent.

WILMINGTON, Vt., Feb. 16.—The date of the referendum vote, February 3, was a single pleasant day, preceded and followed by days of storm. Prohibitionists felt it to be the kind of weather to call out the better element of voters in the rural districts and though fearful about results, were hopeful.

Mrs. M. S. Morgan.

Ere the day closed, however, returns from the cities and large towns showed conclusively that the "Yes" vote was in the majority, yet much smaller than the license leaders predicted. The total vote was about 60,300, as against 69,935 votes cast in the last September election. Of the 246 cities and towns in the state, 152 voted against the law; 89 were in favor. The 152 small towns gave a majority of 10,202 against local option, while 86 larger towns rolled up a majority of 11,800 for the law, showing that the license element, as expected, is strongest in the cities and large villages.

Yet with the discouraging fact that license prevailed, there is encouragement in the knowledge that the license believers in the state have decreased in number during the past three months. The work done by prohibitionists has not been lost, for the agitation has created a more desirable temperance sentiment throughout the state.

Much credit is due the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, state and National, for the gain in prohibition strength since September. It seems a pity that Vermont must now be counted as a license state. We can only hope and pray that in some way God will overrule this defeat for the ultimate good of the state. The responsibility for better law enforcement, now rests upon those who have declared that a license law will be better enforced than the prohibitory law has been.

Oklahoma Doings.

Sue Uhl Brown, Correspondent.

OKLAHOMA CITY, O. T., Feb. 7.—The week of prayer at Stillwater closed on Sunday night with an immense temperance mass meeting. The principal speaker was President A. C. Scott of the Agricultural and Mechanical college.

Ceres union is winning medals in contests, and has donated a box of clothing to the hospital and to a rescue home in Chicago. Wakita union is leading off with a contest once a month. Apache union has opened a free reading room, has sixty members and has held three contests.

The executive committee will be the guests of Oklahoma City Union, March 12 and 13, at the mid-year meeting.

Two To One Against Resubmission.

Elizabeth Preston Anderson, Correspondent.

DRAYTON, N. D., Feb. 16.—The resubmission of the Prohibition law was defeated in the house of representatives of the North Dakota legislature February 9, by a vote of 66 to 31. The temperance people are rejoicing over this signal victory.

The W. C. T. U. has worked hard for the passage of two bills, one to raise the age of consent to eighteen years, and the other to prohibit the manufacture and sale of cigarets. The former passed the house February 10.

Miss Anne Rothwell Stewart has been doing good work in the state under difficulties. She has organized new unions at Lidgerwood and Dazey.

A MOTHER'S MEETING==Program.

BY MRS. McVEAN-ADAMS.

TOPIC: Sleep.

Singing—"Now the Day is Over," page 37, White-Ribbon Hymnal.

Scripture—Mark, iv: 35-41. Also Matt. xxvi:36-46.

Prayers.

Singing—Pleyal's Hymn, "Softly Now the Light of Day," or instrumental music, Pleyal's Hymn, with variations.

Story—"When the Sandman Comes," from "The American Mother," of February, 1902.

Discussion of the topic.

Soprano Solo—"Hush, My Dear, Lie Still and Slumber."

Recitation—"The Sweetest Music."

Contralto Solo—(In costume), "Kentucky Babe."

Violin Solo—"Emmett's Lullaby."

Roll Call—Responses, Scripture verses on sleep.

Appeal for membership.

Hymn—"Day is dying in the west."

The Lord's prayer in concert.

The Sweetest Music.

(The opinion of Uncle John, riding home from the Opera with his city nephew.)

You may talk about your singing, and I won't dispute a thing,
But O, to hear the music that my mother used to sing!
The singing that was paid for, she never even heard,
But her voice rang out as freely as the singing of a bird.

When I was tired and sleepy, she'd wash me, clean and sweet,
And hug me tight and wrap my gown around my little feet
And rock and rock. And with her voice that old house used to ring
Till sleep, like balm, descended, while I heard my mother sing.

I believe the sweetest music we shall hear around the throne
Will come from just such humble souls, hardworking and unknown.
They could sing a hymn in meeting and sing a child to sleep,
And all the extra music in their hearts they had to keep.
They sang the songs the old folks loved, as evening shades came down,
Sweeter than all the Operas you advertise in town.

You may talk about your singers, and I won't dispute a word,
But my mother sang the sweetest songs my ears have ever heard,
And, I believe, when all we long for freely shall be given
I'll hear my mother's songs again. She's singing now, in Heaven!

Mrs. McVean-Adams.

When the Sandman Comes.

By Mrs. McVean-Adams.

"Come let us live with our children
Tenderly day by day,
Come let us live with our children
And guide them while we may."

This was my first visit to my cousin Doris, though she had been for five years a wife, mistress of a comfortable home, and, for three, the mother of a pretty boy.

Our first afternoon was filled with so many reminiscences that little Herbert was left mostly to his play in care of the neighboring children, who sported about my cousin's lawn and on the sidewalk under the shade-trees of the quiet street.

As the evening dinner hour approached, I was in the guest-room, making some changes in my dress, when I was startled by angry screams from the child, and, looking out, saw his mother dragging him by one arm along the walk to the front porch, in spite of his frantic protests, while his little mates looked on abashed.

Thinking that some accident had occurred I ran down into the hall, eager to be of use, if needed.

"No," said Doris. "I don't wonder you think something is the matter; this is the part of the day that I always dread. This is Herbert's bed-time, and he is such a nervous little thing that I have to be strict about it. But I always have a regular fight before I can get him down for the night. Keep still, you bad boy, no one can hear herself speak!" shaking the little captive by his arm.

Slowly I went back to my hair-dressing, hearing in the distance a door shut between me and the cries of the frantic child.

Still the process of washing his hands and face, trying to feed him some bread and milk, and undressing the unwilling little one were all revealed to my unwilling ears by the angry expostulations, entreaties and threats of the worried mother, and the angry protests of the child.

My hostess joined me in the parlor, flushed and weary, but still we could hear the boy's continued crying.

"If Herbert were not such a nervous child, I would not feel obliged to be so careful about his regular sleep," she said, apologetically.

"But I know that he needs the sleep. He loves to play so that he will never give up, no matter how tired he is. I generally manage to get him quiet before his father comes, but John never realizes what I have to go through to secure us a quiet evening."

After a little uneasy conversation, she left me, and I again heard her words to the child. "Go right to sleep this minute, now, you naughty boy! If you don't, I'll spank you good." His response was a cry, and I heard the sound of angry slapping, after which the crying changed to a lower and grieving sobbing, which made my own lashes wet.

A diversion was created by the arrival of the man of the house, already late for his dinner. He went into the dining-room, but I still heard or fancied the sound of the sobbing of the solitary child, whom I would have delighted to see at his father's side at the table, full of innocent prattle and learning to know his father. All through the dinner, my mind dwelt on the probable future of Herbert, as I recalled the utterances of Prof. Elmer Gates and other scientists, that, all night long, during sleep, the blood builds up most rapidly those portions of the brain which were most active from emotion of mind just before sleep began, thus turning transient feelings into traits of character. If the last waking sensations are those of love, comfort, safety, gladness, then the blood builds a cheerful disposition and a happy temperament. If the last sensations are of fear, anger, a rankling sense of having been unjustly punished, then the blood builds into these mysterious brain-cells an unhappy temper and a darkened life. There even drifted into my mind fragments of a poem by Mrs. Browning:

"For a child's sob, in the darkness, curses louder
Than a stong man in his wrath."

Having the freedom of the house, I left my hosts to a consultation on some domestic matter, after dinner, and sought the side of the sleeping boy.

A pretty boy he had been, at his play, but now his brow was darkened by a frown, his eyelids swollen, and tears, all unkissed away, stood upon his fever-flushed cheeks. His lips had a piteous curve, and one dimpled hand, clenched into a tightened fist, was flung out violently, and, as I looked, his bosom rose with a long, angry sob.

Having a little unexpected leisure, I visited, on my homeward journey, an old schoolmate who had four children and not a large share of this world's goods.

The first evening of my visit with Alice, her two-year-old baby wakened from his afternoon sleep only just in time to be freshly dressed to sit beside his papa at the six-o'clock dinner. I noted that his waking and his simple toilet were made a festival by the three older children, who often interrupted the fond mother's labor of love by their kisses and exclamations of delight at every dimple and every smile of the household pet.

Soon after dinner was over, I noted that the mother stole glances at the clock, and my heart sank. So far the family life had been ideal, but now, the "Sandman" was coming. Would the scene change?

At the moment, the baby, Teddie, was a horse, harnessed with gay lines, having bells, driven by his little sister, and prancing in high glee.

At his mother's sweet-toned call, he cantered gaily to her side.

Little Lucy, the oldest of the four (almost eight, and with motherly airs), had noted my close attention, and stole to my side with an explanation.

"Maybe you think mamma is too big to play with the baby the way she is going to do tonight, but she likes it, and so does Teddie."

For this is what the mother said: "Whoa, pony! no kicking now. Time for horsie to be put in the stable." Of course Teddie gave a few fancy kicks and flung away from his little driver, who ran and hung up the reins behind the door.

Alice took her gentle steed into the bedroom, carefully backing him into his stall beside his little white bed, while he giggled and tossed his mane of bright curls. Pretending to tie him, she proceeded to unharness him, patting and soothing him, calling him a good pony.

A thorough bed-time toilet was made, the final rubbing with the mother's strong soft hand being what Teddie called "turrying."

The baby had prattled constantly, and, as I sat near the bedroom I heard him ask, "Does Dod 'ove 'ittle ponies, mamma?"

"Yes, sweetheart," the mother replied, "but He loves dear little baby boys more, and so does mother." "I is a boy, I dood 'ittle boy, now." "Are you? I am so glad! I was just wanting a sweet little boy to cuddle in my lap, and to kiss."

Softly the mother sang, while she rocked her baby, his little hand lifted to her bended cheek. When he was quieted from play, I heard the softened murmur of sacred words, his little prayers, repeated after mother, as he kneeled upon her lap. Again my lashes grew wet as I listened to a child, but O, with what different tears! Again fragments of a poem floated through my mind:

"That sweetest spot, that hour, when angels hover,
And scarcely feel that they are out of heaven,
When, to a babe, the balm of sleep is given."

Many and tender were the kisses lavished upon the calm and drowsy face, and happy the little voice that called to mamma to be sure to shut the door, for the light would keep him awake.

Presently we stood beside the little white bed and watched the sleeper.

I lightly touched the cool, pink cheek, and noted the smile that still curved his mouth into a Cupid's bow.

But there were three children still awake, and I had no idea when their bedtime might come.

It chanced that we were all four in a corner, deeply absorbed in a fairy story which I was improvising, when Alice came from some household labor; and I knew that the time had come. I drew my story to a close, for which she courteously waited. "O, mother," cried six-year-old Fred, "it surely can't be half-past eight yet! Why, we were going to sing for Auntie Mary as soon as the story was done! Can't we, mother?"

"You can do something just as fine. She has never seen you march. Come now, my bedtime brigade. Fred shall be first captain, Lucy middle captain, and little Nell rear captain. Now, ready! Chests up, eyes front, hands at sides, march. Left, left, left!"

It was fine to see the little soldiers march, fine to take the goodnight kisses as they circled past, from hall to parlor, fine to answer the gay "goodnight" that floated down the stair.

A little frolic of pillow-fighting, with sweet peals of laughter, the soft singing of a dear old hymn, the lower murmur of prayer, and I could picture the mother bending to caress each rosy face, and then sitting to rest, between the little beds, while sleep came unaware upon the tired and happy trio.

During my visit Teddie was, in turn, a baby birdie that was put into his nest, a downy chicken that came when mamma clucked, a wee white lamb that lay down in a green pasture, and a poor little boy who had pinched his finger, and had to be placed in a hospital bed.

And, one tearful evening, Fred, aged six had a long talk with his mother, after which she accompanied him to the distant home of a little playmate, where a marble, obtained by "playing keeps," was restored to its rightful owner.

Thus, it was later than usual when Fred, with a quiet heart but lashes wet, slept the sleep of the beloved and forgiven, still holding fast his mother's hand, that hand which—I dared to predict, as it waved me farewell—would guide and lead him into places of honor and pleasantness in life, and beckon him to shining heights hereafter.

Mound City, Kan.

MRS. REBECCA BALLARD CHAMBERS.

MRS. ELIZABETH P. HUTCHINSON.

MRS. CLINTON SMITH.

MRS. MARY RIDER HASLUP.

PEN SKETCHES OF STATE PRESIDENTS

Mrs. Clinton Smith was elected president of the W. C. T. U. of the District of Columbia, October 21, 1898. Previous to that time she had held office as the president of a local union in Washington and district office as superintendent of the department of Legislation.

Mrs. Smith is a Vermonter and she rejoices in having been nurtured under an uncompromising prohibitory law. Her tendencies from earliest years were for total abstinence and prohibition.

She was born December 25, 1846, of a parentage identified with the annals of her state. Her father, Charles White, was a pioneer geologist and the discoverer of some of the marble quarries for which Vermont is famed.

Her education was as thorough as was accorded to women of her day, and she was graduated from the female seminary of Middlebury, established by Mrs. Emma Willard.

In 1868 she was married to Clinton Smith, also a Vermonter. On neither side is there taint of rum nor tobacco, and their five children prove the advantages of good ancestry.

Although a devoted mother and a painstaking housekeeper, Mrs. Smith has found time for philanthropic and literary work. Her poems and stories have appeared from time to time, under the pen names, "Alicia" and "August Noon."

Mrs. Smith became a member of the W. C. T. U. in 1876, and she has rendered valuable assistance in Vermont's noble struggle for Scientific Temperance Instruction in her schools.

When Mr. Smith, her husband, accepted a position under the government, and the family removed to the capital city, the scene of Mrs. Smith's activity changed, but not the spirit. For the past ten years her best efforts have been given to the work in the District of Columbia, and have included the following results: Twenty-six of her National departments have been adopted, besides one (The Young Wage-Earners' Club) peculiarly her own; a beautiful building has been purchased as W. C. T. U. headquarters for the entire work of the District of Columbia, $5,000 having been collected towards its payment; and improved moral conditions in the Philippines have been brought about.

That a daughter of the Green Mountain State has been able to impart to her work some of the strength of her native hills, is not perhaps so surprising as it is gratifying to the whole temperance world.

The welcome to our National Convention of 1900, prepared by Mrs. Smith, contained unobtrusive, incidental allusions to the work of her constituency, and it has been preserved as a "book of reference," the 1,500 copies being today quite exhausted.

Mrs. Clinton Smith, as president of the District of Columbia W. C. T. U., represents twenty-four local unions, which have four times elected her to the presidency.

With the hospitality so characteristic of her adopted city, her beautiful southern home, Mrs. Smith writes: "Visitors to the capital city are cordially invited to visit our headquarters—522 Sixth street—rest in the parlors—and register."

Mrs. Mary Rider Haslup, leader of the white ribbon women of Maryland, is now serving the eighth consecutive year as president of the state organization.

Mary Rider was born in Maryland in 1856, and spent her child life on a farm receiving private instruction until thirteen years of age, when she entered Lutherville (Md.) Seminary. After being graduated she taught for three years, until her marriage to Rev. Mr. Haslup, a young Methodist minister, and for ten years she shared with him the burdens and the privileges of the itinerancy.

Two daughters, students at the Woman's College of Baltimore, are members of the Somerset Y.

Mrs. Haslup's active service in the ranks of the W. C. T. U. dates from the time of the death of her husband.

She first served as corresponding secretary for a local union, then as county president, and afterwards as state organizer. In 1894 she was made the state president by unanimous vote. She is a capable and faithful officer, and for her work and for herself Mrs. Haslup is honored and loved by her followers.

Rebecca Ballard Chambers, with the same sturdy courage that enabled her forefathers and foremothers to leave home and friends for conscience' sake, devotes her time, talents and strength to the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, despite the fact that many other organizations would give her high place of honor.

If someone had predicted to good Simon Whitcomb, as he was voyaging on the "Mayflower," that centuries later one of his many times great-granddaughters would be a prominent leader in a great reform movement, that worthy would not only have been astonished but scandalized as well.

Rebecca Ballard as a girl was a brilliant scholar, a born leader and a general favorite—qualities that still cling to her. During the Crusade, in 1873, while but a girl of fifteen, she took active part in that work with her mother and Mrs. William McKinley.

In 1876 "Our Rebecca" met her fate in the handsomest man in Chester County—Samuel K. Chambers. The wedding, which soon followed in Canton, Ohio, was attended by the late President McKinley and his wife. The well-mated couple proceeded West to Grove, Pa., and started housekeeping in the comfortable home which they still occupy and which has become a well-known center of hospitality.

The two beautiful daughters, Mary and Helen, who adorn this home, bid fair to keep up the intellectual reputation of the family, as well as the sweet, domestic virtues which count so much for happiness.

For three years Mrs. Chambers served Pennsylvania W. C. T. U. as corresponding secretary, and succeeded the "beloved Mrs. Hammer" as president, in 1897. Each succeeding year she has been reelected by an overwhelming majority. In response to the announcement of her re-election Mr. Chambers telegraphed, "Read, Proverbs 31, 27, 28.

Mrs. Chambers is an active society member of the Presbyterian church, president of the Foreign Mission of her own Presbytery, and a member of the General Woman's Temperance Committee of the Presbyterian Church. The Daughters of the American Revolution have in her an honored member, as two of her ancestors, John and Asa Whitcomb, took heroic part in the struggle for Independence.

In addition to her duties as state president, Mrs. Chambers is editor-in-chief of the "Pennsylvania W. C. T. U. Bulletin." To her fairness, kindness, and good judgment, the happy results of her work everywhere testify.

Mrs. Elizabeth P. Hutchinson was born at Brodhead, Wisconsin. Sheldon T. Otis, her father, was a distinguished educator, and Elizabeth was given the best educational advantages of the Wisconsin common schools, at the age of sixteen becoming her father's able assistant. In 1876 the Otis family removed to Kansas, and Elizabeth became both student and teacher in the Normal College at Emporia.

Some years after her marriage to Dr. A. M. Hutchinson, of Spring Valley, Minn., they, with their three children, removed to the city of Hutchinson, where they now reside.

Mrs. Hutchinson served for twelve years as steward in the Methodist Episcopal church, for three years as treasurer of the Kansas W. C. T. U., and for three years as business manager of the official paper, "Our Messenger." She also served three years as secretary, and three years as president of the largest district in Kansas, known at home as the "Big Seventh." She was elected for the third term as president of the Kansas W. C. T. U. 1901.

Mrs. Hutchinson's life has been one of constant activity and service. She is eminently practical, and is a safe leader. Generous, sympathetic, and appreciative, she has won the love and confidence of the women of Kansas, and the work is prospering under her enthusiastic leadership

In all her church and reform work Mrs. Hutchinson has the able support and sympathy of her cultured husband.

The "Ottawa Guardian," a Kansas paper, says: "Mrs. Hutchinson has rare gifts as a presiding officer, she is a fine parliamentarian, her ability being shown in convention work. She is an easy and ready speaker, with an earnestness and sincerity of utterance, together with a descriptive ability which captivates and holds her audiences."

Kansas is to be congratulated that Mrs. Hutchinson chooses to give all that is best in her mature womanhood to the cause of temperance.

Frances E. Willard. By M. H. Edmunds.

A WOMAN fair and gentle, noble, grand,
Loved as but few are loved! Born to command,
She lived to serve. As gracious as a queen
And tender as a mother, such her mien.
The world had need of her, for wrong was bold
And held high carnival in ways untold.
She saw, and, yielding to the voice that said,
"Lo, I am with you," to the battle sped.
A peaceful warfare hers, who dared to stand
For God and right, for home and native land.
The hosts she marshalled with such wondrous skill
Were loyal women, quick to do her will
And bear throughout the land and o'er the sea,
Tidings of better days that are to be
When licensed wrong in every land shall cease.
Bidding them work and pray for this release,
Bravely she led, till, wearied with the fray,
The earthly temple failed. Her spirit? Nay;
She leads us still, far better than we know.
The tide is deepening. Soon 'twill overflow,
And conscience speak. Humanity doth plead,
And she, our leader still, doth intercede.

Beaver Dam, Wis.

A Fight Against Odds

By Kate Anderson.

Copyrighted by Woman's Temperance Publishing Association.

Synopsis of Preceding Chapters.

[The Kilgour family are engaged in a desperate struggle to save the idolized youngest son, Claude, from the curse of cigaret smoking. The death of his brother Willie has aroused the remnant of his manhood, and he is now himself resolved to break the habit.]

Chapter VII.

AS there was nothing else which appeared better to do, Claude was set at comparative liberty, and in something of his old fashion he went to work to make himself useful about the premises. Allie returned to the office, and Claude constituted himself his mother's right hand man. He did all the hard sweeping, made beds, ran errands, did the heavy part of the family laundry work, and even set the table and washed dishes upon occasion, besides which he attended to all the outside chores, and kept up repairs.

His beautiful flute-like soprano voice, prematurely changing, was forever impaired by the habit of cigaret smoking. Claude's mother, however, wisely gratified her son's passion for music by having him take piano lessons, rightly believing that the three hours spent daily in the study and practice of this ennobling and inspiring art would have an incalculably beneficial effect on the tone of thought and morals.

A certain sum was laid by weekly to Claude's credit in recompense for his work, a sum sufficient to cover the cost of instruction, and leave a small balance to apply on his debts.

His brother had done his best to gather from Claude the extent of his pilfering. From what Ralph knew to be only partial confessions, and from what he could ferret out for himself, the sum was placed at $100. Up to the time that Claude was discovered to be using cigarets, he had thoughtlessly been allowed unlimited control of his own pocket-money; of which he had always an abundant supply, being a shrewd trader with his rabbits, fowl and eggs, and quick to pick up any job or errand.

He had not been stealing merely to provide himself with cigarets, but, flinging all self-denial to the winds, he had indulged himself in fruit, candy, expensive meals in restaurants, drinks, ice cream, low theatres and pernicious literature. He seemed to have lost the power of denying his greed any indulgence which he could steal from his frugal, hardworking and self-sacrificing family. He had become absolutely hardened in this respect.

Money had been scarce, and expenses heavy in the household during the past two years. Every cent had to be carefully counted, in order to clear off the mortgage. By common consent, absolutely no luxuries in the way of clothing, traveling or expensive delicacies had been indulged in. The children, however, had started a little fund to be used in sending their delicate and always self-denying mother, away for an imperatively-needed change. Among Claude's other robberies, had been a steady pilfering from this little bank into which the dimes and quarters—fruits of many self-denials—had been dropped. Claude had always expressed and appeared to feel poignant remorse and abasement at each discovery, but the next time temptation offered, he would repeat the vile offence.

It had been a miserable and anguished state of affairs to be obliged to keep every cent securely and cunningly hidden from this marauder; to know it was unsafe to lay down a purse for five minutes, or leave a quarter on the mantelpiece; to be obliged even to keep a watch on small valuables, which might get "lost;" and not to dare to intrust a cent to Claude's keeping with which to run an errand—as he had contracted a habit of "losing" money. Upon each fresh discovery, Claude had always vowed he would repay every cent, and he eagerly begged of them to sell, as payment, any articles belonging to him.

Ralph had sold his old watch and chain, so that the last birthday gift Claude had ever received from his father, a beautiful gold watch, might not be sold out of the family and had bought it, placing the purchase-money to the credit of Claude's thefts, thus to enable the boy to redeem the gift at some future day. His wheel had been sold for what it would bring, his hens and rabbits confiscated, with whatever money had been placed to his credit by Ralph the summer he had worked at the hotel.

Over forty dollars yet remained to be wiped out, and after another month Claude was allowed to accept a position which Ralph had procured for him in the car-shops, placing him under the especial surveillance of a trusty foreman, an intimate friend of Ralph and formerly of the boy's father—one who, moreover, was a sturdy, consistent Christian.

"It's a terrible risk, I know," said Ralph, "but what can we do? It may be an effective but hardly practicable method of dealing with the saloon and cigaret problem, to keep their victims under lock and key until these places are forced to close up for lack of patronage. Claude is now standing on his own feet, and I must at least say that if he again falls, it need not be through any inordinate craving, for I am satisfied that the habit is sufficiently broken to enable him to put forth an independent effort to straighten up. If he persists in going to destruction it will be through no fault of ours, but through simple waywardness on his part. Do you know what reforming an inebriate makes me think of? It is like rescuing a man, all bitten and crippled from an attack of pursuing wolves, taking him home, curing his wounds and strengthening his frame, and then sending him out again to run the gauntlet, harassed and pursued on every side by his old enemies. Of course he is weaker after each fray. On his way to and fro, Claude passes three places where cigarets may be obtained. Poor Kelly, who is making desperate efforts to break off drinking, passes no less than five places where the fumes reach his nostrils. Why is such wickedness permitted? Surely awful judgment must some day fall on our rulers in high places!"

Claude let cigarets alone, and so far as could be noted, he attended to his work and behaved in an exemplary manner; he also kept up his beloved music. A comparative peace fell upon the mother's anguished brow, and the family began to talk of Claude's starting to school again after the holidays and preparing himself, according to former hopes and plans, for a course in medicine. Claude, however, objected vigorously to this. He did not wish to go back to school; he had all the education he needed, and he would not be a doctor. Neither did he wish to take a business course in the college, nor to enter any bank or office.

"What do you want, Claude?' asked his mother, despairingly of this boy who had once been the family's brilliant star of promise.

"Oh, I guess the shops are good enough for me, I ain't afraid or ashamed of hard work," was the answer. "I'll work myself up there, and if I get tired of it, maybe when my voice comes back I'll go in with some concert troupe." Claude of late was by no means unaware of his gifts of art and personality which would make him an undoubted success with the public.

And there his once noble and lofty ambition ceased.

"Never mind, mother," said Ralph cheerily; "don't notice or argue with him. What else can you expect at this early stage? Let Claude only keep straight, and he will gradually and naturally regain his senses and ambition. Loss of ambition is all a part of the disease, you know. I know lots of really good fellows who take a notion to leave school and look up a job." Claude had certainly lost all worldly pride. To the fingertips he had been a natural little aristocrat with a very uncompromising and youthfully undiscerning detestation of vulgarity in any form. His companions had always been among the boys of the most cultured families in the city.

Now the company of the roughest men and boys in the yards amply fulfilled his social requirement. Their language and habits never disturbed him. He was quite happy in the society of the commonest Frenchmen in the yards and would have been only too glad to join them in their recreations after work-hours had he been allowed to do so. Ralph saw all this, but still he worked and prayed for better things. One day he was enabled for an hour to leave the office, where he was employed as head operator, and took a walk over to the shops. It happened to be a breathing spell for a few of the hands, and Claude was finally discovered in a freight car, playing cards, and smoking a villainous pipe. That night he stoutly maintained that there was no harm in a friendly game of cards and that ordinary tobacco wouldn't hurt him. Autaine Mausseau had given it to him.

"Stop there," said Ralph. "I found out that you traded off your silver cuff button to Jim O'Donnelly for a supply. You came home last night and told mother you had lost it, and she had to buy you another. Claude, Claude, what hope is there for you when you will lie and steal?"

Ralph administered very potent medicine to Claude in the shape of another sound thrashing. Perhaps in some cases this might not be found to work so well, but, used as a last resort, with Claude it had always proved a beneficial measure. Ralph believed that when boundless tact, prayerful wisdom, unfaltering kindness, forbearance and helpfulness all failed in their effort on a depraved or wilfully bad boy, the good old-fashioned rod of the wise Solomon's hearty recommendation possessed an unquenchable virtue even unto this day and generation.

One day Mrs. Dalton called to Claude, as he was passing to his work, and gave him two dollars to hand to the foreman, who was her landlord, this sum being the balance due on the month's rent of her cottage.

Claude took the money and kept it until he found an opportunity to play it in a game of cards, hoping to turn from it a few dollars on his own account before handing it to the rightful owner. Though he had become an expert player, considering his age, and had often won small amounts, his play this time proved unlucky, and he lost the entire sum. He now had sufficient fear of Ralph not to trust to luck and time to straighten himself, but he went at once to Mrs. Dalton, telling her he had lost the money, but saying that if she would be so kind as to wait the few days intervening before pay-day he would make it good. Mrs. Dalton, quite unaware of the fact that Claude was not allowed to handle a cent of his pay, kindly and heartily agreed to do this, also promising not to mention the loss to any one. It crept out, however, through the foreman's asking Dalton for the amount on pay-day, and his learning from him for the first time that Mrs. Dalton had sent the money by Claude a week before. At noon Dalton learned from his wife of the loss and Claude's promise to pay, so when on the next day the money was not forthcoming to either landlord or to tenant, Dalton paid Foreman Miller and went to Ralph for his dues. The sum was promptly paid, with an apology for the delay, and Ralph in his wounded pride never let Dalton suspect that he had not been cognizant of the debt.

(To be continued.)

THE SENIOR L. T. L.

Conducted by Mrs. Helen G. Rice, General Secretary.

Red-Letter Day.

March 1.—Union Signal Subscription Day (birthday of our National President, Mrs. Lillian M. N. Stevens). Let each one of us L. T. L. leaders and helpers and Legioners, honor the National President and help the Mother W. C. T. U. by securing at least one new subscriber to The Union Signal.

Loyal Temperance Legion in Pond Street School, Bangor, Maine.

By L. Mabel Freese.

ONE day it occurred to me that a Loyal Temperance Legion might be formed in my primary school in connection with the temperance instruction required by our state law.

After consideration I wrote to our state superintendent of L. T. L. work, receiving an encouraging reply and the pamphlet familiar to all L. T. L. workers, "Questions Answered," by Anna A. Gordon.

The next step was to find out if the children liked the idea of a temperance society. They had had several lessons from "Temperance Helps for Primary Teachers," instruction from which is required by our superintendent of schools, and they were interested in the society to which Frances Willard belonged, the W. C. T. U. They also seemed enthusiastic for a little society of their own such as I had described to them.

I then gave definite instruction on the meaning and importance of the pledge, which they learned to repeat, after which they copied it on the Parents' Certificates to be sent to their parents. These certificates were simply typewritten slips reading as follows:

Certificate of Parents or Guardians.

We are willing that —— — should sign the pledge for full membership in the Loyal Temperance Legion of Pond Street School, Bangor, Maine.

Signed ——.

Date —— 1902.

These slips were prepared in order to secure the cooperation of the parents and to avoid adverse criticism. Out of thirty-six Parents' Certificates, only seven were unsigned the day I anxiously called for the returns. In some cases both fathers and mothers signed besides sending encouraging words.

I ascertained in many cases the reasons why the certificates were unsigned. In one instance it was on account of the "cider" in the pledge (the family owning a cider orchard). I sent some excellent cider leaflets, with a carefully written explanatory note, to the mother, who, after several days of reading and meditation, returned them, and to my great joy signed her certificate. Most of the other objections were met by sending the parents a copy of the beautiful little leaflet, "An Appeal to Mothers," by Frances E. Willard.

Having secured the assistance of the parents, I then presented the children with a pretty folder containing the pledge and motto of the Legion. These were carefully read by them and laid on their desks for consideration. At the close of the session time was given for the signatures of those who had fully made up their minds to sign, and the others were requested to retain theirs for further thought. At this time all but ten were returned signed. Those who signed were called upon to give reasons for so doing, which were in some cases characteristic. One said, "I want to wear one of them badges," pointing with admiration to the silver pile on the teacher's desk; while another whose motives were deeper, said, "I signed because it will help make me good." The reasons for not signing were very similar to those I've heard from older boys and girls when they wished to avoid pledges.

My heart was filled to overflowing when, as the days went by, first one and then another of the dear little people who did not sign at first would sign and slip their folder into the pile on my desk. One boy suddenly stood by me, at the close of a morning session, and said, "I decided to do it, and thought I'd tell you for fear you would not be sure to see my pledge." Even the saloonkeeper finally consented to his boy's signing, and his pledge was added.

By and by our temperance Roll of Honor came, and with the children's names written thereon, was beheld by all with glistening eyes. Then we donned our badges and sang the March of the Loyal Legion.

I had let each pupil choose his and her badge, that is, either the clasp or the stick pin, and these, with the tri-colored badges beneath, made a brave showing. The next day they brought the money for their dues. This is the story of the forming of our Legion. As I look ahead to the next term's work, with the fortnightly Legion meetings and the outside work with parents, brothers and sisters of the Legioners, I know I shall not lack for temperance work so long as I have strength and time to labor. Already pupils from the other rooms are becoming interested, and applications for folders are in advance of stock.

It is only a small beginning, but God grant it may be an earnest of great promise for the New Year.

"O small beginnings, ye are great and strong,
Based on a faithful heart and weariless brain!
Ye build the future fair, ye conquer wrong,
Ye earn the crown and wear it not in vain."

Bangor, Maine.

Notes.

IS YOUR Legion making plans for a contribution to the Willard Memorial Fund?

2. Miss L. Mabel Freese, author of that most delightful book, "Temperance Helps For Primary Teachers," seeing on our Senior page Mrs. Platt's account of Legions in the public schools of Connecticut, has voluntarily favored us with the description of her own Legion, which appears on this page. Our many Seniors who are engaged in Junior work will welcome its valuable suggestions, while the general plan may be applied to the various school grades.

3. The Young Crusader for February is an anti-cigaret number, and the wide distribution of this issue will be a feature of the anti-cigaret pledge-signing day, which is Sunday, March 1. We trust that our Legioners who are already banded together against this foe of boyhood and young manhood, will take a very active part in this special campaign. An excellent plan will be to arrange for L. T. L. anti-cigaret meetings on that Sunday, with an interesting program and an invitation to all young people. A suitable order of exercises will be found in the February Young Crusader.

4. The National L. T. L. report can be procured from the National L. T. L. secretary. This may be made the basis of a resume at one of your regular meetings of the L. T. L. work throughout our great country.

5. Our L. T. L. Organizers and Associates: Mrs. Maude L. Greene is giving the entire winter to work in Alabama. She has been made a life-member of the state W. C. T. U. Miss Elizabeth P. Gordon has spent a month in Virginia. Miss Louise E. Hollister is making an extended trip in the far west. These organizers work for the three great divisions of our white-ribbon army, including always the L. T. L., as do also Mrs. Ellen A. D. Blair and Miss Margaret Wintringer.

6. We have received from Mrs. H. J. Bailey, as illustrating her article on our last Senior page, a leaflet describing the Boys Life-Guards' Brigade connected with one of the Sunday schools of England, the motto of which is, "I serve." In place of military maneuvers the organization has ambulance and fire drills and exercises directed to the saving of life from drowning. Similar exercises might be introduced into our Senior Legions with good results.

7. Communications from our far western states and territories show an increase of interest in L. T. L. lines. Idaho L. T. L. secretary reports a great increase last year with the promise of still better work for 1903. Indian Territory is aiming for a Legion in every union. At one of the county conventions of Washington (west) old and young pledged themselves to take the L. T. L. diploma course of study and to follow this by the post-graduate reading courses. These are but samples of many encouraging words.

8. The L. T. L. Flower Mission of Castile, New York, sent last year 2,000 bouquets to Buffalo and New York City, receiving in return many tokens that their efforts had been greatly appreciated. Mount Vernon, Ohio, has secured the use of the public school buildings for the L. T. L. meetings.

9. The report of Virginia's L. T. L. secretary, Mrs. Sue C. James, shows a successful year of work accomplished and a hopeful outlook for the future. The prize offered by Mrs. James, a complete set of Miss Willard's books, for largest gain in membership was won by Frances E. Willard Legion of Purcellville; the second prize, one of Miss Anna Gordon's books, by Washington L. T. L.

A Word From Wisconsin.

By Lois Russell.

AT our state L. T. L. convention last summer, in response to a suggestion from our National secretary, our Legioners voted to take up "Work among the Indians." Our plans were rather hazy, and our thoughts turned to Oklahoma and the Indian territory, but we have found work much nearer—right in our own state.

A few weeks ago the W. C. T. U. state organizer held some meetings at Keshena, where is one of our Indian reservations. She spoke to the boys and girls at the government school and found as eager and attentive an audience as heart could wish. When she told them about the L. T. L., what it is, and what its members do and enjoy, they were enthusiastic for a Legion of their own.

The hard-worked teachers were interviewed, and, although time and strength are already heavily taxed, some of them promised to study the question with a view to organizing a Legion, for they well understand what a terrible curse to the Indian is the drink habit.

Our indefatigible L. T. L. secretary, Mrs. Black, was notified, and she immediately put herself in correspondence with her splendid young helpers, proposing that the state L. T. L. adopt the Keshena Legion when it shall be organized, furnish singing books, manuals and other supplies, and in every possible way bring to these dusky brothers and sisters of ours the uplift and joy of the L. T. L. The state L. T. L. officers and workers are full of enthusiasm for the plan, and we hope soon to report a flourishing L. T. L. at Keshena.

Milwaukee unions are congratulating themselves upon having secured for a month the services of Miss Jessie L. Hagerty for L. T. L. work. Several years ago Miss Hagerty was the efficient salaried worker of Milwaukee unions, carrying on several Legions, a fine newsboys' club, and much other real missionary work. After a course in the Moody Bible Institute, Chicago, she was called to the Moody School at Northfield, Mass., where for two years she did excellent work as teacher. She recently left her busy work for the Y. W. C. A. long enough to render most helpful service in her old Milwaukee field. Some of her old Legions were revived, new ones organized, leaders discovered and set at work, as a result of which seven or eight Legions are now shining in the Beer City's darkness, and it is hoped the number will be increased. This work is to be under the care of Miss Mary Money, the earnest, up-to-date assistant of our state L. T. L. secretary. Miss Money is well equipped for her work, having been connected with the Wisconsin L. T. L. from its beginning, with our loved Mrs. Bradbury, and having missed the inspiration of only one of Wisconsin's twelve state L. T. L. conventions.

The post-graduate reading courses are very popular this year, and one cannot estimate the good which will flow from them into the lives of our young people and through them to many other lives. The favorite courses thus far are Character, Purity, Danger Signals, Evangelistic and Band of Mercy.

Eau Claire.

Anti-Profanity Work.

I SUPPOSE there is scarcely a boy or girl who has not heard men or boys swear. Had the name of our father or mother been used disrespectfully, we would not have felt loyal unless in some way we had tried to prevent its repetition. We would not be loyal to our best friend, Jesus, if we did not try to prevent swearing. But it is not polite to interrupt one in conversation; our time may be short, or perhaps we can think of nothing to say.

To overcome all of these difficulties we have found some very helpful cards printed by the Anti-Profanity League. Write to Rev. Roland D. Sawyer, Hanson, Mass., for them. The price is twelve cents per 100. One of these cards is a pledge; one reads, "Why do you swear?" another, "Biting at Satan's Bare Hook;" another, "There, you've broken it! Broken what?' On the other side, "The Third Commandment." Still another, to be put in stores and other public places, reads, "No swearing here." These cards can be handed out on the street where needed, and will carry messages that will speak to the hearts of those so thoughtless, unkind and sinful as to break this commandment. Always ask God to bless the card's message as you hand it out.

Nellie A. Reed,
State L. T. L. Sec'y of South Dakota.

FOR GOD AND HOME AND EVERY LAND

The UNION SIGNAL AND WORLD'S WHITE RIBBON

NATIONAL and WORLD'S WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION

Official Organ of the WORLD'S AND NATIONAL WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION.

Published Weekly by the Woman's Temperance Publishing Association, Chicago.

EDITOR-IN-CHIEF, - - - - - - MRS. LILLIAN M. N. STEVENS.
CORRESPONDING EDITOR, - - - LADY HENRY SOMERSET.
MANAGING EDITOR - - - - - MRS. CORNELIA T. JEWETT.

CONTRIBUTING EDITORS:

MRS. SUSANNA M. D. FRY. MRS. KATHARINE L. STEVENSON.
MRS. CLARA C. CHAPIN. MRS. ISABELLA WEBB PARKS.

Address all letters and manuscript intended for the editors to, The Editorial Department, UNION SIGNAL. Unavailable manuscripts will be returned only when sufficient postage accompanies the request.

SUBSCRIPTIONS.

Subscriptions may commence with any issue.
The date on the label indicates when your subscription ends.
Papers will be discontinued unless otherwise ordered.
Remittances should always be made in the safest manner available to the remitter. Register cash remittances.
Change of Address.—Give both your old and your new address when you desire a change.
Change of Date.—It takes at least three weeks to change the date, after your subscription is renewed.

PRICE $1.50 PER YEAR IN ADVANCE.
FOREIGN POSTAGE $1.04 ADDITIONAL.

Address all Business Communications to
The UNION SIGNAL, 184 La Salle St., CHICAGO.

Chicago, February 19, 1903.

"The women that publish the tidings are a great host."

The Prophet Without Honor.

AS old as the human family itself is the fact that genius is not recognized, stimulated, trumpet-tongued in its native land, but that it is, on the contrary, intimidated, ignored, and repressed, regardless of the dwarfing effect upon creative spirit.

We are constantly on the lookout for new mines and quarries, and with the slightest hint that certain localities may yield valuable material, thousands are willing to risk time and money for its possible production; yet genius, the country's true wealth, its most valuable, imperishable building material, goes unsought and undeveloped.

To get at the real cause of such conditions, we must put the blame where it belongs—first upon the home and then upon society. In the home there is a general indifference, a lukewarmness to the special gifts of its members. This state prevails among sister and brother, between friend and friend. Upon the mother devolves the duty of quickening natural gifts into life and action. Love and ambition for her offspring are the natural emanations of her heart, and she should expect benefits from every atom of her love. She should expect her children to attain to the altitude of her ideals. The mother who expects and demands most from her sons and daughters (provided she have a fine sense of justice) contributes most towards a future commonwealth. Let her search out each child's individuality, study his eccentricities, encourage and appreciate his ingenuity, from the time when he builds his first block house until he reaches the breadth of his maturity, and is ready to prove his talent before God and his country.

Next to the home, the obligation of recognizing struggling effort lies with society. Here again we find indifference—an apathy that arouses to applause only when a thing comes to it endorsed and labeled super-excellent. The whole mind of society seems to be bent on keeping a bank account sufficiently large to enable it to indulge in the highest priced, double-extra labeled articles of foreign manufacture. The moneyed king prefers to bring into his country thousands of ignorant foreigners who can subsist upon the left-overs of the market, rather than pay his own countrymen wages sufficient to enable them to live as Americans must live.

Home talent is too generally conceded a bore unless it has been educated and has been accepted at one or more of the thrones of Europe. Society has too many functions to attend to risk an evening in search of a new star when the world's acknowledged artists can be had for a mere price. It would rather listen to Faust for the five hundredth time than to lend strength and interest to an audience for the sake of encouraging some aspiring initiate in the realm of art. It is not so much the money that is needed for the growth of home talent, as it is that true charity which "feeds three," which sympathizes, upholds and inspires.

Interest and encouragement are great fertilizers for young genius, and every original expression is a voice crying in the wilderness for cultivation and individual growth.

When the mother fully realizes that the home is the country in miniature; that her's is the first office in the governmental system,—an office for life and one decided by the election of spirit—then will she nurture every indication of greatness in her sons and daughters, expecting, demanding that each shall contribute something towards the betterment of existing conditions. And when society rouses from its lethargy and accepts these sons and daughters upon their own merits, giving hearty interest, sanction and impetus to true worth, whether it be undeveloped or in a state of perfection; when it searches for future geniuses at every amateur performance; when its shoppers come forward with pride to proclaim a home article that is as good, or better than one of foreign manufacture, then will the "rejected stone" of the builders "become the head of the corner," and then will the nation experience an uplift of inspiration and of power.

Prohibition in the Drug Traffic.

TO no class does greater responsibility attach than to those who sell drugs. To a very large extent the lives of individuals are in their hands, and no examination can be too thorough regarding fitness for the work. We would, therefore, congratulate the Board of Pharmacy of Illinois on the fact that they have at last awakened to a sense of what may be considered the almost criminal negligence of the past in the indiscriminate sale of sedative drugs.

The members of this board are up in arms, and have secured indictments against druggists who are said to have sold cocaine illegally. In this they are taking the only course open to them in view of the facts which their investigations have brought to light. They evidently fear that the practice of indulging in opiates or sedative drugs, if unrestrained, may produce conditions as deplorable as those associated with drunkenness.

It is well known that the effect of such drugs as chloral, cocaine, opium and the like is insidious; that the habit of such grows upon one; that their use blunts the sensibilities and dulls the intellect; that when indulged in to excess the results are similar to those produced by strong drink, enslaving the victims with merciless power.

One of the Chicago dailies says:

The most dangerous feature of the abuse of drugs is that once established in a community, it becomes almost ineradicable. A few of the victims are cured, but the others do not escape its clutches until they die, and meanwhile the vice is steadily securing new recruits.

No picture could more clearly show the analogy which this condition bears to the drink habit.

Horror of the drug habit is, even in its infancy, calling for prohibitive legislative measures, while liquor drinking has been allowed to grow to maturity, demoralizing this and other countries, the only check to its mad career being in the uplifted voices of earnest temperance workers pleading for the enactment of laws restraining the sale of intoxicants.

The board of pharmacists expects, and has a right to expect, the support of all boards charged with carrying out measures for the public good. All who realize what is involved in this growing evil should also realize that only by united effort can it be put down.

If, then, the indiscriminate sale of drugs calls for such immediate legislative action for its suppression, has alcoholism not yet fully established its claims to legislative attention? Can the various governments of the civilized world afford to shelve appeals made to them in its behalf? If druggists who promiscuously sell narcotic and poisonous drugs deserve punishment for so doing, why should not saloonkeepers, who are killing off their victims at a much higher percentage, be held equally responsible?

All druggists should second the efforts of the Board of Pharmacy in its endeavors to uproot this evil. They can be appealed to as men whose living is not dependent upon this branch of their business. The action which has been taken should be an incentive the world over to quicken the efforts of Christian people and temperance workers to seek governmental aid in putting down the sale of intoxicating drink, which simply means public traffic in poison by the wholesale.

Tracing a Responsibility.

A MOST effective and pointed temperance discourse has been delivered by a certain circuit court jury in Ingham county, Michigan. For clearness of vision and courage of conviction these "twelve tried and true men" are unique. They recently rendered a verdict of $1,033 damages in favor of the wife of a man maimed for life while intoxicated, said verdict being against the saloon keeper who furnished the unfortunate man with the poison which robbed him of his senses. They trace the responsibility back directly to the cause of the man's condition and hold the saloon keeper responsible for the safety of those whom he aids to become "helplessly befuddled."

The rendering of this verdict opens up a question of wide significance. If every saloon keeper could be publicly charged with the evils which emanate from his destructive traffic and be held liable for them, possibly society might come to appreciate that the payment of an annual license of a few thousand dollars is but poor compensation for the injuries sustained.

One cannot but surmise concerning the results if the higher courts see fit to sustain the Michigan verdict. Other suits for damages will, without doubt, be begun, and the profits of the liquor dealer will be materially diminished when he has been compelled to settle up for a few of these responsibilities. It is too much to expect that an enforcement of financial responsibility will arouse in the saloon keepers any sense of moral responsibility, but such expensive incidentals may tend to create a prejudice against the liquor business, if, indeed, it does not force the dealers into insolvency.

Society as a whole is in a position to make out a very fair case for damages against the liquor traffic and is not lacking distinguished and unimpeachable witnesses to sustain such a suit. Carroll D. Wright, United States Commissioner of Labor, would go upon the witness stand and give testimony to show that the liquor enterprises are responsible for 84 per cent of the crimes of this nation. The heads of the great rescue homes would solemnly swear and bring credible proof to show that 77 per cent of the wretched inmates of their institutions were led to ruin by drink. There could be produced court statistics showing that three-fourths of the divorces result from the liquor evil. The census bureau would furnish data showing that 80 per cent of the murders in the United States must be accounted for by the dispenser of alcoholic drinks, and sociologists of high authority would affirm that the curse of strong drink is responsible for 51 per cent of the pauperism of our land.

Yet even when the evidence was all in and every one of the charges had been proved, what human jury could attempt to assess damages commensurate with the awful aggregation of woe and misery and wretchedness charged? Even if the measure of damages were fixed, what body of men are rich enough to liquidate the debt? Money could not do it; no amount of the United States securities, nor gold nor silver fresh from the mints, would suffice. In the last analysis society must bear the burden. It is an obligation which can be wiped out only through two generations of enfeebled bodies, diseased minds, disordered hearts, shattered nerves, dulled intellects, at the expense of the children and grandchildren of criminals and drunkards who are handicapped by weakened wills and vicious appetites. At the cost of a deteriorated, depreciated manhood and womanhood must society at last pay the damages.

Two Little Victims. "A gill of whisky fatal to a six-year-old child," was the headline of a paragraph put in an obscure corner of a city paper.

Could a more pointed argument be found anywhere than in such a fact? If a gill of whisky is powerful enough and bad enough to end the life of a little child, whose recuperative powers are supposed to be strong, it certainly must contain a poison deadly enough to do untold harm to those who can take more and yet live.

The noted lecturer who has announced that the old physiologies and theories are all wrong, that alcohol in liquor is a builder up of the body and not a harmful substance, should find in this event, even without other recorded facts, a refutation of his statement.

The little girl's father had brought the whisky home and had left it on a window-sill within easy reach. Perhaps the child had seen her father or some one else drink from the bottle; perhaps not. At any rate, she drank what was left and died within a few hours. Then the city authorities declared, "No blame can be placed on the parents!"

Directly under the paragraph telling of the death of the one child, came another item: "Trip for beer fatal to child." Little seven-year-old Joseph, who had been sent for beer, stumbled and fell on a wire and was killed. Poor little fellow! from the beginning of his young life compelled to know all about places that many grown men and most women who have had large experience in life, would shrink from entering; compelled to see and hear things that could not help searing his fresh young heart and soul!

Little Joseph was only one of many hundreds and thousands of other little ones who are compelled to do the same thing. But thanks to the softening heart of the world, such occurrences grow fewer every year instead of more frequent. In the smaller towns of better spirit, the thing is practically ended. The children themselves are made to feel the reproach of the practice and their thirsty parents begin to realize that if they will have the poison, it must be obtained in some other way than by their children.

Only One Solution of the Problem. The liquor traffic in India is a government monopoly, and in view of the fact that the past few years show a greater per cent increase in the consumption of strong drink than in the population, the temperance people of England are joining with the better class of Mohammedans and Hindus in asking for measures to check the spread of alcoholism. To this end Mr. W. S. Caine will urge in the House of Commons the passage of a local veto act for India. Indeed, the liquor problem becomes to Great Britain more and more formidable as a matter of colonial administration. Lord Milner, high commissioner of South Africa, in his plan recently outlined in the blue book, says that its solution is a "tremendous undertaking" in which the "whole credit of the administration is at stake;" and Mr. Chamberlain has himself declared that the drink traffic among native races is not only discreditable to the British name but disastrous to British trade, because it destroys trade by destroying the population. The question is bound to remain a thorn in the side of nations until this legalized iniquity is banished from the face of the earth.

⚜

Chain Letters Again. In response to several inquiries concerning another chain letter scheme emanating from Philadelphia, which purports to be in the interests of the anti-cigaret work, we wish to say emphatically that the W. C. T. U. has no knowledge of any such scheme and certainly does not indorse it. These schemes are, without doubt, originated solely for the purpose of collecting names to be used for advertising purposes, and they should be treated accordingly. Any plan for the formation of a "National League," if legitimate, will be duly announced by our National superintendent, Mrs. E. B. Ingalls.

⚜

God keep us through the common days,
The level stretches white with dust,
When thought is tired and hands upraise
Their burdens feebly since they must.
In days of slowly fretting care,
Then most we need the strength of prayer.
—Margaret E. Sangster.

Experience Corner.

COMRADES:—This Corner is optimistic by preference and on principle, but it confesses to a cloud between it and the summer of its content when a certain question comes up, and, unfortunately for everybody, it is not so rare a question as it once was:

"We cannot have Mrs. —— come to work for our cause, nor, indeed, any other of the National workers, because there seems open no suitable place for her to be entertained. The public in our pleasant village really know little about us, for we cannot be called representative women; we are small in number, and ordinary. Will you give us some hint of what we can do?"

Gladly: reconstruct your definition of the grand old word "hospitality." From Abraham down, it has, it can have, no substitute. An old writer said he found it as universal as the face of man. New writers cannot say as much.

With the struggle for money and place, several things have crept into our lives unconsciously to ourselves. We strain not only a point, but all the available points, to appear richer and finer than we are. Simple, comfortable things no longer satisfy, and because, forsooth, the stranger within the gates must have a glimpse of our every-day life, we lock the door against her, mainly to keep up appearances.

O, for a return to Christian simplicity in living! It would bring peace and leisure to home-makers and set them again "on hospitable thoughts intent." This does not mean show; it does not mean elaborate French dishes. At the risk of throwing a firebrand into somebody's home I add, you have no right to give your husband and children what would not fully supply the needs of reasonable W. C. T. U. women "who go about."

You have read the hints in that indispensable booklet, "The Annual Leaflet," and know that speakers need rest, quiet, fire in winter, an empty drawer, a table for scribbling, and wholesome food. A hundred places in the village could furnish these.

Hospitality presupposes no return for what you give. Is this the case? A thousand young folks in the land have a deeper light in the eyes that look into 1903 because they once looked across the plain home breakfast table into the earnest face of one of our workers and listened to her earnest words. It was "angels unawares."

I heard one of our elderly women, a cultivated and devoted one, lately say: "If I have liberal culture and broad views of life, with its manifold issues, as you say I have, it is largely due to the fact that my father's house was an unpaid inn for all the people who stood for a cause. Every moral subject, every great public question, I heard discussed from all sides as I sat unnoticed at mother's left behind the milk pitcher. "For our own sakes," she added, "and our children's sakes, our doors have always been open to every Christian reformer. We never try to be 'elegant,' but I observe that our friends seem to enjoy coming again. Universally such people are easy and delightful to entertain. They don't care for mere externals; they have the heart of things."

I have been the happy guest in many homes, going on errands philanthropic and religious. The most nearly perfect hostess I ever knew lived in a log house. A carriage load of unexpected friends, who knew enough to appreciate real worth, could not disconcert this widow, even though the family table—always sweet and wholesome—was set for dinner. "We'll just put on four more plates," she would say, her face beaming, "and we'll all go over to the cove after dinner and take a ride on the lake to a thicket where the lilies are blooming." Small wonder that her son is well and favorably known in the scientific world.

MORAL.—Don't try to appear what you are not, in the home or out of it, and remember that the best things are done by unpretentious people. Then air your best bed and invite the next peripatetic temperance woman to stay with you.

MOTHER EXPERIENCE.

"A LARGE UPPER CHAMBER, WHOSE WINDOW OPENED TOWARDS THE SUN-RISING. THE NAME OF THE CHAMBER WAS PEACE." PILGRIM'S PROGRESS

If we keep our souls in patience, if we hold fast to our faith and hope and love, the soft streams of healing power will flow into us and through us. We shall receive and give out the infinite good.—Charles G. Ames.

***

Thou hatest hatred's withering reign;
In souls that discord maketh dark.
Dost Thou rekindle love's bright spark,
And make them one again?
—Paul Gerhardt.

***

Good would it be for men if, remembering that life is something more than toil and struggle, they would snatch an hour from their labors, and seek in the stillness of their souls that voice which only the humble can hear, that strength which only the meek can obtain.—James Drummond.

***

Since I am coming to that holy room
Where with the choir of saints forevermore
I shall be made Thy music, as I come
I tune the instrument here at the door,
And, what must I do then, think here before.
—John Donne.

***

What is the secret of serenity? We all want to know it. Indeed, we do know it already. There is no secret about it. St. Paul speaks it out plainly enough. Everybody can see what it is. All things work together for good to them that love God. We must love God; that is the heart of it. Happiness, content and right satisfaction, all doubts answered, all dark places lighted up, heaven begun here—this is the reward of loving God. In this world, tribulation; yes, but good cheer in spite of that, for the Son of God, whom we love, has overcome the world.—George Hodges.

***

"Since all her life's long melody
Was set to keys of love,
She will not find the music strange
That fills the courts above;
But when her eyes, with rapture clear,
Shall read the heavenly score,
Hers in the endless song will be
The part she knew before!"

***

This is the way to do a good day's work: Begin it with God; do all in the name of the Lord Jesus and for the glory of God; count nothing common or unclean in itself—it can be so only when the motive of your life is low. Be not content with eye-service, but as servants of God do everything from the heart and for His "Well done." Ask Him to kindle and maintain in your heart the loftiest motives, and be as men which watch for the coming of the master of the house.—F. B. Meyer.

***

The day is done; the weary day of thought and toil is past,
Soft falls the twilight cool and gray on the tired earth at last;
By wisest teachers wearied, by gentlest friends oppressed,
In thee alone, the soul, outworn, refreshment finds and rest.
Bend, gracious Spirit from above, like these o'er-
arching skies,
And to thy firmament of love lift up these longing
eyes;
And, folded by thy sheltering hand, in refuge still and deep,
Let blessed thoughts from thee descend, as drop the dews of sleep.
—Eliza Scudder.

***

Nothing short of the Life of the Eternal Son of God—the holiness, the purity of God—is the standard at which we are to aim; that is to be reproduced in our circumstances; the divine perfections are to be translated, reproduced in our life, our home, our trials, our difficulties, our age of the world. Let us ask ourselves, What is the special likeness of Christ that He would reproduce in me? What are the features of His life that He calls me to imitate? What pattern would He set before me in my work, my circumstances, my difficulties? What are the inspirations of grace that He would urge me to cultivate and cherish?—Arthur C. A. Hall.

OFFICIAL COMMUNICATIONS

REST COTTAGE. THE WILLARD.

GENERAL OFFICERS:

President,
MRS. LILLIAN M. N. STEVENS, Portland, Me.
Vice-President-at-Large,
MISS ANNA A. GORDON, Evanston, Ill.
Corresponding Secretary,
MRS. SUSANNA M. D. FRY, Evanston, Ill.
Recording Secretary,
MRS. CLARA C. HOFFMAN, Kansas City, Mo.
Asst. Recording Secretary,
MRS. FRANCES E. BEAUCHAMP, Lexington, Ky.
Treasurer,
MRS. HELEN M. BARKER, Evanston, Ill.

Headquarters National W. C. T. U., Evanston, Ill.

Corresponding Secretary's Notes.

DEAR SISTERS: I wonder if all of you know that the Annual Leaflets and Annual Reports are awaiting your orders. The Leaflets are only one cent each or seventy-five cents a hundred. All new unions ought to have one leaflet for each member and other unions should have several for reference. It would be of great value, too, if each union would have a copy of the Annual Report, price fifteen cents, which contains the full address of the National President, the Corresponding Secretary's report on the general work, on the Memorial Fund and the Organizing department, as well as reports from all of the superintendents of the different National departments. Both of these publications contain the addresses of the National workers, and they are very valuable for reference. Order them early, of Mrs. Barker, Evanston, Ill., that you may have the full benefit of them during the year.

Certainly you are all pleased with the appearance of THE UNION SIGNAL nowadays. Every issue is a storehouse of information and inspiration. I know of no other weekly that gives the same help as does our official organ, or anything equally good for the same amount of money. The typographical make-up, the many illustrations, the broad view of other reform work, and the complete setting forth of our own work must appeal favorably to every one who reads THE UNION SIGNAL. It seems incredible that any of our unions should hope to live and grow very long without this paper. I only wish that I might say something which would inspire every white-ribboner to take it and read it, but I know that I am only preaching to those who already have it. We must all be missionaries in order to bring this means of enlightenment to the knowledge and favor of others, for it is meat and drink to the work.

State workers often ask me to send new unions certain departmental literature. It is impossible for me to do this for several reasons. The unions should be instructed to apply for this either to the W. T. P. A., 184 La Salle St., Chicago, or to the superintendents as per addresses in the Annual Leaflet.

We are already hearing of preparations for many commemorative meetings, and we hope that no union this year will deprive itself of the benefit of a loving consideration of the life and works of our great leader. If a public meeting is not possible, then the union hour will be well spent if given over to loving remembrances.

The Evanston and Reiley unions meet at National headquarters, Friday, the 13th, and each member is asked to occupy one minute in telling what characteristic of Miss Willard or of her work seemed most impressive. Certainly every union might have such a meeting as this. The National officers at headquarters, and one or two others, are to make special remarks. If you will try it, I think you will be surprised to find how many men will respond to invitations to speak at public meetings, and how well they will occupy the time, as many of them have been diligent students along this line, and not a few have been warm personal friends of Miss Willard.

Yours cordially,
SUSANNA M. D. FRY.

Organizers.

THE day after Christmas I sailed for Florida, spending five days at Jacksonville in the hospitable home of Mr. and Mrs. Le Bourveau. Mrs. Le Bourveau is the president of a large and flourishing union, which meets weekly; they are taking up a large number of departments, as well as filling a column once a week in "The Times Union," the leading paper of the state and published at Jacksonville. My time was largely occupied in planning a week's work in various parts of the city. On my return trip I hope to organize some new unions in the suburbs.

I gave one lecture, held two ladies' meetings and addressed the Boys' Military Club, composed of twenty boys, with Dr. Taylor as commander.

The captain who drills these boys was a colonel in the army in the Philippine Islands, and at the close of my address he came forward and said: "I have a confession to make. These boys all know that I am a moderate drinker; and they know that I smoke cigars, but Mrs. Bailey's talk has convinced me that I ought not to set such an example before this body of boys, and that tobacco and liquor are extremely harmful to me; therefore, tonight I am going to take the triple pledge, which the Woman's Christian Temperance Union will furnish to me. Hereafter while God permits me to live on this beautiful earth, I will never again touch tobacco or drink alcoholic liquor. Furthermore, no boy in this club can drill under me who also will not take this pledge and keep it."

Great applause greeted this declaration, and we all felt that good would result from this meeting. Dr. Taylor publishes a little paper of his own, and a copy was sent to me in which the statement was made that all the boys, perhaps with a half dozen exceptions, signed the pledge at the next regular meeting.

I made a tour of this state eight years ago, and everywhere I am gladly welcomed back, while new places that I never heard of are sending me invitations to come to them. Every place of any size in the state has already accepted me, and I fear that there are more calls than I can fill. Many places where I have now spoken twice are urging me to return before I go north.

In many of the large towns great effort for local option is being made, and elections on "wet" or "dry" are the order for the spring election. All are asking for my assistance in that line of work.

I have succeeded in organizing two new unions, one at Cedar Keys, with thirty members, twenty-four active, six honorary.

High Springs has thirty-seven members, twenty-two active, fifteen honorary. The president of Cedar Keys writes to me that she has already added new members and has organized an L. T. L.

I have just summed up my report for my first month's work in Florida, and find that in January I gave twenty-two lectures, held twelve ladies' meetings, four children's meetings, secured 122 new members to local unions, of which ninety-four were active and twenty-eight honorary members. I ordered for these unions literature amounting to $48.95, traveled 1,918 miles, and wrote in the meantime 163 letters, besides which I filled a column once a week in "The Metropolis," one of Jacksonville's leading papers.

I am not only getting each union aroused on department work, and urging the prompt payment of dues, but I am inducing everyone to begin at once a membership contest, to increase members, arouse interest, advertise our organization and our principles, and strengthen our forces generally.

In a January number of THE UNION SIGNAL will be found in our National corresponding secretary's letter, extended mention of membership contest methods, and I would ask every local union to read this letter at their next regular meeting, that they may fully understand how to go to work successfully.

I write this letter at the most beautiful place in all the sunny Southland, Daytona, from the pleasant home of Mrs. Geo. H. Clark, by whom I am entertained. Mrs. Clark is one of the leading W. C. T. U. women of the town. Forty ladies attended my ladies' meeting yesterday. Twenty new active members were secured, besides ten honorary members.

MRS. L. E. BAILEY.

Daytona, Fla.

"Not One Mouthful of table food should be given a child before it is one year old," says Dr. Holt. What substitute then? Borden's Eagle Brand Condensed Milk is absolutely the safest and best infant food obtainable. Avoid unknown brands. Send for "Baby's Diary."

A Call for More Ammunition.

DEAR COMRADES:—I am satisfied that the W. C. T. U. methods of making out reports is about as near perfect as any that can be named. Yet, I am also convinced that no "methods" are so complete that they cannot be improved.

In looking over the National report and endeavoring to secure the most telling facts from the various reports of National superintendents, to present to the public in the interest of our cause, it has occurred to me that, if all National superintendents would, at the close of their reports (as some do) give a condensed summary of work reported, it would be of invaluable service to organizers, evangelists and lecturers, as well as to local unions; and no local union or field worker can afford to be without the National report. It would be easier to glean from it, if they could turn to the summary or sum total of each of the forty department reports, and find each one condensed. For instance, we could take the report of literature distributed in each of the forty departments, add them up, and get the sum total distributed by the W. C. T. U. in the United States (as far as reported) and by the same process we could secure the number of sermons preached, conversions made, mothers' meetings held, pledges signed, reading rooms and libraries maintained, etc. Then we would be able to give the larger figures we are entitled to, as we present our cause before the public, and would also be better able to answer intelligently the question, "What is the W. C. T. U. doing anyhow?"

It seems to me that by thus condensing, we could put volumes of facts in ten minutes that would tell and answer the above question.

Yours for more ammunition with which in His Name to kill the drink curse,

MARY E. TEATS,
National Evangelist.

Fremont, Neb.

Crowned.

Mr. L. L. Kearney, of Vernon, Miss., uncle of Miss Belle Kearney, National lecturer, has recently passed away. He was one of God's saints. Miss Kearney's father is now the last of the immediate family.

Entered into rest January 30, 1903, Mrs. B. F. Wood, mother of Lilian Wood, National organizer. Mrs. Wood had been a patient sufferer for years. One of the most refined and consecrated of women, her life was a benediction to her friends. She was a staunch supporter of our W. C. T. U. work, and her tender heart always went out to the suffering. For over a year Miss Lilian has been unable to leave her, but we know these shut-in hours with this sweet, consecrated spirit will leave a blessed influence, and she will be better fitted than ever to deal with the suffering and sinning.

* * *

Appetite Coaxing

Not Necessary When Proper Food is Used.

Coaxing up an appetite is hard work and unnecessary when a little thought is given to scientific feeding.

Fill the stomach with the wrong stuff and it is not long before the palate too is affected, and even the sight of food is nauseating. Stomach and nervous ills of all kinds soon come and the body is left without nourishment.

Then take on Grape Nuts for a few days and see the difference. Eating is no longer a duty but a delight, for the food is made of the proper grains prepared in a natural, scientific manner and the flavor is delicious. The case of a schoolma'am of Cedar Mills, Minn., is interesting. She writes: "I used to go without lunch many a day, not finding it tasty. In consequence I usually had a severe headache before the afternoon session was over and felt nervous and cross.

"I had almost concluded to give up teaching on this account when a friend induced me to try Grape-Nuts. I will say frankly I did not care for it at first, but tried it two or three times and then found myself beginning to enjoy the crisp, nutty flavor.

"The food has changed the order of my life. I carry it for lunch every day now. The color has come back to my cheeks and lips and I have no more headaches or nervous spells.

"My body is full of energy and new life, and life seems worth the living, now that I have found the proper food." Name given by Postum Company, Battle Creek, Mich.

KINDLY MENTION THE UNION SIGNAL WHEN WRITING ADVERTISERS.

New England Conservatory of Music has now the finest building devoted to music in the world. Founded 1853. Unsurpassed advantages in composition, vocal and instrumental music, and elocution.
George W. Chadwick, Musical Director.
Pupils received at any time. For year-book address
FRANK W. HALE, General Manager, Boston, Mass.
KINDLY MENTION THE UNION SIGNAL WHEN WRITING ADVERTISERS.

LEARN PROOFREADING.
If you possess a fair education, why not utilize it at a genteel and uncrowded profession paying $15 to $35 weekly? Situations always obtainable. We are the original instructors by mail.
HOME CORRESPONDENCE SCHOOL, Philadelphia

CHIRON LUBRICATING PILE CONE
A small, hollow, perforated wooden cone, filled with the Chiron Ointment, especially prepared for the purpose. Perfect and continuous lubrication by soothing and healing ointment directly to the sore spots. Endorsed by physicians. Immediate relief and a certain cure for ALL KINDS OF PILES. Regular price, $3. SPECIAL PRICE (for 30 days only), $1. By mail, sealed in plain wrapper.
The CHIRON Mfg. Co., Plainfield, N. J.
KINDLY MENTION THE UNION SIGNAL WHEN WRITING ADVERTISERS.

Don't Miss the February Issue of The YOUNG CRUSADER.

DRINKING FOUNTAINS FOR MAN AND BEAST
Catalogues mailed on request, and special prices given to all Charitable and Temperance Societies.
MANUFACTURED BY
THE J. L. MOTT IRON WORKS,
84-90 Beekman St., NEW YORK.
PATENTED.
Copyright, 1902, by The J. L. Mott Iron Works.
KINDLY MENTION THE UNION SIGNAL WHEN WRITING ADVERTISERS.

SPECIAL
Anti-Cigaret
NUMBER OF
The Young Crusader
IS THE
February Issue
Place your orders at once so that the papers for distribution on ANTI-CIGARET SUNDAY, March 1st, will reach you promptly.
Price, $2.00 per hundred
Woman's Temperance Publishing Association,
Chicago, Illinois.

W. C. T. U. Notes.

The W. C. T. U. of Shenandoah, Iowa, will present $100 to the city library for the purchase of new books.

Alton, Cairo, Normal and Edwardsville, Ill., are holding many medal contests.

The union at Weatherford, Tex., has determined to place The Union Signal in every W. C. T. U. family in Weatherford.

Miss Christine Tinling is speaking for the unions in Virginia and North Carolina, winning personal friends and many members wherever she goes.

Miss Anna Quinby was the guest of honor at a Y social at New Castle, Pa., in January. Her address was much enjoyed.

The Spokane, Wash., union is holding medal contests. They held one in Spokane and another the same week five miles out in the country.

Elizabeth, N. J., union is filling barrels of clothing for the children of miners killed while at work, which the union at Lancaster, Pa., will distribute.

A new Y has been organized at Trenton, N. J., and one is soon to be organized at Spokane, Wash., by Miss Emma Page.

At the last meeting of the Kissimmee, Fla., union seven active and four honorary members were received, and a club of twenty-seven ten-weeks' subscribers to The Union Signal was secured.

Mrs. A. C. Zehner, of Texas, conducted union services during the week of prayer at Sedalia, Mo., with great success. She was urged to continue the meetings for another week, but previous engagements prevented.

Memorial services have been held by the unions of Toledo, Ohio, Newton, Pa., and by the Penn's Park, Pa. Y. Fond du Lac, Wis., Reading, Pa., and New Holland, Pa., are to hold such service at their next meetings.

A correspondent writes: "The W. C. T. U. of Carleton, Neb., were fortunate in securing Reverend C. M. Sheppard to give his temperance lecture, 'From the Cradle to the Grave.' The Carleton union and every one that heard the lecture pronounced it fine."

The W. C. T. U. and Anti-Saloon League of Van Buren county, Mich., are busy preparing a vigorous campaign against the liquor element of said county. The contest in favor of local option bids fair to be a severe one on both sides of the case.

The Woman's Christian Temperance Union of Summit, N. J., has asked the board of fire chiefs to accept a forty-gallon coffee urn to cost $150 which the union wishes to purchase and present the fire department so that the men may have hot coffee while at work at fires.

The Woman's Suffrage League of Wisconsin and the Woman's Christian Temperance Union are behind the constitutional amendment resolution which has been introduced giving women the right to vote, and the members of these associations promise to fight hard to secure the passage of the measure.

The Woman's Christian Temperance Union of Omaha, Neb., contemplates a renewal of the crusade against cigarets. A committee has been appointed to have charge of the movement and a public meeting is to be called to arouse the public to the enormity of the cigaret evil.

The youngest official in the Physical Education Department is Mauryce Curry, of Olympia, Washington, fourteen years of age, who is a county superintendent. She has made a tour of the county in company with her aunt, Miss Emma Page, and has sent in a club for the "Quarterly" and an order for literature.

BROWN'S BRONCHIAL TROCHES
TRY THEM FOR
Coughs, Colds, Asthma, Bronchitis, Hoarseness, and Sore Throat.
Fac-Simile Signature of John L. Brown & Son on every box.

The village board of Ovid, Mich., has adopted the curfew petition presented by the W. C. T. U. of that village, and it will become an ordinance as soon as proper notice can be published. The board also decided to serve notice on all the saloons and liquor-selling places to abide by the Raines law in closing on time and keeping closed Sundays; also to keeping minors from frequenting their places.

The Central Union of Chicago held special services in Willard Hall on Feb. 16, in commemoration of Miss Willard's heavenly birthday. Mrs. Leonora M. Lake, of St. Louis, Mo., a vice-president of the National Catholic Total Abstinence Union and a devoted member of the W. C. T. U., was the speaker, and her matchless eloquence never found happier expression than in the tender tribute paid to our beloved chieftain.

Miss Anne Rothwell Stewart, one of the Y associates in the National Physical Education department, is doing fine work for the Y branch. Classes are organized and conducted with excellent results. Miss Stewart has just closed engagements in Minnesota, and is now in North Dakota. Miss Della Mae Connett, another Y associate in the Physical Education department, is giving her best service to her home state, Ohio, this winter.

A newspaper despatch from Vancouver, Wash., says: Sunday evening a number of ladies visited saloons in this city and watched the gambling which they allege was being carried on. After making the rounds and taking notes they went to their homes. The women are among the highest in social circles and belong to the Woman's Christian Temperance Union. Their work will doubtless be taken up in regular order when that association meets.

Greenville, Tex., W. C. T. U. has given a spelling match, which proved pleasant and profitable. The old blue-back speller was used. Two ladies who did not belong to the W. C. T. U. were the leaders. This entertainment was well advertised for ten days in the papers. The entrance fee was 10 cents. The prize awarded was a handsome china cake plate. It was then presented to the cold water fund. Greenville W. C. T. U. is preparing to supply the city with free ice water next summer.

Tioga county, N. Y., W. C. T. U. held its semi-annual convention February 6. Mrs. Louise S. Rounds, honorary president of Illinois, now residing in Clifton Springs, N. Y., was the speaker. She was invited to remain over the following Sabbath, speaking morning and evening. Her work was highly appreciated and commended, her evangelistic work especially praised. On the 9th the local election was held, the town going for no-license. Two years before there was a majority of sixty-four for license. The W. C. T. U. and all good people are jubilant.

The W. C. T. U. has been bombarding Representative Burke, of South Dakota with petitions asking him to help in preventing re-establishment of the army canteen. He has replied to many that so far as he can see no change is likely during this session of Congress, but still the petitions, letters and telegrams pour in. Now Mr. Burke is urging his constituents to inveigh against the canteens in the fashionable homes of Washington, where, he says, the punch served on reception days is stiff enough to make one's hair stand straight.

Mrs. Ella A. Boole recently addressed the Christian Association at Syracuse, N. Y. The rooms were crowded and many were turned away. Ninety-seven pledges were given, fifty being those of men. These were secured not by passing the pledges among the students, but in a word explaining the Twentieth Century Pledge Signing movement and saying that pledges would be on a table at close of address, and those who wished to identify themselves with this movement and the cause it represented could do so there. It is because of the spontaneity of those who came that the number is valued.

We Want a BRIGHT BOY to work after School Hours

Any boy who reads this advertisement can start in business on his own account selling The Saturday Evening Post
No money required. He can begin next week.
Many boys make over $5 a week. Some are making $15.
THE work can be done after school hours and on Saturdays. Write to us at once and we will send full instructions and 10 copies of the magazine free. These are sold at 5 cents a copy and provide the necessary money to order the next week's supply at the wholesale price. $225.00 in cash prizes next month.
THE CURTIS PUBLISHING COMPANY
451 Arch Street, Philadelphia
KINDLY MENTION THE UNION SIGNAL WHEN WRITING ADVERTISERS.

OIL--SMELTER--MINES.
Dividend-Paying Mining, Oil and Smelter Stocks, Listed and Unlisted, our Specialty.
DOUGLAS, LACEY & CO.,
Bankers & Brokers, Fiscal Agents,
Members N. Y. Consolidated Stock Exchange.
66 BROADWAY & 17 NEW ST., NEW YORK.
Booklets giving our successful plan for realizing the large interest and profits of legitimate mining, oil and smelter investments, sub. blanks, full particulars, etc., sent free on application.
KINDLY MENTION THE UNION SIGNAL WHEN WRITING ADVERTISERS.

Ferry's Seeds
are planted by farmer and gardener who has stopped experimenting. It pays to pay a little more for Ferry's and reap a great deal more at the harvest. All dealers. 1903 Seed Annual postpaid free to all applicants.
D. M. FERRY & CO., Detroit, Mich.
KINDLY MENTION THE UNION SIGNAL WHEN WRITING ADVERTISERS.

ILLINOIS CENTRAL — CENTRAL MISSISSIPPI VALLEY ROUTE — RAILROAD
New Line Fine Service.
Minneapolis and St. Paul
Fast "Limited" night train, with stateroom and open-section sleeping car, buffet-library car, and free reclining chair car through without change. Dining car service.
A. H. HANSON, G. P. A., CHICAGO.

LADIES—STUDY AT HOME
TRAIN TO NURSE
Use leisure hours to become independent. Every woman inexperienced or experienced in nursing should receive a thorough course of theoretical training before assuming the responsibility of ministering to the sick. Our course universally endorsed by physicians and surgeons as practical and easy of comprehension. Our faculty, leading physicians and surgeons of Chicago. Our scholars enthusiastic in our support. Diploma. Catalogue free.
American Cor. School for Nurses, O—167 Dearborn, Chicago.
KINDLY MENTION THE UNION SIGNAL WHEN WRITING ADVERTISERS.

Home Treatment For A Cold.

By Cordelia A. Greene, M. D.

THE condition of ill-health commonly termed "a cold," usually arises from one or more of three causes: Prolonged exposure to cold, which produces congestion, invariably at the weakest point; arrested circulation from clogging of one or more of the waste avenues, and the mischievous endemic influences in which microbes play so important a part.

Persons who have a clear and active condition of the functions of nutrition and waste are usually only slightly affected by exposure to changes of temperature or any of those forms of disease induced by microbes. Where there is an obstructed condition of the liver, kidneys, skin and other waste avenues, obstinate and serious congestion is sure to come from slight depressing causes and makes a predisposition to influenza, la grippe or even pneumonia or diphtheria.

EARLY CARE OF A COLD.

If colds were properly managed during the first twenty-four hours, much after suffering would be averted.

Perspiration should be induced if possible the first night before retiring. An hour before supper, take a heaping teaspoonful of the phosphate of soda dissolved in nearly a pint of hot water. The supper should consist largely of liquid food, hot milk, rich broths or gruels. Just before retiring take a deep capsicum footbath 112 degrees, adding hot water three or four times during ten minutes. Before drying the feet, rub them several times with a towel wrung dry from cold water. Drink while in the footbath and after getting warmly into bed two doses of the "Diffusible Stimulant." Drinking the full amount of hot water doubles its power. It flushes the kidneys, quickens the circulation, opens the pores of the skin, dissolves the thickened secretions and hastens resolution in the congested localities. The next morning, in a warm place, rub the entire body thoroughly with a warm, coarse bath towel.

The stimulant should be taken an hour before each meal and before retiring until the cold has quite abated.

This method of treatment is far superior in its present and after effects to the home use of hot slings made from any form of alcoholic stimulants. These or Jamaica ginger, which is largely alcohol, or the large doses of quinine so commonly used, expend their force largely upon the brain and nervous system, often causing head trouble and greatly aggravating it when it exists. The use of quinine, even in malarial climates should be left to the prescription of a physician. Far too much of it is needlessly and carelessly taken as a domestic remedy.

Increasing pain in the chest and difficulty of respiration in the beginning of a cold are indications that a physician should at once be called.

MUSTARD PASTE.

Where there is a strong tendency to congestion about the head and chest prompt applications of mustard are of great value. The mustard should be spread hot upon thick manilla paper, ten inches long by eight wide. The paste should be eight by six inches. Cover with cheese cloth. Apply to the legs and arms, confined by bandages. As soon as keen smarting ensues, move to a new position downward until the entire surface has been nearly covered. Place on chest and spine when needed. This method of applying mustard has a powerful derivative influence for diverting the blood from the chest and head.

THE POCKET INHALER.

When the air passages are obstructed so as to prevent nasal breathing, a small pocket inhaler may be advantageously used. Fill the center third of the inhaler loosely with absorbent cotton. Pour upon this ten drops of the inhalant. Remove the corks from both ends of the inhaler and sniff the vapor powerfully through the obstructed nostril. Replace the corks when the inhaler is not in use. It should be cleansed and its contents renewed every day, if it is frequently used. It aids much in securing nasal breathing during the night.

CATARRHAL COLD.

If the nasal and other passages should be very irritable and there should be heavy discharges, flush the mucous surfaces of the anterior and posterior nasal passages well with the "Antiseptic Wash." Bending over a bowl, close one nostril, bury the other beneath the liquid and draw it through the nostril freely into the mouth, without sound or the admission of air. Eject it from the mouth. Use a pint of the "Antiseptic Wash" each time. It is really more effective applied in this way than by the siphon or nasal douche.

List of Remedies Advised and Method of Preparation.

DIFFUSIBLE STIMULANT.

"Diffusible Stimulant" is a combination of "ginger syrup" and "ammoniated capsicum." It is a most valuable remedy for chilliness, weakness from exhaustion or a severe cold. It can be made at home as follows:

GINGER SYRUP.

Dry a pound of ginger root in a warm, not hot, place. Pound it in a mortar until the pieces are like grains of wheat. Cook slowly in two quarts of water for four hours, simmering in a closed vessel of tin, porcelain or iron. Strain off the liquid. Add two quarts of water to the ginger and steep again one hour. Strain off the liquid. A double cheese cloth makes the best strainer. Put the two strained liquids together, simmer to two quarts. Add to this four pounds sugar. Cook slowly until the sugar is thoroughly melted and the syrup boiling hot. Can in pint glass cans or bottles sealed—the same as fruit.

AMMONIATED CAPSICUM.

To two tablespoonfuls of the tincture of capsicum add two tablespoonfuls of the purest aqua ammonia and thirty grains of fresh crystals of muriate of ammonia. Put all in a two ounce glass stopped bottle. Shake well together until the crystals are all dissolved.

DIRECTIONS FOR USE.

For one dose, pour on one tablespoonful of the syrup a glass of very hot water and add three drops of the ammoniated capsicum. Drink one hour before each meal and at bedtime.

If chilliness is severe and perspiration is desired, three doses may be given at intervals of one-half hour. For children under twelve years of age use only one-half the amount. The medicine must not be given without the full proportionate amount of hot water.

Applications of heat to the extremities and painful localities should always be made.

FOR ABDOMINAL OR PERIODICAL PAIN FOR WOMEN OR MEN.

In cases of severe abdominal or periodical pelvic pain, the "Diffusible Stimulant" may be given every half hour. Swallow, just before taking the stimulant, a five-grain capsule or tablet of ammonol. After taking the ammonol three times, five hours should elapse between succeeding doses. It should be discontinued as soon as the pain moderates. One-third the above should be given children under six years of age; one-half to children between six and twelve years old.

AMMONOL.

Obtain one drachm of ammonol and a box of five-grain capsules. Divide the ammonol into twelve portions and fill one dozen capsules.

PHOSPHATE OF SODA.

Phosphate of soda, four ounces. Dissolve one heaping teaspoonful in a little hot water. Fill the glass full of hot water. Take once a day, an hour before the meal. This acts gently upon the liver and stimulates all the intestinal secretions.

CAPSICUM FOR FOOT-BATH.

Steep one pound of capsicum in one quart of vinegar for two hours. Add a little boiling water, so as to have one quart of the liquid when finished. Put up in tightly corked bottles. A large tablespoonful is sufficient to add to ten or twelve quarts of hot water for a foot-bath. The thick portion at the bottom of the bottle may be spread upon paper hot and covered with cheese cloth and used effectively for little children instead of mustard paste, as it will irritate but not blister.

ANTISEPTIC WASH FOR THE NASAL PASSAGES.

Procure two ounces of fresh crystals of chlorate of potash. Rinse clean in cool water. Pour off. Put in a pint bottle, fill with water and shake well. In twenty-four hours it is a saturate solution. As long as there are crystals remaining at the bottom, the bottle can be refilled.

To one pint equal parts of milk and water, milk warm, add three tablespoonfuls of this saturate solution of chlorate of potash. Flush the nasal passages according to directions given under "Catarrhal Colds."

INHALANT.

Four teaspoonfuls oil of peppermint, three teaspoonfuls oil of eucalyptus, one teaspoonful aqua ammonia. Mix and keep in one-ounce glass-stopped bottle. Place eight drops on the absorbent cotton in the inhaler.

NOTE.—A pocket inhaler for use in colds, or to relieve obstruction in the nasal passages, may be procured by sending 20 cents in stamps to Cordelia A. Greene, M. D., Sanitarium, Castile, Wyoming county, N. Y.

You Must Get The Book

You who are sick and are waiting—you must get my book.

Must, if you hope to get well; for I know that these diseases, when chronic, are seldom cured in common ways.

Must is a strong word, but it's true. You will know soon or late that a permanent cure demands my help.

I will mail you an order—good at any drug store—for six bottles Dr. Shoop's Restorative. You may take it a month on trial. If it succeeds, the cost is $5.50. If it fails, I will pay the druggist myself—and your mere word shall decide it.

No other physician ever made such an offer. No other remedy could stand such a test. For your own sake, don't neglect it, when you risk not a penny, and success means health.

I have spent a lifetime in learning how to strengthen weak inside nerves. My Restorative brings back that power which alone operates the vital organs. I treat a weak organ as I would a weak engine, by giving it the power to act. My way always succeeds, save when a cause like cancer makes a cure impossible. And most of these chronic diseases cannot be cured without it.

You'll know this when you read my book.

Simply state which book you want, and address Dr. Shoop, Box 948, Racine, Wis.

Book No. 1 on Dyspepsia,
Book No. 2 on the Heart,
Book No. 3 on the Kidneys,
Book No. 4 for Women,
Book No. 5 for Men (sealed),
Book No. 6 on Rheumatism.

Mild cases, not chronic, are often cured by one or two bottles. At all druggists.

Twin Ballots.

The following is copied from the reverse side of a Perrysville (Ind.) saloon keeper's card:

Along in November when chill was the weather,
Two ballots were cast in a box together,
They nestled up close like brother to brother,
You couldn't tell one of the votes from the other.

(Chorus.)
They were both rum votes,
And sanctioned the license plan;
But one was cast by a cunning old brewer
And one by a Sunday-school man.

The Sunday-school man—no man can be truer—
Kept busy all summer denouncing the brewer;
But his fervor cooled off with the change of the weather,
And late in the autumn they voted together.

(Chorus.)
The Sunday-school man has always been noted
For fighting saloons—except when he voted;
He piled up his prayers with a holy perfection,
Then knocked them all down on day of election.

The cunning old brewer was cheerful and mellow;
Said he: I admire that Sunday-school fellow.
He's true to his church—to his party he's truer;
He talks for the Lord, but votes for the brewer.

A newsmonger went to an editor, saying: "I have an item which I would sell. There is a citizen who secretly does much good helping the poor and furnishing means of defense to the wronged." "Thy item," replied the editor, "is worthless." "There is another," continued the newsmonger, "who has a good reputation, but who spends his time in secret, with evil company, gambling and living notoriously." "For this," said the editor, "I will pay thee ten dollars and will make thee a reporter." And he notified the gambler, who came and gave him an hundred dollars and nothing more was heard of the matter.—Bishop Spalding.

A CORKER

But Not Much of a Pastor.

There was an old clergyman in Central New York State some years ago who was a very powerful speaker but whose private life was by no means exemplary. Some of the more outspoken of his parishioners were in the habit of remonstrating with him regularly about this and his reply invariably was, "Don't do as I do, do as I tell you to do."

It is so with a great many physicians. There are hundreds of medical men who fully understand the folly of drinking coffee and tea, who tell their patients not to drink either, yet who use one or the other themselves. But sometimes it knocks even the doctor out and he has to quit Old King Coffee. A physician of Wasioja, Minn., says: "I was a liberal user of coffee from my youth and my health broke down while at college in 1880, at 25 years of age, but I continued to use coffee until 1898, although I was nervous and suffered constantly from a condition known as diabetes insipidus, a condition that is well known to be due to nervousness. My weight was below par and no diet or tonic medicines were sufficient to restore my vitality and strength.

"In 1898 I became suspicious of coffee and I broke off the habit by taking up Postum. Since that time my nerves have become strong and well and my weight has increased about 30 pounds. Well boiled it is a delicious, healthful drink, heavy with strength and muscle making qualities." Name furnished by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

Even if your physician does drink coffee, you had better do as he tells you to do. Give Postum a trial. That's the easy way to shake off coffee and get well and keep well.

Very Few People

Are Free From Some Form of Indigestion.

Very few people are free from some form of indigestion, but scarcely two will have the same symptoms.

Some suffer most directly after eating, bloating from gas in stomach and bowels; others have heartburn or sour risings; still others have palpitation of heart, headaches, sleeplessness, pains in chest and under shoulder blades; some have extreme nervousness, as in nervous dyspepsia.

But whatever the symptoms may be, the cause in all cases of indigestion is the same, that is, the stomach for some reason fails to properly and promptly digest what is eaten.

This is the whole story of stomach troubles in a nutshell. The stomach must have rest and assistance and Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets give it both by supplying those natural digestives which every weak stomach lacks, owing to the failure of the peptic glands in the stomach to secrete sufficient acid and pepsin to thoroughly digest and assimilate the food eaten.

One grain of the active principle in Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets will digest 3,000 grains of meat, eggs or other wholesome food, and this claim has been proven by actual experiment, which anyone can perform for himself in the following manner: Cut a hard boiled egg into very small pieces, as it would be if masticated; place the egg and two or three of the tablets in a bottle or jar containing warm water heated to 98 degrees (the temperature of the body) and keep it at this temperature for three and one-half hours, at the end of which time the egg will be as completely digested as it would have been in the healthy stomach of a hungry boy.

The point of this experiment is that what Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets will do to the egg in the bottle it will do to the egg or meat in the stomach, and nothing else will rest and invigorate the stomach so safely and effectually. Even a little child can take Stuart's Tablets with safety and benefit if its digestion is weak, and the thousands of cures accomplished by their regular daily use are easily explained when it is understood that they are composed of vegetable essences, aseptic, pepsin, diastase and Golden Seal, which mingle with the food and digest it thoroughly, giving the overworked stomach a chance to recuperate.

Dieting never cures dyspepsia, neither do pills and cathartic medicines, which simply irritate and inflame the intestines.

When enough food is eaten and promptly digested there will be no constipation, nor in fact will there be disease of any kind, because good digestion means good health in every organ.

The merit and success of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are world-wide and they are sold at the moderate price of 50 cents for full sized package in every drug store in the United States and Canada, as well as in Europe.

FOR SALE: $10,000 Ohio Railway & Light Co. 5 per cent Gold Bonds. Send for special circular, with President O'Neill's letter. THE JACKSON CO., Middletown, Conn.

Responsive Readings

Published Monthly.

Designed for the use of local unions and of great aid to workers, as they contain information wholly upon the work of the departments of the W. C. T. U.

SUBSCRIPTION PRICE:

Single Copies, per year	$ .10
13 Copies, per year, to one address	1.00
100 of this issue	.50

Subject for February Reading,

Work Among the Indians.

By Mrs. Dorothy J. Cleveland.

Woman's Temperance Publishing Association,

184 LA SALLE ST., CHICAGO, ILL.

How We Kept Washington's Birthday, 1903.

By Rev. Wilbur F. Crafts, Ph. D.

IN an age when we get the news of Europe by cable and wireless telegraphy the day before it happened, it will be in order to describe in advance how we kept Washington's Birthday of this year. It was providential that it came on the Sabbath, for that made it natural, almost inevitable, that pastors would preach on pending patriotic measures, and that the Young People's meetings, the Sabbath-schools, and especially the Y. M. C. A., would consider the patriotic movements that aim to give a better moral environment to our tempted youth.

But the great event of the day was the mobilizing of all organizations that desire good government and good laws in a Union Citizenship Rally in the afternoon. The W. C. T. U. sent a committee of two to every pastor to get enthusiastic announcements of the meeting—in some cases a speech also. Another committee enlisted the Y. M. C. A. and Young People's societies. A program committee prepared and managed the details of the meeting. No time was wasted on irrelevant solos, with more art than heart. It was remembered that the people who would attend would have extended devotions in three other services of the day, besides family worship, and so only ten minutes at the opening and five at the close was given to Scripture and song and prayer. But every minute of that was made a moral force. The president of the Ministerial Association, who presided, gave a ringing keynote by saying: "The watchword I will set at the portals of this meeting is a saying from a psalm I will read that has twice expressed at supreme moments our nation's faith, as it was Washington's faith; when Lincoln was assassinated uttered by Garfield, standing amid the pallid brokers on Wall street, and again recalled when Garfield fell, 'THE LORD REIGNS.'" After that every one listened as to a voice from heaven as he read the 93d Psalm. He then as fitly introduced the appropriate hymn that followed. He said: "In the Revolution, which the name of Washington recalls today, British troops came suddenly one Sabbath into a Long Island church, and commanded the audience to sing "God Save the King." Instead they sang, to the same tune, "Come Thou Almighty King." The hymn was itself a prayer, which he continued in a special prayer for our President and for all public officers and for citizens.

Then the speaking began, six addresses of seven minutes each, two on local, two on state, two on national issues, and one on "The Supreme Reform," of double length, for valedictory. There was a timekeeper at one side to say, "One minute more," when a speaker's time was that near its end, and a bell to use, if necessary, when time was up. To give definiteness and effectiveness to the speeches each quarter hour was devoted to a resolution, which was first read as a text, and the last minute of the quarter hour was saved to vote it while the arguments for it were fresh in mind.

The first resolution was: "Resolved, That in local reform good men of all parties should unite on a platform consisting of that one plank, shaped by General Grant, that all laws should be enforced, that bad laws may be repealed, imperfect laws amended and good laws utilized; and we call on public servants for such enforcement, encouraged by the heroic achievements of the year past in local reform, of District Attorney Falk, of St. Louis, and of Hovey E. Clark, foreman of a truly 'grand jury' at Minneapolis." Two speakers showed "the way out" of "darkest America," our municipal misrule, after which the resolution was voted, and the two speakers were appointed a deputation to present it to local officers.

The second resolution was: "Resolved, That the president of this meeting, and the presidents of all organizations uniting in this meeting (the pastors in the case of churches), are hereby authorized to petition the state legislature in our behalf, through our own senator and representative, not to weaken, but rather strengthen the laws on temperance and morality that make it harder to do wrong and easier to do right." The two speakers on this resolution described the state bills that should be killed and those that should be passed, and amended the resolution to fit the exact issues. They also urged that this and national petitions should be follo d up by letters and telegrams, as infantry volleys and sharpshooting reinforce artillery.

The third resolution was: "Resolved, That the same persons petition in our behalf the Senate of the United States, through our Senators (one petition to each) to pass the House liquor acts, one of which would protect no-license towns and prohibition states against 'interstate commerce' and 'original package' tricks, the other of which, the Immigration Act, would suppress liquor selling in immigrant stations and in the Capitol." The first speaker on this topic explained how express companies do a retail liquor business in no-license towns, and find shelter in the plea that they are engaged in "interstate commerce" and that state laws cannot touch imported goods in "original packages," though they are single bottles. The other speaker pictured all the temperance battles in Congress as parts of one great campaign whose object is to separate the national government, and so ourselves, from all complicity with the liquor traffic. "It is like the capture of a great fortress with outlying breastworks," he said, making a few lines on a blackboard at hand to help us see the picture. "We have captured the outer breastwork in driving liquors from the army through the anti-canteen law, the first national prohibitory law for white men, by which Congress said a second time, after four years' consideration, that even beer and wine—no other liquors were in question—sold from government dispensaries (called 'canteens') are bad for health and bad for order, and if bad for health and bad for order in the army, General Carlin says, bad everywhere. As the acorn implies the oak, that law logically implies national prohibition. Three other breastworks half taken are the prohibition for immigrant stations and the national Capitol and the interstate liquor act, beyond which looms the citadel of 'infernal revenue,' on which Christian citizenship should concentrate its fire so soon as the breastworks are all taken." The resolutions were voted, with orders to send petitions on Monday morning by telegraph.

The last speech, of double length as of double importance, was on "The Supreme Reform." Many wondered what the speaker would name as such, whether temperance or some other moral movement, but he set our minds at rest and commanded our assent when he said: "The supreme reform is to enlist the church in reform, and the way to begin is to get every church to agree that once a month, in sermon or prayer meeting or otherwise, the church will study the question of creating a better moral environment of right relations among men—not confining itself to the first commandment, to righting relations with God, as if that were all. In the words of another," he concluded, "'We must save society if only to make a safe place for saved souls.'"

Washington, D. C.

This Man was perfectly and permanently cured from Rheumatism by The Jebb Discovery, after suffering for twelve years.

This man says: "For twelve years I suffered fearfully with Rheumatism. My back was so affected that I was nearly doubled together, my head and shoulders being lower than my hips. Thanks to The Jebb Discovery, I now walk erect, and though years have elapsed, I have never felt a return of Rheumatism."

The Jebb Discovery for Rheumatism is sent under a guarantee to cure. Two of the best banks in the state of Michigan vouch for the reliability of our Company. A Free Trial Treatment of this wonderful remedy sent postpaid to any address.

THE JEBB REMEDY CO., LTD.
244 Main Street, Battle Creek, Mich.

STALL'S BOOKS

DR. STALL

A Man with a Message

Millions of people always await the man with a real message. Dr. Stall has found it so. His books are already circulated in every land.

275th thousand in English.

They are being translated into several languages in Europe and two in Asia.

THE SELF AND SEX SERIES
has the unqualified endorsement of

Dr. Joseph Cook	Bishop Vincent
Rev. C. M. Sheldon	Anthony Comstock
Rev. F. B. Meyer	"Pansy"
Dr. Theodore L. Cuyler	Frances E. Willard
Dr. Francis E. Clark	Lady H. Somerset

Eminent physicians and hundreds of others.

4 BOOKS TO MEN. By Sylvanus Stall, D.D.
WHAT A YOUNG BOY OUGHT TO KNOW.
WHAT A YOUNG MAN OUGHT TO KNOW.
WHAT A YOUNG HUSBAND OUGHT TO KNOW.
WHAT A MAN OF 45 OUGHT TO KNOW.

4 BOOKS TO WOMEN. By Mrs. Mary Wood-Allen, M.D., and Mrs. Emma F. A. Drake, M.D.
WHAT A YOUNG GIRL OUGHT TO KNOW.
WHAT A YOUNG WOMAN OUGHT TO KNOW.
WHAT A YOUNG WIFE OUGHT TO KNOW.
WHAT A WOMAN OF 45 OUGHT TO KNOW.

$1 per copy, post free. Send for table of contents.

Vir Publishing Co. 78 Real Estate Trust Building, Philadelphia

Burpee's Seeds Grow

Probably you have heard of this famous motto for many years but have you proved for yourself that Burpee's Seeds are the BEST that Grow?

If not, write to-day for Burpee's Farm Annual for 1903—so well-known as "The Leading American Seed Catalogue." It is an elegant book of 184 pages, with beautiful colored plates and will be sent FREE to planters everywhere; —to others upon receipt of 10 cents, which is less than cost per copy in quarter-million editions. Write TO-DAY. Do not delay! It is sufficient to address simply

BURPEE, Philadelphia

Grand Canyon of Arizona

A book about it. Send 50 cents in coin or stamps to W. J. Black, Gen. Pass. Agent, A., T. & S. F. R'y, 1312 Great Northern Building, Chicago, for copy of notable new book entitled "Grand Canyon of Arizona," graphically describing world's greatest scenic wonder.

Contains special articles by Hamlin Garland, Chas. Dudley Warner, Joaquin Miller, John L. Stoddard, Major J. W. Powell, and other noted writers; 124 pages with map and cover in colors and many beautiful half-tone illustrations. Worthy a place in any library.

This titan of chasms may easily be visited any day in the year in connection with California trip over the Santa Fe.

On the Santa Fe

All Y Workers
SHOULD READ THE
Y MANUAL
BY
Mrs. Frances J. Barnes.

Price, 15 Cents.

Woman's Temp. Pub. Ass'n,
CHICAGO.

Free to Everyone.

A Priceless Book Sent Free For the Asking.

Piles Cured Without Cutting, Danger, or Detention From Work, by a Simple Home Remedy.

Pyramid Pile Cure gives instant relief and never fails to cure every form of this most troublesome disease. For sale by all druggists at 50c. a package. Thousands have been quickly cured. Ask your druggist for a package of Pyramid Pile Cure, or write for our little book which tells all about the cause and cure of piles. Write your name and address plainly on a postal card, mail to the Pyramid Drug Co., Marshall, Mich., and you will receive the book by return mail.

THE HOME MAKER

A Monthly periodical by Mrs. EMMA F. A. DRAKE, M. D., author of "What a Young Wife Ought to Know," "What a Woman of Forty-five Ought to Know," and other books. Formerly principal and physician of Mr. Moody's school, at Northfield, Massachusetts.

This magazine deals principally with the problems of parents and children, heredity, environment, purity, child culture, exercise, dress, food, etc.

Every man or woman interested in the making of a True Home, should have this magazine. February number just out.

Subscription $1.00 a year, 25 cents for three months. Send for sample copy today, 10 cents stamps or coin.

Reliable agents wanted everywhere.

THE HOME MAKER, Mack Block, Denver, Colo.

Only One Night to FLORIDA

In addition to its regular 9:00 a. m. and 8:30 p. m. train service for all points south, the "Big Four Route" is running a Pullman drawing room sleeper on its 1:00 p. m. train, daily except Sunday, Chicago to St. Augustine, Florida, via Indianapolis, Cincinnati, Atlanta, Macon and Jacksonville, only 32 hours enroute. This train is known as the "Chicago and Florida Special," and is strictly up to the 20th century mark. Call on agents for rates and tickets via "Big Four-Q & C Route," or address

Chas. S. LaFollette, T. P. A. OR J. C. Tucker, Gen'l Northern Agent

234 Clark St., Chicago

These trade-mark crisscross lines on every package.

Gluten Grits AND BARLEY CRYSTALS,

Perfect Breakfast and Dessert Health Cereals.
PANSY FLOUR for Biscuit, Cake and Pastry.
Unlike all other goods. Ask Grocers.
For book or sample, write
FARWELL & RHINES, Watertown, N. Y., U.S.A.

PRICES REDUCED FOR 60 DAYS.

$4.00 Vapor Bath Cabinet $2.25 each
$5.00 Quaker " " 3.50 each
$10.00 " " " 6.10 each
$1.00 Face & Head Steam. Attch. 65c
Quality best. Guaranteed. $2. Book Free with all "Quakers." Write for our New Catalogue, special 60-Day offer. Don't miss it. Your last chance. New plan, new prices to agents, salesmen, managers. Wonderful sellers. Hustlers getting rich. Plenty territory.
World M'f'g Co., 620 World Bldg., Cincinnati, O.

Ye

Hatchet Partie

A Popular Temperance Entertainment for Washington's Birthday

Price, 5 Cents Each

Woman's Temperance Publishing Association

Chicago, Illinois

Union Signal Day Program

No. 2.

By Meta E. B. Thorne.

The following program was planned for our own union, and therefore needs a word of explanation.

My own experience, after being connected with several different unions (and the same plaint comes to me from the other unions in the county of which I am president), is that it is difficult to induce the men, whom we most need and who most need us, to attend even the public lectures and addresses of our most popular speakers. An earnest personal solicitation will, of course, bring some few, but there are many who can be drawn only by some special attraction, desiring "to see and hear some new thing."

Our plan is to have neatly printed invitations, reading somewhat as follows:

You are cordially invited to a Paper Reception,
at Blank's Hall,
Monday Evening, March 2, 1903.
Mrs. ———, Mrs. ———, Miss ———,
Reception Committee.

We intend to print a large number of these invitations, inclose them in neat envelopes, carefully addressed, and distribute by a corps of assistants from among our little friends to every family in the village and its outskirts. We feel assured that this personal invitation will draw to us a large number.

Our sub-committees, under the general "reception committee," will be program, music, entertainment, UNION SIGNAL and social committees. Several of our gentlemen friends have promised to assist us in the program, which in itself means much.

The portrait of our beloved leader, Mrs. Stevens, will occupy a conspicuous place, decorated with the white ribbon and veiled with a flag. Before it will be placed a stand well supplied with sample copies of our National organ and other of our publications, indicating the purpose of our gathering. Among the leaflets will be a large quantity on the cigaret, the anti-cigaret bill being just now under consideration in our legislature. After the not too lengthy program, a social hour will be enjoyed and light refreshments will be served.

PROGRAM.

1. Instrumental music.
2. Prayer, Rev. ———.
3. Music, "Ribbon White."
4. "The Day We Celebrate." (Speaker unveils portrait of Mrs. Stevens, greeted by rising of the audience, with white-ribbon salute.) She speaks of our President and her work, and reads of a visit to her home. (See UNION SIGNAL, November 6.)
5. Singing by children. ("Opening Song," page 6, UNION SIGNAL, November 6.)
6. A Young Man's Opinion of Cigarets. (Quoting from second and third chapters of story, "A Fight Against Odds.")
7. Flag recitation and song by children. (Page 6, UNION SIGNAL, November 6.)
8. Reading (or recitation), "Habit," (Page 7, UNION SIGNAL, November 6.)
9. Instrumental music, during which children distribute Anti-Cigaret leaflets.
10. Talk on the need to any cause, especially the temperance cause, of an organ which shall fitly represent it.
11. Select music.
12. Presentation of "Our UNION SIGNAL Maiden." (Girl in dress made of UNION SIGNALS basted together. The speaker, in a carefully prepared address, presents our paper, fitly setting forth its various departments and making suitable quotations therefrom.)
13. Instrumental music, during which sample copies of THE UNION SIGNAL are distributed, and the "UNION SIGNAL committee" pass among the audience endeavoring to secure subscribers.
14. Toast, "Our Leader, God Bless Her.". Closing salutation to Mrs. Stevens' portrait, the audience rising, saluting with UNION SIGNALS as well as with handkerchiefs.
15. Singing.

Social hour.

Poynette, Wis.

W. C. T. U. Jingles.

That the constituency of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union is versatile, perhaps has never been doubted, but a perusal of some of the original jingles composed by different members will surely prove that they have various gifts.

The first comes comes from the pen of Miss Mary L. Page of West Washington. It is a banneret issuing from the spout of a quaint Chinese teapot hung on a tripod. It is in her den and she calls it her "Ginger Jar." This is the jingle:

Temp'rance leaflets, piping hot,
Will come out of this teapot
If you'll "tip" it well, my friend.
GIVE, TAKE, READ, LEND.

A variety of the best W. T. P. A. literature lies on the table, on which the "Ginger Jar" stands, free to all.

Already a shining "V" has gone into the jar along with pieces of the white metal, "16 to 1," as a "tip."

Mrs. Currey, Non-Alcoholic Medication superintendent of West Washington, has a tiny shoe with a hole in the toe (worn there by her daughter at twelve months) mounted on a platform, around which is the following inscription:

"By all the tenderness that stirs
At sight of this worn baby shoe,
Help make safe paths for little feet—
Dear friend, may God not count on you?"

From the top of the shoe rises a bannerette inscribed,

"Non-Alcoholic Medication Mite Box."

One of our mercy superintendents imitates the immortal Lincoln by keeping her funds in an old stocking, and it bears this instruction and invitation:

Come, give me your money, your money to hold!
Or copper or silver—I'll change it to gold,
The fine gold of thought—gold of mercy and truth—
To help bring this old world back to sweet sunny youth.

Just a stocking well darned, 'twill hold all you may give,
Then scatter it broadcast, that kindness may live.
Laugh loud, but know, too, as you swell the amount,
That good Lincoln long kept an old stocking account.

Deadly Cancer Cured with Oils.

This terrible disease has at last yielded to a mild treatment. Dr. Bye, the able specialist of Kansas City, Mo., states that this terrible disease can be cured. The Doctor has accomplished some wonderful cures recently in what seemed incurable cases cured in from two to ten weeks' treatment with a combination of Medicated Oils. A handsome illustrated book is sent free showing the disease in its various forms. The Oil cures cancer, tumor, catarrh, piles, fistula, and all skin and womb diseases. Call or address DR. W. O. BYE, 9th and Broadway, Kansas City, Mo.

What Sulphur Does

For the Human Body in Health and Disease.

The mention of sulphur will recall to many of us the early days when our mothers and grandmothers gave us our daily dose of sulphur and molasses every spring and fall.

It was the universal spring and fall "blood purifier," tonic and cure-all, and mind you, this old-fashioned remedy was not without merit.

The idea was good, but the remedy was crude and unpalatable, and a large quantity had to be taken to get any effect.

Nowadays we get all the beneficial effects of sulphur in a palatable, concentrated form, so that a single grain is far more effective than a tablespoonful of the crude sulphur.

In recent years, research and experiment have proven that the best sulphur for medicinal use is that obtained from Calcium (Calcium Sulphide) and sold in drug stores under the name of Stuart's Calcium Wafers. They are small chocolate coated pellets and contain the active medicinal principle of sulphur in a highly concentrated, effective form.

Few people are aware of the value of this form of sulphur in restoring and maintaining bodily vigor and health: sulphur acts directly on the liver, the excretory organs and purifies and enriches the blood by the prompt elimination of waste material.

Our grandmothers knew this when they dosed us with sulphur and molasses every spring and fall, but the crudity and impurity of ordinary flowers of sulphur were often worse than the disease, and cannot compare with the modern concentrated preparations of sulphur, of which Stuart's Calcium Wafers is undoubtedly the best and most widely used.

They are the natural antidote for liver and kidney troubles and cure constipation and purify the blood in a way that often surprises patient and physician alike.

Dr. R. M. Wilkins, while experimenting with sulphur remedies, soon found that the sulphur from Calcium was superior to any other form. He says: "For liver, kidney and blood troubles, especially when resulting from constipation or malaria, I have been surprised at the results obtained from Stuart's Calcium Wafers. In patients suffering from boils and pimples and even deep-seated carbuncles, I have repeatedly seen them dry up and disappear in four or five days, leaving the skin clear and smooth. Although Stuart's Calcium Wafers is a proprietary article, and sold by druggists, and for that reason tabooed by many physicians, yet I know of nothing so safe and reliable for constipation, liver and kidney troubles, and especially in all forms of skin disease as this remedy."

At any rate people who are tired of pills, cathartics and so-called blood "purifiers," will find in Stuart's Calcium Wafers a far safer, more palatable and effective preparation.

$20 A WEEK Straight salary and expenses to men with rig to introduce our Poultry Mixture in country; year's contract; weekly pay. Address, with stamp, Monarch Mfg. Co., Box 1166, Springfield, Ill.

Have you ever attended a

National W. C. T. U. Convention

Here is YOUR Opportunity to be Present at the Next One

We have a plan whereby you may obtain a round trip ticket without any outlay of money, provided you are willing to work and secure NEW subscribers to THE UNION SIGNAL. You will be greatly interested in our proposition, and we will be glad to communicate with you, giving full details of our plans. The work should begin at once

Circulation Department

UNION SIGNAL

184 La Salle Street, CHICAGO

25 CTS. PISO'S CURE FOR 25 CTS.
CURES WHERE ALL ELSE FAILS.
Best Cough Syrup. Tastes Good. Use in time. Sold by druggists.
CONSUMPTION

The Prohibitory Law of Maine.

(Continued from page 2.)

The leading representatives of the remonstrants against resubmission were present in force—the Civic League (analogous to the Anti-Saloon League of other states), the Prohibition party, the Good Templars, the Sons of Temperance, prominent ministers, lawyers and educators—who united in requesting our National President to conduct the case against resubmission. Rev. Almon S. Bisbee, of Brunswick, the first speaker, quoted from Judge Percival Bonney's charge to the jury in a famous liquor case of recent date. Those who attended our National Convention in Portland will recall the genial judge and his address of welcome. Judge Bonney said, in charging the jury in the case referred to:

"The Prohibitory law of the state of Maine was enacted to prevent the miseries and wretchedness of intemperance, the supreme evil which afflicts mankind. The saloon itself is an evil, and its extirpation is demanded by the best interests of society. A judicial experience of twenty-four years has shown that in a majority of cases against burglars, thieves, pickpockets and other law-breakers the saloon has been the rendezvous where these criminals have assembled when through drink the evil nature within them has been aroused, stimulated and excited. The whole atmosphere of the saloon is charged with the poison of iniquity. It demoralizes the keeper, sends those who frequent it to careers of crime, and brings misery to innocent wives and helpless children. The courts, whose duty it is to administer the law, cannot look upon the violation of the liquor law as a trivial offense, nor upon the offender without a deep feeling of condemnation. The whole liquor business is under the ban of the statute, and the liquor dealer is an outlaw. I hope that the good people of Maine will never consent to make the nefarious business lawful, as they certainly can never make it respectable."

When Mr. Bisbee had taken his seat, Representative Swett, of Portland, one of the contrary part, asked him if he were not mistaken in thinking that Judge Bonney used these words in charging a jury.

"I am not mistaken," quietly replied Mr. Bisbee.

"Very well," said Mr. Swett, with rising emphasis and the ring of assurance in his voice; "I wish to say that the gentleman is mistaken. Judge Bonney did not use those words in a charge to a jury, but before the Convention of the National Woman's Christian Temperance Union in Portland last October. No judge in this state ever made a charge like that to a jury."

Mrs. Stevens rose instantly, saying with dignity and vigor: "Mr. Chairman, I had the high honor of presiding over the Convention of the National W. C. T. U. in Portland last October, and I will say that Judge Bonney did not utter those words in his address on that occasion, but he did use them in his charge to a jury a few weeks earlier."

At this sudden turning of the tables the audience gave vent to its enthusiasm, and they not only pounded and clapped, but shouted and screamed their delight. Sheriff Charles Dunn, Jr., who was appointed to fill out Rev. Samuel Pearson's unexpired term, completed the discomfiture of his Portland brother by citing the exact case when the charge was made—a case in which he as sheriff took an active part.

"In this charge," said Mr. Dunn, "Judge Bonney used the exact words quoted, but not at the Convention of the National W. C. T. U., which I had the pleasure of attending." Again the audience showed its sympathy by wild applause.

Fine addresses were made by Rev. Wilbur F. Berry, of the Civic League, and by a number of others, and it was a disappointment to the eager throng of listeners that the hearing could not continue through the evening, owing to the engagement of the hall for another purpose. Mrs. Stevens' address was strong and logical, a splendid defense of the Prohibitory law, now being so well enforced throughout the state.

Mrs. Stevens presented to the committee two important letters: one from Col. Fred Dow, of Portland, son of Gen. Neal Dow and editor of "The Evening Express," and the other from Mr. Hugh J. Chisholm, a wealthy manufacturer and leading business man of the state. Referring to the prohibitory law, Mr. Chisholm said:

"It has been an equal benefit to the moral and financial conditions and general welfare of the whole people of the state. The returns of the savings banks, showing large numbers of depositors, and the average of each depositor, and the general comfortable manner in which the great masses of people live throughout the state, warrants, in my judgment, the absolute continuance of prohibition in the state of Maine. Personally I should be very sorry to see any change made in the present laws, as I regard them as very beneficial to the entire population of the state. In fact, I have such strong faith in the prohibitory law of Maine that in laying out and arranging for the development and future of Rumford Falls, I have incorporated in almost all the deeds conveying property to the various purchasers, a clause which calls for the forfeiture of the property and the improvements thereon if any intoxicating liquors are manufactured or sold upon the premises for three successive months."

Colonel Dow's emphatic letter will be quoted at length next week.

We are planning to go to Augusta when the report of the Committee on Temperance comes before the House for action, and will send to The Union Signal a statement of its results. The one member of the committee known to favor resubmission may persuade another to join him in a minority report, which will give a chance for speech making on the floor of the House. Let me predict that resubmission will be snowed under by the votes of those who desire the continuance of the prohibitory law in the Pine Tree State.

If a Good Fairy

Would only bring health to me—says many a man or woman afflicted with stomach troubles, blood disorders, or liver complaint. In many cases Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is the good fairy which brings back good health, a strong stomach, pure blood and an active liver.

Most diseases begin with some trouble of the digestive organs or of the liver. Troubles of this nature starve the body, because they prevent it from receiving its proper supply of nourishment. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery gives a man an appetite and a good digestion. Its great work is upon the stomach, large intestines and liver. These are the organs that nourish a man's body. This medicine makes them strong, vigorous and healthy. It fills the blood with the nourishment that builds new, solid and healthy flesh, muscle and nerves.

$3,000 Forfeit!

Will be cheerfully paid in lawful money of the United States, by the undersigned, proprietors of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, if they cannot show the original signature of the individual volunteering the testimonial published below, and also of every testimonial among the thousands which they are constantly publishing attesting the superior curative properties of their several medicines, and thus proving the genuineness and reliability of all the multitude of testimonials volunteered by grateful people, in their behalf.

World's Dispensary Medical Association Proprietors,

663 Main Street, BUFFALO, N. Y.

Here is the experience of only one among many:

Dear Sir—A year ago I was troubled with dyspepsia; thought at the time that I had heart trouble and was expecting to die at almost any minute. I made up my mind to write to Dr. R. V. Pierce, which I did, and received a prompt reply, advising me to take his "Golden Medical Discovery." I took six bottles, and can truthfully say that I have neither heart trouble, nor dyspepsia now. I would advise all who are suffering from either trouble to write to Dr. Pierce at once.

You have my permission to publish this letter wherever you wish. Thanking you for your kindness, I am,

Very gratefully yours, Mrs. LOIS HOOPER,

To Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y. Red Bluff, Norris P. O., Mont.

The "Discovery" is purely vegetable and contains no alcohol or narcotics.

FREE! Dr. Pierce's Common Sense Medical Adviser, containing more than 1000 large pages, is sent FREE on receipt of stamps to pay expense of mailing ONLY. Send 21 one-cent stamps for the book in paper covers, or 31 stamps for the cloth-bound volume.

Address: Dr. R. V. PIERCE, Buffalo, N. Y.

THEY GUARANTEE TO CURE RHEUMATISM. SEE AD OF JEBB REMEDY CO., Battle Creek, on page 13.

Customer—But don't you think two dollars a high price for a chicken?

Dealer—Not suburban chickens, sir. Why, every one of these fowls was raised on flower seeds that cost fifty cents a package.

Signal Notes

No-license won in seven towns in Massachusetts at the February election.

Brownsville, Tenn., has gone "dry." Trenton and Covington are close followers, and will soon drive out the saloon.

Alonzo Wilson has been made chairman of the Prohibition state central committee of Illinois.

A red button has been adopted as a badge by those in London who agree not to drink alcoholic beverages except at dinner.

Three hundred people signed the pledge in Des Moines, Iowa, at a temperance meeting held by Rev. and Mrs. McColl.

A bill giving women full suffrage has been introduced in the Illinois legislature, and a bill for school suffrage in the Missouri house.

Nine hundred signatures to the petition favoring temperance legislation were secured in Asheville, N. C., by the Pastoral Association, and sent to the representatives at Raleigh.

The clubs of Pasadena that sell liquor are receiving the attention of the temperance people, who have otherwise a prohibition city. They are determined the "individual bottle" shall go.

Chicago keepers of restaurants with bar attachments are tired of giving away a quarter's worth of lunch with a nickel drink. They have decided to start a legislative crusade against the free lunch.

The school board of Oconto, Wis., has begun war on the cigaret, and announces that any pupil using the weed in any form will be expelled. Dealers who sell tobacco to minors will be prosecuted. It is said that some children in every grade of the public schools constantly use tobacco.

The law permitting department stores or dealers in groceries and other goods to carry on the liquor business if in a separate building, is practically amended by a bill which Assemblyman Byrne has introduced in the New York legislature, so as to prevent such persons from getting any liquor license whatever.

Bedford, Wellington, Leipsic, Edon, Darbyville are a few of the Ohio towns that have voted out the saloons, and there are many more to follow. Painesville, Richmond and Fairport are soon to test the question. An effort will be made by the liquor men to hold Fairport for a base of supplies for the thirsty.

The clergymen of North Attleboro, Mass., are not satisfied with the way the local newspapers handle the liquor question, and have decided to publish a paper themselves for at least a month. The journal will be devoted to the interests of no-license. Mass meetings will also be called for the purpose of defeating the saloon element.

At the meeting of the Irish Association for the Prevention of Intemperance in Dublin a series of resolutions was passed calling on the British government to render legislative assistance to the Irish in their endeavors to curb the ravages of drunkenness. The gathering was exceedingly enthusiastic and the speeches were strikingly outspoken.

The Hale Johnson Memorial Association was organized by the Illinois Prohibition conference at its mid-year meeting in Springfield. The purpose is to collect funds for the erection of a monument to the memory of Hale Johnson. The association will be national in its scope, and steps will be taken to raise the money by means of personal subscriptions throughout the country. Mr. Stewart is treasurer of the association.

The House committee on ways and means has authorized a bill to be reported which provides that no package of manufactured smoking or chewing tobacco, snuff, cigars or cigarets shall have anything packed in or attached to or in any way connected with it other than the manufacturers' wrapper and labels, the internal revenue stamp and the manufactured articles. Further provision is made that nothing shall be affixed or printed upon such packages promising or offering any gift, prize or premium.

Publishers' Notes.

March First.

Are you preparing for the celebration of this, our next Red Letter Day? Abundant material will be found for an interesting program in The Union Signal of February 12th and 19th, and in the new booklet by Mrs. Tomlinson. (Price, 10 cents).

Constantly keep in mind the special subscription offer from March 1st to 8th and let us join in a general canvass for subscribers. Let your aim be to secure every member in the Union as a subscriber and do not be content until this is accomplished.

Unicn Signal Subscription Day.

Desiring to co-operate to the fullest extent in the celebration of our coming Red Letter Day, March 1st, which in honor to our National president and editor-in-chief, has been named Union Signal Subscription Day, by the National W. C. T. U., and to offer every possible aid in the consummation of the purpose for which this day is set aside, namely, the increased circulation of our official organ, the publishers will during the first week in March, accept subscriptions in clubs of ten at the $1 rate. Since the closing of all special offers, January 31st, many letters have been received asking for an extension of time in which to complete the formation of clubs. As the offers positively closed on January 31st, the extension of time could not be granted, but this special subscription season of March 1st to 8th will give to every one having an incomplete club an opportunity to perfect it, and at the same time aid in the celebration of the National Red Letter Day. To the legion of "ten weeks subscribers" this will also furnish an opportunity to place your name upon our regular subscription list for the year at $1.00 instead of the regular rate of $1.50. This offer will not be in force before or after the date mentioned and only from March 1st to March 8th.

Red Letter Days.

There comes from the pen of Mrs. Mary D. Tomlinson, National superintendent of Social Meetings and Red Letter Days, the first of a series of little booklets, which shall contain material for programs for the various Red Letter days. The first of these is prepared for March 1st, UNION SIGNAL Day, and contains an outline program together with a poem by Anna A. Gordon, and a fine sketch of Mrs. Stevens. This booklet will also be found a delightful little souvenir to be used on UNION SIGNAL Day. Price Ten cents.

Anti-Cigaret Sunday Crusader.

The February Young Crusader is a keen weapon against the cigaret. Its sixteen pages of original testimony presents the best scientific thought concerning the evils of cigaret smoking. Educators, ministers, physicians, business men and athletes speak to the American boy and girl in clear, unmistakable argument. Among the many contributors are Prof. Burt G. Wilder, of Cornell University; Dr. Nathan S. Davis, Chicago; Charles H. Blanchard, president of Wheaton College, and F. H. Yost, trainer, University of Michigan. This number of the Crusader is just what you need for the coming Anti-Cigaret Sunday. An extra large edition will be issued to meet the demands of L. T. L. workers. Our last Anti-Cigaret Crusader was exhausted while calls for more were still coming in. Send your orders early. Remember there are special Anti-Cigaret Programs and all material necessary for use on Anti-Cigaret Sunday. This is an Anti-Cigaret-Sunday Crusader. The price is $2 per hundred.

College Extension Travel.

Write F. A. Palmer, Assistant General Passenger Agent, Wabash Railroad, 97 Adams St. Chicago, for complete itinerary of European summer tours. The best opportunity offered in years for visiting Europe at a small expense.

Work Among Indians.

Much interest centers around the February Responsive Reading, because it is the first reading ever written upon the department, Work Among Indians. This is one of the newest lines of work adopted by the National W. C. T. U., the department having been adopted at the Fort Worth Convention in 1901.

The reading is written by Mrs. Dorothy J. Cleveland, National superintendent of the department and one well versed in this subject. Church societies will find this reading one of especial service in home missionary meetings. Price 50 cents per 100.

"The Doom of King Alcohol."

"The Doom of King Alcohol," by Mrs. Clara B. Drake, is a poetical drama in three acts, suitable to be given in a parlor or hall. While it is gracefully written and effectively planned, it is also a strong lesson for temperance, and is especially adapted for the use of a local union. Perhaps nothing is more difficult to secure than material for a good evening's program, but in "The Doom of King Alcohol" this need is fully supplied. The curtain rises with Tellus (the earth) mourning over the desecration of her children, the spirits of the field—Wheat, Barley, Rye, Corn, Hops, Grapes, Apples and Peaches—by King Alcohol.

In the second act King Alcohol and his minions—License, Avarice, Appetite and others—are in the throne room, and listen to the appeals of the Spirits of the fields. License speaks for the King, refusing their requests. The Angel of Prohibition enters and hurls King Alcohol from his throne. The last act shows Tellus again. Around her are the spirits of the fruits and grains rejoicing. Over the ruins of King Alcohol's palace stands the Angel of Prohibition ready for flight.

Those desiring material for an evening's entertainment will be delighted with this little drama. Send for a copy. The price is 10 cents.

The Y. W. C. T. U. Manual.

The Department Manual of the Y. W. C. T. U., by Frances J. Barnes, has been brought up-to-date by the addition of a page of errata prepared by Mrs. Clara Parrish Wright. To those newly entering the Y this manual will give the information they are so eagerly seeking. The first pages contain a full history of the Y branch. The purpose and plan of the organization, the preliminary work necessary, and how to organize are clearly treated. Constitutions, programs, socials, department work suitable for the Y's and much more valuable instruction, is given in the little book. The price has been reduced from 25 cents to 15 cents, which is an especial offer. All Y's should possess this book.

Woman's Temperance Pub. Assn.,
184 La Salle St., Chicago.

A Wise Man Provides for the Future

You can provide for the future by making a safe, profitable investment; one that will return a steady income for a life-time.

SAFETY, PROFIT, PERMANENCY.

These three features of a good investment are found in the stock of the

DANIEL BOONE COAL & LUMBER COMPANY,

The profits in Coal and Lumber are larger than those in other industries. The Daniel Boone Company owns 157,000 acres of valuable coal and timber lands in West Virginia, whose present value largely exceeds its capitalization. : : :

Capital Stock, $2,000,000.00. Shares, Par Value, $1 Each.

ASSETS:

Over 1,000,000,000 feet of standing timber. Over 3,000,000,000 tons of Cannel, Splint and Pocahontas Coal. Over 157,000 acres of land, much of which will be available for agricultural and other purposes, after the timber is cut.

Quantity, cost of production, and profits, can be easily estimated.

STOCK IS ACTUALLY WORTH PAR TODAY.

In order to develop our great natural resources, a small allotment of stock will be sold at TWENTY-FIVE CENTS per share.

Daniel Boone Coal & Lumber Company.

405-6 Stock Exchange Building, CHICAGO.

A New Pledge Card

PLEASE SIGN THIS CARD AND KEEP IT

Woman's Christian Temperance Union

Pledge

I hereby solemly promise, God Helping Me, to abstain from all Distilled, Fermented and Malt Liquors, including Wine, Beer and Cider, as a beverage; and to employ all proper means to discourage the use of and traffic in the same.

NAME .....

Date ..... 190....

Price, 50 Cents per 100.

When ordering, kindly state the card containing pledge with words "as a beverage" is desired.

Woman's Temperance Publishing Association, Chicago.

SPECIAL SUBSCRIPTION SEASON MARCH 1-8.

FOR GOD AND HOME AND EVERY LAND.

The UNION SIGNAL AND WORLD'S WHITE RIBBON

NATIONAL and WORLD'S WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION

Entered at Chicago Postoffice as Second-class Matter.

"Thou hast given a banner to them that fear thee: that it may be displayed because of the truth"

Vol. XXIX.—No. 9. Issued Weekly. | CHICAGO, FEBRUARY 26, 1903. | Price, $1.50 Per Year in Advance.

Notice.

THE UNION SIGNAL for $1 to clubs of ten during the first week in March, to commemorate UNION SIGNAL DAY, March 1, the birthday of our National President and Editor-in-Chief, Mrs. L. M. N. Stevens.

Contents of This Number.

CURRENT TEMPERANCE NEWS 2, 3
YOUNG WOMAN'S BRANCH:
The Value of Minutes—Y Gleanings—The Imperial Chrysanthemum Party. By Kara G. Smart 4
CONTRIBUTED:
The Indian at School. By Mary Atwood Harding—Takes and Mistakes of the W. C. T. U. By Emma E. Page 5
Vermont. By Belle Butterfield—A Fight Against Odds. By Kate Anderson—Ethical Snap Shots. By Cecilia M. Young 6
CHILDRENS' COZY CORNER:
A Temperance Doll—Aunt Lucy's Rummage Sale—Purpose and Will—Puzzler's Packet 7
EDITORIAL:
Which Shall It Be?—Descending to a Friendship—Learning to Frivol—The Law A Good Schoolmaster 8
Personal Mention—Toward the Sun-Rising 9
W. C. T. U. STORIETTES 9
OFFICIAL COMMUNICATIONS 10
WORLD'S W. C. T. U. CONVENTION 11
W. C. T. U. NOTES 12
THE PROHIBITORY LAW OF MAINE. By Colonel Fred N. Dow 13
A NOBLE WORK. By Kate B. Wyning 14
ABOUT WOMEN 15
SIGNAL NOTES—PUBLISHERS' NOTES 16

Red-Letter Day.

March 1, Union Signal Subscription Day.

BIRTHDAY OF MRS. L. M. N. STEVENS.

News of the Week.

Bronze statue of President McKinley unveiled at San Jose, Cal.

British Parliament opened by King Edward with much splendor and ceremony.

Twelfth congress of the Daughters of the Revolution in session at Washington.

Bill in Minnesota senate imposes penalty upon newspapers which publish details of crimes.

President Roosevelt laid the corner stone of new War College at Washington. Building will cost over $1,000,000.

Pope Leo celebrated his twenty-fifth anniversary as pontiff in St. Peter's church at Rome; $25,000 in gifts presented.

Supreme Court of Venezuela gives judgment for $700,000 to heirs of Americans as damages for annulment of concession.

Protocol for settlement of United States' claims against Venezuela is signed at Washington and may be model for agreements with other nations.

John D. Rockefeller added gift of $1,000,000 to original endowment of $200,000 for institution for medical research. Notable scientists will conduct the work.

House passes naval appropriation bill and provides for purchase of submarine boats by the secretary after tests to prove merits. For this purpose $500,000 is appropriated.

Wholesale forgery of naturalization papers discovered in New York; paper and seal of United States both counterfeited and sold to unsuspecting foreigners for $2.50 each.

George B. Cortelyou, secretary to the President, took the oath of office as secretary of the department of Commerce and Industry. William Loeb, Jr., succeeds Mr. Cortelyou in former position.

Republican leaders in the Senate make final compromise offer on statehood bill. Oklahoma would be admitted as one state, Indian Territory added to it after three years, and Arizona and New Mexico admitted at once as one state and divided later.

Law prescribing death for assassination or attempted assassination of president, members of cabinet, and foreign ambassadors finally agreed to by Congress; teaching of such crimes made subject to fine or twenty years' imprisonment; immigration of anarchists prohibited.

An Object Lesson In Alcoholism. Thirty-eight inebriate patients from the overcrowded Cherokee (Ia.) hospital en route to the hospital at Independence, carried in a special car, with locked doors, and under the vigilant care of two guards, was the inspiring sight that lately might have been witnessed. Inspiring? Yes; thirty-eight inebriates confined like madmen and quite as dangerous, is a spectacle that should inspire every patriotic soul with an abhorrence of the deadly traffic that robs men of body, brain and soul power and makes them a terror and a menace to society.

Prizes Increase Cigaret Habit. The Chicago Chronicle is responsible for the statement that an alarming increase of the cigaret habit among women is due to the premiums offered by cigar companies. In Chicago alone there are said to be 25,000 men who are "tobacco tag fiends," and the number of women of like propensities excites the surprise of even the dealers themselves. Women are reported to order packages by the hundred and to use them at so-called cigaret socials or parties. Of the $100,000 worth of prizes given to Chicago smokers per annum, about one-quarter of this amount is said to go to women. One of the most commendable of recent judicial acts is that of the House committee on ways and means authorizing a bill to be reported which prohibits the placing of tags and coupons in tobacco packages for prize purposes.

Value of Suffrage in Wyoming. That both houses of the legislature of Wyoming on February 19 adopted a joint resolution endorsing woman suffrage, in vogue since the territorial days in 1869, again emphasizes the fact that the use of the ballot by women has proved of inestimable value to the interests of the state. President Virgin, of the Maine senate, who on February 18 killed the bill granting suffrage to women, would have done well to listen to the testimony of his western colleagues to the effect that suffrage in Wyoming has raised the standard of candidates, made elections more orderly, improved the character of the legislature and developed womanhood to broader usefulness; that, as expressed by Judge Brown, of Laramie, "in the use of the ballot women exercise fully as good judgment as men, and in some particulars are more discriminating, notably on questions of morals."

Iconoclasm of the Saloon. The ignominious fall of Mrs. Hayes' "wineless sideboard" from the dining room of the White House to the auctioneer's block, and thence to a Washington beer garden, adds another instance of the saloon keeper's wanton faculty for pulling down and degrading high things in order to serve his own sordid ends. His astounding and unblushing cupidity is shown in the fact that while the sideboard was purchased for $85, the price put upon it for redemption is $3,000. While no one expects to hear of deeds of philanthropy as issuing from the saloon, a regard for common decency in business should restrain even the saloon keeper from such cut-throat methods. By-the-way, by what indifference to things sacred did that valuable, treasured sideboard—presented to Mrs. Hayes by the young women of Cincinnati in token of her stand against the use of liquor at Presidential dinners—ever happen to find its way into the auction room?

Liquor Supply for Vermont. Troy, N. Y., brewers are already planning for an immense cold storage house in Rutland, and may eventually start a brewery at that point. Barre also is to be a distributing station. It is said that the people of Vermont are to be supplied with all the beer they can pay for, but that New York will attend to the profits. The complaint entered against the prohibitory law, that large sums of money spent for liquor went out of the state, will, therefore, remain practically unchanged.

Staunch Governor. Governor Odell's manly stand against the opening of saloons in New York City from 1 to 11 p. m. on Sunday, in opposition to a movement inaugurated by various New York officials and citizens, deserves the highest commendation. There is good reason to believe that the majority of the legislature hold to the following views recently expressed by the Montgomery Standard and Reporter: "It is refreshing in these times, when the tendency to moral laxness is being so justly criticized by the churches and when it has become the style among certain 'reformers' to sneer at the puritanical principles of our forefathers, to find the Governor of the Empire State holding fast to the convictions which he has so clearly inherited from his sturdy Dutch ancestry."

Segregation in Club Life. The assertion recently made at a meeting of the Woman's Club in Chicago, that segregation ought to be abandoned, stirs up a host of arguments for and against such action. Of the former, the strongest lie, perhaps, in the idea that if a union were effected, each would lose its identity, or else that the identity of one would soon be merged in that of the other, and that each would be forced to relinquish much that it now profits from and enjoys. The men would doubtless be the greater losers, inasmuch as they would not readily fall into the way of thought and adopt the interests of the women. The usefulness of each would be impaired, and the gain would not be commensurate with the loss. But these weapons of argument are, after all, directed only against a "man of straw," for who can honestly doubt that the truest advancement of both women and men must be accomplished along separate lines?

Women Ignored In Religious Convention. Why women should have been completely barred out from the National Religious Educational Association, recently held in Chicago, is still a nine-days' wonder—among women. There was not a woman's name on the entire program, and no woman's name is to be found in the list of officials designated. Religion and education, especially the former, have so long been relegated to woman that there seems to be a monstrous inconsistency in a convention of this character monopolized by man alone. If he has thought better of his past neglect of these all-important questions, and is now ready to make amends in the way of assuming the responsibilities of religious and educational training, why, then, that is another thing. There is a large company of prominent, even eminent, educators among women who deserve recognition. Can men get along without the help of women in these matters? Not unless present conditions are completely revolutionized.

Temporizing in the Senate, While Important Measures are Pending.

Margaret Dye, Ellis, Correspondent.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Feb. 21.—I want to correct an error in THE UNION SIGNAL of January 29. Speaking of Fort Meyer it says, "$40 per month is allowed by the government for reading matter for the soldiers." This should read $40 per year, and in going over the figures it is actually $35.15. Enough, however, to provide more than two dailies and two monthly magazines at that post.

My appeal for telegrams to members of the Judiciary Committees has brought the result in the House which we hoped for, and Monday next at 10:30 is set for a special meeting to consider the anti-polygamy amendment.

In the Senate, the stress and strain grows with every hour. The leaders of the Senate seem to be all at sea; what with Quay and his omnibus statehood bill, Beveridge as chairman of the committee on territories leading the fight against admission, Senator Morgan consuming three days and last night up to eleven o'clock, in a speech on the Panama Canal Treaty, and like the brook "going on and on," and but ten days left before Congress by law must adjourn, and so many, many measures pressing for attention, the leaders are at their wits' end.

I certainly agree with Senator Mason, who in a speech this week declared that the Senate is the only legislative body in existence where the minority rules; for if one Senator makes objection, that special business is held back.

Talk about majorities ruling? Not in the United States Senate! Every day Senator Quay rises in his place, and addressing the Chair, asks that a vote may be taken on the statehood bill; instantly Senator Beveridge retorts, "I object," and some other measure is brought in.

Being only a woman, this all looks painfully weak to me. With such stupendous interests to be adjusted by this same body of men, interests reaching far out into the future, how flippant, how strangely at variance with what the United States should stand for, is this exhibition of political prowess of certain party leaders.

Take the bill in which we are so deeply interested. The anti-polygamy amendment, with conditions existing as they are, with new dangers confronting us as a people, would seem to be one of the things that should be attended to at once.

Then the Hepburn bill, that means so much to thousands and tens of thousands of earnest hearted men and women living in prohibition territory, and whose righteous souls have been vexed and tried by the craftiness of the liquor traffic in taking advantage of the original package decision. Surely one would think such a cry coming from the best citizens of this land of ours, would be heeded.

The bill to prevent liquor selling in all government buildings, and the one to prevent liquor selling in immigrant stations, these with scores and scores of others, must be lost, covered over, buried out of sight, that party leaders may outwit each other. How unlike what it might be, and should be.

With a few sensible, level-headed women occupying some of those seats, I am of the opinion that less rhetoric, and politics, and more concentrated business would be the result.

But out of all this will come the brightness, for "God lives" and "Some glad day, we'll take the world for Christ's own Kingdom."

Legislative Work in Mississippi.

Harriet B. Kells, Correspondent.

JACKSON, Miss., Feb. 17:—The prohibition campaign opened in Mississippi by a large mass meeting today in Representatives' Hall in the capitol at Jackson. A great blizzard raged till night yesterday. Railways are flooded, trains are cut off and delayed for many hours. Notwithstanding the hall was filled, 173 men and women enrolled by the credential committee, and probably the attendance would have been doubled had not the stormy conditions prevailed. Few counties were unrepresented. Those in attendance were in the main leaders of thought and opinion. Conspicuous among them were many members of legislature and officials.

Mrs. Harriet B. Kells.

This is deemed the most momentous gathering for the destinies of the state since the ordinance of secession was passed. It was demonstrated in the last legislature that liquor was not strong enough to defeat an undivided firing line of the temperance forces. Unhappily for thirteen years there have been two wings of this army—the local optionists under the magnificent leadership of Bishop Charles B. Galloway, and the prohibitionists represented by the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, the Baptist church and the Methodist Episcopal church South, in part. The last few months has seen the latter still further divided into the constitutional and statutory camps. Today's meeting had its origin at the annual convention of the Mississippi W. C. T. U. last October where a conference of prohibitionists was held, and today's gathering was for the sole purpose of trying to unite the various factions into an army to train their guns on a common foe instead of on each other.

A large part of those in attendance would have liked to ask the next legislature for both a constitutional amendment to be submitted to the people at the next general election in November, 1904, and for a statute to become immediately and universally prohibitive of the saloon until an amendment could be inserted which by Mississippi law cannot be until January, 1908. The result today was a compromise. The advantages gained: First, the union of all classes of temperance people in a common effort. Second, the unqualified committal of the local option leaders to state prohibition. Third, the impression made upon the state by the unquestionable determination and unity of purpose for the first time of the Mississippi cold-water army.

Today initiated the campaign. In August the Democratic primaries meet, until which time the state will be ablaze in every county to influence the nomination of candidates for state offices and the legislature, all of whom are to be elected, which will meet in January, 1904. Then will come the struggle to have an amendment submitted. The storm center will be in November, 1904, when the question will be voted on by the people in the general election.

A central state committee will be in charge of the campaign, with headquarters at Jackson, and funds and speakers are already planned for. The following platform was today unanimously adopted:

"We, the friends of the legal and constitutional suppression of the beverage liquor traffic in Mississippi, in mass meeting assembled, reverently invoke the blessing and guidance of Almighty God in our efforts for the advancement of this great cause, affirm the following platform of principles.

"FIRST. That the beverage liquor traffic is an unmitigated moral, social, financial and political evil. It is at war with all the forces that tend to build men up into better lives. It breeds every social disorder and wars persistently upon the home and all organized society. It wastes the living of dependent women and children, and destroys the productive energy of the people. It seeks to control for corrupt purposes political parties. It enslaves many public men, subverts public justice, debauches the public conscience, schools its patrons to perjury, and is the implacable enemy of both church and state. We declare that every effort to regulate the traffic by license laws has been a failure; that while the law forbids anyone to engage in the traffic who is not of good moral character, that there is that inherent in the traffic which inevitably subverts a moral character, and as a result the business drifts into the hands of men who are morally depraved. And so far reaching is its evil influence that in some instances the law against the traffic has failed for the reason that the corrupting influence of the dram shop at times reaches the inner precincts of justice and subverts all law. We therefore condemn the license system of the beverage liquor traffic in any form as a delusion and a snare, and declare that the only consistent, wise and righteous policy for this state is to withdraw from all partnership in, or complicity with it; to put it under the ban of the law; to turn against it the whole power of the state, moral and legal; not only bad in itself but the ever willing ally of all evil forces which afflict society. No people have the moral right to license sin to raise the public revenue.

"SECOND. In view of the premises above set forth, we favor the submission of an amendment to the constitution prohibiting the sale of liquors throughout the state by the legislature at its next session; and at the short session following, if the amendment carries, the enactment of a prohibition statute in accord with such amendment; and until the constitutional amendment is voted upon and (if passed) enacted into statute law the legislature is requested to enact such restrictive amendments to the present local option law as will effectually prevent the extension beyond existing limits of the liquor traffic.

"THIRD. We distinctly disavow any purpose or desire to form a separate party organization. We reaffirm the declaration made by the first prohibition state convention July 20, 1881, and frequently repeated since, that the cause of prohibition should not be entangled with party politics, and that the interests of this great reform should be sacredly enthroned above mere contest for place and power. However, since the consummation aimed at by the prohibitionists must needs come by legislative sanction, and since prohibition laws are dependent for enforcement upon civil officers elected by the people, without disturbing the party affiliation of any prohibitionist, we urge all friends of this reform to use their influence and votes in the selection of candidates by their respective parties in the impending campaign as to insure the nomination of men for the legislature and administrative offices who are friends to prohibition rather than its avowed or secret enemies.

"To better facilitate the acomplishment of this end we recommend the calling of county mass meetings to create prohibition sentiment in the several counties, and to secure concert of action in the carrying out of this policy, and to prevent the unlawful use of liquor for election purposes. Intemperance should not be countenanced in candidates or in public officials, and no drunkard is worthy of support for public office.

"FOURTH. We are the friends of law and order, and believe in exalting and respecting all the laws of our beloved state so long as they are laws; and in every county and community where the laws are not properly observed we recommend the organization of civic or law and order leagues to co-operate with civil officers in the securing of better law enforcement along all lines.

"FIVE. We favor the perpetuation of scientific instruction in all the public schools of the state on the dangers of alcoholics and narcotics, and the inculcation of the doctrine of temperance and total abstinence among our people generally by every means practicable. Moral suasion for the drinker should everywhere go hand in hand with legal suasion for the seller.

"SIX. We urge upon our senators in congress to vote for the passage of the interstate commerce bill, already approved by the house of representatives, which promised federal protection to states and sections that have prohibition laws.

"SEVEN. Lastly, we cordially invite and earnestly appeal to every friend of prohibition in Mississippi to join heart and hand with us in this advance movement for the final overthrow of the legalized liquor traffic on Mississippi soil. We confidently rely upon the united support and co-operation of the Christian womanhood of Mississippi whose unswerving fidelity to the principles of this cause finds its truest expression in that noble and devoted organization, the 'Woman's Christian Temperance Union.'"

The adoption of the resolution by a rising vote was quite dramatic. As the large assembly rose to its feet the well-known notes of the doxology, "Praise God from whom all blessings flow," burst forth, and all heartily joined in the rendition.

The only persons who did not vote in favor of the resolutions were Mrs. Harriet B. Kells, president of the Mississippi Woman's Christian Temperance Union; Mrs. Marian B. Longino, vice-president at large of the Mississippi W. C. T. U., and Miss Belle Kearney, National lecturer. Mrs. Kells explained before the negative vote was taken that she had not yet voted because she did not thoroughly understand what would be the effect of certain clauses as proposed in the resolutions. After the requested explanation Mrs. Kells, Mrs. Longino and Miss Kearney did not vote "No."

Local Option Bill in Illinois.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Feb. 21:—The Anti-Saloon League's local option bill is developing some of the characteristics of a storm center. The bill permits any political division—a county, a city, a town, a village, a city ward or an election precinct—to vote "no license," and abolish saloons within its boundaries.

The liquor selling interests of the state, wholesale and retail, breweries, distilleries and bottling establishments, have shown more fear of this measure than of any bill touching the subject ever introduced here. A representative of these interests has made several hurried trips to Springfield since it appeared and has set the lines for a fight on it. The Anti-Saloon League, too, has been sedulously working up sentiment for the bill, but more among the people, with a view to bringing pressure upon the representatives when the time for action comes.

The bill in the house was referred to the committee on elections, of which E. H. Morris of Chicago is chairman, for the reason that a great part of it is given to prescribing how the people shall be given a chance to say whether saloons should be abolished. In some quarters there is a fear that this committee may try to smother the bill, although nothing specific on that head is charged as yet. If it does not receive consideration in the election committee within a reasonable time Representative Montelius its introducer, will surely reintroduce it and have it sent to second reading without reference.

Prohibition Fight in Tullahoma.

TULLAHOMA, Tenn., Feb. 12:—The petition that was circulated requesting the election commissioners to hold an election for the purpose of acting on the saloon question, was signed by seventy-five citizens, and has been placed in the hands of the commissioners. The registration books will be open three days, so that all voters may qualify for the election, which will be held March 10.

The anti-saloon people are determined that nothing shall be left undone that would further their cause, and will vigorously prosecute the fight from now until after the last vote is placed in the ballot box.

L. T. L. Work in Colorado.

Esther A. Gaymon, Correspondent.

Denver, Col., Feb. 16.—Mrs. Alla B. Foster, formerly L. T. L. secretary of the District of Columbia, has lately been appointed state L. T. L. secretary of Colorado, and is taking up the work with an enthusiasm which promises well for this Branch the coming year.

Mrs. Alla B. Foster.

Mrs. Foster is a resident of Idaho Springs and has succeeded in interesting the children of her home town, 160 children being present at her first meeting. These are being organized into Senior and Junior Legions.

During the absence of our state president, Mrs. Hawley, Mrs. Adrianna Hungerford, our efficient vice-president, is taking up the work with an enthusiasm that promises well for the state work. In company with Miss Rose A. Davison, the new Y secretary, she will be busy for some months to come, making a tour of the state, visiting the different unions and holding Institutes wherever it is possible.

They will leave Denver March 2 for Fort Collins, in the northern part of the state, where a two-day Institute will be held. The first evening session will be devoted to "Colorado Laws," Mrs. Hungerford, as state superintendent of Law Enforcement and Legislation, being very well posted along this line. Institutes will also be held at Loveland and Berthoud and after the mid-year executive which will be held in Denver March 12 a more extended trip will be taken into the southern part of the state.

Much is being done along legislative lines which will be reported more fully at a later date. Through the efforts of this department, our Colorado senators, Teller and Patterson, are pledged to work in the interest of the Hepburn bill.

The Patent Medicine Evil in Alabama.

Maria B. Douglass, Correspondent.

Bridgeport, Ala., Feb. 9.—In the prohibition counties of Alabama, especially where the law prohibits even giving a drink of liquor, as in Jackson and Mitchell counties, a new foe has arisen for our good women to fight. It is not a "blind tiger," nor yet a dispensary, but has its headquarters at all druggists. It has been a fact long known that druggists do a rushing business in patent medicines, but as they are sold simply as medicine they claim they do good instead of harm.

In Bridgeport a boy fourteen years old died suddenly after a few hours sickness. Investigation revealed the fact that he had for some time been taking a patent medicine in large doses to satisfy his desire for liquor, and he died of poisoning.

The most pathetic part of it was, that he had a drinking father, from whom he inherited the appetite. His mother, a good woman, had died only a few months before, and on her death-bed had exacted a promise from him to "let liquor alone." He died fully believing he had faithfully kept his promise. I wonder how many others are ignorantly doing the same. As I send this note of warning along the line, it is with the prayer, "God save our boys from such pitfalls."

Louisiana.

Lury Gould Baldwin, Correspondent.

Baldwin, La., Feb. 14:—In 1876 when Mrs. Wittenmyer, the first National president, organized the Central union in New Orleans, Mrs. S. Dalton was one of the nineteen charter members, who long ago was called to her reward in Heaven.

Today, Mrs. A. M. Zable, the daughter, worthy of such a mother, is the recently elected president of the Central union. The work and the members have been revived, and at their annual meeting there was never more enthusiasm manifest or work accomplished at one session. One of the encouraging after-results was the organization of the Ministers' Alliance, for aggressive work against all forms of vice. Sermons are preached in the different churches in the city and the people are awakened to the cause of good government, temperance and righteousness.

In 1883 Mrs. Caroline E. Merrick of New Orleans was the pioneer president of the state W. C. T. U. Mrs. Merrick will entertain Mrs. Hoffman, National recording secretary, the first week in March, on the occasion of her visit there, to speak both to the W. C. T. U. and the Era Club. Thus the past and the present are united and the work goes on.

Opposed to the Saloons.

Marshalltown, Iowa, Feb. 14.—The prohibitionists have decided upon making a vigorous campaign in the coming municipal election and will take an active part in the election of city officials. They adopted a platform as follows:

"First—We affirm that with seven years of saloon rule in this city taxes are higher, crime more rampant, the police force much larger and disorder is on the increase.

"Second—That nearly every dollar paid to the saloon is just so much diverted from respectable and beneficial business houses of the city, now amounting to nearly $200,000 annually.

"Third—That the legalized saloon policy is wrong in principle, bad in morals, expensive to care for, demoralizing and degrading to every interest of the city and the citizens thereof, and as a revenue producer a failure.

"Fourth—That saloon rule in municipalities has been an incubator of boodleism, defalcation and special privileges."

Progress in Iowa.

Clara P. White, Correspondent.

Volga, Ia., Feb. 19:—Work in the Eighteenth district is moving steadily along under the leadership of its veteran president, Mrs. Joanna B. Shesler, who has held her office for twenty years. Mrs. Shesler is planning for the McColls' services as soon as they can be secured. Miss Eunice Cusick is expected soon to begin Y work in that district.

New Providence union has been favored by a talk to mothers given by Dr. Rosa E. Lowder, which was illustrated by instructive charts.

Washington union is rejoicing over the acquisition of thirteen new members, through the efforts of Hon. A. C. Rankin. Last year Crawfordsville had one lone woman who paid her dues and wore the white ribbon. This year eight or nine more in that place have followed her example.

Wide-awake members of Van Wert union have destroyed liquors upon their arrival at the station at that place.

Fifteen of these grand workers recently went to Weldon and aided Evangelist J. W. Pierce in organizing a union of nine members in that place.

Connecticut Activities.

M. Josephine Lockrow, Correspondent.

Meriden, Conn., Feb. 20:—The Hartford W. C. T. U. has recently issued most attractive programs for its meetings for the next six months. The topics are comprehensive and helpful. Mrs. Cornelia B. Forbes is president of this, as well as of the state union.

Mrs. Cornelia B. Forbes.

At North Haven, a small place, the union is doing good work. A Senior L. T. L. has been formed of young people, who anticipate many pleasant gatherings. The superintendent of evangelistic work has arranged a series of gospel temperance meetings. An entertainment and sale of plants was given, from which was realized the sum of twenty-five dollars for flower mission work. This will help materially in the winter work of that department. Once a month the Pawcatuck union has the state L. T. L. secretary give instruction in scientific temperance in the public school. This month neighboring unions will be invited to a meeting at which the thankoffering boxes will be opened. A meeting was held in New London, Feb. 3, of the W. C. T. U. and all other temperance societies in the place. The subject, "Union Among Temperance People," had three divisions, viz: "Points of Agreement Among All," "The Desirability of Union," and "The Need of Temperance Work in New London." The papers were all bright and interesting. This union is trying to raise money by subscription this year instead of by sales and suppers.

The literature department of the Mystic union is busy. Two barrels of reading matter have been sent to a lumber camp in Michigan and The Union Signal is given to each of the pastors and to the public library. Stepney union has two railroad stations under its care; for one it subscribes for "The New Voice," for the other "The Christian," thus presenting both law and gospel to the traveling public. Five public school teachers are supplied with the "School Physiology Journal."

Illinois Women at Work.

Mary E. Hopper, Correspondent.

Chicago, Feb. 23.—Activity characterizes the department of Young Woman's work and new unions are constantly being reported. One at Carterville with seventeen members, and one at Owaneco are the latest additions. There is a growing interest in enforcement of law which is one of the promising signs of the times.

Cook county unions are vigorously at work in preparation for entertaining the next state convention. Committee meetings are quite ordinary occurrences and everything bids fair for a successful issue. The engrossing interest at state headquarters has been in the direction of bringing influence to bear from the home on the lawmakers. Last week more than two hundred telegraph blanks with message written, ready for signature of voters, were sent throughout the state in the interest of the "Hepburn" commonly known as the "Original package bill" and the bill to protect immigrants from liquors. After signing, these were sent to the Senator from Illinois. In the meantime we are not neglecting our state legislators who have in charge bills in which we are interested.

Superintendents' Meeting in Minnesota.

Mary E. Hoover, Correspondent.

Minneapolis, Minn., Feb. 20.—February 5 a meeting of state superintendents of Minnesota was held with the state president, Mrs. Scovell, at the home of Mrs. Burgan, Southeast Minneapolis. Press work and parlor meetings were studied. It was decided to meet quarterly, studying three departments at each meeting, and inviting district and local superintendents of these departments to be present. The meetings will be held in the homes, and while the superintendents of Minneapolis and St. Paul will chiefly be the ones to appreciate the privilege, yet others will no doubt be able to be present. Mrs. Scovell spoke of the need of a closer personal acquaintance and of the superintendents' familiarity with the various departments; Mrs. Upham, president of the board, gave a practical talk. The work in Minnesota can but receive a fresh impetus by this regular plan of work. Mesdames Waterman, Marchler and Miss Hitchcock were out-of-town superintendents who attended.

Resubmission Bill Killed in North Dakota.

Mattie Van de Bogart, Correspondent.

Fargo, N. D., Feb. 23.—The resubmission bill was killed in the legislature by a vote of 62 to 31 and the bill raising the age of consent from sixteen to eighteen years safely passed the House and we are awaiting its fate in the Senate.

It is probable that a dispensary bill will be introduced when the legislature reconvenes at the close of the recess, but we are hoping and praying that the good people of the state will permit no adverse legislation.

Miss Lillian Phelps of St. Catherines, Ontario, has spent nearly three months in the field traveling over a large portion of the state and everwhere giving satisfaction. She organized a promising Y at Oberon.

Miss Anne Rothwell Stewart has been doing some field work in our state, and organized three new unions, also laid the foundation for a new Y.

The three unions of Fargo united on February 17th and held a Willard Memorial meeting in the W. C. T. U. Hall.

State Temperance Union in Kansas.

Topeka, Kan., Feb. 12.—The annual convention of the State Temperance Union, which has been in session here this week, closed last evening with an address by Rev. Francis E. Clark, D. D., president of the United Society of Christian Endeavor.

Secretary Everett reported that 65,000 people had attended the temperance lectures made by the speakers of the union and that 8,200 signatures to the pledge had been secured, and that detective service has been employed in twenty counties with good results and that contributions to keep up the system were coming in.

F. D. Coburn was re-elected president. Other officers are: Vice-President, T. E. Stephens; secretary, J. E. Everett; treasurer, E. B. Cowgill.

Mrs. Bailey in Florida.

Mrs. Neva C. Child, Correspondent.

Arcadia, Fla., Feb. 14.—Under the impetus due to Mrs. L. E. Bailey, National organizer, who has been in our state over a month, the temperance cause is growing in interest and efficiency. She expects to make a complete tour of the state, and shows herself untiring, zealous and highly successful. Mrs. Bailey spent a winter here about eight years ago, and is therefore not new to the conditions of things; she still finds distances long, accommodations meager and weather sometimes unpropitious. She has no words of blame, however, for anything, and is making new friends as well as renewing old acquaintances. She is now on the east coast.

Prohibition Candidates.

Winnipeg, Canada, Feb. 14:—The prohibition convention decided to place candidates in every constituency at the next local elections, affirming its former position that the local government had betrayed the prohibitionists in the Referendum vote and the prohibition plank. It was decided to raise a fund of $10,000 for the campaign. Mr. W. W. Buchanan, in an address, declared that $800,000 had been spent by the liquor men during the Referendum campaign in Ontario, paying $8 a vote.

One More Liquor Bill.

Nashville, Tenn., Feb. 12:—It is said that the Anti-Saloon League has one more bill it will ask the legislature to pass, and it is then through for this session. The proposed bill is to close saloons in all cities at 10 o'clock at night and not allow them to open until 5 a. m.

U. OF MD. LIBRARY

YOUNG WOMAN'S BRANCH.

Conducted by Mrs. Clara Parrish-Wright, General Secretary.

The Value of Minutes.

MY Dear Local Presidents:—I have taken it for granted that you have followed all the instructions given in my letter of December 25th concerning the publication and distribution of your elaborate program and that you are fully ready for a most successful year's work.

I can see, however, that it is yet possible for some mistakes to be made. Shall I tell you the first thing that comes to my mind? I imagine I am at a meeting today where the recommendations concerning the program have been adopted. I note with satisfaction the president's great interest and the enthusiasm in the step of each girl as she comes in. A half hour later the expression on every face is changed. What is the matter? The meeting did not begin at the appointed time and it is nearly ruined. Some of the girls had only an hour or an hour and a half to give, and now they see that in order to carry out the program the time must be extended considerably beyond the prescribed limit, and in debating with themselves as to whether they shall leave the meeting or apologize for being late at their next appointment, they lose all the good they otherwise might have gained. Unless something very unusual is done to overcome this mistake they will never again be quite so much interested. This may seem a trifle exaggerated, but the prospects of many societies have been ruined by the loss of just a few such precious moments that were set with pearls.

For the benefit of the many new local presidents I should like to run through a long list of things that can spoil a meeting, but if a careful study is made of page 23 of the Year Book one will be able to steer clear of many rocks.

You are planning to have with you during the year one or two of our National public speakers, are you not? Let me tell you that it will be necessary to decide early whom you want, for our young women must necessarily make their plans a long time in advance. I wish we might arrange to keep Miss Stewart in the north all the year and Miss Hollister in the far west. Mrs. Burger is open for a few engagements in the east in the autumn and Miss Mosher could probably fill a few appointments en route north from Texas in the late spring. Nearly all our young women, in addition to being lecturers and organizers, are specialists in some line. Miss Stewart is a physical director and often organizes classes for practical work. Mrs. Seberry and Mrs. Burger are fine public readers, Miss Madeline Southard is a most effective evangelist.

The addresses of all the Y associates are found on the first page of the Year Book.

I want to ask your special co-operation in the matter of observing April 14th, our World's Missionary Day. The profits on the 1903 Almanac were small, so we cannot send Miss Smart the money from that fund for which her large opportunities for work call; therefore it will be necessary for us to raise money by some other means, and it seems to me we cannot do better than to concentrate upon this one day. Simultaneous action ought to, and must, inspire us to make a large effort. You know my plan—that you should give either the program outlined in the Year Book or "At the White Queen's Court," to be had of the W. T. P. A. for ten cents, and send the proceeds to Mrs. Mary Campbell Wells, Monmouth, Ill.

Yours, to reach a multitude of young women in Japan as well as in our own land,

Lovingly and Loyally,

Paris, Ill. CLARA PARRISH-WRIGHT.

Y Gleanings.

Coopersville, Mich., has a new Y.

Texas has two new Y's organized by Miss Rhena Mosher.

The Laurel, Delaware, Y is paying the tuition of an Armenian girl in school.

The membership contest plan has been adopted by some of the Y's of Australia.

Y work in South Africa is looking up since the close of the war. They now have twenty local Y's.

The Willard Y, of Tacoma, Washington, have distributed 2,000 bouquets and personally visited 1,500 sick people.

Mrs. Rosetta E. Lawson is to spend the month of March in North Carolina, where she will do special Somerset Y work.

Miss Madeline Southard will accompany Miss Christine Tinling on her tour through Kansas in March. An irresistible duet!

The Y of Clarksville, Ohio, is arranging a musical and oratorical contest. Two of the members of this society are on the county W. C. T. U. executive.

The Somerset Y of Western Maryland college was recently addressed by the state president and state Y secretary, and fifteen new members were gained.

Miss Daisy Daughdrille, Alabama's Y secretary, has sent a letter to every W. C. T. U. president of the state where there is no Y, urging them to organize.

Miss Frances Ensign's Y work does not decrease with her promotion. She recently spoke most acceptably for the Y's at Milo and Lancaster, and gained many new members.

Mrs. L. A. M. Boyes is the aggressive new Y secretary of Oklahoma. Miss Madeline Southard, our National Y evangelist, is to work there in the spring, and they are laying large plans.

Miss Grace Van Vleet is afield in her state, doing valiant service for the W as well as for the Y. She finds the latter doing excellent work, and is drawing into the union many educated young women.

Miss Rose A. Davison, Colorado's new Y secretary, is to accompany the vice-president, Mrs. Hungerford, on an itinerary in the spring through every district in the state, Mrs. Hungerford to have charge of the first evening, and Miss Davison the second, the days being given to institute work.

All members of the Silver Brook, Delaware, Y, both active and honorary, have taken the triple pledge. This society meets every week, has done a great deal of work for the poor during the cold weather, and has circulated a petition securing names favoring local option.

Salem, Illinois, Y held a New Year's reception, which was unique and entertaining. The Four Seasons were represented. Refreshments served for spring were pancakes and maple syrup; summer, ice cream and cake; autumn, apples, nuts, popcorn and candy; winter, oysters. Each room was appropriately decorated, and the refreshments were served by the Y's dressed in costumes in accordance with the seasons represented.

Model letter from a state Y secretary sent to every county W. C. T. U. president.

Dear County President:—If a copy of the new Y Year Book is not already in your hands, it will soon reach you. I asked to have it sent to you from the General Secretary, thus saving postage. I hope the book may receive your careful attention and that I may have your support in advancing Y work in your county. I should like to do some work in your jurisdiction; perhaps there will be some chance to organize among the young women. Please write me and let me know.

Yours for the good work.

The Imperial Chrysanthemum Party.

By Kara G. Smart.

CHIEF among the many new and varied experiences I have had in this Sunrise Land is that of the Imperial Garden Party, given by the Emperor of Japan, in the grounds of the Akasaka Palace, on November 12th.

Through the kindness of the United States Minister I was favored with an invitation to this important social function, which is always the event of the season.

An hour's ride in our jinrikishas brought us to the Eastern Gate of the palace grounds. We alighted, and after walking a few steps we came to two large white tents on each side of the driveway, just outside of the gate. Under a large awning in front of these tents were groups of officials and courtiers awaiting the arrival of the guests.

As we drew near, two of the courtiers came towards us, greeted us, took our cards, and passed us on through the gate, where we immediately found ourselves in a veritable fairy land.

With no one to act as a guide, we naturally followed the leading of a wide gravel walk which wound in and out and through the most bewitching scenery. Following it we found, stationed at intervals, the imperial guards in full uniform. As each guest passed a guard, he or she was greeted with the military salute. We walked on, and there burst upon our vision tiny lakes on whose placid bosoms the swans were quietly sailing; hills and dales clad in green, fringed with scarlet maple; a narrow and sinuous river was bridged at short distances by the most gracefully arched structures, and here and there we caught glimpses and heard the splashing of the pretty waterfalls, while beautiful hedges of bamboo and a shrub with waxy green leaves and bright red berries were to be found everywhere.

We climbed the hills and wandered down the valleys, often stopping to enjoy in wonder and admiration our beautiful surroundings. At last we came to the foot of the highest hill of all. Then began a long climb up the wooden steps set in the gravel walk, which led to the summit. We reached the top to find that the upper part of the hill had, seemingly, been cut off and leveled down to form an immense courtyard, surrounded on all sides with a high bamboo fence.

At the opening of the courtyard we were welcomed by a group of officials, and passed in to find ourselves in the midst of a most charming scene. On all sides were the immense bamboo booths under which were to be seen the dainty blossoms. Such a display of chrysanthemum flowers and plants we had never before seen and do not expect to see again. There they stood, like sentient beings, clad in white silk, and in handsome brocade satin—yellow, pink, red, purple and scarlet in color. There were rows and rows of them, each with its fancy name—"White Mountain Sunset View," "Field of Gold" and "Chinese Brocadex." Some of the larger plants had an extraordinary large number of blossoms. One had 752 blossoms: Tachino-wo, a white variety, 465; and the most noted of all, Akagi, had this year the enormous number of 1,272 chrysathemum flowers on a single thick stem. None of these blossoms were pigmies either, but would measure at least four or five inches in diameter. There were other plants with as many as seven varieties on one stem—white, brocade, yellow, mauve, pink, red and lilac.

In the open space between the flower booths the guests were gathered. As you watched them moving here and there, laughing and chatting, you were impressed with the fact that the ladies in their beauty and loveliness vied with the flowers themselves as an attraction.

At the request of the Emperor all guests were dressed in European style—the gentlemen in the regulation black and white, with Prince Albert coats and silk hats; the ladies in light and brilliantly colored silks, satins and velvets. All of the representatives and attaches of the different foreign legations were present and they, with all the court officials, were in full uniform.

As we stood watching this human flower garden, we noticed two courtiers hasten down through the center of the company, which immediately separated into two parts, leaving a wide path through the center of the grounds. Someone whispered, "The Empress is coming," and shortly afterward the military bands, stationed at either end of the courtyard, began to play the National Hymn, and immediately following the gentlemen removed their hats, while all down the line we saw the people bowing low.

Presently, as we watched, two courtiers, dressed in rich dark green velvet suits, with gilt trimmings and made in Louis XVI. style, with white silk stockings, patent leather slippers, silver knee and slipper buckles, and military hats to match their suits, stepped into view and came towards us. Close behind them came Her Royal Higness, the Empress. She wore a handsome greenish white satin brocade, with hat to match, and carried a parasol. As she slowly moved along she smiled most sweetly and bowed gracefully to her assembled guests.

Following her came the Crown Princess, dressed in royal purple velvet, and behind her came the other court ladies, arrayed in gowns of beautiful texture and in all the colors of the rainbow. They made one think of exquisitely dressed dolls out on parade, they were so small and dainty in appearance.

Next in order came the wives of the foreign ministers, in rich and costly costumes, and back of them the ministers themselves. Then followed the numerous officials of the court, the army and the navy, in brilliant uniforms, and behind them the other notables fell into line as the procession moved along.

An awning had been erected for the Empress. Under this she stood for an hour or more and received the ministers of the foreign nations represented at this court. When the ceremony was over, we were directed to small tables, spread with white linen, and set in an open space in front of an immense refreshment booth (this booth was in itself a work of art and was most beautifully decorated), and here the ladies of the company were seated, while the gentlemen stood and served them with the many and delicious viands prepared for the occasion.

While the bands furnished delightful music, we indulged ourselves to our satisfaction in the finest of American foods and delicacies. In the midst of this pastime we were told that the Empress was about to depart, and in consequence each guest found a place in the crowd assembled along the path over which the Empress was to pass. She came as before, and passed as graciously, then we returned to the tables to finish our repast, and afterward leisurely made our way out through the grounds to the gateway through which we had first entered. The Emperor's Chrysanthemum Garden Party was over for another year.

Tokyo, Japan.

INDIAN GIRLS.

STREET SCENE IN PHOENIX, ARIZONA.

INDIAN BOYS.

THE INDIAN AT SCHOOL.

By MARY ATWOOD HARDING.

THE Woman's Christian Temperance Union of Phoenix, Arizona, offers annually to the pupils of the Government Indian School, located at that place, a white medal as a prize in oratory, all of the selections to be on the topic of temperance.

On the occasion of this contest a band of white-robed maidens, followed by a modest line of young men dressed in school uniforms, took seats upon the platform. They are children of the soiled, unkempt parents who roam the streets of the town selling baskets and pottery. These young men and women from the miserable reservations met their cultured and educated audience serenely and confidently.

The strains of Sousa's music filled the room and the dark-faced musicians, sons of Rain-in-the-Face, Wild-Wolf, and other noted chiefs, were intent on their instruments and the leader's bow--the bow of the violin and not of the arrow, but the shaft of music goes as straight to the heart.

The first orator arose. Actually an Indian imitating the German dialect! The audience soon grew merry over the monotonous recital of the lecture "Dot Poy Fritz" gave his father.

Two of the young women then quietly stepped forward, while another seated herself at the piano and played a few bars of "The Lily and the Rose," as they sang their duet. It was evident that one of the singers was not a full-blooded Indian, and that the other was as markedly a "child of the plains." As they sang it was noteworthy that the clear, sweet, sympathetic soprano voice belonged to the true Indian.

The next two recitations were acceptably given, but the Indian is not at his best in oratory. A lack of animation and the monotonous tones of his voice are against him. However, his simple naturalness of manner when before the public is refreshing. May affectation prove to be an unknown factor in his education!

A piano solo was pleasingly rendered, after which an Indian maiden, with great energy and enthusiasm, recited in a way that made her audience think she would obtain the medal. Her chances proved naught, however, when later a heavyset Indian with a typical face arose and began "Swore Off." In a ringing voice and with a shining light in his eyes he declaimed this drunkard's resolve to swear off, at the same time calling for and draining a glass after each statement. What is there the Indian cannot do if he tries!

Next came chorus singing, the fresh voices making one think of the forest about which they sang.

After orations and song, the unanimous decision of the judges awarded the White Medal to the declaimer of "Swore Off." Each of the other orators was given a smaller medal as a souvenir, and the contest was over. We had been entertained for an evening in our own domain of elocution and music by the children of the warriors who recently scoured the plain.

At my first opportunity I visited the Government School which these young people attended. The approach to the school has a peculiar charm, not at all western. In reviewing the scene before me I could but consider the beautiful as an important factor in the lives of the Indian pupils.

Under the palm trees happy-faced Indian maids eating watermelon, reading, gossiping, and arranging their hair, completed a picture of sweet contentment in the warm sunshine of Arizona.

The greatest liberty seems to be allowed the pupils out of school hours. A gentle hand evidently guides with wisdom the hitherto unfettered senses.

The school buildings, substantial and convenient, are built of the red brick so universally used throughout the valley. The brick was made by the boys at the school. The dormitories and homes of some of the teachers are of wood. A graceful bandstand occupies the center of the grounds. Every Sunday afternoon the Indian band plays, and the residents of Phoenix and the tourists come in carriages, on horseback and by the convenient street car lines to listen to and applaud the music. After the concert a minister talks to the people, and there is singing of hymns.

The Indian band is a much appreciated adjunct of the school. One often hears the toot of the horns as the cars go through the town laden with the pupils going to some football game; and when they win, as they seem always to do, they proclaim the victory with no uncertain sound. Music enters into all their school life. The boys have an orchestra besides the band, and the girls are taught to play the piano. All are instructed in singing, for the Indian seems naturally musical. One wonders why music never found better expression in their lives.

At this school there are six hundred or more Apache Indians, ranging from six years of age to manhood and womanhood. The students cannot speak English when they arrive. We visited a very interesting kindergarten; and at the cooking school the teacher proudly informed us that the girls cooked better and were more painstaking than are the girls of the average American family.

Road to Indian School.

Tailoring, dressmaking, printing, blacksmithing, brickmaking, carpenter work, fancy needlework (in which the girls are remarkably apt), rugmaking and manual training supplement the ordinary branches of education.

The great dining-room is cool and inviting as is also a smaller room where the faculty dine. The dormitories are well arranged, and with their long rows of white beds, racks of towels and the clothes presses, each with its possessor's name above it, are well calculated to win the Indian from returning to the squalor of his home. Some of the older pupils have rooms to themselves and are very proud of them, decorating them in excellent taste.

The teachers show a pride in their scholars' attainments and manifest a parental care and interest that is very helpful. They stand in the place of parents, for not only are these minds to be guided along the paths of knowledge, but morals are to be shaped and right principles formed, while health and general welfare must be carefully superintended. These pupils are very docile, and their faces are pictures of contentment and good nature.

The teachers of the Government Indian schools are doing a noble work, and they are evidently aware of their great responsibilities.

If only the Indian might retain his native strength and unspoiled nature, notwithstanding his education! If only his powers might be awakened without taking on any of the falsity and veneer of civilization, without imbibing any of its selfishness, greed or sensuality!

La Jolla, Cal.

Takes and Mistakes of the W. C. T. U.

By Emma E. Page.

IN this, the opening of the Woman's Century, look the world over and what has become so successful as the Woman's Christian Temperance Union? How it runs before and outnumbers any other woman's organization!

What are the forces that lend it strength and influence?

First. It is an organization of purpose. In spite of much talk about "art for art's sake," it is now settled that the only novel which can live is the novel of purpose. It is certain that the only organization that can live is the organization of purpose; thus our corner stone is well laid.

Second. The organization is simple—so simple that children may, and do, understand and manipulate it; so simple that people in other lands, even child races, lay hold of it with a readiness and uniformity that give the white-ribbon traveler an impression of a universal tongue; so simple that it has in it the strength of the steel cable, and bridges gulfs of social difference, educational prejudice and national custom. How easily runs the plan. The local is tributary to the county, the county to the state, the state to the National, and the National to the World's Union. The dues and the pledge are the only requirements for membership. Yet these simple forces bind together half a million women from forty different lands.

Third. It is an organization of women alone. It affords the crowning opportunity for woman to find herself and to fit herself for the world's work. God and humanity need her, need her as a well rounded human being, that heaven and earth may be enriched by a racial development commensurate with the divine plan. The W. C. T. U. led, officered, and supported by women, is an unrivaled training school to this end. There is no question of rich and poor, wise and foolish; it is a democracy of giving and serving, a democracy of growth and greatness.

As to our "mistakes" they are not mistakes of the organization but of individual members.

We fail first in faith—that faith that leans hard upon a sure staff. Some of us think that more might be accomplished in a club or with a ballot, not perceiving that these are but wheels within a wheel.

We fail, secondly, to use our machinery. What sewing machine will make a gown by itself? Who would employ to build a house a man who must learn to use a plane? Who goes forth to-day without a white ribbon, who appears on the street without a white ribbon, who goes on a journey without a white ribbon, is clipping the wings of the angel, Influence!

We fail, thirdly, to teach God's temperance truths diligently to our children, to talk of them as we sit in the house, when we walk by the way, when we lie down, when we rise up. We do not bind them for a sign upon our hands, make them frontlets between our eyes. We do not write them upon the posts of our houses and on our gates.

Olympia, Wash.

Vermont.

By Belle Butterfield.

O STURDY State, what traitor's hand
Hath thee for thirty pieces sold?
Who cast the lot, who wounded thee,
For greed of appetite and gold?

Stern warriors of her olden time,
She needed thy defense again.
Strong, valorous "Green Mountain Boys,"
Why were your voices silent then?

Where were the sons of patriot sires,
To bear this righteous battle's brunt?
Was there no voice commanding still,
"Place the Vermont troops at the front"?

She is not wounded unto death,
Though low she lies with head bowed down.
She cannot, must not perish thus—
Men of Vermont, give back her crown!

Wilmington, Vt.

A Fight Against Odds

By Kate Anderson.

Copyrighted by Woman's Temperance Publishing Association.

Synopsis of Preceding Chapters.

[The Kilgour family are engaged in a desperate struggle to save the idolized youngest son, Claude, from the curse of cigaret smoking and the evil life it has led him into. The death of his brother, Willie, seems to arouse his weakened manhood, and he is allowed to go to work in a shop, since he will not attend school. It is soon found that he is continuing his evil course of stealing, lying, gambling and using tobacco.]

Chapter VIII.

IT took some days of patient and persistent effort on Ralph's part to get at the truth concerning the little coterie who indulged in gambling during spare and noon hours, for he was rightly convinced that it was in this manner that Claude "lost" the money. Ralph was lied to and hoodwinked by the Frenchmen who, with their characteristic shrugs, knew "nodings," while the English-speaking hands considered it none of their business who played cards.

In his own little ring Claude posed as an injured martyr, tyrannized over by his brother, who had succeeded in turning his family against him and in depriving him of liberty and wages. Even at his worst Claude possessed more than a remnant of the fascinating, lovable personality which had won all hearts from his babyhood, and he had not a so-called "friend" who would not have stood up for and shielded to the death the winning-mannered, golden-haired boy.

Upon this occasion, when taxed with his theft, Claude was both rebellious and impertinent. He vowed he would no longer stand being interfered with and tyrannized over.

"Claude, it is all to help you until you get stronger, not to punish you, that you are guarded," pleaded Alice.

"Young man," said Ralph, "if running away is your scheme, let me tell you that I have exhausted every means to keep you at home until you can come to your senses. I can do nothing more, nor will I try. Only let me tell you this: When you go, all the detectives and police in the country will be set on your track armed with warrants for your arrest both as a thief and a forger."

Ralph had found a check, which had evidently dropped out of Claude's clothes, bearing his mother's imitated signature, most skillfully forged.

"If you have a spark of natural feeling left for your heart-broken mother and sister, spare them that."

A heart-rending moan from his white-faced mother struck Claude to the heart. He looked at her. Two years before she had been a young-looking, pretty little woman, with tender, brown eyes sparkling with love and gaiety, with shining brown hair, pink cheeks and erect, graceful figure. Poor little mother! (Oh, poor, poor mothers and wives all over this sin-cursed nation!) Her shoulders are now stooped pathetically, her bright hair is whitened, and is drawn back from a forehead lined with anguish, the sad, lustreless eyes gaze piteously upon her boy, her cheek is white and wrinkled, and her pretty mouth drops sorrowfully.

Something of all this flashed across Claude's heart in that strained glance—his dear mother, who had suffered such anguish for him yet never had failed in tenderest love, unfaltering kindness! Claude turned away and broke into a passionate torrent of sobs: "Oh, why don't you kill me, or turn me out, or send me to jail? I am not fit to live. I am the vilest wretch that ever breathed. There is no use in trying to do anything with me; can't you see it? I will kill myself."

"Claude, can't you pray for yourself?" whispered Alice, softly. "Jesus can save to the uttermost. Only place yourself, like a helpless little child, in His hands, and He will do all for you. Can you not do that?"

"I could now, and mean it, too, but to-morrow I would not care. I never can care. I want to care, and I wish I could, but I can't make things really matter to me. I would just as soon lie or steal as not. I don't get interested in anything but smoking or talking to the train boys. You take me to church and invite nice company here for me, and put me in the way of all the good and interesting things you think will help me, but nothing seems to make any lasting impression on me. I tell you, my mind is destroyed."

The reformatory had been frequently discussed as a means of redeeming Claude. Ralph had made all the private investigations possible—had consulted that old and honored fountain-head of shrewd, kindly wisdom, Magistrate Tarblett, and had written to the rector at Penetanguishene for information as to a depraved boy's chances to be permanently reformed and become an honest member of society.

From both these sources full information and kindly Christian sympathy and advice were received, but Ralph learned nothing which did not confirm the ideas he had already formed. He was told that there was every chance possible for a bad boy to become a better one, that the keepers and wardens were kind, trustworthy men, with an eye single to their charges' best interests, that the chaplain and other visiting clergy did their utmost to win the boys' souls, both by personal effort and faithful ministrations, that the steady work, strict oversight, and sufficiently severe discipline had a tonic effect on vicious and indolent youths, and that usually the happy result was that the bad boy was turned out with reformed thoughts and habits, fitted by training and will to make an honest living for himself.

In reply to a direct and especial question, Rev. Mr. Wilson admitted that it was sometimes possible for a determined youth to beg tobacco from thoughtless and unadvised visitors, or to obtain it in other ways, while it had also to be admitted that a boy going there had to take his chances of coming in contact with the most utterly depraved and vicious youth; that were he determined to avoid all good influences and resolutely to harden himself against all help and counsel, he would find congenial company among a very small minority of the inmates.

Under these circumstances, Ralph had resolved that Claude should not be sent to the reformatory until every other possible means had been tried and exhausted. Besides, he could not assure himself even then that it would be right to bring this bitter disgrace and humiliation on an innocent family, whose punishment would be immeasurably greater than that of the offender's. It would complete his mother's heartbreak, and aside from private suffering and anguish, injure his sister's prospects and drag the whole family down socially. To be sure, his mother and sister had begged him not to think of these things, where the question of saving the boy was at issue. If no other way could be found, they were ready and willing to sacrifice all pride and personal feeling to take up the burden of an open family disgrace. Much better to arrange the matter privately with Magistrate Tarblett, and have Claude sent down on some nominal and general charge, like persistent truancy or incorrigibility, than to have him continue his career of wickedness and be taken up by some stranger for theft or forgery. Besides, when he once had passed his sixteenth birthday, it would be the prison for him instead of the reformatory.

Before using undue haste in branding his young brother with the stigma which always clings to a reformatory boy, and which would be shared by his family, Ralph had resolved to give Claude every chance until he should reach the verge of the age limit, when, if no reformation were in sight, he would take steps to have him sent to Penetanguishene as a final resort, that he might be for a few years where he would be at least secure from arrest and imprisonment, with a fair chance to reform before he had entirely passed the "growing age" of both body and character.

Not that Ralph would now ever give up to despair concerning Claude, even in the worst issues, while there remained a God in Heaven, while breath remained to offer prayer and supplication to the Infallible, strong to save, and mighty to deliver. He believed that, as certain as it is that Jesus died to save the vilest castaway, so certain is it, when that same castaway turns his sin-dimmed eyes to the foot of the Cross, there awaits him a complete and triumphant pardon and deliverance.

But Claude turned his eyes the other way. Six weeks later he disappeared. Two other boys, both older than he, went with him, covering their tracks so skilfully that many weeks passed before the trio were discovered.

(To be continued.)

Ethical Snap Shots.

By Cecilia M. Young.

I stood by a slot machine, waiting for a carette, when two little newsboys approached. The machine would not work, and one of the newsboys had shoved in half a dozen pennies before he made the discovery that equivalents were not in order.

"Too bad!" I said commiseratingly, while I searched my pocketbook for some pennies to make good his loss.

"Oh! I kin afford dat," he said in a tone that made me close my pocketbook furtively, and then he stepped up to a candy-stand and spent ten cents for candy and gum, which he generously shared with his companion.

A few moments later I found myself seated in my carette beside a fashionably dressed woman who had in tow a gaudily dressed child and his nursery maid.

As the vehicle started, the violent jerk sent a penny flying out of the window from the chubby youngster's clutched hand.

There was a wild uproar from the little group.

"I lost my penny! Get my penny! I say, get it!" screamed the child.

"Stop the carette! My boy's lost his penny," shrieked the mother.

"Can't you hear, old stupid?" called the nurse. "This boy has lost a penny. Stop, and let me get out."

The carette was stopped without more ado, and the passengers cultivated the virtue of patience while the maid searched in the mud long and diligently for the penny that was lost.

A singularly repulsive looking "rough" boarded the crowded open car and hung limply to the strap. He looked stupidly out of his blood-shot eyes, yet even in his dazed condition there was an air of bold defiance of law and order and a brutal indifference to the opinion of his fellow men.

The car gave a sudden lurch and would have thrown him into the street but for the timely clutching at a seat occupied by a very old lady.

The white hair, the bowed form, the withered face, with its gentle, serene expression, seemed to restore for a moment the bloom of this blighted flower of manhood, for passing his hand over his brow, as if in search of something, he touched his hat, took it off with genuine grace, and actually apologized to the amazed but gracious lady of the aged face and silver hair.

Chicago.

Children's Cozy Corner

A Temperance Doll.

I'D like to introduce to you
My very newest child,
She has such pretty curly hair
And blue eyes, bright and mild.

She came from some nice city
'Way off across the sea,
My papa says 'tis Paris,
But mamma says "Paree."

They say that in that city
The people all drink wine,
I feared she had bad habits,
This darling child of mine.

And so I got a temperance pledge
That very, very day,
And told her that I 'spected her
To sign it right away.

So now she is a temp'rance child,
Her name is Madeline;
I'm sure she'll always keep the pledge
'Cause she's a child of mine.
—Verses for Little Citizens

"I'd like to introduce to you my very newest child."

Aunt Lucy's Rummage Sale.

AUNT Lucy had been at her brother's only a week, when at Bob's and Mary's and Tom's and Beth's place at the table was found, one morning, a copy of the following notice:

"In the library this afternoon, at two o'clock, will be a rummage sale. Bring all your habits, good and bad. No postponement on account of the weather."

"A rummage sale!" exclaimed Tom, curiously. "I wonder if it's same's at the church, when the poor got so many good clothes for almost nothing. Is it?" and he looked round inquiringly.

"Ask Aunt Lucy, she knows—it's her writing," suggested Beth, carefully studying the penmanship of her notice.

"Is it?" asked Mary and Tom in concert.

"Couldn't be anything else as I see," said Bob. "But what have the habits to do with it—that's what I'd like to know."

"You haven't answered, Aunt Lucy," persisted Tom.

"All the explanations that are necessary till the sale are found on the card," replied Aunt Lucy, mysteriously. "Each one do just as the notice directs, and this afternoon everything will be explained."

"I'd like to know, though!"

"And I would!"

"So would I!"

"It will be good, whatever it is," nodded Beth, at their afternoon conference on the piazza, while waiting for the clock in the sitting-room to strike two.

At the appointed time Aunt Lucy's four nephews and nieces presented themselves at the library door.

"We've come," said Bob.

"And with one good habit, surely," smiled Aunt Lucy. "Promptness!"

Beth looked curiously round the room. "I—I don't see anything for sale—nothing new here."

"A rummage sale doesn't deal in new things."

"But there aren't any partly worn-out things here, except just what belongs to the room," added Bob.

"I've noticed," began Aunt Lucy, looking from one curious little face to another, "since I've been here, that Bob and Mary and Tom and Beth—why, that's every one in the family—have something they really ought to dispose of, and that's the reason the rummage sale has been announced. Did each one bring all his habits—good and bad?"

Beth looked at Tom, and Bob and Mary exchanged perplexed glances.

"I—guess—so," finally spoke Bob.

"And the bad ones we want to dispose of," said Aunt Lucy, briskly. "Now suppose we begin the sale. What have you, Tom, you'd like to exchange a whistle-in-the-house habit for?"

Tom looked confused, for that was what his mother had tried for months to break him from doing.

"The habit of taking-his-hat-off-in-the-room, I think. Wouldn't that be a fair exchange?" and Aunt Lucy smiled so sweetly that Tom entirely forgot his confusion.

"Ye-es; and then I'll have two additional good habits," he laughed.

"Certainly—the bargain's made. Now don't let Mr. Determination go back on the agreement!"

"Mary, what have you to dispose of?"

"A peeping-into-things habit—things that don't belong to me," confessed Mary, candidly.

"And you'd like—"

"A habit of saying-only-good-things-about-folks," was the reply to her aunt's interrupted question.

"And Bob?"

"I guess the worst habit I've got for the rummage sale is getting-angry-at-every-little-thing."

"Let me see," thought Aunt Lucy, slowly, "and you'll exchange it for—clean-finger-nails-and-well-brushed-hair-and-clothes. You'll have to get Mr. Will to help, so the exchange won't be made back again."

"And, Beth, you need a sunny-smile in exchange for your occasional little—"

"Pout—I know I have it, auntie, and I want it to go with the other hateful things."

And what a successful sale they had! "In-a-minute," "Don't-care," and exaggeration habits, with a great many more, were disposed of, and in exchange so many good habits were received that Uncle Fred said, when he came for Aunt Lucy, he didn't believe they'd ever have enough material for another sale!

—Adelbert F. Caldwell.

Purpose and Will.

"WHAT of the cause that calls us out
To wrestle and to dare,
What of the ringing battle shout,
The thrilling trumpet blare,
Were there no soldier boys to fill
The ranks of Purpose and of Will?

"Shall any cause its hero lack,
Shall any day be lost,
Because one keeps another back,
Or shuns the battle's cost?
No! There are ceaseless triumphs, still,
For boys of Purpose and of Will!"

Things to Smile At.

To Keep Children.

THE following "receipt for preserving children," was written by Miss Mignone Lincoln, aged 16, of New Orleans, and won the first prize for the best answer sent to St. Nicholas Magazine:

Take one large, grassy field, one-half dozen children, all sizes; three small dogs, one long, narrow strip of brook, pebbly if possible. Mix the children with the dogs, empty them into the field, stirring continually; sprinkle the field with flowers. Pour brook gently over the pebbles. Cover all with a deep blue sky. Bake in a very hot sun. When the children are well browned, they may be removed; will be found right and ready for setting away to cool in the bath tub.

—Selected.

PUZZLERS' PACKET.

Puzzles marked (*) are protected by copyright. Contributors will please keep matter intended for this department distinct from other correspondence, and address same to PUZZLERS' PACKET, THE UNION SIGNAL, Chicago.

1—*Charade.

To get some FIRST sweet country air
A student stripling did repair
To Adirondacks, and while there
He heard of Winkle's sleep.

It seemed to him, this callow youth,
The TWO who told him stretched the truth—
The tale is quite absurd, in sooth,
But legends we must keep.

The narrator laughed in his sleeve;
He'd make this college WHOLE believe
The tale, he thought. Who could conceive
Of richer fruit to reap?

ETHYL.

2—Letter Removals.

1. Take one letter from a weight and leave a body of water.
2. Take one letter from a party and leave evil.
3. Take one letter from distress and leave a dish.
4. Take one letter from a number and leave an animal covering.
5. Take one letter from a quick noise and leave the life of a tree.
6. Take one letter from hurry and leave strong dislike.
7. Take one letter from an ancient criminal and leave a receptacle for preserves.
8. Take one letter from a quick look and leave a weapon.
9. Take one letter from a circle and leave an outfit.
10. Take one letter from a carriage and leave to gain the victory.
11. Take one letter from a Christmas decoration and leave sacred.

The removed letters form something in which we are all interested.

SISTER SUE.

3—Numerical.

Composed of 16 letters:
7, 8, 9, 10 is extended.
14, 15, 6 is not high.
1, 2, 3 is a fowl.
11, 12, 6 is not many.
13, 5, 4, 2 is a musical instrument.
The whole was an American poet.

ESTHER (ten years old).

4—*Transposed Blanks.

(In each case the two words filling the first two blanks are transposed to form the word required in the third blank.)

1. The young lady looked ——— ——— a silver gray silk, with a sprig of ——— in her hair.
2. They tried to ——— ——— enormous piece of wax by the lamp on the ———.
3. Dr. Fairchild bought ——— ——— of a ——— don.
4. She has a very fine ———; ——— and ease are in her every motion.

Answers.

22—Spendthrift.
23—Racket, packet, jacket.
24—Rubies, buries, busier, bruise.
25—

E N A C T
N I T R E
A T L A S
C R A F T
T E S T Y

26—1, Aster. 2, Lantana. 3, Primula. 4, Paeony.

Don't forget the February prize for best lot of original puzzles.

FOR GOD AND HOME AND EVERY LAND

The UNION SIGNAL AND WORLD'S WHITE RIBBON

NATIONAL and WORLD'S WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION

Official Organ of the WORLD'S AND NATIONAL WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION.

Published Weekly by the Woman's Temperance Publishing Association, Chicago.

EDITOR-IN-CHIEF, - - - - - - MRS. LILLIAN M. N. STEVENS.
CORRESPONDING EDITOR, - - - LADY HENRY SOMERSET.
MANAGING EDITOR - - - - - MRS. CORNELIA T. JEWETT.

CONTRIBUTING EDITORS:

MRS. SUSANNA M. D. FRY. MRS. KATHARINE L. STEVENSON.
MRS. CLARA C. CHAPIN. MRS. ISABELLA WEBB PARKS.

Address all letters and manuscript intended for the editors to, The Editorial Department, UNION SIGNAL. Unavailable manuscripts will be returned only when sufficient postage accompanies the request.

SUBSCRIPTIONS.

Subscriptions may commence with any issue.
The date on the label indicates when your subscription ends.
Papers will be discontinued unless otherwise ordered.
Remittances should always be made in the safest manner available to the remitter. Register cash remittances.
Change of Address.—Give both your old and your new address when you desire a change.
Change of Date.—It takes at least three weeks to change the date, after your subscription is renewed.

PRICE $1.50 PER YEAR IN ADVANCE.
FOREIGN POSTAGE $1.04 ADDITIONAL.

Address all Business Communications to
The UNION SIGNAL, 184 La Salle St., CHICAGO.....

Chicago, February 26, 1903.

"The women that publish the tidings are a great host."

Which Shall It Be?

THE use of the imperative mood in dealing with the evils of society is not the fashion of the day. A refreshing exception occurred in a sermon preached by the Rev. George W. Shelton, from a Nashville pulpit, wherein he declared with great earnestness that the time had come when society must take its choice between the house and the school on the one hand and the saloon on the other, and he asked the pointed question, "Which shall it be?" "If these treasured institutions are to be preserved," said the speaker, "the saloon MUST be abolished and exterminated, the liquor traffic MUST be wiped out of existence, the saloon MUST go."

The premises from which this forceful conclusion is deduced, while sadly true, are neither novel nor original. So frequent has been their repetition that their utterance seems now to have a soporific effect upon the minds and consciences of society. The strong point of the reverend gentleman's discourse is the mood in which it is expressed, is in the fact that he uses a MUST in a day when people are wont to deal in polite subjunctives, mild and unimpassioned. There are times when one feels the need of a revival of the phraseology of Mount Sinai and that Christian men might be forcibly reminded that they are sons of the God who from the heights thundered "Thou shalt nots" to a sinful people. There come times in the affairs of men and nations when frugality of moral energy is fatal, when extremes of speech and action are justifiable, when the mother tongue must fairly impoverish and exhaust itself in an effort to find fit expression for the intensity of the occasion.

Did ever a question demand more vigorous, vehement answer than this: Which shall survive, the home and the school, or the saloon? And yet society hesitates, or evades a direct answer, or by its indifference replies that it sees no occasion for such disagreeable questions. Nevertheless the question is being answered.

There is another company which considers an answer so vital in its existence that it is daily spending thousands of dollars upon it, is, indeed, selling its own soul and the souls of its victims to make certain that the answer shall be satisfactory. The liquor dealer or the saloon keeper is not puzzled as to his manner of answer. He believes he knows which it shall be, and that he may make assurance doubly sure, he schemes and plans night and day. Note some of his methods: In a recent gathering of liquor dealers it was announced as one of the working principles of the body that dimes expended in creating an appetite for alcoholic drinks in the boys of to-day would bring in handsome profits to the business later. Note the emphatic manner in which he will answer it at the next election, as he piles up his majorities and pluralities in the interests of his business.

If ever there was occasion for a vigorous declaration of principles and assertion of rights, it is now. There are times when to be tolerant is to be cowardly, when argument and arbitration must give way to struggle and annihilation. The milder virtues have their place, but they are not the weapons to be used when dealing with gross evils. Woe to the nation, or community, or individual, who trusts to them when the most powerful and heroic qualities of manhood are demanded!

Descending to a Friendship.

THE habit of unconsciously grading one's friendships is universal. Certain kindred spirits there are who are always entertained in the parlors of one's life, for whom is reserved the guest chamber, for whom is spread the feast of finest thought and noblest aspiration. Other friends are admitted freely to the common, every-day living rooms, where no pretense is made of bringing out the very choicest entertainment, to whom is offered the daily average of life. And, alas, there are so-called friends who are received only upon the very lowest floor of a man's nature, away from the light and the brightness, in the underground apartments of life, to whom are offered the grossest in thought and word, certain that it will be found acceptable. Such are the intimacies and associations born of drink-inflamed passions, the phantom friendships which will not bear the light of day; the mockeries that masquerade under the guise of friendliness, which if once they could be seen with an unobscured vision would show themselves as spectres, with grinning skulls, rattling bones—gaunt skeletons concealed behind a mask of gay repartee, coarse jest, boisterous song, obscene story and maudlin protestations of affection.

And the pity of it all is that to have once descended to entertain this ghastly company, in that smoky atmosphere of mind which refuses to recognize them for what they really are, is forever to have lost the power to again ascend, is to find that the upper chambers, so long vacant, have grown useless, is to come at last to move one's whole being into these lower quarters to remain there for time, for eternity. From such associations one comes to be but a horrible, fearful phantom of what might have been.

Call not these unholy connections by the sacred name of friendship. Rather are they a species of co-operative iniquity, a mutual conspiracy to drag one another down, to dim and blur the vision to the true and real relations of life.

Thackeray, keenly observant of the social vices of his day, wrote of such associations:

"I think the intimacy which is begotten over the wine bottle is a spirit of this nature (it has no heart). I never knew a good feeling come of it or an honest friendship made by it; it only entices men and ruins them; it is only a phantom friendship and feeling called up by the delirious blood and the wicked spells of the wine."

Neither heaven nor earth has offered to mankind a greater, more precious blessing than the power of making and keeping friends. Hell can offer no blacker curse than to have led its subjects to substitute an unreal thing for that choice element of life. To have lost the power to be a friend and to hold a friend is to have surrendered one's birthright as a man, to have lost the power to recognize a friend, to be satisfied with a horrible travesty on it, to have the eyes of the soul blinded past hope.

Among the tragedies for which the liquor traffic must some day account, there is none more fearful than that, for a ghastly phantom, a man should come at last, through love of drink, to barter away the most real, the most eternal thing given to him by virtue of his manhood.

Learning to Frivol.

TO a large fraction of the race this is a workaday world. Of the playday world, wherein dwell their brothers and sisters, they know little.

"What are you teaching your clubs of factory girls, my dear?" asked a benevolent old lady of a worker in the tenement districts.

"Teaching them to frivol," was the prompt reply. "They have had to bear family burdens from childhood and have never learned to play. They are old before their time because they are ignorant of the laws of recreation."

To have learned the science of healthful play is to have mastered one of the secrets of perpetual youth. To have missed it is to live a stunted, shriveled life.

All who think, know that many of the evils in the lives of the burden-bearers of the world is but distorted play, the result of an ignorant fumbling after something which shall satisfy an inherent longing for amusement.

All are born with a capacity for play. If the development of that capacity is retarded, the individual ceases to be a forceful factor in life; he dries up or wastes away, and the world loses just so much vitality. If that faculty be perverted, he becomes a criminal and plays at the game of Sin.

Witness the factory girls of England forming a co-operative club by means of which to raise a fund to purchase intoxicating liquors for their own use. One such fact gives, far better than a sermon, their false idea of recreation.

It is but a few years since students of social life have come to regard play as one of the positive redemptive forces in society. The idea is now gaining popularity, and the more rapidly it circulates the better for the world.

The science of play is governed by eternal laws and principles as truly as is the science of astronomy. The first great principle which determines the legitimacy of an amusement, is the recreative element. It is a test which individuals and society may safely apply. Does the indulgence in any amusement leave body, mind and soul more vigorous and healthy? Then that is sufficient assurance that it is the real thing.

The playgrounds of the very poor have long been the alleys, the bar-room and the theatre. To even the most liberal of thinkers the relation between recreation and these forms of amusement is not quite clear. At least one can imagine more wholesome diversions for the growing youth of our cities. Quite evidently society has still much to learn concerning this neglected science of amusement.

Meanwhile scores of faithful, intelligent workers in settlements, kindergartens and missions are trying to impart to the too-rapidly matured boys and girls of the neglected classes, suggestions of the childhood which they have somehow missed.

Simultaneously with courses in domestic science and art, basket-weaving and broom-making, there are unannounced courses in hilarity and unrestrained mirth, in gleeful song, merry smiles, hearty laughs, innocent jokes and pranks.

The most exhaustive history of our race may fail to record this department of instruction, but there is little doubt that the men and women of the next generation will be saner and truer because of it.

The Law A Schoolmaster.

THE anti-prohibitionists are fond of telling us that the chief reason for the "failure" of prohibition is to be found in human nature itself. It is the old story, they say, of the forbidden fruit. Tell a man he shall not have liquor and he straightway begins to devise ways and means to get it. Close the saloons on Sunday and drinkers will immediately be inspired with a defiant determination to buy their grog across the bar on that day.

If these things be true, then the same argument will apply to every one of the restrictive features of a license law. Close the saloons at midnight and their patrons will find they are more thirsty between that hour and daybreak than in any other hour of the twenty-four. Forbid liquor selling to habitual drunkards or to minors and saloon-keepers will discover that they have a greater desire to sell to these people than to any others.

Wherein, then, may we ask, lies the superiority of license over prohibition in the matter of enforcement? It is the prohibition in license laws, it should be remembered, which makes them regulative, yet we are told by the high license advocate that the natural tendency of prohibition is to make law-breakers.

Curious that such reason is applied to no law other than that concerning the total prohibition of the liquor traffic!

All laws are essentially prohibitive. How demoralizing it must be to the citizenship of the country because they are sometimes, many of them with great frequency, violated! According to the logic of certain anti-prohibitionists, it was a mistake to forbid anything to our first parents or to utter any "thou shalt not" from Sinai.

The spirit of holiness and consecration which pervades the Woman's Christian Temperance Union comes, I believe, in large degree, from that life the lines of whose influence have gone out to the ends of the earth! The life of her who stood in the class room as the peerless teacher; step by step she trod the way of human greatness, till at last from her throne as queen of reformers Frances E. Willard ascended to the heaven of Love's reward and found "how beautiful it is to be with God."—Extract from a sermon by Rev. C. L. Woodworth, Edgartown, Mass.

Anti-Polygamy Literature. Read the National Corresponding Secretary's notes on page 10, and act at once on her suggestion concerning the dissemination of anti-polygamy literature.

Personal Mention.

Mrs. Clara Parrish-Wright, General Secretary of the Y Branch, is still unable to be at her desk, but her correspondence is kept up by dictation so the work does not lag. Mrs. Wright asks that all Y leaders who contemplate attending the World's Convention at Geneva will communicate with her at once.

Mrs. Harriet B. Kells, president of Mississippi W. C. T. U., has been summoned to the bedside of a dying brother, from the state capital where she has been at work in the interests of a prohibitory campaign. Mrs. Kells will return to Jackson as soon as circumstances will permit, and she wishes her mail addressed to that city.

Mrs. Evalyn N. Graham, National superintendent of the department of Work Among Railway Employes, has been critically ill, and is still unable to be moved from the hospital in Cleveland, Ohio, to her home in Baltimore, Md. Mrs. Graham sends greeting to her co-workers in the railway department and expresses regret that her official letter to The Union Signal is thus delayed.

W. C. T. U. Storiettes.

Dear Comrades:—In company with Mrs. Hannah J. Bailey, I left Portland the night after the "Demonstration," in order to attend the conference of Friends held at Indianapolis. Our journey to Boston was uneventful. At that city a very nice looking young woman and a little girl of about three years, came into our sleeper. I noted that when the mother heard us tell the conductor where we were going she looked at me appealingly.

The child seemed to want to come to me and after awhile did so. She sat on my lap, contentedly listening to the stories I told her, but the mother seemed restless so I went to her seat to inquire into the trouble. I learned that she was suffering from the nervous shock of an operation, performed several months before, and that her heart was seriously affected. I did what I could for her by rubbing, and assured her that I would watch her carefully.

When she retired I gave her another brisk rubbing and then took the little girl into my own birth, where she remained all night. I was up once or twice with the mother.

The next day, when we separated, she said:

"I know why you, the only one of that car full of women offered to do anything for me! You wear the white ribbon and you seek opportunities to do good. I am going to join the union at Terre Haute at once, for I can never forget one white ribboner."

And so I won my first new member this year!

Emelie U. Burgess.

Highland, N. Y.

The monotony of the brook below the window had nearly lulled me to sleep when a gentle tap came at the door. My landlady—and she was a lady—adjusted some drapery so that the afternoon sun should not strike my couch, and then she said with hesitation:

"I ought to let you alone, I know. You have come up here to rest and you need it, but you are likely to meet a few people while you are with us, and I want to tell you some things about Stoneton so that you may know better how to—well, how to pray for us."

That was the way it began.

In two days I knew a good deal about Stoneton, and I began to do a few things because it would tire me so to let them go undone.

My Lady was the one person in a new, stirring, stone-quarry town who was supposed to know how to pray. There were thirty or more homes, one schoolhouse, and three thriving saloons. The woman with the black eye whom I met going up the picturesque gulch had shown a bad temper because her husband never came home sober, and had put the saloon-man into the red sandstone business through his front window. He had the better of her in throwing, as in most other things, as the black eye bore witness. This was a specimen of Stoneton.

A public meeting was held, in fact two of them, before I called myself rested and went home. Nothing of the kind had been spoken of there unless behind closed doors. Everybody and his family said it was useless. But the schoolhouse was crowded, and though the German saloonist and his American wife, and some others, were redolent of beer, there was an attentive house. Perhaps some had never before heard of their personal responsibility to God for their habits and for every influence of their lives. The second night somebody suggested a total abstinence pledge!

A few weeks later I went again to Stoneton. The movement was strong and had seemed to run of it self. Nobody, unless it were My Lady, would have had the temerity to "run" it, and she gently told me she would push and pull and work without stopping, but, she'd better be out of sight.

"I know our people so well," she added, "and we're all human and don't want to think any body bosses us."

Social features, with no person apparently responsible for them, came later. Then some unknown body had invited one of the pastors up from Mount, and Stoneton had its first distinctively religious gathering.

One year after my first visit I was urgently invited to come up for a night. One hundred adult persons had "sworn off" on the sheet of foolscap of the twelve month previous, and they were going to celebrate. Two of the saloons had removed to a more salubrious climate, and it was no longer respectable to be even a little drunk.

I stood unobserved inside the door and looked the crowd over. Cheerfulness bordered on hilarity where the young folks were grouped, and if there was a glum countenance anywhere I didn't find it. Even jealousy was latent, if there; and everyone had a happy word for My Lady. She was radiant, introducing those I had not seen or could not recall.

A middle-aged woman came close and said: "Be sure and speak to my husband, won't you? Don't you know him? Do you remember the man who had come west from Connecticut, who signed among the first, and who told you he hadn't been thoroughly sober in seventeen years? There he is, fixing that window. Please speak to him!"

As the man, well dressed and self-respecting, came towards me with both hands extended I involuntarily said: "God bless you, brother."

Heaven can hardly have in store for me a more joyful moment than the one that followed.

"He has blessed me; He does bless me;" smiles and tears chasing one another among the wrinkles of his honest face. "We have a Christian home and a family altar. The children are both in school now, and they don't seem to lay anything up against me. God never blessed anybody so much as he has blessed us."

Since the organization of the church there a few months later it has had no other member more in earnest than the man who had not been sober in seventeen years.

Mary Jewett-Telford.

McMinnville, Tenn.

"A LARGE UPPER CHAMBER, WHOSE WINDOW OPENED TOWARDS THE SUN-RISING. THE NAME OF THE CHAMBER WAS PEACE." PILGRIM'S PROGRESS

Wait on the Lord.

Evening fell after a strenuous day. Unforeseen happenings had upset all the well-planned hours. Simply to hold her own and to keep sweet had taxed the grace and strength of the older woman. She was sitting in the twilight, a bright fire blazing in the grate before her. Her hands lay limp in her lap, as she rested soul and body in the flickering light. She closed her tired eyes and repeated softly, "Wait on the Lord; be of good courage and He shall strengthen thine heart. Wait, I say, on the Lord."

In the dim silence she talked with One unseen. "O Love divine," she prayed, "I wait before Thee. Hast Thou some word of love for me tonight? All this day I have felt Thy presence, sustaining, comforting. Forgive where I have failed to honor Thee. I would not, Oh, Thou knowest, I would not, but—"

Gently came the answer to her inner consciousness: "The Lord is thy keeper. I will not fail thee."

"Sometimes I grow tired in my heart, oh, Christ, and the way seems hard. I know that Love guides me, and I will not for a moment doubt Thee, but—"

"Be of good courage and I will strengthen your heart, because ye hope in me," came the swift assurance.

An atmosphere of love wrapped her round like a garment. The vivid sense of a Presence close beside her filled her with ineffable content. How the weariness of the day slipped away! How full of blessedness life seemed! For a little while she slept in the gathering darkness like a child in its mother's arms, and waking she was refreshed.

Later at her desk she read again a letter received by an early mail:

"Dear friend:—I have long been wanting to write to you; but I live in such a rush that it has seemed impossible. Life is a tumult, and I am always in pursuit of another hour and never catching it. When I get it it is the same old hour of restless, and I often feel, of fruitless effort.

"What would I give for your sweet serenity! Yet I remember with wondering, loving thought the sorrow that has come to you. Tell me your secret; I am in a hopeless tangle.

"Modern houskeeping is an inexorable tyrant. Of making many clubs for intellectual improvement, there is no end. Even our church duties that are supposed to deepen our spiritual life are done with a rush and fever that often seems little short of dissipation. I am not mistress of my house, because the tyrant lords it over me. My brains are stuffed, and, I really believe, are deteriorating. My spiritual life—with shame and sorrow I confess it—is life more in name than in reality. But the great hunger in my heart makes me dare to hope that I am not wholly given over to destruction.

"Dear friend, help me if you can.

Gertrude."

"I have though much of your letter today," wrote the older woman in reply. "I must not wait until tomorrow to tell you of the better way. Dear child, you will be a nervous wreck long before you are fifty if you keep on.

"The air here is full of the same intoxicating element, and it certainly is not oxygen nor ozone. I am not by any means insensible to its influence. Naturally I must either let a thing entirely alone or else do it with a vengeance. My life has been one long lesson—that of learning to be moderate. This is the open secret, the only cure I know for such tendencies: 'Wait on the Lord . . . Wait, I say, on the Lord.'

"You will find the words in a certain psalm, with a comforting admonition and promise. We have the priceless privilege of prayer which grows more effectual and precious as we use it. But until we learn that it is not only petition, even with thanksgiving, do we come to any comprehension of its power. Ah, dear, no human soul has ever measured that, but little by little we may learn.

"Turn resolutely to Him and wait to hear what he will say. Such words of love as you have never dreamed He is longing to whisper to your innermost heart. Take time to hear. Very soon you will, almost unconsciously, turn to listen for a whisper in times of stress as well as in your quiet hour before the Lord.

"The poise of soul that you will gain will help you to see the values, as artists say, of life in other phases.

"It is not life, intellectually or spiritually, that does not grow.

"It is not home in the highest sense where there is not somewhere a chamber that looks toward the sunrising, a chamber called Peace."

OFFICIAL COMMUNICATIONS

REST COTTAGE. THE WILLARD.

GENERAL OFFICERS:

President,
MRS. LILLIAN M. N. STEVENS, Portland, Me.
Vice-President-at-Large,
MISS ANNA A. GORDON, Evanston, Ill.
Corresponding Secretary,
MRS. SUSANNA M. D. FRY, Evanston, Ill.
Recording Secretary,
MRS. CLARA C. HOFFMAN, Kansas City, Mo.
Asst. Recording Secretary,
MRS. FRANCES E. BEAUCHAMP, Lexington, Ky.
Treasurer,
MRS. HELEN M. BARKER, Evanston, Ill.

Headquarters National W. C. T. U., Evanston, Ill.

Corresponding Secretary's Notes.

DEAR SISTERS:—We have plenty of anti-polygamy literature at headquarters now. Any union or individual wishing material will please write me indicating about how much, and the order will be filled. This literature will be free to white ribboners as long as it lasts. This has been made possible through the generosity of Mr. and Mrs. John C. Martin and the Interdenominational Council of Women. The National W. C. T. U. has just issued a new leaflet, "Facts About Polygamy," made up of the most salient points found in several of the leaflets formerly issued by the Council. The National will, however, be very glad to have postage accompany the request for literature when convenient. A number of orders have been received by the Willet Press of New York. Neither this firm nor the Council can fill orders now, and all such should be addressed to me at National Headquarters, Evanston, Ill.

I am very glad to see that Mrs. Tomlinson, superintendent of Red Letter Days, has brought out a leaflet particularly adapted to the birthday of Mrs. L. M. N. Stevens, as it is really a biographical sketch of her. There have been demands for material of this kind, and I am sure the unions will avail themselves of the opportunity to order of the W. T. P. A. for March 1.

Mrs. Thacher wishes me to beg any who feel neglected on account of delay in regard to her Songster, comfort bags, etc., to pardon her and take courage, for although she has had a somewhat serious illness, she is now able to work and will respond as far as possible.

What state wishes to take Mrs. Maria Weed, our speaker in the anti-polygamy campaign in the West, for the month of May or for a part of April? She has just finished a most successful itinerary in Indiana, and she goes to Minnesota for March. The interest is growing, and I am sure the unions would feel amply repaid for any effort they might make to hold a public meeting or have her speak to the union. The subject is so vast that no one who has not had a long residence in Utah can consider themselves well posted. Dr. Elliott has engagements in New York, Pennsylvania and some other eastern states until July, but unions must address their state president or secretary, as both Mrs. Weed's and Dr. Elliott's itineraries are made out by the states engaging them.

The National treasurer is already rejoiced on account of reports coming in from commemorative meetings. A very much larger sum has been paid out for missionary work so far this year than at the same time any other year, showing two things, we may conclude: first, that the work began earlier after the National Convention, as is very desirable; and second, that more work is being done in our mission fields. This argues encouraging reports at the close of the year. It is not too late to have such a meeting; and so much help has been given in the UNION SIGNAL that unions will not find it a difficult matter. The minute-talks by the members of the Evanston and Reiley unions at the meeting at National Headquarters February 13, on the characteristics of Miss Willard or her work which had most impressed them, proved a very interesting feature of the meeting.

As yet neither the Interstate Commerce bill, dealing with liquor in original packages, nor the immigration bill, which would shut out liquor from immigrant stations, has been passed. Letters and telegrams, especially from voters to their respective senators, are still in order and are extremely desirable unless action shall have been taken before this meets your eye.

Yours cordially,
SUSANNA M. D. FRY.

With the Treasurer.

CONTRIBUTIONS to the Willard Memorial fund received since last report are as follows:

MASSACHUSETTS: Reading, Medford, Miss Eva K. Foster, Miss Lella M. Sewall; Wakefield.

NEW YORK: Carmel, Bennettsburg, Cuba.

CALIFORNIA: Campbell.

WISCONSIN: East Green Bay, Melrose.

PENNSYLVANIA: Tunkhannock, Nicholson, Factoryville, Center Moreland.

CONNECTICUT: Scotland, Ellington, Danielson, Westville.

NEW MEXICO: Santa Fe.

MICHIGAN: Sturgis.

MISSISSIPPI: Vicksburg.

ALABAMA: Huntsville.

OHIO: East Cleveland, Savannah, New London.

VERMONT: Franklin, Rupert.

A very generous contribution of $100 has been received from our good friend Wm. Deering for this fund. Miss Tinling, our dear English sister, now at work in the South, sends $5, and Dora Inlow, of Independence, sends the same amount. These generous sums reaching us so early are very cheering. Mrs. Henry Cobham, of Pennsylvania, also sends a gift of $5 to be divided between Memorial and Hospital funds. A donation of $2.86 from Vernonia, Ore., was also received.

Dues have been received from New York, District of Columbia, North Carolina, Wisconsin, Ohio and Florida. M. Anna Hall, of West Virginia, has sent to the Manila fund $21.35 on pledge made at Fort Worth. Dorchester W. C. T. U. has again sent its quarterly donation to the National.

A Memorial meeting was held at Rest Cottage by the two local unions of Evanston. The attendance was large and the tributes to Miss Willard were tender and loving. Mrs. Zimmerman conducted the devotional services and gave reminiscences of Miss Willard and her mother. Mrs. Fry and Mrs. Barker spoke briefly, and then all present were asked to tell in a minute-speech what in Miss Willard's character or work had most impressed them individually. Many responded, and these responses brought out the many phases of her beautiful character, and showed how helpful and elevating all these traits had been. Truly she still lives in these good women to whom she imparted courage, love, hope, faith, inspiration and a spirit of work for humanity. Such meetings do great good, and hundreds will be held before you read these words.

HELEN M. BARKER.

A Fine Kidney Remedy.

Mr. A. S. Hitchcock, East Hampton, Conn. (The Clothier), says if any sufferer from Kidney and Bladder Disease will write him he will direct them to the perfect home cure he used. He makes no charge whatever for the favor.

Organizers.

IT seemed so natural and pleasant, too, to take up the last UNION SIGNAL and read the two letters which the column gave; one from our dauntless chairman who braves winds and storms that our blessed cause may win; and even when it doesn't, gathers more wind in her sails and away she goes; the other letter giving insight into the real sacrifice our brave young women are making to hasten the day we are all praying for when only a taste of home now and then is given to the tireless traveler.

The secretary informs me that this is my date to tell you what I am doing.

I left the National Convention before its close to attend the Inaugural conference of the Friends Church, held in Indianapolis, where I presented our cause. From there I went to Baltimore, also for temperance work; thence home, and in the Catskill mountains for evangelistic work, which has taken nearly all my time this winter. Lately, conventions again, reorganizing unions near home, the general care of the work in the big county of which I am president, the care of my state department work, and lectures here and there bring me to this date—Valentine's day.

They seem so little when we try to gather up the fragments of our work, but I find that the faithfulness required makes a good summary, for none of us are tramping for pleasure.

I trust that our letters may appear regularly. They are the first thing I look for in THE UNION SIGNAL—a proof of our love and loyalty to each other as well as the blessed service to which we are called.

EMILIE UNDERHILL BURGESS.
Highland-on-Hudson, N. Y.

Lord's Day Week.

April 19-25, 1903.

No one who observes the signs of the times can fail to notice the increasing disregard of the Lord's Day on the part not only of those who confessedly belong to the world, but also on the part of the church. With pain and sorrow the disciples of the Master see Him "wounded in the house of His friends." The commandment to keep holy the Sabbath Day has never been repealed. As a pledge of God's loving kindness it lays an arresting hand upon secular toil and secular amusements, and gives breathing space for rest of the body and of the soul; for physical recuperation and for spiritual cleansing and exaltation. Any nation that forgets to obey God's command as to Sabbath rest is on the down grade. Any individual who ignores the same command shortens his physical and starves his spiritual life. We can do nothing to restore to our homes, our churches, and society the ideal Christian Sabbath, if we attempt to work in our own strength. Legislation will avail us little if we trust alone to that. Meetings for conference and protest will be abortive. literature will be as barren seed, every means will fail unless God work with us.

Therefore, using every helpful motive, incentive, and agency that is available to promote a better observance of the Lord's Day, our chief dependence must be on the Holy Spirit for whose abiding presence we pray. We urge upon Christians of every denomination to unite in specific prayer for the restoration of right feeling about the Lord's Day in our land.

Let us in the Lord's Day week of this year pray definitely that the Sabbath may not be profaned for purposes of business, of travel, or of recreation, especially in these countries which owe their life and prosperity to the fostering care of God and the observance of His Holy Day

Recent indications are encouraging. The contract by which the St. Louis Exposition is to be closed every Sabbath as a condition of receiving the appropriation granted by

(Continued on page 11.)

Building Bones.

Of Great Importance That Children Have Proper Food.

A child will grow up with weak and small bones or strong and sturdy frame, depending on the kind of food given.

That's why feeding the youngsters is of such great importance. The children do not select the food—the responsibility rests with the parent or guardian, or with you if you select the food for a boy or girl.

The scientific selection of this food should begin as early as possible. That's when the delicate little plant needs the tenderest care. A well known lady of Calistoga, Calif., says: "About two years ago my little niece was taken sick. When medical aid was called one physician pronounced the case curvature of the spine; another called it softening of the bones and gave but little hope of her recovery. For weeks she had been failing before her parents thought it anything but trouble from her teething.

"She had been fed on mushes and soft foods of different kinds, but at last her stomach could retain scarcely anything. At this time she had become a weak little skeleton of humanity that could not much more than stand alone.

"The doctors changed her food several times until finally she was put on Grape-Nuts which she relished from the first and ate at almost every meal and her recovery has been wonderful. She has been gaining ever since in strength and weight.

"She has eaten dozens of packages of Grape-Nuts in the last year and a half and the child is now a rosy-cheeked and healthy little girl, still clinging to her Grape-Nuts.

"It is plain the food has saved her life by giving her body the needed material to keep it well and the bone material to build with." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

It Doesn't Scare Folks
to be told the truth about
Lion Coffee
The scare-crow coffees are those that hide under a glazing of factory eggs, glue and such stuff.
Lion Coffee is pure, wholesome, unglazed, rich in flavor and uniform in strength. The air-tight, sealed package insures cleanliness, freshness and uniformity.

LEARN PROOFREADING. If you possess a fair education, why not utilize it at a genteel and uncrowded profession paying $15 to $35 weekly? Situations always obtainable. We are the original instructors by mail. HOME CORRESPONDENCE SCHOOL, Philadelphia

FOR SALE: $10,000 Ohio Railway & Light Co. 5 per cent Gold Bonds. Send for special circular, with President O'Neill's letter. THE JACKSON CO., Middletown, Conn.

$20 A WEEK Straight salary and expenses to men with rig to introduce our Poultry Mixture in country; year's contract; weekly pay. Address, with stamp, Monarch Mfg. Co., Box 1166, Springfield, Ill.

(Continued from page 10.)

Congress has been properly executed. Sunday excursions have been stopped in many places in the United States and throughout all Canada and in the latter country, the organized labor forces have been very generally co-operating with the Lord's Day Alliance in opposition to Sunday work and Sunday amusements.

We, the undersigned, therefore call the attention of all Christians to the twenty-fifth annual Lord's Day week, April 19-25, 1903, and urge them to devote as much of it as practicable to prayer that God will arouse the whole church to renewed consecration and zeal in keeping the Sabbath as He has directed. We request each pastor to preach on this subject during that week, and each church, young people's society, and W. C. T. U. to devote at least one meeting to its prayerful consideration, seeking three definite results: 1st, A Higher Standard of Sabbath Keeping Among Christians; 2nd, Release of as Many as Possible from Sunday Toil; 3rd, Discontinuance of Sunday Amusements, Especially Sunday Excursions and Games. We urge that leaflets in reference to the Sabbath be distributed that week in every home and as occasion may offer at other times.

Signed: Mrs. Margaret E. Sangster, Glen Ridge, N. J., Pres. Woman's National Sabbath Alliance. Mrs. Annie A. Rutherford, Toronto, Pres. Dominion W. C. T. U. of Canada. Mrs. Varila F. Cox, Tabor, N. J., Supt. Sabbath Observance Dept. National W. C. T. U. I. W. Hathaway, D. D., New York, N. Y., Sec. American Sabbath Union. Rev. J. B. Davison, Milwaukee, Wis., Sec. Wisconsin Sunday Rest Day Ass'n. Rev. W. F. Crafts, Ph. D., Washington, D. C., Supt. National Reform Bureau. M. D. Kneeland, Boston, Mass., Sec. New England Sabbath Protective Ass'n. T. T. Mutchler, D. D., Philadelphia, Pa., Sec. Philadelphia Sabbath Ass'n. Rev. J. G. Shearer, Toronto, Canada, Sec. Lord's Day Alliance of Canada. Edward Thomson, D. D., LL. D., San Antonio, Texas.

Responsive Readings
Published Monthly.
Designed for the use of local unions and of great aid to workers, as they contain information wholly upon the work of the departments of the W. C. T. U.

SUBSCRIPTION PRICE:
Single Copies, per year ..... $.10
13 Copies, per year, to one address 1.00
100 of this issue ..... .50

Subject for March Reading,
Christian Citizenship.
By Mrs. Mary Jewett-Telford,
National Superintendent of the Department of Christian Citizenship.

Woman's Temperance Publishing Association,
184 LA SALLE ST., CHICAGO, ILL.

World's W. C. T. U.

General Officers.

President—Lady Henry Somerset, Eastnor Castle, Ledbury, England.
Vice-President-at-Large—Mrs. L. M. N. Stevens, Portland, Maine, U. S. A.
Honorary Secretaries—Miss Agnes E. Slack, Ripley, Derbyshire, England; Miss Anna A. Gordon, Evanston, Ill., U. S. A.
Honorary Treasurer—Mrs. Mary E. Sanderson Danville, Quebec, Canada.
General Secretary Y Branch—Mrs. Frances J. Barnes, 126 W. 103d St., New York City.
General Secretary L. T. L. Branch—Miss Anna A. Gordon, Evanston, Ill., U. S. A.

World's Convention.

Geneva, June 9-11.

THE Geneva Committee is making admirable progress with arrangements for the Convention. We have invited the following influential people to attend our meetings: Mademoiselle Humbert (Neuchâtel), Monsieur Emile Bonnard (Lausanne), Mademoiselle Huguenin (Brenets), Dr. Forel (Chigny), Madame Bovet (Berne), Mademoiselle Clara Bovet (Grandchamp), Monsieur Seiretan (Etoy), Frau Prof. Blevler (Zurich), Madame de Zurich (Fribourg), Mr. Col. Repond (Fribourg), Dr. Repond (Monthey), Madame Villiger Keller (Leuzbourg), La Dr. Auna Haim (Zurich), Mademoiselle de Mullinen (Wegmukle), Monsieur Courvoissir (Bienne), Monsieur Grandjian (Neuchâtel), Mr. le Pasteur Joseph (Lausanne), Dr. Speyr (Berne), Professor and Mrs. Gaule (Zurich), Frau Dr. Blenler Waser (Zurich), Mons. le Pasteur Louis Rochat (President of la Croix Bleue).

This will give some idea of the widely representative people we are expecting our Convention to attract from all parts of Switzerland. Also we are in communication with well-known leading philanthropists in the European countries. Madame de Byde has invited our delegates to a reception at her beautiful country seat, Saconney, near Geneva. Geneva ladies who speak English fluently will be always ready to give all information asked for. Afternoon tea and lunch will be supplied each day, at a small charge by the local committee. A steamer on the lake may be hired for not less than 200 persons, at very moderate terms, and at reduced prices for a party of sixteen.

Mademoiselle de Beaumont has undertaken to give all particulars of excursions. Interpreters will be readily provided for speakers at evening public meetings. A public meeting will be held on the Sunday evening, and probably during the day, also a united meeting of the Bands of Hope, about which we are now in communication with Monsieur le Pasteur Durand. We have also asked Pasteur Laufer, Pasteur Ganipert, and Pasteur Charles Martin to arrange for our speakers to give addresses in the Sunday schools.

Madame Dunant informs me that the papers of Geneva and Lausanne are giving preliminary announcements of the convention. Professor Hercod (Lausanne), is helping us by making our meetings known in the Swiss press.

Seats will be reserved at the meetings for all white ribboners, as we are expecting, that, in addition to delegates, some countries will send several representatives. Later tickets can be had for these on application.

The city of Geneva deserves more attention from travelers than it often receives. It is not merely the gateway to the district of Mont Blanc, but it is in itself a delightful and interesting town. The excursions which may be made from Geneva, either by steamer along the Lake or into the Jura mountains, are unsurpassed in beauty and interest. Few towns in Europe are richer in literary and historical associations. St. Francis de Sales, Calvin, Rousseau, Byron, Gibbon and Madame de Stael, are only a few of the celebrated names connected with Geneva. The famous Castle of Chillon is within an easy day's excursion, and travelers have missed a delightful experience who never have seen the magnificent view of the range of Mont Blanc that may be obtained from the heights above the lake, or the beauty of the lake shore at Vevey or Montreux. The town of Geneva is exceedingly well laid out. The walks and public gardens are excellent, the means of communication with all parts of Switzerland are most convenient, and, altogether there are few Continental centres which will better repay the traveler.

All affiliated countries are urged to send their reports, to reach me not later than May 6. World's Superintendents' Reports (not exceeding 2,000 words) should also be sent in at that time, as this enables press notices of them to be circulated.

B. W. T. A.

The Annual Council Meetings will be held at Great Queen Street Chapel, May 25-28.

Every week names are being sent in of members who wish to go to Geneva. The historic associations of the fine old city and its most beautiful surroundings are helping to attract a large number of white ribboners.

GERMANY.

Fraulein Ottelie Hoffmann is most energetically making arrangements for the International Temperance Congress, which will meet at Bremen, April 9-14. A most inclusive program, with eminent European speakers, shows what a great time may be expected. We hope many white ribboners will attend and take part in the proceedings. A greater prominence is being given our women's work at this Congress than at any preceding one. Mrs. Mary H. Hunt will speak on Scientific Temperance Instruction. Fru Ali Trygg Helenius (Finland), Madame Legrain (Paris) will take part. I am announced to speak on the World's W. C. T. U.

INDIA.

The Punjab, the land of the five rivers, held its Divisional Convention at Lahore, on November 5th. About fifty pledges were taken. It was agreed to increase the supply of temperance literature in the vernacular. Social purity work was taken up and plans were laid to help to provide the proposed W. C. T. U. tent at the Delhi Coronation Durbar, with a worker from the division. The Central Provinces Division Convention met in Jabalpur, near India's Marble Rocks. Amongst other matters, the Willard Memorial Home (for inebriates) was discussed. The World's Officers are now in communication with Mrs. Hoskins, with reference to sending a lady from England as superintendent of the Willard W. C. T. U. Inebriate Home at Poona.

BURMA.

Mrs. Beedham has organized an English W. C. T. U. at Moulmein. The wife of the chief engineer on one of the steamboats is president. The Burmese union is doing excellent work. Mrs. Beedham writes, "You will see by the 'Life Line' how successful the Burmese union is in Moulmein. I was delighted with their meeting. I could not understand a word of what was said, but I enjoyed watching their faces, and I knew that the reports were splendid. Mah Mya is a union in herself, and it is to her work and influence that the Burmese union owes most of its success. Her husband was my interpreter, and I know he did the work perfectly. As his knowledge of English is practically unlimited, I did not have to choose my words, as I usually do when speaking through an interpreter, but could use the first word I thought of. I seem to have spent most of my time in Moulmein in giving addresses. I think my next work must be to go up to Mandalay, and endeavor to establish a union there."

SOUTH AFRICA.

The W. C. T. U., Cape Colony, has eighteen unions, with a membership of 387, and sixteen in the Young Women's C. T. U. (the "Y's"), with a membership of 346, making a total of 733. There has been a great falling off owing to military restrictions, some unions having had their meeting places commandeered. Quotations from reports received showed that union had done what work was nearest. Sea Point held Gospel Temperance meetings for soldiers, taking 500 pledges. Many who

(Continued on page 12.)

COUGHS, Bronchitis, Hoarseness, Sore Throat, Effectively Relieved.
BROWN'S BRONCHIAL TROCHES
Fac-Simile Signature of John L. Brown & Son on every box.

We Start BOYS in Business

We have started over three thousand boys in various parts of the country in a profitable business on their own account. We want a boy to represent

The Saturday Evening Post

In every town. The work can be done after school hours and on Saturdays. It is pleasant, as well as profitable. The magazines are sold among neighbors and friends in offices, stores, as well as in homes.

No Money Required to Begin

The first week's supply is sent free. These are sold at five cents a copy and provide the money to order the following week at wholesale prices.

$225.00 IN EXTRA CASH PRIZES will be distributed among boys who sell five or more copies.

Our FREE booklet gives portraits of some of our most successful boy agents and their methods.

The Curtis Publishing Co.
451 Arch Street
Philadelphia

KINDLY MENTION THE UNION SIGNAL WHEN WRITING ADVERTISERS.

Only One Night to FLORIDA

In addition to its regular 9:00 a. m. and 8:30 p. m. train service for all points south, the "Big Four Route" is running a Pullman drawing room sleeper on its 1:00 p. m. train, daily except Sunday, Chicago to St. Augustine, Florida, via Indianapolis, Cincinnati, Atlanta, Macon and Jacksonville, only 32 hours enroute. This train is known as the "Chicago and Florida Special," and is strictly up to the 20th century mark. Call on agents for rates and tickets via "Big Four-Q & C Route," or address

Chas. S. LaFollette, T. P. A. OR J. C. Tucker, Gen'l Northern Agent
234 Clark St., Chicago

KINDLY MENTION THE UNION SIGNAL WHEN WRITING ADVERTISERS.

LADIES—STUDY AT HOME
TRAIN TO NURSE
Use leisure hours to become independent. Every woman inexperienced or experienced in nursing should receive a thorough course of theoretical training before assuming the responsibility of ministering to the sick. Our course universally endorsed by physicians and surgeons as practical and easy of comprehension. Our faculty, leading physicians and surgeons of Chicago. Our scholars enthusiastic in our support. Diploma. Catalogue free. American Cor. School for Nurses, 0—167 Dearborn, Chicago.

KINDLY MENTION THE UNION SIGNAL WHEN WRITING ADVERTISERS.

CHIRON LUBRICATING PILE CONE

A small, hollow, perforated wooden cone, filled with the Chiron Ointment, especially prepared for the purpose. Perfect and continuous lubrication by soothing and healing ointment directly to the sore spots. Endorsed by physicians. Immediate relief and a certain cure for ALL KINDS OF PILES. Regular price, $3. SPECIAL PRICE (for 30 days only), $1. By mail, sealed in plain wrapper.
The CHIRON Mfg. Co., Plainfield, N. J.

KINDLY MENTION THE UNION SIGNAL WHEN WRITING ADVERTISERS.

25 CTS. PISO'S CURE FOR CURES WHERE ALL ELSE FAILS. Best Cough Syrup. Tastes Good. Use in time. Sold by druggists. CONSUMPTION 25 CTS.

KINDLY MENTION THE UNION SIGNAL WHEN WRITING ADVERTISERS.

(Continued from page 11.)

signed became active Christians. Kimberley, Port Elizabeth, Queenstown, Fort Beaufort and Cape Town sent comforts to the soldiers. Sailors have been aided in Cape Town and East London, many unions having sent regular donations to the Salvation Army for prison and reform work. Somerset East is aiding a local cottage hospital fund; other unions help Indian famine or Nyassaland funds; and many aid the Children's home for orphans, Port Elizabeth, founded and maintained by the W. C. T. U. there. Each union fully controls all its local funds and has liberty to adopt any department of work advocated by the Colonial executive.

There are active indications of resumption of temperance work.

The Misses Vincent and Cummins hope to leave Southamption by the Union Castle mail steamer on April 25, for Cape Town. Shortly before they leave the B. W. T. A. will give our World's Missionaries a farewell reception at headquarters in London. The Cape Colony W. C. T. U. is organizing meetings to begin immediately on their arrival, and we are hoping Natal, the Orange River Colony and the Transvaal will all earnestly co-operate with our devoted missionaries in arranging their work. We are glad to report that some B. W. T. A. members have already given subscriptions towards the great expense which must necessarily be incurred by the long journeys which Miss Vincent and Miss Cummins must take in South Africa. The need there is most urgent, most pitiful, and the World's Officers greatly appreciate all the help which can in any way be given our two comrades. I shall be glad to forward to them, through our World's Treasurer, any further donations.

Agnes E. Slack,
Hon. Sec. World's W. C. T. U.
Ripley, Derbyshire, England.

I Will Cure You of RHEUMATISM

Else No Money is Wanted.

Any honest person who suffers from Rheumatism is welcome to this offer.

I am a specialist in Rheumatism, and have treated more cases than any other physician, I think. For 16 years I made 2,000 experiments with different drugs, testing all known remedies while searching the world for something better. Nine years ago I found a costly chemical in Germany which, with my previous discoveries, gives me a certain cure.

I don't mean that it can turn bony joints into flesh again; but it can cure the disease at any stage, completely and forever. I have done it fully 100,000 times.

I know this so well that I will furnish my remedy on trial. Simply write me a postal for my book on Rheumatism, and I will mail you an order on your druggist for six bottles Dr. Shoop's Rheumatic Cure. Take it for a month at my risk. If it succeeds, the cost is only $5.50. If it fails, I will pay the druggist myself—and your mere word shall decide it.

I mean that exactly. If you say the results are not what I claim, I don't expect a penny from you.

I have no samples. Any mere sample that can affect chronic Rheumatism must be drugged to the verge of danger. I use no such drugs, and it is folly to take them. You must get the disease out of the blood.

My remedy does that even in the most difficult, obstinate cases. It has cured the oldest cases that I ever met. And in all my experience—in all my 2,000 tests—I never found another remedy that would cure one chronic case in ten.

Write me and I will send you the order. Try my remedy for a month, as it can't harm you anyway. If it fails it is free.

Address Dr. Shoop, Box 948, Racine, Wis.

Mild cases, not chronic, are often cured by one or two bottles. At all druggists.

W. C. T. U. Notes.

Hammond, La., union is planning for the coming of Mrs. Clara C. Hoffman.

The local union of Bozeman, Mont., will present a drinking fountain to the city.

The Syracuse (N. Y.) Y observed Memorial Day with the Prohibition Alliance of that city.

Pomona, Calif., has had seven silver and two gold medal contests. A grand gold contest will be held at county convention.

The Los Angeles (Cal.) union is raising money to assist in the fitting up of the old Warrior, as a sailor's home at San Pedro.

Miss Rhena Mosher, National lecturer and organizer, is again in Texas for a series of meetings.

Newburgh (N. Y.) union is enlisted in a membership contest. Twenty new members are already enrolled.

At a meeting of the Prohibition Alliance at New Castle, Pa., the evening was devoted to a review of the life of Frances E. Willard.

Mrs. J. E. Ellis has been doing successful work in medal contests in Canada. She held forty-four contests in the Dominion, twenty-four in the province of Manitoba.

As a prize for the largest increase in membership during the year, the union at Scranton, Pa., was given a lecture by Mrs. J. K. Barney, which was much appreciated.

Milwaukee (Wis.), Brainard (Minn.), Springfield and North Adams (Mass.), Harrisburg (Pa.), Utica (N. Y.) and Manchester (N. H.), commemorated February 17 by special services.

Lake Charles (La.) union was revived under the ministrations of the state organizer, Mrs. Oliver. It enters on the new year with the addition of many members and renewed hope.

Dutchess county, N. Y., held its silver anniversary in Poughkeepsie. The county has 210 Ys. The Poughkeepsie Y carried off the banner given for increase in membership. Mrs. M. E. Bennett, county evangelist, has held that office the entire twenty-five years.

Greencastle, Ind., with Mrs. McWhirter to inspire the workers, has over eighty new members, as the result of a membership contest. Dr. Homer J. Hall and Mrs. Hattie Brand have lately addressed the union.

Mrs. A. C. Zehner organized a union at Oakwood, Tex., one year ago with fifteen members. A medal was recently awarded to Miss Mary Hammett for having secured the most members. The union now numbers ninety-three.

The annual meeting of the Lady Henry Somerset Club of Burlington, Kansas, had Mrs. C. E. F. Smith, county president of Coffey county, as guest of honor. The gentlemen came in time for the luncheon to which they were invited.

The state W. C. T. U. is vigorously opposing the introduction of the dispensary into Arkansas. A vigorous protest has been made against the dispensary bill before the legislature, which has the indorsement of the Anti-Saloon League.

The Woman's Christian Temperance Union of Millville, N. J., has issued a public card of thanks to the mayor and city officials, who have for the past two weeks been endeavoring to rid the city of drunkards, speak-easies and other disorderly places.

Rev. Frances E. Townsley gave the Frances E. Willard memorial address at Western Avenue Baptist church, Chicago. Her subject, "The Heavenly Vision," met with great favor with the audience. Miss Townsley also addressed the young people in the B. Y. P. U. meeting.

The Woman's Christian Temperance Union of Cayuga county, New York, will award a prize of $5 to the boy or girl under sixteen years of age residing in Cayuga county, who will write the best essay on the subject, "The Social Glass and Its Dangers." The essay must not exceed 400 words.

The members of the W. C. T. U. of Sidney, N. Y., have taken hold of the matter of removing the gambling slot machines. They secured the arrest of one man, who paid the costs and removed the machine from his place of business. Notices have been served on all other owners of the machines in Sidney.

The executive committee of the Kentucky W. C. T. U. met for its mid-year conference with Mrs. Frances E. Beauchamp, state president. The report of the treasurer showed that there was $3,000 in the treasury. The program for the state convention was outlined and $75 voted for the distribution of literature. The outlook for the state work was never so promising.

The fifth triennial convention of the W. C. T. U. of Australasia will be held in Melbourne, Victoria, beginning April 24, 1903. The members are preparing for this event and are looking forward to it with great interest and gladness of heart. Should any members of the W. C. T. U. be visiting Australia at that time, a cordial invitation to attend the meetings is extended to them.

The School Savings Banks system has been taken up in the public schools of Delhi, Minn.; Hermet, Calif.; Tarkio, Mo.; Port Byron, Ill.; Belfast, Me., and Tionesta, Pa., since Feb. 1. The National Superintendent is busy sending out supplies but never too busy to answer all letters of inquiry promptly and to give information of the exact methods of this excellent and helpful thrift teaching to every local W. C. T. U. wishing to help institute it.

Mrs. E. T. Scott, National Lecturer and Organizer, continues her successful work in Kansas. Two more unions are to be credited to her, namely, Caney and Cherryvale, the latter with an active membership of thirty-four. Both are in Montgomery county, making four she has organized in the county. Frances E. Willard Memorial Day, Feb. 17, was duly observed by the Cherryvale union at the Baptist church. Mrs. Scott gave the address.

Crowned.

Mrs. Martha Hopper, president of Charleston W. C. T. U., after a long life of faithful service in the Master's cause was called to her heavenly home on February 6, 1903.

Rev. Newell W. Bixby, father of Mrs. Thera B. True, the honored president of the twenty-third district W. C. T. U. of Iowa, entered into rest January 23, 1903, at the age of ninety-four years. He had lived a consecrated Christian life for seventy-six years and had served as a minister of Christ for nearly seventy years. He organized the first Free Baptist church in Iowa. Mr. Bixby was a devoted brother-in-law of our organization.

Mrs. Clara C. Betteys, of Oxford, Mich., entered the "life-land" February 4, 1903. During the "Crusade" she took up temperance work. Though unable because of physical suffering to take a very active part in the work of the union, she was one of the most influential members. Possessing fine literary ability, a strong symmetrical character, a deep interest in all reforms, she "lived to make the world better." The beautiful W. C. T. U. burial service was used at her funeral.

Mrs. Nancy Morrow, of New Cumberland, W. Va., mother-in-law of Mrs. N. R. C. Morrow, state president of West Virginia W. C. T. U., entered into rest January 14, 1903. Mrs. Morrow was a woman of great strength of character and ability. Though lacking only thirteen days of ninety years of age she retained her mental faculties till the last. After a long life of usefulness in Christian and temperance work she was for many months a great sufferer, during which time she was a comfort and inspiration to all about her, by her courage and cheerfulness, clearly demonstrating God's power to sustain His children.

Silverware

I prefer PEARLINE to other soap powders. I like it for dish-washing better than soap; it keeps the silver bright.
Mrs. Rev. H. B. M

One of the Millions. 689

At the National Capital

What Postum Did There.

A well-known figure at the National Capital is that of an attorney-at-law and solicitor of patents, who has been practicing before the courts and the Department of the Interior at Washington for more than 25 years. The experience of this gentleman with coffee is unusually interesting for it proves that although the ill results from coffee are slow they are sure. He says: "I have consumed coffee at my meals for many years, but of late years have been annoyed by deranged stomach and sleeplessness, pains in my head, nervousness and confusion of the mind. About 18 months ago I quit coffee and commenced to use Postum Food Coffee and have experienced the most pleasing and beneficial results therefrom.

"It has aided my digestion, increased my appetite for healthy food, appeased my stomach, invigorated my brain, cleared and quieted nerves and mind, and enabled me to sleep soundly 8 hours out of the 24. It has imparted buoyancy and cheerfulness to my daily life and caused me to look on the bright side of things in general. It has fitted me to do more brain work than ever before, and I would consider it a calamity to be deprived of its use.

"I look on Postum as an absolute cure for the ills that coffee causes. It not only cures the ravages of coffee but stimulates to vigor and healthy action the brain and all the organs of the human body. It has with me and with many of my friends and this is my authority for the statement." Name furnished by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

The Prohibitory Law of Maine.

By Colonel Fred N. Dow.

LESS than twenty years ago the amendment now assailed in the movement for resubmission was made a part of the constitution. The reason, in brief, was that the law by which the people had sought to protect the state from the liquor traffic in its most dangerous and seductive form, was exposed to a sudden assault from the liquor interest of the country. That interest has a vast capital at its command. It would deem an immense sum well invested if expended in support of a movement formidable enough to threaten the repeal of the prohibitory legislation of this state. The merest tyro in politics must understand that the overthrow of prohibition in Maine, where it was born, would so encourage the liquor interest everywhere as to make this state always a tempting point of attack. Te resist such an attack the people can rely only upon self-sacrificing labors on the part of those who, without money and without price, may volunteer for the thankless task.

It was, therefore, reasonable, proper, and almost indispensable that an outer line of defense should be established and maintained for the policy of prohibition, so that in Maine, as in other states, the liquor interest, now organized as never before, might not steal a march, and in a night-attack, as it were, overthrow prohibition before the people could fairly realize that such an attack was contemplated. That outer line was established in the amendment now assailed by the liquor interest. That line ought not to be abandoned; those outer works ought not to be given up until a legislature of this state is itself satisfied that our prohibitory legislation should be repealed, and is also convinced that the people of the state at large are in favor of such repeal.

I do not believe that the people of this state are ready to sustain any movement in legislation of which the liquor interest is an active supporter and from which it expects to profit. So unlikely is that to be the case that we may safely assume that the people of this state are not ready for the repeal of our prohibitory laws. So unlikely is that to be the case that we may safely conclude they prefer the constitution as it is rather than as the liquor interest would have it.

Some urge resubmission on the ground that the resulting vote would show the people in favor of prohibition. If that be true it is a convincing argument against resubmission. If the people do not want a change, why in the name of all that is practicable should they be required to say again what they have so often emphatically said before? Why should they be exposed to the excitement, trouble and expense of resisting the assault of the well-organized and wealthy traffic now waiting for resubmission to put up a desperate fight to once more possess the state?

Is there any reason why this legislature should resubmit this amendment even if it could honorably do so? It should be remembered that such resubmission would practically be advising the people of the state to amend the constitution in this particular. That would give the liquor interest an immense moral support—a support that it ought not to have save at the hands of those who really desire to aid the traffic itself.

It has been urged by some that resubmission would result in a reindorsement of prohibition, which would make its enforcement easier. That suggestion betrays scant practical knowledge of the situation. Do those who make it imagine that those who have been violating our laws for years would go out of their illegal business and become law-abiding citizens in case the vote should be favorable to the constitution as it is? Who is so simple as that? Neither in Maine nor elsewhere has the liquor interest ever respected a popular expression that was hostile to its trade. It never will. Never in Maine nor elsewhere has it obeyed a law or license that interfered with its profits. The liquor interest as a whole never observes any restrictions in any laws.

It is urged that a license law would be enforced. It is the sheerest assumption, disproved in the experience of every community ever living under license that those laws are more easily or more generally enforced than is prohibition.

It is said that it is better to have the "front doors" of a saloon open than its back doors. Many of us think that it is much better that any business which tends to the demoralization of a community should be done on the sly, and in violation of law, and amid conditions tending to disgust and repel, rather than with the approval of law and with surroundings calculated to attract customers. The "open door" saloon (the saloon that pretends to observe the restrictions in a license law) is always attended by its "back door" satellites, or those saloons that cater to the poor wretches who have been first lured to ruin by the "open door" and then cast out as no longer fit to be served at so-called decent bars. That is the history of license everywhere.

It is assumed also, without warrant in fact, that under local option if a community votes for prohibition the liquor traffic will keep out of it. It never has done so willingly; it never will do so. Many of those who urge resubmission on the pretense that local option would be better, would be foremost in attempts to nullify local prohibition however strong might be the local popular support of it.

It is urged that prohibition breeds hypocrisy. In only one sense is that true of prohibition that it is not also true of every other law in the criminal and moral code. It must be admitted that many hypocritically pretend to oppose prohibition because of their deep, all-controlling love for temperance, when the real animus of their opposition is their desire to protect and aid the liquor traffic.

Whoever has given any attention to this subject knows that whatever the form of law, whether prohibitory or license, the main reliance for resisting the aggressions of the liquor traffic must be based on a public sentiment hostile to that traffic, and that sentiment is to be created, if at all, by those who are not engaged in it, are not favorable to it, and who are so much impressed by the evil that it works, as to be willing, by precept and example, to labor for the promotion of temperance. Upon whom can we depend for this work? Upon those who for the most part are opposed to resubmission and not to any great extent upon those who are favorable to it. An immense preponderance of the agencies and influences relied upon for the promotion of the moral and religious interests of the state are opposed to resubmission.

Again it is asked, why not let every community decide for itself? Why not do so on every matter? Each community is a part of the whole, and the whole is interested in, and in a measure responsible for, the conditions in each. If a murder is committed in a city the whole state is put to an expense. Why should not the state say whether or not that city should be permitted to legalize the sale of that which is a prolific cause of murder?

It is claimed that more good by way of restriction would be done through an enforced license law than by unenforced prohibition. This assumes that a license law would be enforced and that prohibition never would. The assumption is baseless. Under a prohibitory law a community can have just what it wants by way of enforcement, from the most rigid to the most lax. To suppose that a community that is under prohibition would insist on a restricted one under license is absurd theoretically, and has over and over again been demonstrated to be false in application. Given a license law in Maine, and scores of those now shedding crocodile tears over the evils of nonenforcement would be so busy, both behind and in front of the open bars that would abound, as to find no time to concern themselves with the promotion of any of the virtues.

By a very large majority those who have given any of their time, their thought, their effort to the promotion of temperance in this state, favor prohibition and want no step taken for its repeal. They ought not to be exposed to the attack on flank and in the rear by the element that is counteracting, so far as possible, all their efforts. Without exception the men who have been violating the prohibitory law of this state are for resubmission; without exception the men who ridicule and denounce all temperance effort are opposed to prohibition. On which side shall our influence be thrown? When the state declares through prohibition that the liquor traffic is an evil that ought to be suppressed, it is aiding the active friends of temperance. When it declares through license that the traffic ought to be permitted, it is encouraging the advocates of the saloon. To resubmit is to advise the people to do what the liquor interest is laboring for.

It would be a sorry day for the people of Maine should they come to depend for encouragement and example, for progress toward a healthy public sentiment, upon the major part of those who are really at the bottom of this resubmission movement. Are we prepared to substitute for the churches and other recognized influences for temperance and sobriety, the resubmission clubs of our larger cities and the actual and would-be liquor sellers and bartenders who, law or no law, will try to ply their trade?

When, being thus discouraged, the churches and the temperance societies, the W. C. T. U. and all the organizations now laboring for temperance in the state of Maine, cease their efforts, will the gentlemen who are now most clamorous for resubmission rally the scattered forces to attempt to recover what would be lost? Would they desire to lead if they could? Could they if they would? Let the men now active in denouncing prohibition support the law as it is in good faith and aid in its enforcement a score of years before they are permitted to ask the people, with any hope of success, for a law such as they want themselves. Not having done that, their plaints that prohibition does not prohibit cannot be regarded as sincere.

For a year or two past there has been an awakening of public sentiment upon this question. It is this that has led to the organization of liquor dealers into resubmission clubs. This is the bottom, the strength, the inspiration of the movement for resubmission. They cover their real object by claiming that because prohibition cannot, as they allege, be enforced it should be repealed. Had many of those now clamoring for resubmission acted the part of good citizens themselves, this state would have bloomed and blossomed like the garden of God. As it is, in spite of that faithlessness, there is no equal number of people on the face of the globe so blessed with all that depends upon temperance as are the people of Maine.

Portland, Me.

Knows No Distinction.

Rich and Poor Alike Suffer From Catarrh in This Climate.

All observant physicians have noticed the enormous increase in catarrhal diseases in recent years, and the most liberal and enlightened have cheerfully given their approval to the new internal remedy, Stuart's Catarrh Tablets, as the most successful and by far the safest remedy for catarrh yet produced.

One well-known catarrh specialist, as soon as he had made a thorough test of this preparation, discarded inhalers, washes and sprays and now depends entirely upon Stuart's Catarrh Tablets in treating catarrh, whether in the head, throat or stomach.

Dr. Risdell says, "In patients who had lost the sense of smell entirely and even where the hearing has begun to be affected from catarrh, I have had fine results after only a few weeks' use of Stuart's Catarrh Tablets. I can only explain their action on the theory that the cleansing and antiseptic properties of the tablets destroy the catarrhal germs wherever found because I have found the tablets equally valuable in catarrh of the throat and stomach as in nasal catarrh."

Dr. Estabrook says, "Stuart's Catarrh Tablets are especially useful in nasal catarrh and catarrh of the throat, clearing the membranes of mucus and speedily overcoming the hawking, coughing and expectorating."

Any sufferer from catarrh will find Stuart's Catarrh Tablets will give immediate relief and being in tablet form and pleasant to the taste, are convenient and always ready for use as they can be carried in the pocket and used at any time as they contain no poisonous drugs, but only the cleansing, antiseptic properties of Eucalyptus bark, blood root and Hydrastin.

All druggists sell the tablets at 50 cents for complete treatment.

ILLINOIS CENTRAL RAILROAD — CENTRAL MISSISSIPPI VALLEY ROUTE

New Line Fine Service.

Minneapolis and St. Paul

Fast "Limited" night train, with stateroom and open-section sleeping car, buffet-library car, and free reclining chair car through without change. Dining car service.

A. H. HANSON, G. P. A., CHICAGO.

A GRAND INVENTION!

Famous Puritan Water Still. Over 72,000 already sold. Placed over the kitchen stove, it purifies the foulest water. Removes every impurity. Furnishes delicious distilled Pure Water. Beats filters. Saves lives and Dr. bills. Prevents Typhoid Malaria, other fevers, sickness. Only safe water for children. Cures disease. Write for Booklet and testimonials free. Agents Wanted—Men and Women—Big Wages.

Harrison Mfg. Co., 14 Harrison Bldg., Cincinnati, O.

The Sure Hatch's Latest

An automatic, direct acting regulator that surpasses any other improvement ever made in incubators. Send for new illustrated catalog and free trial offer

SURE HATCH INCUBATOR CO., Clay Center, Neb., or Columbus, Ohio.

BURPEE'S Largest Mail-Order Seed House in the World. ☞ In buying BURPEE'S SEEDS direct by mail you get your money's worth in the Best Seeds that Grow—and you have your choice of Rare Novelties for 1903, which cannot be had elsewhere. Write to-day (a postal card will do) for our complete catalogue —FREE to all who intend to purchase seeds. W. ATLEE BURPEE & CO., Philadelphia.

FREE PRESENTS. Comfort Cough Tablets cure a cough in one day. Sell 12 Boxes at 10 cents a box; send us the money and we will mail you these TWO PRESENTS, Solid Gold Laid Ring with Turquoise centre, surrounded by brilliants and Lady's Neck Chain 4 ft. long. No money wanted till tablets are sold. We take back all not sold. Address, Comfort Medicine Co., Providence, R. I.

Latest Leaflets

Home Leaflets For Mothers' Meetings

No. 3 The New Century for Mothers. Mrs. Nettie B. Fernald.

No. 13 Why a Mothers' Meeting? Mrs. J. H. Myers.

Price, 3c. each; 50, 50c.; 100, 75c.

Mothers' Meetings, Purity Leaflet

No. 3 Safeguard the Home. Mrs. Emma W. Shores.

Price 2c. each; 100, 50c.

National Leaflets

No. 2 Suggestions for Treasurers. Mrs. Helen M. Barker.

No. 31 The Philosophy of Fashion — What Shall We Wear? Louise C. Purington, M. D.

No. 94 American Liberty—Will Alcohol Help the Soldier Maintain It? Mrs. Mary H. Hunt.

No. 95 A Double Jury on Woman Suffrage. Amos Wells.

No. 96 A Lesson in Finance. Mrs. Helen M. Barker.

Price, 3c. each; 50, 50c.; 100, 75c.

Department Leaflets

Y. W. C. T. U.

No. 56 The Ideal Y. Member. Miss Laura Smith.

L. T. L.

No. 182 A Study in L. T. L. Methods. Mrs. Helen G. Rice.

School Savings Banks.

No. 222 How School Savings Banks are Run. Mrs. S. L. Oberholtzer.

Soldiers and Sailors.

No. 192. What Makes a Good Soldier. Lord Roberts.

Parlor Meetings.

No. 242 How to Win. Mrs. Mary D. Tomlinson.

Narcotics.

No. 47 Why is the Cigaret more harmful than Tobacco used in other ways?

Price, 50, 15c.; 100, 25c.

Total Abstinence Leaflet

No. 18 Experience. The Schoolmaster.

Signal Lights.

No. 4 How Can I Win New Members? Mrs. M. B. Platt.

Price, 25c. per 100.

Miscellaneous Leaflets.

God's Nobleman,
White Cross Movement,
The White Shield Society; Its Purpose and Membership,
High Ideals for Schools,
Practical Benefits of the Curfew Law,
Consider the Lilies,
The Power of the White Ribbon,
A Mother's Letter to the Y Girls.

Price, 50c. Per 100.

Woman's Temperance Publishing Ass'n,

184 La Salle St., CHICAGO.

A Noble Work.

By Kate B. Wyning.

FROM the southern shores of Lake Superior, through northern Michigan and Wisconsin, around the western end of the lake through Minnesota, extending to the borders of Canada, is a strip of territory 600 miles long and 100 miles wide, once the camping ground of the North American Indian. It is rich in inexhaustible iron and copper mines and full of majestic forests, with stretches of stumpy, fire-swept, fallow ground. That portion of Michigan called "the upper peninsula" has a copper mine with thirty miles of galleries half a mile below the surface, and this one mine alone yields three thousand tons of copper every month.

Tens of thousands of men of all nations congregate here to labor in these mines, forests, sawmills and in the boats on the lakes, combining the possibilities of an undenominational and interdenominational home and foreign mission station at our very doors.

Rev. J. H. Nason, an aggressive worker in the West Superior Mission, who probably has, since his connection with the work in 1892, ministered to the spiritual and physical needs of more than 200,000 men, modestly says his life does not contain the amount of self-denial that characterizes his sister, Miss Emma C. Nason.

Some years ago Miss Nason, of Blodgetts Mills, N. Y., the daughter of a Methodist minister, organized in churches and schools societies called "The Humming Birds," "Sunshine Circles," "Ready Workers," and "Fragment Gatherers." The members of these societies made quilts for the poor and sent good literature to sailors and lumbermen. In spare moments Miss Nason wrote of her work to distant friends and they responded with small cash contributions and packages of papers, which she sorted, repacked and shipped to lonely men far from the influence of home and with no other gospel than the printed page.

In 1893, released from home ties by the death of her aged mother, Miss Nason took up her residence at Sault Ste. Marie, Mich. Here a permanent mission had been established the year previous through the efforts of Leroy L. Gilson, a young evangelist, who had in less than twelve months explored the northern part of Wisconsin and the Michigan peninsula. He had traveled on an average from 150 to 200 miles a week, preaching, teaching, organizing Sunday Schools and distributing thousands of papers, cards and tracts.

At Sault Ste. Marie, March 8, 1892, this indefatigable worker submitted to a surgical operation from which he died five days later. Up to the moment that he was placed upon the surgeon's table he talked and prayed with erring ones, and he almost literally died with a pen in his hand telling of the needy fields he had visited.

One of his last acts was to send Miss Nason a letter pleading for assistance, in which was inclosed two cents of Canadian money, bringing to her mind the saying of Saint Theresa, a woman who had undertaken great things in the spirit of faith: "Theresa and two cents are nothing, but God and two cents are everything."

Miss Nason had the same God and two cents, so she wrote to the new evangelist asking him to work his way to Sault Ste. Marie and there found a mission. This he did, and that mission opened Easter Sunday, 1892, the responsibility coming into Miss Nason's hands in 1893.

The work, springing from a martyr's grave, with a capital of two cents, is now known as "The Lake Superior System of Missions" and "The Great Lakes' Mission of the King's Daughters and Sons," incorporated under the laws of the state of New York. It has four distributing centers: Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., West Superior, Ashland and Hurley, Wis., almost entirely dependent on voluntary contributions for support.

Important features of the work are lodging houses located at the various headquarters, where men seeking employment may obtain nourishing food, clean, comfortable beds and shower baths at small cost, and where they may enjoy the advantages of the reading room and religious services. Another feature is the sending of evangelists to preach to families in the scattered settlements and clearings and to the woodsmen in the vast forests who are miles from the sound of church bells.

No less important are the efforts to reclaim wandering girls, many of whom have never had a mother's love and care. Often decoyed under false pretenses, not infrequently kidnapped by some evil men and women, some of these girls, scarcely out of childhood, finally drift into the Christian shelter at Sault Ste. Marie, presided over by Miss Nason, who has given years of unpaid service, investing her last dollar, using her last ounce of strength and facing opposition and even personal danger that the gospel of Jesus may be spread. It is at this home (which has no connection with the lodging houses referred to) that Miss Nason receives the barrels of papers, magazines, Bibles, Testaments, music books, comfort bags, etc., which she reships to logging and mining camps and to boatmen on the great lakes.

Mr. Nason believes that liquor is the greatest temptation with which the toilers in the northwest have to contend, and that if the "men traps" were removed and money were provided to send out more evangelists, the purifying influences of the entire region, with its fabulous possessions, would soon be felt to the ends of the earth.

Last season mission workers tossed 5,000 packages of good reading to the boatmen who passed through the big lock at Sault Ste. Marie. A fireman on one of the boats, turning his shovel into a table, wrote to the mission promising to lead a new life. An infidel sailor became converted through reading tracts given him by an evangelist on the dock. He gave out in one month over 200 packages of reading matter to other boatmen. A "shanty boy" writes from the backwoods of the changes in his camp since Testaments, singing books, etc., have been sent from the mission. "Fighting Bob," transformed by the power of the Lord, has become a missionary among his fellows. "Converted Joe" goes about singing the gospel. "Drunken Jack," gloriously saved, is leading others to Christ.

In a recent letter to the writer, Miss Nason, who is on the verge of nervous prostration from overwork, touchingly says: "God alone knows what these months of seed-sowing have been. Truly, we have sown in tears, but, oh! there has been joy amid the tears over the blessed results! Do pray for our work and send us all the help you can."

Wilmington, Pa.

The Value of Charcoal.

Few People Know How Useful it is in Preserving Health and Beauty.

Nearly everybody knows that charcoal is the safest and most efficient disinfectant and purifier in nature, but few realize its value when taken into the human system for the same cleansing purpose.

Charcoal is a remedy that the more you take of it the better; it is not a drug at all, but simply absorbs the gases and impurities always present in the stomach and intestines and carries them out of the system.

Charcoal sweetens the breath after smoking, drinking, or after eating onions and other odorous vegetables.

Charcoal effectually clears and improves the complexion, it whitens the teeth and further acts as a natural and eminently safe cathartic.

It absorbs the injurious gases which collect in the stomach and bowels; it disinfects the mouth and throat from the poison of catarrh.

All druggists sell charcoal in one form or another, but probably the best charcoal and the most for the money is in Stuart's Absorbent Lozenges; they are composed of the finest powdered Willow charcoal, and other harmless antiseptics in tablet form, or rather in the form of large, pleasant tasting lonzenges, the charcoal being mixed with honey.

The daily use of these lozenges will soon tell in a much improved condition of the general health, better complexion, sweeter breath and purer blood, and the beauty of it is, that no possible harm can result from their continued use, but, on the contrary, great benefit.

A Buffalo physician in speaking of the benefits of charcoal, says: "I advise Stuart's Absorbent Lozenges to all patients suffering from gas in stomach and bowels, and to clear the complexion and purify the breath, mouth and throat; I also believe the liver is greatly benefited by the daily use of them; they cost but twenty-five cents a box at drug stores, and although in some sense a patent preparation, yet I believe I get more and better charcoal in Stuart's Absorbent Lozenges than in any of the ordinary charcoal tablets."

All Y Workers
SHOULD READ THE
Y MANUAL
BY
Mrs. Frances J. Barnes.

Price, 15 Cents.

Woman's Temp. Pub. Ass'n,
CHICAGO.

MADE $105 THE FIRST MONTH

writes FRED. BLODGETT, of N. Y. J. L. BARRICK, of La., writes: "Am making $3.00 to $8.00 every day I work." MRS. L. M. ANDERSON, of Iowa, writes: "I made $3.80 to $6.50 a day." Hundreds doing likewise. So can you. $5.00 to $10.00 daily made plating jewelry, tableware, bicycles, metal goods with gold, silver, nickel, etc. Enormous demand. We teach you FREE. Write—offer free.

G. GRAY & CO., Plating Works, A Miami Bldg., Cincinnati, O.

Grand Canyon of Arizona

A book about it. Send 50 cents in coin or stamps to W. J. Black, Gen. Pass. Agent, A., T. & S. F. R'y, 1312 Great Northern Building, Chicago, for copy of notable new book entitled "Grand Canyon of Arizona," graphically describing world's greatest scenic wonder.

Contains special articles by Hamlin Garland, Chas. Dudley Warner, Joaquin Miller, John L. Stoddard, Major J. W. Powell, and other noted writers; 124 pages with map and cover in colors and many beautiful half-tone illustrations. Worthy a place in any library.

This titan of chasms may easily be visited any day in the year in connection with California trip over the Santa Fe.

On the Santa Fe

TO INVESTORS.

Money invested in Sheep and Cattle in Montana is safe and pays 30 per cent. A small investment now grows into a large flock in a few years. Over 300 men, women and children now have Cattle and Sheep on our Ranches. Write for Annual Report, a most interesting document. MONTANA CO-OPERATIVE RANCH CO., Great Falls, Mont.

About Women.

Mrs. Theophila C. Bassett, President of Cook County (Ill.) W. C. T. U., read a paper on "The Cathedral Builders" before the Nike Club of Chicago.

Fifty-seven women physicians are practicing in Paris, France. Twenty years ago there were only seven. All have busy and remunerative practices.

Mrs. S. L. Oberholtzer, of Philadelphia, has been elected president of the Pennsylvania Women's Press Association. She is National Superintendent of the Department of Schools Savings Banks for the W. C. T. U.

Club women of Massachusetts and Georgia are supporting a model school at Carrs Station, in northern Georgia. There is a plot of four acres of land surrounding the school, where the children are to be taught gardening in all its phases.

By the bravery of Miss Martin, a school teacher at Thayer, Ill., the lives of many pupils were saved. She stood at the window and dropped the children to the ground until the last child was out and flames completely enveloped the structure.

Kathrine R. Spayd, a girl of sixteen, is the successful manager of a grist mill at Lititz, Pa. She has been in charge for more than four months and has conducted the operations with rare business ability. She enjoys her work and is proud of being a miller.

A bright middle-aged woman of New York city, who is dependent on her own earnings to support her family, says that she does this entirely and very nicely by going about from office to office in the large buildings mending and sharpening penknives and scissors.

The Philadelphia Normal School for Girls was opened in January, 1848, graduating its first two classes, containing twenty girls, in 1849. This was probably the first preparatory school for girls in the United States. Kate A. Sawyer, of Philadelphia, an alumna, sends this information.

One of the most expert telegraph operators in this country is Miss Blanche Hinds, seventeen years old, of Augusta, Me. She learned telegraphy while other children still struggled with the alphabet, and when four years old could take by sound any word that she knew how to spell.

An effort is being made to induce the British government to send domestic servants to Canada instead of to South Africa, where they are said not to be needed. Canadian housekeepers are rejoiced, but as there is a tendency among Canadian servants to cross the border, it may also be a cause of rejoicing to American housewives.

Miss Genevieve Wilson has just been appointed sanitary inspector at Orange, N. J. Miss Wilson is the niece of Bishop Abiel Leonard, Protestant Episcopal bishop of Utah and Nevada, who has been a leader in the philanthropic and reform movements not only in Salt Lake City, but throughout the west. She is a trained nurse and is expected to make a record.

Mrs. Cynthia Westover Alden, woman journalist and author, is the inventor of an improved dump cart, and a Brooklyn society woman, Mrs. Lena Sittig, some years ago devised a waterproof garment known to the trade as a duck back. That famous political document, the full or the empty dinner pail, was the brain product of a Michigan woman.

Miss M. A. Murray has stepped into a new profession for women. She is one of the assistants of W. M. Flinders Petrie, the great Egyptologist, and the profession that she has opened up to her sex is the translation of Egyptian and Babylonian hieroglyphics. She has established a school for hieroglyphics for women and has issued a hieroglyphic primer, and she is teaching by correspondence how hieroglyphics may be read.

Miss Carrie Hedberg holds the position of housekeeper at the Lutheran Swedish mission cottage at Minneapolis, and, although she has been blind from her birth, enjoys the distinction of being the most industrious and artistic knitter in that city. Miss Hedberg's grandmother taught her to knit stockings when she was only seven years of age, but a knowledge of the more intricate stitches was gained at the Janesville, Wis., school for the blind.

A study of the new lists of county officers in the far northwest shows that numbers of women are holding office. Washington has twelve school superintendents, while Montana shows twenty-one. Idaho registers a belief in equality by electing the following women: One auditor and clerk, six treasurers, and fifteen school superintendents. Utah follows closely with one clerk, one treasurer and seven recorders.

The Republican women of Cleveland, Ohio, have appealed to the Secretary of State and the Attorney General asking that they be permitted to have something to do in nominating candidates on the municipal ticket. The county chairman has promised to see that at least one woman is nominated for school council, but the women prefer to do their own nominating and have asked for this ruling from the state officials.

Gov. Lanham, of Texas, in appointing Mrs. H. L. Scales, of Corsicana, as a member of the board of managers of the State Orphans Home at that place is the first woman to be placed on a board controlling any of the State's eleemosynary institutions, although Gov. Sayers gave a woman a place in the management of a state educational institution, when he appointed Mrs. Helen M. Stoddard as a member of the board of regents for the Industrial School for Girls.

The committee appointed to plan for a memorial to Alice Freeman Palmer, has reported. It is suggested that $425,000 be contributed, the greater part to be distributed among the institutions in which Mrs. Palmer was particularly interested, or with which she had been closely identified—Wellesley, Radcliffe, the University of Michigan, the University of Chicago, and certain of the Massachusetts normal schools. Only $13,000 of it will be applied to memorials in the form of portraits or busts of Mrs. Palmer.

An interesting ceremony recently took place in the City Hall of Ottawa, when the Countess of Minto, wife of the Governor General, presented the medal of the Ottawa Humane Society to Mrs. Mary May in recognition of her heroism in saving nine persons from death by drowning. Mrs. May is an expert swimmer, and has lived most of her life on the banks of the Rideau canal, where eight of the rescues in question were effected. The ninth took place last summer at a bathing resort in the neighborhood of the capital, and happened to be witnessed by an officer of the humane society.

Miss Jessie McCubben, of Alamo, Oregon, is the owner of a valuable mining claim in the Granite district, which she "jumped," precisely as the year 1903 came in. Learning that the claim would be vacant the first day of January, she drove through a blinding snow storm on the night of December 31, the mercury fourteen degrees below zero, and waiting the advent of the new year, staked her claim. Another prospector had done likewise earlier in the evening, but Miss McCubben was legally in the right and the court sustained her. She is a Portland girl, nineteen years old.

By the will of Mrs. Cornelia Day Wilder Appleby, it is provided that the bulk of her estate be invested for the benefit of the worthy poor of the city of St. Paul, Minn., without regard to color or religious belief and independently of any organized charities, hospitals, or other institution, with a central or administration building from which what is to be known as "The Amherst H. Wilder Charity" shall be carried on. Trained nurses are to be employed and provided for the worthy poor. It is specifically provided that no politician or public official shall ever have anything to do with the administration of the charity. The amount covered by the will probably exceeds $1,000,000.

A SOUTHERN BELLE.

A beautiful Georgia Girl, Vice-President of the East End Palmetto Club, of Savannah, and prominent socially there, relates the following experience:

You certainly have produced the finest medicine for suffering women that there is to be had in the country. I want to recommend it especially to mothers. I was seventeen years old when my darling boy was born. Felt very exhausted and weak for a long time, and it seemed I could not get my strength back. My sister-in-law bought me a bottle of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription (after I had tried several of the other remedies which are so much advertised, and found no relief). I had little faith in the medicine at the time and was so weak and sick that I felt discouraged, but within a week after I had commenced taking your "Prescription" I was like a different woman. New life and vitality seemed to come with each succeeding day, until, in a few weeks, I was in fine health, and a happy, hearty woman. My boy is now two years old, and, thanks to your splendid medicine, I am enjoying perfect health. If at any time I feel tired or in need of a tonic, a few doses of your "Favorite Prescription" recuperates me at once. My address is No. 511 Jones Street, East, Savannah, Ga.

Mrs. SUSIE WILLIAMS.

To Dr. R. V. Pierce.

—o—

There is No Beauty Like the Beauty of Health.

Nothing encourages beauty of face and form so much as a healthy body. Very much depends on the condition of the organs peculiar to women. These should perform their functions regularly and be free from those weakening influences so often connected with life in the city.

Dr. R. V. Pierce, after making a specialty of woman's diseases, finally found a prescription, whose ingredients were entirely of vegetable origin, which had a marvelous effect on the organs peculiar to women. He found it also had a good tonic effect on the whole system; this he used in his private practice with such favorable results that he finally decided to put it up in "patent medicine" form some thirty-five years ago, and since that time it has enjoyed the largest sale of any medicine put up for women only. It is entirely vegetable, and Dr. Pierce gives his absolute guarantee that it contains no alcohol, opium or other harmful narcotics. The trouble with many tonics put up for the public is that they depend upon alcohol for their stimulating effect; this is something Dr. Pierce has always felt was bad practice, harmful and a poor business policy, if not absolutely wrong.

The Sisters of the Good Shepherd, at their convent, "Our Lady of the Woods," Carthage, O., use a great deal of Dr. Pierce's medicines; they say, in a recent letter to Dr. Pierce: "We beg to assure you of the great benefit these medicines give our ailing ones. We cannot sufficiently recommend their excellence."

"Favorite Prescription" cures the womanly diseases which undermine the general health, which make the eyes and cheeks hollow and the body thin. Weak and sick women are invited to consult Dr. Pierce, by letter, in strict confidence. Address Dr. R. V. PIERCE, Buffalo, N. Y.

YOU CAN get a copy of Doctor Pierce's Common Sense Medical Adviser, 1008 pages, FREE, by sending stamps to pay expense of mailing ONLY. Send 31 one-cent stamps for the cloth-bound volume, or only 21 stamps for the book in paper covers.*

Address:

Dr. R. V. PIERCE,
Buffalo, N. Y.

Signal Notes

Indiana, Wisconsin and Delaware have strong anti-cigaret bills pending in their legislatures.

The Father Lambing Total Abstinence Society is a flourishing organization in Pittsburg, Pa. It is of great assistance in municipal reforms.

The Anti-Saloon League of Michigan held an enthusiastic and satisfactory convention in Lansing. Col. Eli F. Ritter gave the evening address.

A local option bill has been introduced into the Illinois Senate by Senator Parker, and into the House by Representative Montelius.

The Prohibition Union of Christian Men, an organization whose purpose is "to create enmity to the saloon," is holding a series of meetings in Baltimore, Md. Many noted speakers are on the program.

Dr. and Madam Legrain have opened the first home for inebriates in France. Dr. Legrain has for years had sole charge of the inebriates' ward in the asylum of Ville Eyrard. The new home is intended for the well-to-do class, and is called a "sanatorium."

The postoffice appropriation bill passed by the House provides that hereafter postoffices shall accept for transmission in the mails quantities of not less than 2,000 identical pieces of third or fourth class matter without postage stamps affixed, provided that the postage is fully prepaid.

The proposition to allow liquor selling in Fairmount Park, Philadelphia, is meeting with stubborn opposition from nearly all classes of people. Women and children spend almost their entire summers in the park, and the people want to keep the place free from drunkenness and rioting.

The annual oratorical contest of the Interstate Association of Prohibition clubs for the middle district will be held in Sioux City during the first week of May under the auspices of the Morning Side College Prohibition Club. Twelve states in the Mississippi and Missouri valleys will be represented in this interstate contest.

The selling of brandy filled candy to school children in New Jersey is awakening the interest of the W. C. T. U., and the Chief Inspector of Foods and Drugs of the State Board of Health has directed his deputies to collect samples of the confectionery, which he will have analyzed. An effort will be made to secure the indictment of the brandy drop sellers for selling intoxicating liquor without a license.

At a meeting held in Old South Church, Boston, in the interest of the International Institute for Girls in Madrid, Spain, $17,000 were pledged and a large collection was taken. Rev. Dr. A. J. Lyman, of Brooklyn, and Rev. Thomas Van Ness, of Boston, spoke. Presidents Eliot of Harvard, Tucker of Dartmouth and Rev. Dr. Edward Everett Hale urged generous action in behalf of the institution, and spoke highly of Mrs. Alice Gordon Gulick, the leader of the work.

The use of cocaine—held by leading physicians to be the greatest vice under which Chicago is struggling—is to be curtailed by law. Already five druggists, who are alleged to have sold the brain-destroying drug in violation of the law, have been indicted by the grand jury. Wilhelm Bodemann, treasurer of the state board of pharmacy, testified before the grand jury that in his opinion many of the wrecks on railroads could be traced to the use of cocaine by the employes of these companies, and out of this statement grew the investigation that has revealed the widespread uses of the drug.

"Health day" is the name of a new legal holiday created by a bill introduced in the Utah legislature recently. By its provisions the first Monday in October is to be the signal for a general cleaning up. On this day every person in the state must clean and disinfect thoroughly dwelling houses, stores, theaters, public halls of all kinds, and, in fact, every building frequented by people. City councils, town boards and county commissioners are instructed to enforce the law, and there is a penalty of $50 for failure on the part of any person to clean up or disinfect as provided.

Publishers' Notes.

Special Subscription Season.

Desiring to co-operate to the fullest extent in the celebration of our coming Red Letter Day, March 1st, which in honor to our National president and editor-in-chief, has been named Union Signal Subscription Day, by the National W. C. T. U., and to offer every possible aid in the consummation of the purpose for which this day is set aside, namely, the increased circulation of our official organ, the publishers will during the FIRST WEEK IN MARCH, accept subscriptions IN CLUBS OF TEN at the $1 RATE. Since the closing of all special offers, January 31st, many letters have been received asking for an extension of time in which to complete the formation of clubs. As the offers positively closed on January 31st, the extension of time could not be granted, but this special subscription season of March 1st to 8th will give to every one having an incomplete club an opportunity to perfect it, and at the same time aid in the celebration of the National Red Letter Day. To the legion of "ten weeks subscribers" this will also furnish an opportunity to place your name upon our regular subscription list for the year at $1.00 instead of the regular rate of $1.50. This offer will not be in force before or after the date mentioned and only from March 1st to March 8th.

"The Doom of King Alcohol."

"The Doom of King Alcohol," by Mrs. Clara B. Drake, is a poetical drama in three acts, suitable to be given in a parlor or hall. While it is gracefully written and effectively planned, it is also a strong lesson for temperance, and is especially adapted for the use of a local union. Perhaps nothing is more difficult to secure than material for a good evening's program, but in "The Doom of King Alcohol" this need is fully supplied. The curtain rises with Tellus (the earth) mourning over the desecration of her children, the spirits of the field—Wheat, Barley, Rye, Corn, Hops, Grapes, Apples and Peaches—by King Alcohol.

In the second act King Alcohol and his minions—License, Avarice, Appetite and others—are in the throne room, and listen to the appeals of the Spirits of the fields. License speaks for the King, refusing their requests. The Angel of Prohibition enters and hurls King Alcohol from his throne. The last act shows Tellus again. Around her are the spirits of the fruits and grains rejoicing. Over the ruins of King Alcohol's palace stands the Angel of Prohibition ready for flight.

Those desiring material for an evening's entertainment will be delighted with this little drama. Send for a copy. The price is 10 cents.

March Responsive Reading.

The March responsive reading on "Christian Citizenship" is written by Mrs. Mary Jewett Telford, National superintendent of the department of Christian Citizenship. This reading portrays beautifully the dovetailing of each department and plainly demonstrates that the thought of Christian Citizenship can be woven into each department of work. Make this the subject of an early meeting. Price, 50 cents per hundred.

Special Anti-Cigaret Issue.

The February YOUNG CRUSADER is a keen weapon against the cigaret. Its sixteen pages of original testimony presents the best scientific thought concerning the evils of cigaret smoking. Educators, ministers, physicians, business men and athletes speak to the American boy and girl in clear, unmistakable argument. Among the many contributors are Prof. Burt G. Wilder, of Cornell University; Dr. Nathan S. Davis, Chicago; Charles H. Blanchard, president of Wheaton College, and F. H. Yost, trainer, University of Michigan. This number of the CRUSADER is just what you need for the coming Anti-Cigaret Sunday. An extra large edition will be issued to meet the demands of L. T. L. workers. Our last Anti-Cigaret CRUSADER was exhausted while calls for more were still coming in. Send your orders early. Remember there are special Anti-Cigaret Programs and all material necessary for use on Anti-Cigaret Sunday. This is an Anti-Cigaret-Sunday CRUSADER. The price is $2 per hundred.

WOMAN'S TEMPERANCE PUB. ASSN.,
184 La Salle St., Chicago.

We Solicit Your Order for

VISITING CARDS

Very Latest Styles.

WOMAN'S TEMPERANCE PUBLISHING ASSOCIATION,

CHICAGO, ILL.

Engraving plate in Script and 100 cards, name only	$2.25
Engraving plate in Script, name only	1.25
Engraving address, per line	.50
Engraving day, per line	.25
Engraving two names on one plate	2.25
Engraving plate, in Roman or Gothic letters, name only	2.00
Engraving address, in Roman or gothic letter, per line	1.00
Engraving day, in Roman or Gothic letters	.50
Engraving plate, in Shaded Old English	3.00
Engraving address, in Shaded Old English	1.25
Engraving day, in Shaded Old English	.75
Printing Cards, Mr., Mrs. or Miss, from plate, per 100	1.00
Printing Black Border Cards, from plate, per 100	1.50

Mr. Size Card. D

Miss Size Card. C

Mrs. Size Card B½

Mrs. Size Card. B

PATTERNS.

The patterns here shown are cut by one of the most reliable pattern houses in the country, and are of the very latest and newest design. These patterns retail at from 25 to 35 cents each, but by special arrangement with the manufacturers, we are enabled to supply them to readers for only 10 cents each prepaid.

Full directions, quantity of material required and illustration of garment with each pattern.

Order patterns by their numbers. Give bust measure for ladies' upper garments. Give waist measure for skirts. Give both age and breast measure for misses and children.

8882—Box Plaited Dress.
6 to 12 years.

8825—Skirt.
22 to 30 in. waist.

8885—Coat.
2 to 12 years.

Cut out and send this coupon.

UNION SIGNAL, CHICAGO, ILL.:

Enclosed find 10 cents for which send Pattern Number.....

Waist measure..... Bust..... If child's pattern give age..... to

Name.....

Street.....

City..... State.....

A New Pledge Card

PLEASE SIGN THIS CARD AND KEEP IT

Woman's Christian Temperance Union

Pledge

I hereby solemly promise, God Helping Me, to abstain from all Distilled, Fermented and Malt Liquors, including Wine, Beer and Cider, as a beverage; and to employ all proper means to discourage the use of and traffic in the same.

NAME .....

Date..... 190.....

Price, 50 Cents per 100.

When ordering, kindly state the card containing pledge with words "as a beverage" is desired.

Woman's Temperance Publishing Association,
Chicago.

MARCH MAGAZINE NUMBER

The Union Signal

VOL. XXIX NO. 10

CHICAGO, MAR. 5, 1903.

UNION SIGNAL EDITORS

ISSUED WEEKLY

PRICE $1.50 PER YEAR.

A FIGHT AGAINST ODDS

By Kate Anderson, the thrilling anti-cigarette story which has been running through our columns as a serial, will shortly be issued in Book form, illustrated.

Price $1.00

Woman's Temperance Publishing Association,
CHICAGO

A New Pledge Card

PLEASE SIGN THIS CARD AND KEEP IT

Woman's Christian Temperance Union

Pledge

I hereby solemly promise, God Helping Me, to abstain from all Distilled, Fermented and Malt Liquors, including Wine, Beer and Cider, as a beverage; and to employ all proper means to discourage the use of and traffic in the same.

NAME .....

Date.....190.....

Price, 50 Cents per 100.

When ordering, kindly state the card containing pledge with words "as a beverage" is desired.

Woman's Temperance Publishing Association,
Chicago.

A New Serial.

Following closely the success of its nearly completed serial story, "A Fight Against Odds," The Union Signal announces for its March Magazine Number a new serial, "HUGH BROTHERTON, CURATE," a strong, dramatic piece of temperance fiction equal to the most popular literature of its kind. The author, Frances Home, an English writer of wide reputation, has given her story an English setting, and amid the characteristic life of the little smoky mining village of Pitsmoore is enacted the startling drama of a young clergyman's struggles against the drink habit, contracted in a secret experiment regarding the theory of heredity.

Thirty chapters, written in admirable literary style, develop a plot of absorbing interest and emphasize anew the mission of the "purpose-novel." There could be placed in the home no stronger plea for total abstinence than is found in the story of "Hugh Brotherton, Curate."

Portraits of Frances E. Willard.

AN ENLARGED PHOTOGRAPH.
New Process. A General Favorite.
SIZE 18 x 22, PRICE $5.00. Carriage not prepaid.
SIZE 8 x 10, PRICE, POSTPAID $1.50.

THE OFFICIAL ETCHING.
The Celebrated Evangeline Picture selected by the National W. C. T. U. as their official picture.
SIZE 20 x 24, PRICE, POSTPAID $1.50.

THE ENGLISH PICTURE:
With Autograph. Very Popular.
SIZE 18 x 22, PRICE, POSTPAID $ .50.
SIZE 11 x 14, PRICE, POSTPAID .42.

Aquarelle Tint. Life Size Portrait in Colors. Used Extensively for Schools. Price, Postpaid $ .35.
WOMAN'S TEMPERANCE PUBLISHING ASSOCIATION, 184 La Salle Street, Chicago.

SPECIAL SUBSCRIPTION SEASON MARCH 1-8.

FOR GOD AND HOME AND EVERY LAND.

The UNION SIGNAL

AND WORLD'S WHITE RIBBON

NATIONAL and WORLD'S WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION

Entered at Chicago Postoffice as Second-class Matter.

"Thou hast given a banner to them that fear thee: that it may be displayed because of the truth"

Vol. XXIX.—No. 10. Issued Weekly. | CHICAGO, MARCH 5, 1903. | Price, $1.50 Per Year in Advance.

Contents of This Number.

CURRENT TEMPERANCE NEWS 4
THE UNION SIGNAL; ITS PRESENT AND FUTURE 5
CONTRIBUTED:
King Alcohol and His Subjects. By Axel E. Gibson, M. D. 6
Ethical Snap Shots. By Cecilia M. Young 7
An Equal Suffrage Examination Paper. Answers by Ellis Meredith 8
Suggestive Program for Prohibition Rally Day. By Anna A. Gordon 9
Under the White Ribbon. By Mary Henry-Rossiter 10
My Whittier Days. By L. Mabel Freese—Need of an Appropriation for Women at the St. Louis Fair. By Helen M. Barker 11
The Tuning. By James Buckham—Hugh Brotherton, Curate. By Frances Home 12
CHILDRENS' COZY CORNER:
With Louisa Alcott. By Olive Clark—Puzzlers' Packet—A Little Helper 13
EDITORIAL:
Our Official Organ—A Tribute to Our National President. By Eva Kilbreth Foster 14
Monthly Bible Reading. Topic: Stewards, or Thieves? By Rev. Frances E. Townsley 15
PRESIDENT'S LETTER 15
OFFICIAL COMMUNICATIONS 16
WORLD'S W. C. T. U. 17
W. C. T. U. NOTES 18
A FIGHT AGAINST ODDS 19
PARLIAMENTARY DIFFICULTIES—THE OPTIMISTS' CLUB 20
PRACTICAL TALKS WITH HOUSEKEEPERS 21
HINTS ON HOME NURSING 22
PUBLISHERS' NOTES 23

Red-Letter Day.

March 20, Prohibition Rally Day.

BIRTHDAY OF GENERAL NEAL DOW.

News of the Week.

D. A. R. congress raises $50,000 for continental hall fund.

Washington senate passed a bill declaring gambling a felony.

Senate passed immigration bill greatly amended and devoid of educational qualification clause.

Cook County, Ill., grand jury, votes seventy indictments against operators of slot machines.

President Roosevelt calls extra session of the Senate to meet March 5th, to consider treaties.

Fire at Cincinnati destroyed business block bounded by Vine, Walnut and Third streets, causing loss estimated at $2,000,000.

Navy Department prepares plan for uniform naval increase, calling for building of seventy-two first-class fighting vessels in next twelve years.

Philadelphia Methodists announce plan to publish a daily paper. No sporting news or questionable advertisements will be admitted.

Over 280 residents of Jukkesjarvi, Sweden, threatened with starvation; lack of horses prevents sending for relief supplies; moss, barley scales, and pine bark are chief subsistence.

Resolution introduced in the Illinois Legislature calling for a constitutional amendment which will give women the right to vote for all officers or propositions submitted to the people at the polls.

D. R. Francis, president of the St. Louis exposition, received in audience by King Edward, who declared his intention of sending the late Queen Victoria's priceless collections of jubilee presents to the fair.

North Carolina legislature passed the Watts liquor bill, which allows the manufacture and sale of liquor only in incorporated towns, and those only to vote on the question of dispensary, prohibition or license.

The archbishop of Canterbury has accepted the presidency of the Church of England Temperance Society and will preside at the annual meeting, which is to be held in the library at Lambeth palace April 27.

Bill introduced in the states general of Holland to amend the constitution of the Netherlands so as to extend suffrage to all men and women over 21 years of age, with the exception of lunatics. The bill also provides that the electorate shall be the same for both chambers.

To License Gambling. One reads with amazement that in Montana the house of representatives in committee of the whole has passed a bill licensing gambling and making it a local option measure in small communities. That any enlightened state in educated America should take even preliminary steps towards legalizing the felonious habit of gambling, arouses in the most torpid conscience a natural feeling of condemnation. Yet how inconsistent are mortals, to shrink from legalized gambling while tolerating the legalized rum traffic, the master vice and progenitor of all lesser vices under the sun.

Morality for College Towns. Hayes City, Kan., having secured the western branch of the State Normal School, gave notice that all disreputable characters must leave town, closed all saloons and allowed liquor permits to only one of its three drug stores. The court adjourned once a month, giving the county attorney opportunity to catch violators. The school this year has been pronounced a complete success. If such a purification of surroundings is needed for the protection of the young while gaining an education, is it less needed in the great school of life which they are to enter, where the real, vital questions are to be answered and the intricate problems solved?

Local Union Helps. A suggestion from the Question Box which we are disposed to adopt is the establishing of a weekly department in the interests of the local unions. The plan is to give a suggestive program for a meeting, reading, oration or recitation—anything that will promote a successful meeting. The secretaries of unions are requested to send in sample programs for this department, due credit for which will be given. National superintendents are invited to send orations or recitations bearing on the work of the various departments, or an original program which shall illustrate departments, of the kind given by Mrs. Hunt in a recent issue. Helps for new unions are unanimously demanded, and our leaders in the work, as well as our officers of old, well-established unions, are urged to co-operate with the editors in furnishing these requisites.

The Willard Statue Bill. Both Houses of the Illinois legislature have passed the bill appropriating $9,000 for a statue of Frances Willard, to be placed in Statuary Hall of the Capitol at Washington. Representative Brundage, of Chicago, who championed the measure in the House, said: "In Statuary Hall, where it is intended to place the statue of Miss Willard, are figures in marble of the immortal Lincoln, the conqueror Grant and the illustrious dead of other states. The features of the great men who fought and wrought to establish, preserve and glorify this, our nation, are here made familiar to unnumbered thousands. But the lives of soldiers and statesmen alone do not tell the history of a nation's upbuilding. There are other contributory forces, not the least of which is the moral element, without which there can be no permanence to our institutions. The statesman who decides the policy of a nation and the warrior who fights its battles are not greater factors in its development than the quiet teacher of morality in the home. Frances E. Willard devoted her life to the cause of humanity and the purity of home, ever upholding it as the 'real goal of human effort.'"

Bar for Employes Unsuccessful. The experiment of the Arbuckle Glucose Works at Shady Side, N. J., of establishing a barroom with cut prices to keep employes out of saloons, has proved a failure, the employes, as usual, neglecting their work for the "attractions" of the bar. This is only another proof that the thirst for liquor will not be appeased by its use, and that an endeavor to compromise with evil must ever result in the defeat of the very thing it seeks to evade.

Which? The saloon is the poor man's club; it supplies the demands of his social nature, say apologists for the drink traffic. Yet we usually find these same apologists among the most ardent advocates of the government dispensary system. Where is the poor man's club in South Carolina? What of saloon substitutes there? Is it sympathy for the poor man, or is it subjection to the rum power, the poor man's destroyer, which is the basis of the average anti-prohibitionist's argument?

Dr. Abbott Inconsistent. "As I grow older I have less and less patience with reform movements," said Dr. Lyman Abbott to Chicago University students. "Most of them merely change the form of vice and sin and fail to eradicate its virus. To transfer the haunts of vice from one part of a city to another is useless. We must do more than regulate evil; we must destroy it." We are glad to note these utterances, glad that the editor of The Outlook has no sympathy with "reform" that regulates and compromises with iniquity, but how does he reconcile this attitude with his attitude in the prohibition of the liquor traffic? Total prohibition is the only policy which does "more than regulate," which aims at total destruction. All other methods of dealing with this greatest of all evils are simply compromise measures, and "fail to eradicate its virus." However, unlike Dr. Abbott, we do not feel impatient with such movements. We realize that they are stepping stones to something better and that the best will some day be reached. Antagonism to the liquor traffic is being rapidly developed, and national prohibition is in line with the march of evolutionary law.

Not Fallen and Not Lost. "Another leader fallen." In this fashion one of our valued reform exchanges heads an article eulogizing the Rev. Dr. ——, who recently passed into the beyond. The incongruity of the word "fallen" in connection with one just gone to heaven was brought home to us as never before. A young friend beginning to read the article aloud, it was found that the first thoughtof each of thethree persons present had been that it meant fallen from grace, and each felt a shock. We are often made aware of the fact that "words deflect, as the best cannon ever rifled will," but this was more than deflection; it was going very wide of the mark—or so it seemed to us. Soldiers of the Cross do not fall; they are promoted, crowned—whatever you will, so that the word expresses fuller life and higher service. We do not lose our leaders, our comrades, we only do not see them with the eyes of flesh. Who knows but they still "haste to the fore," and having gone to the Father, can do more for us and for the coming of Christ's kingdom upon earth than it was possible for them to do when encumbered by the wearisome conditions and limitations of the earth life?

U. OF MD. LIBRARY

Congress in a Turmoil.

Filibustering Takes Right of Way.

Margaret Dye Ellis, Correspondent.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Feb. 27.—At this writing Congress is in a turmoil. In the Senate there has been a compromise on statehood, which was thought would clear the way for the treaties, and appropriation bills, thus avoiding an extra session, but hindrances in the guise of executive sessions to listen to long drawn out speeches on the Panama treaty, besides other bewildering devices used by the honorable Senators, give evidence of an extra session being almost a positive assurance.

Yesterday Senator Blackburn of Kentucky gave notice that no legislation should have right of way except the treaties and appropriation bills, until the Littlefield anti-trust bill is considered.

Mr. Smoot of Utah made his appearance on the floor of the Senate early in the week, and has watched the proceedings daily with seemingly keen interest. Mr. Kearns, Senator from Utah, presented the credentials of Mr. Smoot, and was followed by Mr. Burrows, of Michigan, who reported having received a protest against the seating of the gentleman from Utah; the credentials and protest were duly filed. Mr. Burrows is chairman of the committee on privileges and elections, and it is before his committee the objections to the seating of Mr. Smoot will come.

A delegation of representative men from Utah are now in Washington to oppose the seating of this man. And today, Senator Burrows presented to the Senate a protest signed by Rev. J. L. Leilich, of Salt Lake, who declares that Mr. Smoot is a polygamist, having a plural wife, this statement being sworn to.

The Senate Interstate Commerce Committee had a special meeting called for this morning to consider further the Hepburn bill, viz.: relating to the transportation of intoxicating liquors in prohibition territory. Six Senators were present, not a quorum, and no business was transacted. This blocks for this session a bill, the interest in which I venture to assert has seldom been equaled, except perhaps in the canteen fight, both on the part of the people and on the part of the workers; the Anti-Saloon League, being pre-eminently active, the Reform Bureau, and our own workers doing their part with zeal and efficiency. Its merits, and the great need for the passage of such a bill will cause renewed energy in its behalf in the next Congress.

Even though an extra session of Congress may be called, it will not benefit in the least pending legislation, as all such ceases with the present Congress. And at the opening of the Fifty-eighth Congress, December, 1903, we have to begin at the foundation, going over the ground that has been so well covered at this session.

But we are rejoicing over the decision of the Supreme Court which settles the constitutionality of interestate commerce. Justice Harlan says, in effect, that Congress could prohibit absolutely interstate traffic in intoxicating liquors if it deemed it advisable, and this notwithstanding the fact that in the absence of congressional legislation, the introduction into states from other states of this class of merchandise as a legitimate subject of commerce, may not be prevented by the states.

The logical effect of this is, that Congress has the absolute right to say when commerce in any given commodity shall be free or prohibited. According to this, we can have a national prohibitory law to forbid liquor selling in the whole realm of interstate commerce, just as we have forbidden lottery traffic; and this means practically national prohibition without amending the constitution.

It is said that party feeling in the House of Representatives has not run as high as now, since the Fifty-first Congress; the reason therefor being a decision rendered by the committee on elections regarding a contested seat in the House. The Democratic members have resorted to filibustering, openly declaring they would block all legislation until March 4. Yesterday, February 26, the reading of the Journal was the point of attack, the minority demanding roll call eight times, and not until three o'clock was any business allowed to go on. As it takes from twenty to thirty minutes to call the roll, nearly four hours was wasted.

To avoid a repetition of this proceeding, the Republicans (who are in the majority) ruled not to adjourn, but hold a continuous session until March 4, and at 7:35 last evening took a recess until this morning at eleven o'clock, when the storm broke afresh.

This has, and will interfere very materially with our measures, especially the anti-polygamy amendment, which had been placed in the hands of a subcommittee who were to report to the judiciary this morning. The committee were present, and ready to hear, but Congress convening at eleven instead of twelve, as usual, and the filibustering tactics going on, summoned every member to his place in the House, and prevented any business or action being taken by the committee; and at this late hour, it is exceedingly doubtful if any further consideration of the measure will be given.

But we are not alone in our disappointments. Senators and Representatives with pet schemes are overridden at the close of every Congress. The delay of such bills as Ship Subsidy, Statehood, Anti-Trust, Reciprocity, and Isthmian Canal, with many, many others, having powerful backing and senatorial influence, teach us lessons of patience.

We are still hoping the Immigration bill will push its way through, and Senator Penrose assures me it will have a chance. This bill has the fate of liquor selling in the Capitol, and immigrant stations locked in its grasp.

Oklahoma at the Front With New Plans.

Sue Uhl Brown, Correspondent.

OKLAHOMA CITY, O. T., March 2.—Mrs. J. A. Rose, superintendent of Scientific Temperance Instruction for Oklahoma county and Oklahoma City unions, has done good work in this important line. At the Territorial Teachers' Association in Oklahoma City she distributed 275 "School Physiology Journals," donated by Mrs. Mary H. Hunt; also 500 pages of literature, including 100 copies of the Course of Study.

Mrs. Sue Uhl Brown

Mrs. Ross induced her union to send the UNION SIGNAL for ten weeks to the principals of the seven school buildings of Oklahoma City in order that the story "A Fight Against Odds" might be read in the grades. The teachers are glad to get such stories to read, and much interest is shown in it by the pupils. The teachers regard the story as a fine educational experiment.

The Threadgill liquor bill introduced in the territorial legislature, which provides the requiring of only fifty signatures to a license petition, has stirred our W. C. T. U. territorial president, Mrs. Dorothy Cleveland, to great activity. She writes to every union asking each member to send in a protest, and get their voters to protest. The paper states that each representative and councilman has received the "shower" instigated by our wideawake president.

Mrs. Cleveland keeps close watch of Congress, and has notified her unions that in twenty-four hours after the Oklahoma statehood bill passes she will send to her constituency petition heads for the purpose of securing a monster petition to the constitutional convention to have prohibition incorporated into the state laws.

Canadian W. C. T. U. Attacks Cigaret Evil.

OTTAWA, Canada, Feb. 24.—A delegation from the Women's Christian Temperance Union appeared before Sir Wilfrid Laurier today with a very strong presentation of their plea that an end be put to the cigaret evil in Canada by the passing of a law prohibiting the importation, manufacture and sale of cigarets throughout the Dominion. Their interview began at noon, and lasted over an hour, in the course of which the case was very clearly expressed. The Prime Minister's response was one of government consideration.

The deputation was introduced by Mrs. Rutherford, president of the W. C. T. U. of Canada, who said that those present would not have traveled to the capital were they not satisfied of the vital importance of the matter they had to present.

The ladies' petition was supported by the Rev. Dr. Chown, on behalf of the Methodist Church in Canada; by Mr. Robert Gorman, of Ottawa, for the Royal Templars of Temperance; by Mr. William Stewart, for the Sons of Temperance; by Mrs. Ross, for the Women's Missionary Society of the Methodost Church; by the Rev. Dr. McIntosh, Congregationalist; the Rev. Mr. Cameron, Baptist, and others who did not speak.

Jail for Violation of Liquor Law.

BANGOR, Me., Feb. 28.—The worst fears of the saloon men were realized in the supreme court here when, at the conclusion of the term, Justice Spar announced that hereafter all persons convicted of violation of the liquor law may expect, in addition to a fine, a jail sentence. There is no longer any doubt that enforcement of the most radical kind has come to Bangor, for twenty-five years a wide-open town.

Michigan Women Petition for Law Enforcement.

SAGINAW, Mich., Feb. 21.—A petition signed by over 2,000 women was presented to the board of police commissioners at its meeting asking the mayor and the board to do their duty in enforcing the laws affecting the social evils of the city. They also ask that all slot machines with a gambling feature attached be driven out of the city and gambling be suppressed at once.

Convention Preparations in Louisiana.

Lury Gould Baldwin, Correspondent.

BALDWIN, La., March 2.—Miss May C. Walker, the state president, is in Morgan City this week to attend an executive meeting of the second district and arrange for the convention there.

The district vice-president, Mrs. Grace Barnett, has been absent, but she will soon resume her local and district work as superintendent of the L. T. L.

Mrs. N. E. Oliver is to hold an institute at Welsh. She expects to organize Calcasieu for parish work and elect the officers at the meeting. Welsh has an oil boom at present, and Mardi Gras takes precedence in the state.

The Monroe union and the Central union in New Orleans observed the Willard memorial day. At the latter Mrs. Barteau, one of the crusaders, and Mrs. Caroline E. Merrick, honorary state president, were among the speakers. Mrs. F. A. Lyons told of Miss Willard's visit to her home in New Orleans in 1880. Rev. Richard Wilkinson paid an eloquent tribute to Miss Willard and her life work.

Virginia News.

Mrs. Geo. W. Oliver, Correspondent.

WINNIE, Va., March 2.—Our state president and her husband, Rev. Howard M. Hoge, are in active field work. Mrs. Hoge organized recently a promising union at Claremont, with eighteen active members and eleven honorary members. She, with the aid of Mr. Hoge, held an institute the first of the month at Wakefield.

Mrs. Geo. W. Oliver

State organizer Mrs. Newton is busy in Gloucester county, where she is greatly building up the cause. The W. C. T. U. of Virginia hears with deepest regret the news of the painful accident which befell Miss Laura Smith, our Y secretary. She has been fearfully burned by the explosion of a lamp, but the physician attending her encourages us to hope that serious results may not follow.

Miss Smith has greatly endeared herself to the young women of Virginia by her graciousness of manner, her earnestness, her love for the white-ribbon work, and her brave and untiring efforts to help the girls.

Legislative Work in Pennsylvania.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., March. 2.—Pennsylvania has had an unusually busy and interesting winter along legislative lines. This department is under the care of the state president, Mrs. Chambers, and Mrs. Steese of Dauphin county, the former giving her attention to matters that come before Congress and the latter before state legislature. The local unions and individual members have rallied to the national issues, and the record of the influence of the Keystone voters is strongly felt in Congress. The McCumber bill has been watched, and hundreds of letters and protests have been forwarded. The threatened repeal of the anti-canteen law brought forth a volley of protests.

Mrs. Steese,
State Supt. Legislation.

The statehood bill and immigration bill have been studied; on the whole never was there a deeper stir among the unions. Mr. H. W. Palmer, "our member" on the Judiciary committee, is one of our own, and we have depended upon him to hold up the light.

Senator Penrose has assured Mrs. Chambers of his intense interest in all these measures, and has been our strong ally. If our state work has done nothing else than stir the unions to renewed action, it is worth all the effort.

The state bills in which we are interested and which Mrs. Steese is working for are: The Gates bill, which affects Philadelphia, but would only be an entering wedge which would in time reach Allegheny and Pittsburg. This has been reported negatively. The bill for the repeal of the Sunday blue laws, introduced by Senator Berklebach, and who is said to be the only one on the committee favorable to it. A bill to take the place of the juvenile court law which was declared unconstitutional; this has passed the senate. Two other bills appeal to us: The child labor bill, for which the women of the state are working. They would have the age at which a child must begin a life of toil harmonize with the school compulsory law which specifies sixteen years as the end of school life. The other is the local option bill introduced by Senator Fox, of Dauphin.

We are also interested in the bills which shall tend to settle the differences in the anthracite coal regions, and an educational bill which provides that a teacher's minimum salary shall be thirty-five dollars per month.

IN THE BUSINESS OFFICE.

A CORNER OF THE EDITORIAL ROOM

LITERATURE DEPARTMENT.

The Union Signal; Its Present and Future.

Opinions From the Question Box.

IN announcing the names of prize winners in the friendly contest of commendation and criticism instituted by the Editors' Question Box, we are constrained to deal somewhat at length with the contents of the Box, and its bearing upon the present and future usefulness of the official organ.

The questions were so framed as to bring to editors and publishers the candid opinions of our readers concerning the merit of the paper, both from the literary and the official standpoint, and to point out specifically its possible shortcomings, with suggestions for improvement. These points, therefore, have been the basis upon which the prizes are awarded, in connection with the following details: Good appearance of manuscript, proper enumeration of questions, directness and conciseness of answers, adherence to the subject under each special head, and value of the suggestions offered.

For the very many letters of loving commendation received we express our grateful appreciation. They will serve to stimulate us to renewed effort to make the official organ worthy of such praise, and they hold out the promise that, with such loyal, devoted friends laboring in its behalf, the paper cannot fail for lack of support. We have been deeply touched by the heroic effort to secure subscriptions made by many of our older members, some of them past three score years of age, who have braved the storms and cold of winter in a house-to-house canvass of members, sometimes of an entire community. For all such service we return grateful thanks.

But the chief end to be served by the Question Box was expected to result from the aye and nay vote on the desirability of certain features or departments, instituted within the past few months. Had there been a concensus of opinion against any one feature, that feature would have been immediately discontinued, unless it had a vital bearing on the work of the organization. The sole purpose of the paper is to serve its constituency in the most acceptable manner, and at the same time be self-sustaining.

The hundreds of letters received have been carefully read, every criticism and suggestion has been duly considered, and it is our purpose to profit by this friendly advice so far as circumstances will permit. The variety of tastes represented in these letters, the diversity of opinion, which in the end resolves itself into unanimity in expressions of approval, have been an interesting study for those vitally concerned. Believing that every contributor to this symposium on the merit of the official organ will be interested in the opinions of others, we will take up some of the most essential questions in the light of their relation to the general welfare of the paper and of the organization which it represents.

First, The Union Signal of December 18, 1902, meets with the most general approval. Why? Because it dealt with the beginning of the great movement which called us into being as an organization, a beginning so fitly commemorated in the Crusade Memorial Room at Hillsboro, Ohio.

In this choice we find reason for congratulation. So long as a recital of the heroism, the consecration of the Crusade Mothers can stir the hearts and the zeal of those who follow after, our cause will not languish. The inspiration of those stirring days, caught up by Frances Willard and by her heralded to the womanhood of the world, still serves as a bugle call to marshal our united forces against a common enemy—the saloon. The years bring the "new occasions that teach new duties," but back of all our present-day methods, our aggressiveness along new lines, is the conviction founded on the scenes enacted in Ohio in 1873, and so our women have registered their appreciation of the article on "The Crusade Memorial Room," in The Union Signal of December 11.

What did they like least? The opinion in this respect is almost unanimous, and, while it is not directly within the editorial prerogative, we must deal with it in passing, since we are on the program "for the good of the order."

"We do not like to see so much valuable space given up to advertisements!" Neither do we!! But without the advertisements we could not have an official organ, since we must depend largely upon them for the financial support of the paper. When every member of our organization becomes a subscriber to the official organ, this vexatious and much-discussed problem will have been solved. Until that happy day arrives, we are absolutely dependent upon the income from the advertising columns to make and maintain the improvements our readers find so desirable. The publishers endeavor to learn the standing and reliability of every firm or person who solicits space in the advertising columns of The Union Signal, and for every one accepted which may in the end prove to be unreliable, a dozen are turned away. And when an advertisement is, for any cause not anticipated by the publishers, objectionable to our readers, it is invariably discontinued at the expiration of the contract, sometimes at no inconsiderable financial loss. All speculative advertising has been positively refused.

There is at present a determined effort being made to raise the standard of The Union Signal in every respect, and to insure success we must have the cordial support of every individual member of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union. The Question Box letters have given us much food for thought in our quest for information as to where the responsibility lies for our present failure to secure such united support. It appears to be a paradoxical fact that we suffer from the generosity of our friends! Each good woman who reads and values the paper straightway gives it to her nearest neighbor, and from the latter it passes to a dozen others!

Some one has said that we place no value upon that which costs us nothing! May it not be true in the present case? The woman who pays for her paper takes a personal pride in it and will urge its claims upon others, which she is not likely to do if she reads it by the courtesy of another.

The direct question as to why every member of the local union is not a subscriber to the official organ, has brought a variety of reasons, the majority of the opinions expressed being condensed into the following terse sentence:

"Not sufficiently interested."

And who is responsible for this lack of interest?

"The local officers, who in many cases do not take either state or National organ, and do not press their claims upon members."

Here, then, we find, too, the secret of the inactivity of certain unions, whose ultimate death is a matter of commiserating speculation.

Shall this lethargy be allowed to continue until our people literally do perish, so far as their usefulness to the organization is concerned, for lack of knowledge? God forbid! Let every woman awake to a sense of her individual responsibility in this matter, and we shall speedily present such an army of active, intelligent workers that our power in the land will be increased fourfold. Listen to this word from a county president:

"I never worry or wonder if the woman who takes The Union Signal is going to do her part. I know she is!"

How can this mutually satisfactory condition be attained? Here are some of the suggestions offered:

"Let the larger, stronger unions invest their surplus funds in subscriptions to the official organ for the poor, struggling unions!"

The managing editor advocated this plan at Portland.

"Put a live agent in every union!"

Every union has been repeatedly urged to appoint a local agent. Her "aliveness" will depend upon the discrimination of the president who makes the appointment, and "backs her up" in her efforts.

"Let each active member send the paper to a non-member, for a few months, if a year's subscription is beyond her means."

"Let each of the 10,000 unions get five new subscribers!"

"Ask the consecrated members of our organization to put their official organ BEFORE, instead of after, the half-dozen other periodicals that find a place in the home. If one must be sacrificed, why

(Continued on Page 6.)

Prize Winners.

First Prize, $5.00,

Mrs. M. L. Hobbs,
Jasper, Indiana.

Second Prize, $3.00,

Mrs. Mabelle A. Graham-Edgerton,
Granby, Conn.

Third Prize, $2.00,

Mrs. Esther A. Gaymon,
Denver, Colo.

should it always be the paper that, more than all others, claims the individual interest and support of every loyal W. C. T. U. member?"

Why should these suggestions be acted upon, and at once? Listen again to a county president:

"When a woman tells me that she cannot join the union and take the paper at the same time, I say to her, 'Then take the paper this year, and see what you think of our work,' knowing full well that the seed will be sown, and we will get her membership the next year. I have never known it to fail."

"One can have no true idea of the magnitude of this work until one reads The Union Signal, for no other paper contains this information."

"Truly the W. C. T. U. languishes because of the lack of knowledge of its members, knowledge which all might have and should have through the state and National papers."

We therefore are agreed as to the necessity of an official organ if we are to pursue our work under the best conditions. The question before the house is, How shall we best reach these non-subscribing members? Those who plead for a return to the old price of $1 as a positive means of attaining this end, must be referred to the record of the years when the paper went down, not up, under the policy prompted by a desire to give more than the financial returns warranted. The woman who suggests "premiums" is respectfully referred to the offers made in this line before and during the holidays. Those who advocate a cash discount to agents will get the terms of our standing offer in this direction by applying to the business department. Of special offers there has been no lack. What then, remains to be done to make this paper the financial and moral successes it deserves? The assumption of personal responsibilty by every member of the W. C. T. U., every friend of the great cause it represents. A unity of purpose, of heart and of interests.

THE UNION SIGNAL PRESS.

The publishers of the paper have demonstrated their intention and ability to give us the kind of a paper we desire and will support. They are gratified at the unanimous expression of approval of the typographical improvements of the past year, and it will give them great pleasure to comply with the universal demand that the monthly magazine number shall be continued, if a steadily increasing subscription list warrants the additional expense. It therefore remains for the organization to say, individually and collectively, just what shall be the degree of merit maintained in the journal that represents it to the world at large. Frances Willard loved this paper, and she never missed an opportunity to press its claims upon her followers. Shall we be less zealous in extending the influence of the most powerful weapon we have in the prosecution of our "peaceful war"? Surely not. And what more fitting than at this time, the natal season of our beloved President and Editor-in-Chief, Lillian M. N. Stevens, we make a new stand for the official organ, a record of prosperity that shall mark as a memorable Red Letter season the first week in March, 1903.

King Alcohol and His Subjects.

By Axel E. Gibson, M. D.

OF all the tyrants of passion to which human frailty ever swore allegiance, there is none whose rulership is so physically, morally and mentally enslaving and menacing to manhood and self-respect as that of the old, hoary, tottering tyrant, King Alcohol. While an impaired and breaking-down body may still leave the mind in possession of powers to engender humanizing and intellectual efforts,—as witness a blind John Milton and Michael Angelo, a hunchbacked Alexander Pope, and a dyspeptic Thomas Carlyle,—the decay of the mind wrecks the entire man, both mind and body. Alcohol by acting directly on the mind, dislodges the individual from his moral center of gravity, unbalances his judgment and leaves him sooner or later as an unreasoning, demoralized and devitalized being.

Almost every day we may witness the terrifying spectacle of the moral breaking-down of natures once noble and refined, but which gradually have become lost, not only to their sense of honor and dignity, but likewise to the sympathies and interest for humanity and humanizing efforts. With the loss of self-control follows the loss of normal motive power and sane judgment. Having lost his self-government with regard to drinking, the individual will rapidly lose his self-determining power in every question of life and destiny. The mind thus again and again broken down and brutalized by ungovernable passion, will at last give way to the strain, begin to totter and lose its normal bearing. The statement of statistics, irrefrageable and appalling, have shown that forty-five per cent of the diseases of the mind are caused by indulgence in alcoholic drinks. The social ravages of the liquor habit stare at us from hospitals, insane asylums, prisons, poor houses, and, what is more terrible than all this, from the cradle, where an innocent infant may carry the germ of the soul-withering vice in his infected body, to transmit to future generations!

Sentiment and moral suasion are not sufficient to stir up the unfortunate victims of this vice to a full realization of the seriousness of their situation. Facts must be presented—naked, tangible, irrefutable facts. We must approach the enemy in his own stronghold and assail him with his own weapons.

We are often met by the argument that alcohol as a drink generates warmth and strength, and above all serves as a valuable stimulant. Nothing, however, is more erroneous. The sensation of bodily heat, to which a drink of whisky on a cold day is accredited to give rise, is based on the quality found in alcohol to open a way for the warm blood-stream to the surface tissues of the body. The moment the cutaneous vessels become filled with blood, a wave of warmth is felt to pass over the body,—only, however, to disappear a few moments later unless a new drink is indulged in. Let us examine the mechanism of this phenomenon.

Old, wise Mother Nature, always provisional and far-seeing, has given to the vital processes of the body a perfect system of economy. Under the influence of cold the skin is made to contract its vessels so as to prevent the normal and indispensable heat of the body from passing out of the system the moment the blood-stream sweeps through the cuticle and becomes exposed to the cold, absorbent, surface-tissue. The sensitive and more highly organized interior viscera, such as the heart, intestines, lungs, brains, spinal cord, etc., are thus kept warm at the expense of the coarser and less readily deranged structures of the skin. Now, in place of assisting Nature in this ingenious scheme, which, for the prolonged maintainance of life is absolutely necessary, the consumer of alcohol thwarts her efforts and wastes his bodily resources in unreasoning wantonness. He may to some extent be compared with a person who after having heated up his apartment to a point of normal temperature, throws his doors and windows wide open to the withering cold of a winter's blast. Indulgence in alcohol as a stimulant against cold, opens the capillaries of the skin and sends out into mid-air the reserve fund of warmth which is intended to surround and protect from cold the interior high-strung, vital organs. Hence the sensation of internal cold which always follows as soon as the effect of the drink is passed off, a sensation which often leads to cyanosis and alcoholic poisoning. It is on the basis of this fact that in polar expeditions all indulgence in liquor is strictly forbidden.

All stimulation is a loan—a mortgage which must be paid back to the bodily economy with compound interest. The stimulating effect which alcohol in moderate amounts seems to have, can be understood by a very little physiological investigation. The functions of the nervous system, formerly thought to be so simple, are now recognized to be quite complex, and are known to represent several distinct modes of activity. One of the most important of these is inhibition, or the controlling of the undue action of any particular organ or set of organs. It is the function, for instance, of one set of the nerves, supervised by a distinct nerve center, to control the chemical processes, going on within the body, which maintain its heat. So nicely is this inhibitory action adjusted that no matter how warm nor how cold the environment of the body is, the heat is accurately maintained at a point which does not vary half a degree for the entire human race. But divide the nerves which are the agents of this control, and the heat of the body at once begins to rise, and soon becomes destructive to that body. Similarly for the action of the heart; divide a certain nerve, and it begins to beat tumultously and irregularly because the inhibitory action has been removed.

Alcohol has the power to benumb or to suspend the action of certain of these minor inhibitory centers, consequently there is poured into the system an extra amount of energy from them for a short time. This energy, however, is as quickly destructive as are all irregular and uncontrolled exhibitions of force, besides, as already mentioned, it draws directly upon the residual energies of the body—its working capital, so to speak—and depletes the vital forces to the extent that this irregular force is liberated.

This act of liberation is very unevenly distributed. Thus, while certain organs may be made temporarily more active, the energy of the body, as a whole, will be decidedly diminished, and the seeming stimulation is in reality a depression. The forces so liberated are uncorrelated or unsynthesized by the real man, and are necessarily destructive and not constructive in their action.

Probably one reason for the pernicious action of alcohol is, that it is upon the "night side" of Nature. Fermentation rudely interrupts the normal life cycle of the grain or seed, and sets up, instead, a destructive decomposition. This vibration introduced into the living organism cannot but induce similar vibrations, therefore, its effect is always injurious in every respect. Unprejudiced tests have shown that those who partake of it are less capable of both physical endurance and mental exertion.

The progressive drunkard soon begins to exhibit the old characteristic marks of flabbiness and looseness of excessive tissue. The cause of this phenomenon lies in a physiological process equally simple and impressive. As is well known, the blood, among other important things, contains two kinds of blood corpuscles—the red and the white. While the functions of the red are to exchange oxygen, derived from the lungs, for carbon dioxide, derived from the combustion going on in the bodily tissues, the functions of the white blood corpuscles consist in removing and causing to be eliminated from the system, all broken-down and effete tissue. Bacterial invasion, ulcerated tissue, inflammatory elements, are all cleared out promptly and diligently by this vitally so important blood corpuscle.

Now if on the microscopic slide we bring a drop of alcohol in touch with a white blood corpuscle, we shall see how the latter almost instantaneously succumbs to the destructive influence of the alcohol. A numbness steals over the blood corpuscle, which at once ceases to exhibit its normal activity and soon dies.

The effect which alcohol has on a white blood corpuscle outside the body, does in no way differ from its effect on the corpuscle inside the body. The number of white corpuscles being thus diminished through alcoholic indulgence, it follows that their functions of scavengers, owing to the decreased number, can be only imperfectly discharged. As a result, effete material is permitted to remain in the bodily tissues, which gives rise to fermentation. Hence the bloated, swollen, turgid, puffed-up appearance of the inebriate.

SETTING THE TYPE BY MACHINE.

PUBLISHERS OF THE UNION SIGNAL.

ELECTROTYPING THE PAGES INTO CURVED PLATES.

It may be asked, "Why do men drink?" For the same reason that opium and hashesh are taken—in order to cause abnormal states of consciousness because of the pleasure derived therefrom. Alcohol, severing the divine from the purely animal portion of our nature, leaves man an irresponsible animal, who, descending to purely sensuous, animal planes of existence, finds a temporary bliss in this experience.

It is peculiarly appropriate that our western intellectual civilization should have chosen this, of all drugs, which entirely destroys all true intellectuality. It is the unconscious application of the law of opposites; and we of the west select alcohol because it affords a transient relief from the intense strain which our civilization puts upon us. We do not know how to still the action of our restless brainmind, by retiring within the recesses of our own spiritual nature and resting. Because of this ignorance, and of the absolute necessity at times, for rest from intellectual labor, we thus descend into the animal kingdom instead of rising to spiritual planes. Refusing to ascend, we are compelled to descend. Ignoring the spiritual side of our nature, and stimulating the intellectual, alcohol affords a real, but transient and deadly relief from the pressure of this civilization whose God is gold.

The evil effects of alcohol are wide-spread and appalling. Upon society they are too well known to require comment. We have living object lessons before us at all times, yet a few actual statistics may not be amiss. More than twelve hundred millions of dollas were spent during the year 1893 in alcoholic beverages alone; enough to have relieved every case of want and suffering in the land where this great wrong was enacted. In the United States, but two decades ago, and at a time when men were considered less intemperate than now, the average of alcohol consumed yearly by each individual, was four gallons. In 1898 there were nineteen gallons consumed for every man, woman and child within the limits of the United States. That alcohol is the chief factor in the production of crime, the record of our penal institutions proves conclusively. It also fills our asylums and almshouses, and hundreds of thousands of premature graves, with which it is not officially credited. Its manufacture and sale produces and employs a class of men utterly lost to all high influences.

What are the remedies for so gigantic an evil? They can only be found in right knowledge. Men must be taught the effect alcohol has upon both soul and body, and public opinion must be changed. The mental attitude of the race towards alcohol is wrong. It is useless to enact laws to prohibit its sale when one of the greatest churches in America actually owns and receives rent for property occupied as saloons. Members of the House of Lords, in Great Britain, own more than fifteen hundred dram shops, and among these owners are said to be two Bishops of the Church of England.

When the acknowledged leaders of society, the noble of the land, together with those who ought to be leaders of the religious thought of the world, maintain the attitude of acquiescence, toleration, and even participation in this evil, it is useless to attempt its sudden eradication. The old, old remedy of changing the thoughts and the motives of men must be applied here. The people must be educated—must be made to think. And with right thought and right motive, this, one of the greatest evils of modern civilization, will disappear.

Los Angeles, Cal.

MAKING UP THE FORMS.

Ethical Snap Shots.

By Cecilia M. Young.

It was the most depressing of rainy Monday mornings. The car was filled from platform to platform with misty, moisty men and women. Apparently all had with them their rainy-day dispositions. In fact, the composite disposition of the car was so dense that it seemed to have solidified, and the conductor was obliged to wade through it as he demanded the fare of the passengers with much the same air that he might have demanded their money or their lives.

As if to retaliate, passengers painstakingly searched in their purses for five copper cents rather than take a more convenient nickel or dime. Even the motorman went out of his way to stop the car in front of the deepest and dingiest pool of water, and the car, as if in sympathy with its human burden, bumped along ill-naturedly. The woman with the bundle was numerous and the man who will stretch his newspaper its full two-page width, obscuring the vision and imperiling the eyesight of his neighbors, was noticeably present. Of course the woman of the voluminous skirts and the crying baby were represented.

Suddenly from out the sullen silence there sounded the cheeriest, merriest whistle. The man with the wide newspaper-stretch looked up with decided irritation at the interruption: What right had anyone to be happy on such a morning? was the interpretation thereof. The scowl was reflected on the face of the woman with the bedraggled skirts. It was all lost on the whistler who was giving "Annie Laurie" with variations. Scarcely stopping to take breath, he informed the public with great spirit that "The Campbells were coming" whatever the weather, yes, and "Coming thro' the Rye," too, he hastened to explain. The whistler was hidden behind the back of a broad German, but everybody craned their necks to get a glimpse of him. The cross baby cooed in appreciation, which started the gum-chewing girl across the aisle into a hysterical giggle. The man with the newspaper tried to check such unwarranted hilarity with a frown like a thundercloud and a muttered disapproval, but he might as well have tried to stop the falling rain. The merry, energetic whistle made a passage right through the dense, depressing atmosphere of the car, and when the fat man, who had been discontentedly fondling the handle of his dripping umbrella, remarked, smilingly, "Somebody seems to have got the better of the weather," the carload of passengers, one and all, tore off their rainy-day masks to the enlivening air of "The Star Spangled Banner" and showed their real, kindhearted selves. The woman of the voluminous skirts folded herself into a smaller parcel; the conductor courteously helped the woman with the biggest and dirtiest bundle off the car, and the irritable man with the newspaper arms offered the protection of his umbrella to the little clerk who was going his way.

They had been listening to a thrilling story or life in the tenement districts, as told by a city missionary, a story full of facts that left an ache in every tender heart.

As they walked down the aisle, the woman with the elegant tailor made suit and the cold intellectual face, was saying to her companion: "Very dramatic, wasn't it? But one must always discount such recitals, they are always exaggerated. Yet it would be interesting to take a trip of investigation some day and get a few facts before they are adorned, you know. Of course every student of sociology knows that as a rule the poor would be better off and happier if left alone. Well at least it was worth the half dollar I gave the cause to hear that man's presentation; almost equal to a matinee."

"O dear, how can you talk in such a cold-blooded fashion? I'm sure I thought it was just heart-rending the tales he told of those poor women and children working way into the night making wrappers at sixty cents a dozen," and the effusive woman with the much furbelowed bonnet wiped a real tear from her eye. "I just couldn't have stood it another minute, and if he hadn't stopped then, I should certainly have gone out. I don't think it's right to tell such dreadful things and make folks feel bad. Just as if there wasn't enough trouble anyway. I'm going to forget it as quick as I can, but I don't believe I'll sleep a wink tonight for thinking of it." And she paused to take careful mental note of the number of tips on Mrs. Van Wagenen's new hat.

"I wonder if it is really true," said the third woman, as she silently and thoughtfully walked down the aisle, "and yet one can hardly doubt it from the way the speaker told it. And they are my sisters, everyone of them. The matter certainly is one that needs attention, and I am not at all sure but what the Lord has sent this man to give me the message. I would not dare to think otherwise, and bright and early tomorrow morning I'll attend to it."

And yet the message, and the language thereof, was the same to all.

An Equal Suffrage Examination Paper.

Answers by Ellis Meredith.

Part II.

Q—"HAS the entry of woman into politics affected crime in general in any way?"

It has decreased it, because in many small places women have driven the saloons and pool-rooms out of town.

Q.—"What has been the effect, if any, of woman suffrage in the Colorado churches?"

Where the pastors have been progressive and fearless, it has strengthened them. Where the powers that be prefer the laissez faire policy, the women are driven to do the work the churches ought to do through organizations of their own. There wouldn't be any W. C. T. U., for instance, if the churches were doing their whole duty. A "Christian Temperance Union" would serve every purpose, for women seldom prefer to work alone when men will work with them. The tendency of the woman voter is to expect the church to be an active force for righteousness, rather than merely a house of prayer.

Q.—"Has the general morality of the community been affected to any appreciable degree by woman suffrage?"

As stated before, it has certainly made many country towns better. We are a little apt to think of Denver as if it were the whole of Colorado, and because women fail to renovate a city, we think that nothing is being done. We should remember that Colorado is an immense state. In a very extensive trip, which took me to many country towns, I asked particularly about the woman vote. In almost every case I was assured that the women always voted, frequently talked over rival candidates among themselves, and went to hear political speakers, though it was not easy to get them to organize. They were generally well informed, and understood the issues as well as did the men. Women are not nearly so partisan as are men, neither are they so forgiving. Political dishonesty is just as obnoxious to them as is any other kind of dishonesty. "Expediency" isn't in their dictionary. They want to see some kind of return for their taxes. While the more extreme Prohibitionists are much disappointed because they have not received a greatly increased vote, in almost every case where there has been an opportunity to line up for temperance, or to elect a man of known temperance principles, the women have stood together for reform. They have not always succeeded, but they have done the best they could. One senator, elected largely because of his stand for temperance, got a bill through the last assembly compelling anyone selling liquor to take out a license in every county where it was sold. The result has been to drive "beer wagons" out of business and also to remove intoxicants from all buffet cars in Colorado. The women didn't work for this bill actively, because the only way to get a bill like this through a legislature is to avoid stirring up the enemy. We have to move slowly—"here a little and there a little." All gambling devices in Cripple Creek were publicly burned last fall (1902) and under the reign of Judge Frank Owens, gambling is no more in Leadville. In Colorado Springs the gamblers have been imprisoned, and the law against the sale of liquors is being more vigorously enforced than ever before. This beautiful little city has always been a prohibition town. Facts of that city said recently:

"According to the records of the police department, drunkenness in Colorado Springs is on the decrease. In the year 1900 there were 737 arrests for that offense; in 1901 there were 578 arrests, and the estimate for this year, judging by the record to date, is 432 or less. This certainly is a remarkable showing, and one that is probably unequaled in any other city of 30,000 population in the country. Of course every man who looks too long on the red wine does not fall in the toils, but very few of those who venture out escape the police. This exceptional freedom from drunkenness and crime is not the least of the many advantages of Colorado Springs as a home city, and is due, more than any other cause, to the absence of saloons. As a promoter of moral cleanliness, the anti-liquor clause is the most potent influence in the city."

Q.—"Are there woman judges and justices of the peace, and how are they regarded by the legal profession?"

There are none that I know of in Colorado. A woman was elected justice of the peace in Wyoming last November. Probably the profession call her their "learned sister-in-law."

Q.—"Are there more women lawyers than if the woman suffrage law had not been passed?"

I think not. Women were admitted to the bar in Colorado some time before 1893. The first woman admitted was Mrs. W. J. Thomas, now of Denver.

Q.—"What is the attitude of the politicians towards woman suffrage?"

"Woman" suffrage may well be loved for the enemies it has made.

Q.—"Are its former opponents any the less opposed to women voting?"

Some of them are, and some are not. The women who didn't want the additional burden are certainly in a position to say, "We told you so," for it is a burden. On the other hand, they have found that the ballot is handy to have, and even those who are not enthusiastic would think a good many times before relinquishing it.

Q.—"Is there, or has there been, any attempt to change the law on woman suffrage? What is the public opinion now in regard to woman suffrage?"

At the election just passed the constitution was so amended as to make equal suffrage part of the organic law of the state. The sections of the constitution under which women were enfranchised read as follows:

"Sec. 1. Every male person over the age of twenty-one years, possessing the following qualifications, shall be entitled to vote at all elections:

"First, He shall be a citizen of the United States, or not being a citizen of the United States he shall have declared his intention, according to law, to become such citizen, not less than four months before he offers to vote.

"Second, He shall have resided in the state six months immediately preceding the election at which he offers to vote and in the county, city, town, ward or precinct, such time as may be prescribed by law: Provided, that no person shall be denied the right to vote at any school district election, nor to hold any school district office on account of sex.

"Sec. 2. The general assembly shall, at the first session thereof, and may at any subsequent session, enact such laws to extend the right of suffrage to women of lawful age, and otherwise qualified according to the provisions of this article. No such enactment shall be of effect until submitted to and approved by a majority of those voting thereon."

The amendment adopted substitutes the following section:

"Section 1. Every person over the age of twenty-one years, possessing the following qualifications, shall be entitled to vote at all elections: He or she shall be a citizen of the United States, and shall have resided in the state twelve months immediately preceding the election at which he offers to vote, and in the county, city, town, ward or precinct, such time as may be prescribed by law."

This amendment was drawn up by Senator Casimera Barela, one of the men who always opposed the extension of the franchise to women, from the constitutional convention of which he was a member in 1876, down to the time when the question was again submitted and ever since then.

The Democratic state convention endorsed it, and most of the county conventions of the Republicans. The only organized opposition came from the labor unions and was leveled at the provision requiring a year's residence in the state before voting. A mining population is always changing, and they felt that this would work them a hardship. There is, and has always been, perfect good feeling between the labor unions and the women. At the last school election they supported the woman candidate, and at the last annual conventions of the Western Federation of Miners and The American Labor Union a resolution endorsing equal suffrage heartily was adopted without a dissenting vote.

Q.—In the next question I am not making sport, but I am most sincere, for surely, the opponents of woman suffrage did not fail to make use of the argument indicated. Have the last ten years of political equality with men made Colorado women less womanly? Are they any the less good daughters, sisters, sweethearts, wives, mothers? Do the young women care less for matrimonial alliances and homes of their own? Do mothers neglect their children and homes, and wives their husbands, for politics?

If the foregoing answers do not sufficiently reply to this seeker after information, it seems more adequate to quote from sections where women have voted two or three times as long as they have in Colorado. Without wishing to be flippant, let me remind the inquirer that women have voted in Utah for twenty-four years; from 1870 until 1897, and since the adoption of their state constitution in 1895. When they had been voting seventeen years the United States government disfranchised them, because the men of Utah were not content to marry one, but wanted a number of them for wives. If this seems a frivolous answer, let us turn to the state of Wyoming where women have voted for more than thirty years, and the divorce rate is the lowest in the Union. The Laramie Boomerang cites the following results of equal suffrage in that state:

1. The statute law allows no discrimination to be made in the salary on account of sex, when the persons are qualified and the labor is the same.
2. The compensation is the same whether the teacher has one pupil or twenty.
3. The school board of any district "has power to establish industrial and manual training schools in connection with the public schools, and kindergartens for children between 4 and 6 years of age."
4. The law requires physiology and hygiene to be taught in all the common schools.
5. Of thirteen county superintendents of schools, ten are women and three women serve on the board of trustees of the university.
6. One-fifth of the teachers in the state university are women, and two of them are professors, having full charge of the chairs they represent.

It appears that the women of the state, despite their being "burdened by the ballot," find as much time for good works and social enjoyment as do women elsewhere.

"One lady, Mrs. Pearce, explains that 'women were called to serve on the jury because it was hard to get juries that would convict murderers and other desperadoes, public sentiment being largely lawless and not demanding their punishment. Chief Justice Howe believed that women on the juries would remedy this, and his expectations were fulfilled. One of the jurors was a minister's wife, who used to gather the other women about her and put up a prayer for divine guidance in reaching a just verdict; whereas, it is said that former juries had often decided upon their verdict by casting dice.'"

The first result of the suffrage agitation in Colorado was the election of Mrs. Ione T. Hanna to the school board of District number one, Denver, and the first fruit of their enfranchisement was the incorporation of the kindergarten in the public school system.

Most of their work has been purely altruistic. They are trying to live up to the charge laid on them by Lucy Stone, to "make the world better," not for themselves alone, but for those who shall come after them, not for their children only, but for all the children of men.

Denver, Col.

HOME OF MRS. WILLIAMSON, AUGUSTA, ME.
Where General Dow was entertained while securing the passage of the Maine Law.

Suggestive Program for Prohibition Rally Day.

March 20, Birthday of Gen. Neal Dow.

By Anna A. Gordon.

1. Singing, "Onward, Christian Soldiers."
2. Scripture reading: Ezek., 34 chap., vs. 6, 11 to 16, 23 to close of chap.; Ephes., 6 :10 to 17.
3. Prayer.
4. Singing, "How Firm a Foundation."
5. Recitation (a boy or girl): "Where there's drink there's danger."

"Write it on the liquor store,
Write it on the prison door,
Write it on the gin-shop fine,
Write, aye, write this truthful line—
Where there's drink there's danger."

(For remainder of recitation see p. 46, Marching Songs No. 2.)

(Miss Willard has said she wished every boy and girl in the land might commit these words to memory.)

6. Exercise by the Loyal Temperance Legion.
   a. March to platform with flags and banners.
   b. National rallying cry, "Prohibition."
   c. National Senior or Junior Motto or both.
   d. National salute.
   e. Chorus, "Prohibition Song."

There's a song on our lips that makes happy all who sing;
Merrily its echoes chime, merrily they ring
From the ocean on the east to the ocean on the west,
While thousands join the chorus of the song we love the best.

(For remainder of song see p. 50 Marching Songs No. 2.)

(If there is no Loyal Temperance Legion to take this part, train a chorus of Sunday school or public school children to sing.)

7. Address, "The Life and Work of Neal Dow."

The following biographical data will aid in the preparation of this address:

Neal Dow was born in Portland, Me., March 20, 1804. His parents were Friends, as were his paternal and maternal ancestors for many generations back. He attended various "Dames'" schools in Portland as a little lad, and later the Portland Academy, at a time when Henry W. Longfellow was also a pupil. At thirteen years of age, in company with a sister, Neal Dow entered the Friends' Academy in New Bedford, Mass., making the journey by water in a whaling vessel. He tells us that during the voyage, which was a long one owing to unfavoring winds, he was permitted to go aloft with the crew to assist (?) in making or shifting sail.

Very early in life he became interested in the temperance cause, largely under the teaching of Rev. Justin Edwards, D. D. Mr. Dow's study and work led him to believe that no permanent improvement in the condition of the people could be expected while the temptations of the grog shops were permitted.

In those days Maine was cursed by the liquor traffic and had many breweries and distilleries. Neal Dow devoted himself to the work of enlightening public opinion on the evils of the traffic in strong drink, showing that it was inconsistent with the public welfare and ought therefore to be put in the category of forbidden occupations.

An incident which was back of the state prohibitory law has thus been told by Mr. Dow himself: He received a note one day from a lady whom he knew, expressing a wish to see him. Her husband was a graduate of Harvard, and had an important office in the government service. He was a dipsomaniac. There was a large family whose only dependence was upon the salary of the father. His chief had warned him that he could not retain his position unless he improved his habits. His wife told Mr. Dow that he went only to one shop for his drink, and if the keeper would not sell him any she could keep him in the house until fit to appear again at the office. Mr. Dow went directly to the rum shop, and said, "Is Mr. Blank here?" "No," said the rum-seller; but hearing voices in the back shop, Mr. Dow opened the door, and seeing Mr. Blank in the group of drinkers, he pulled him out and stated the case to the proprietor, and begged him to sell no more to this man, otherwise he would certainly lose his situation, and his family would be at once without resources.

"It is my business to sell rum," the rum seller replied; "I have a license to sell rum; I shall sell it to any one who wants it and has the money to pay for it; I support my family by selling rum; I want none of your advice; when I want it I'll send for you; until then keep it to yourself."

"You have a license to sell rum, have you?" Mr. Dow replied. "You will sell it to any one who can pay for it, will you? You support your family by destroying the families of others, do you? Heaven helping me, I'll see if I cannot change all that."

Taking Mr. Blank by the arm, Mr. Dow led him home, and from that day began a war of extermination of the grog-shops.

For ten years after the date of this incident Neal Dow made missionary tours through the Pine Tree State, traveling by carriage, as this was before the days of the railroad in Maine. One, two or three friends accompanied him on these tours. Meetings were arranged in advance, which were always crowded with farmers, their wives, sons and daughters. To these audiences Neal Dow would set forth the true character of the liquor traffic, as the cause of a very large proportion of the poverty and crime of the country and the misery and wretchedness of the people. On these excursions Mr. Dow carried large quantities of temperance literature, throwing leaflets out at the doors of homes as they passed along and distributing them freely among the children at the schoolhouses and giving them to those who attended his meetings.

In the spring of 1851 Mr. Dow was elected mayor of Portland. The legislature was in session, and with an anti-liquor bill carefully drawn, he went to Augusta and was given a public hearing in representatives' hall, crowded to its utmost capacity. At the close of the hearing the special joint committee unanimously adopted the bill as presented by Mr. Dow. It was reported to the legislature the next morning, this being the last day of the session, and was enacted on that day without change by a vote of 18 to 10 in the senate, and 86 to 40 in the house. This action took place on Saturday, May 31, 1851, and on the 2d of June the governor signed the bill and the famous Maine law immediately took effect.

Neal Dow made several trips to England on the invitation of the United Kingdom Alliance of Great Britain, addressing a large number of meetings.

He gave his pen, his voice, himself freely and unsparingly to advance the temperance cause. At the age of ninety-three years, beloved and honored the world over, Neal Dow passed onward October 2. 1897.

8. Address, "The Maine Law."

The following paragraphs prepared by Mrs. Stevens will be found invaluable in connection with this address:

The Maine Prohibitory law was enacted in 1851, repealed in 1856, and re-enacted in 1858. In 1884 the Prohibitory law was made a part of the constitution of the state, being submitted to the voters of the state for this action, and the vote was more than three to one in favor of dignifying the law and making it more permanent by placing it in the constitution. Attempts since then to resubmit with a view to repealing the law do not prevail. In the legislature of 1901 the vote was 106 against resubmission to 37 in favor. The question of resubmission is before the legislature of 1903, and the committee to whom the petitions were referred have voted eight against resubmission to two for it.

The following words of Neal Dow are thus far verified: "The friends of temperance in Maine will never consent to establish by law and give legal protection to a trade which inflicts far more evil upon the community than comes from all other causes of evil combined."

And why should the liquor trade be protected or legalized? Again let Neal Dow answer: "It creates no wealth, it earns nothing, it lives upon the earnings of other trades, it adds nothing whatever to the wealth or power of the state, nor to the prosperity or comfort of the people. This trade is wasteful, like war; it destroys more of the wages of the people and the results of useful industries than 'war, pestilence and famine combined'; it creates more than three-fourths of the poverty, pauperism and crime of the country and more than one-half of the insanity; it inflicts a premature and shameful death upon more than sixty thousand people annually; it transforms hundreds of thousands of good, industrious citizens into drunkards, vagabonds and tramps; it sends an infinite misery into hundreds of thousands of homes; it puts the people down and keeps them down; its effect is to make the people ignorant, coarse, vulgar, brutal, enemies to law, order and good government. Such are a part of the certain effects of this trade. There is not now and never has been in this country a locality where the policy of license has diminished the liquor traffic or the evils coming from it. No one has ever suggested that under license the demand for liquor would not be fully met and freely supplied."

What are the substitutes for the prohibitory law which the liquor fraternity approve—and more's the pity, which some really good people recommend or have recommended in times past? High license, the dispensary system, the municipal or state control.

The failure of high license as a temperance measure is so very apparent and is so generally acknowledged at the present day that we need not bring any proof. It may be well, however, to state that it is easily provable that the restrictive features of a high license law are not so well enforced as is the prohibitory law of the state of Maine.

The Dispensary.

Although it is in operation to some extent in North Carolina, Georgia and Alabama, South Carolina is the only state which, as a state, has adopted this system.

The first dispensary in the United States was established at Athens, Ga., and as a temperance measure is acknowledged to be a failure; in fact, those who are connected with it are classed as liquor sellers and violators of law and are on the same plane with other licensed liquor sellers. Some of the leading churches have taken action which debars any church member from being in any way connected with the dispensary. From a reliable source we learn that the preachers of South Carolina are against the dispensary. If a member of the Baptist Church is appointed and accepts the position of salesman in a dispensary, he is excluded from the church. Numbers of churches have excluded their members for renting their property for the use of the dispensary, proving that the dispensary has sown discord among the churches. Preachers and laymen say, "It is a blighting curse."

Mr. T. J. LaMotte, of Columbia, S. C., a gentleman of high standing, and whom we had the pleasure of meeting when we were there a year ago, gives a carefully prepared statement, based on carefully tabulated figures, which certainly ought to be convincing proof to those who really wish to know the truth, showing that under the dispensary system the amount of liquor sold increases and that the evils resulting therefrom increase in like proportion. These figures plainly show that the dispensary system is even worse than the license system, for "comparing the statistics of crime under the dispensary with those of years immediately preceding the present regime, we find that crime against the person has increased over 10 per cent, homicide nearly 100 per cent, and against property more than 100 per cent for the six years; during the last two years of the dispensary rule the figures are even still greater over the last two years of the old system. These figures are taken from the reports of the attorney-general and must be correct." There is no doubt but that the "purpose of every one in any way connected with the distribution of intoxicants through the dispensary is to foster its influence, increase its sale and make the business permanent in the state. The 'blind tigers' are more numerous in either of the two larger cities in the state than the ninety-four dispensaries and the twenty-four illegal beer dispensaries run by the state by reason of their valuable patronage; the dispensaries are screened from prosecution, as is shown by the fact that out of 2,311 cases of violation brought into court, only 550, or 24 per cent, were convicted."

We might quote similar statements from scores of reformers, philanthropists and educators of the South. Miss Belle Kearney, of Mississippi, who has spent much time in South Carolina, writes: "When the dispensary was first fastened upon South Carolina several restrictions hedged it in to give the people some show of hope, but by degrees these were weakened, until to-day, with the exception of only two or three features, the dispensary is the same as an open saloon. The law regarding it is

(Continued on page 14.)

U. OF MD. LIBRARY

UNDER THE WHITE RIBBON.

BY MARY HENRY-ROSSITER.

AMONG the treasures of my library are some unpublished sketches of types of children, left by my mother, Mrs. S. M. I. Henry. They are just such children as we all have to deal with and I am sure that our women will value the suggestions offered by a few of these genuine and characteristic incidents.

The Child with Many Masters.

There is peculiar pathos in this question straight from the heart of a child: "How many folks does one have to mind all at once?"

As in a flashlight comes before me a scene which would touch the heart of the staunchest disciplinarian.

A little fellow of about seven years is sitting on the ground just outside the kitchen door, between a chip basket and an old tin pan, with his toes in his hands, helplessly crying big, hot tears down into his blouse.

"What in the world!" I exclaim, as I come round the corner of the house. "Can I do anything for you, little friend?"

"No—o—o ma—a—am," he sobs.

"No? Why not? Try me and see. Something ought to be done so that a little boy need not have to sit on the ground and cry like that."

"Ye—es, 'm," he assents, with an emphatic nod that speaks volumes.

"Well, then, let us find out what it is, and how to do it. Let us see: you didn't fall down and hurt you; I can see that; you just deliberately sat down to cry, and nothing else; and that is pretty hard work. If you must cry, you ought to have help, but I can't cry with you this fine morning. Isn't there something that would help you to laugh and get up and run about happy again?"

"Yes, 'm, there is."

"Well, what is it? We'll find it if we can."

"We can't," was the laconic rejoinder, while his sobs broke out afresh.

"Can't? Are you sure?"

"Yes'm."

"Why? Do tell me!"

"'C-cause they all lives right here with me, and wants me to jump quick. Ma wants the chips just as quick 's I can get 'em, and Aunt Lizzie wants the potatoes this minute, and grandma, she wants hers always, 'quick now, run!' And they all scolds if I don't—'n I can't, and I just wish I had—dn't nobody but my m—ma."

What could any reformer do with such a problem as was presented by the sobbing, discouraged child?

Look at my little friend;—discouraged, crying such tears as no child ever ought to shed, all because he will be scolded for not being able to run in three opposite directions upon as many different errands all at the same time. And hear him, reminding us of David's, "Oh, that I had wings like a dove! for then would I fly away and be at rest," crying out so pitifully, "I just wish I hadn't nobody but my ma."

I heard one fatherless boy many years ago say with a contented sigh:

"Oh, I'm so glad I haven't anybody at my house but mother! I don't know what I would do if I had to live like Charley Smith."

"What about Charley Smith?" I asked.

"Why, his mother tells him to do something, and his father tells him something else, and everybody else tells him something else. Nobody seems to want him to do what anybody else does, and he gets awful bothered. He's going to run away when he gets a little bigger, where he won't have anybody to boss him. He wanted me to go with him, but I told him I didn't have to, for I hadn't any one but mama; and I was awful glad I hadn't."

"Wouldn't you have liked a father to help you grow up?"

"No'm, not—not now. I used to think I would. It seemed awful not to have a papa; but since I see how 'tis, most always I'm glad I ain't got none."

Human experience everywhere has demonstrated it to be a wise arrangement that, while almost everything else in the body is in pairs, the head is always single. A two-headed beast is a monstrosity, whether in nature, mythology or prophetic symbol. The gunner who would be sure to hit the center of a mark does not load up with a handful of shot,—and government that is on the shot-gun order is quite as sure to hit almost anything but the real game as is the weapon in question. What has been recognized as absolutely necessary everywhere else in government, is no less necessary in the home.

The mother with whom the children must grow up during their first years should be the one through whom, as a rule, instructions, privileges and penalties should be administered, and every child should know that she is supported by the father and every member of the family in this responsible office.

This, of course, does not mean that others are not to ask favors and make requests for little services such as the child can render, but their requests should be made sparingly and should always be subject to the plan of the day's work which has been outlined for the child, and according to which he is working under his mother's instructions.

Aunt, uncle, grandparents, and guests, should most religiously respect the right of the child to be free from many masters, and the right of the mother to direct the conduct of her children in the way that seems best to her husband and herself, without interference from any one; and she and he should thoroughly understand each other. If, however, any guest or member of the family so far forgets what is involved in this right as to begin to "order the child about" and correct him in any way, the mother should as unobstrusively as possible remove him to a place of refuge and let him understand that she recognizes the wrong, but that it is of a nature that can not be resented, and must be patiently endured by them both for the sake of peace.

Do not have one word of discussion about the matter with the meddlesome guest in sight or hearing of the child. In case of aged and sick members of the family, who are not quite amenable to reason, and who may attempt to exercise perplexing authority over the child, the only way is to teach him to endure patiently for Christ's sake what can not be cured. Even then the parent should be careful not to allow the little ones to undergo too severe tasks of endurance. Keep them away as much as possible from those who do not know how to treat them.

There is a better way than to "order about." A request should never carry that sort of sting in it. An "order" provokes all the latent wilfulness there is in child or man, while a request set to the "please" and "thank you" accompaniment will, other things being equal, bring with it an inspiration to cheerful obedience.

In the hard world of competition and selfish strife a man who is dependent upon his labor for an income soon learns that he must obey promptly or starve; but to have to go and come under orders, is, all the world over, contrary to the perfect law of liberty.

The authority that has the power to enforce law must either be loved and accepted for the sake of that love which pre-supposes obedience, or, even though it be obeyed because there is no help for it, it will be feared, hated, and escaped if possible.

The home life should be so free from all suggestion of authority that no child ever becomes conscious of it, unless by disloyalty he puts himself where he must feel it. Then there should be found in full force that power which is of the Holy Spirit, by which alone the parent can rightly exercise authority, and by which alone the child can be won to obedience.

Obedience is a function of the soul, and can be brought into exercise only by the one power which is invested in the Holy Spirit. It springs from within, and must flow out into the life according to the law of liberty, or like a subterranean stream, remain unuttered, undreamed, denied, until some convulsion shall bring it to light.

"The best that I can do is to do what I know my father would want me to do if he were the man he ought to be," is the way one young man expressed it. His father called him an "ungrateful, disobedient rebel;" and, so far as the letter was concerned, he was disobedient; but all the while there was in his heart, as it had been made new by the power of the Spirit, the most tender, faithful obedience to all that his father ought to require, and would have required if he himself had been true and pure. In this manner that son honored his father beyond all deserving, even while in every act of his life he seemed to be reproving, and even defying him.

We must never forget that there is One and only One who has the right to direct and control human conduct. He is very careful how He interferes with the rights which He has delegated to the father and mother in the home, and holds almost entirely in abeyance the power to exercise his authority over any individual, having long ago resolved commandment into promise, demand into invitation, and supreme power to control into supreme power to help.

The Crying Child.

"When a child cries, should it be told to 'stop right away?' Should one insist on making it stop, or hold the hand over its mouth to stop the noise?"

Any one of these proceedings is useless as regards the object in view. Forcibly to shut off the breath of a crying child is dangerous. There is reason to suppose the child has something to cry for. It may not be easy to discover the cause, but it is best to find it, if possible, and remove it; and until this can be done it will be more effective either to treat the child as if it were ill, by some soothing remedial process, like a warm bath, a massage, wrapping it up in bed, or perhaps leaving it alone. For a case of obstinate wilfulness, to leave the child entirely alone is the most effective remedy.

Do not tell the child to stop. That command, "Stop!" has something very irritating in it. Do not call attention to the fact that the child is crying. Ignore the noise, but seek quietly for the cause and the remedy, that no connection may remain in his mind between his crying and your efforts. Otherwise, he may repeat the process simply from a desire to have you pay him unusual attention. Do not allow him to realize any profit from such a demonstration.

The Self-Willed Child.

"When you ask a child to do anything, how would you get him to do it if he refuses?"

First, be sure that the right example is set before him. If he refuses you, it is probably because he himself has been refused again and again in reasonable requests, or without the explanation which would have made him understand the right of refusal, or because he has heard you refuse the requests of other members of the family.

No child whose reasonable requests are treated with uniform courtesy, and who never hears or witnesses incivility in his home, will refuse to do what is asked of him, unless there is a reason which to him seems perfectly warranted. Take it for granted that there is a reason, find out what it is, and treat him as you would like to have him treat you under the same circumstances.

In a clear case of self-willed rebellion, let him make his own choice as to whether he will regard your wishes, with the consequences which obedience will bring, or choose rebellion with its consequences. Make all the consequences, in either case, swift, sure, and as natural as possible.

What would be natural in a case of open rebellion? The loss of all the home privileges, which obedience would, of course, insure. A rebel is necessarily cut off until such time as he ceases to be a rebel. Let the child feel this. Let him undertsand that he only is responsible for the loss that he must suffer, and that in a minute he can end the trouble as soon as he chooses. But be very sure that you are all this time true to principle, so that in coming over to your side for the sake of peace and privilege the child does not become conscious that he is sacrificing what is right and true.

How to Employ the Child

"What means would you employ to get small children interested in their work?"

Let the children work with you. Share with them, and they with you, in all the occupations of the home. Talk, explain, sing while at work; and there will be no lack of interest. It is only when the little ones are left to work alone, or with other children, on tasks which they do not comprehend, that they become listless. The healthy, happy child is naturally an enthusiast in anything which he undertakes. He likes work. His play is work,—business, and he would prefer to spend his energies in some way which will "help," if he only knows how to do it. Of course, he must not be kept at one thing until the muscles and faculties employed become wearied. After he has kept his arms, hands, legs, and feet moving in a certain way for a few moments, he must change. He will change, so as to bring other parts into play, unless he is arbitrarily prevented; and if he should be arbitrarily prevented from making this restful change he will lose interest at once, and become a dull, sullen, uninteresting "bother of a boy," judged by the ordinary onlooker, when, in fact, he is only tired out and suffering.

Did you ever hear of the "tired boy,"—the one who never gets rested? He has been the joke of the grown-up world from time immemorial. But it has been a poor joke. He has been a sufferer, and has made the world suffer with him. Constant occupation is the law of the growing child, because the law of his growth demands it. The work of the home and its environs is admirably adapted to this necessary, constant change, unless it is reduced to the system which is best suited to older people. Then there is, of course, no place for the child in it.

The trouble is, the children have been counted out of the home-making and housekeeping, and "hired help" has been substituted. The Originator of the home never intended that it should be run by hired help, but designed that father, mother, and children should co-operate in doing its work; that the "stranger" and the "poor" should be taken in as a part of the family, contributing and enjoying their share of all that goes to make up home life; that all the energies of each, from young to old, should be spent in practical usefulness, redeeming not only the time, but also the powers that have been sold under sin.

"OAK KNOLL," DANVERS.

My Whittier Days.

Amesbury-Oak Knoll.

By L. Mabel Freese.

HOUSE WHERE WHITTIER DIED, HAMPTON.

II. Oak Knoll.

IT would be hard to find in all New England a more picturesque spot than that in Danvers, Massachusetts, known as Oak Knoll, the last home of the poet Whittier.

After his home circle were all gone, he kept the Amesbury house, visiting it whenever he wished, and going to Oak Knoll he lived with his cousins, to whom he was a very dear friend.

Speaking of Oak Knoll, after he went there, he said, "This is my home. Here when I shut my door at night, I haven't a care."

Indeed, the two homes, Amesbury and Oak Knoll, mark two different epochs of his life: Amesbury, the burden and heat of the day; Oak Knoll, the quiet eventide, free from care and financial and political struggle. Although we do not perhaps so often think of Whittier in connection with politics, he looked closely after the political wires and sacrificed much to better his country.

It was the writer's good fortune, one recent summer day, in company with a friend whose father was a playmate of Whittier's, to spend a delightful morning at Oak Knoll.

Upon our arrival we were courteously greeted by Mrs. A. J. Woodman who introduced us to Miss Carolyn C. Johnson and Miss Mary E. Johnson. They and their aged father, with Mrs. Woodman's daughter Phebe, comprised the family when Whittier lived there. Phebe, now married and living in Salem, was the Red Riding Hood of his poem.

Mrs. Woodman said: "Whittier came here in 1876. My father, to whom he was very dear, was living then, and when he died he said, "Take good care of Greenleaf."

That the cousins fulfilled their father's request was evident to us as we conversed and mingled with the charming household.

The first thing that our hostess showed us was the large portraits of Whittier. The one in the parlor was taken when he was fifty-eight years old; that in the sitting-room represented him at seventy-five years; and in the study are two, one taken at thirty-eight and the other at eighty years of age. After looking at the portraits, we went into the poet's pleasant study. It has a large glass door at the right looking out upon the knoll. The desk is near the door, and memory reviews the quiet hour sitting there where he wrote among other beautiful poems "The Vision of Echard," "Red Riding Hood," and "At Eventide." It was there that Mrs. Woodman read us some of the poet's last letters in which the man, who was even greater than the poet, was revealed to us. As the beautiful view, the warm sunlight, and the musical cadences of the reader entranced us, we could not wonder that he wrote in a personal letter the summer before he died, when he was away from Oak Knoll, "I wish I were at Oak Knoll this hot day. It is as hot there as here—but the sight of green fields and trees seems to make heat less severe. I am sure the garden is greatly improved and the roses must be in the best of bloom."

When he was away from the household at Danvers he wrote two letters weekly to them, and these are now precious, vital reminders of him whose death was so great a grief.

Following the talk in the study, my friend and I slipped out into the pine grove back of the house. Here, while the breeze wafted the fragrance of the pines to us, the blue sky revealed heaven, the sun shone through the trees, flooding our whole being with joy, the birds awoke a melody in our souls, and we reverently thanked God that we were alive.

After our little season of communion, Miss Mary, followed by Teddy, the dog, acted as our guide over all the grounds. There are winding paths in many directions and these lead to parts of the grounds appropriately named by Whittier. There is the Oak Knoll, an elevated grassy plot at the left of the walk as we entered, the house being at the right. Growing on the knoll is the oak tree which names the place. There is South Ridge, the Oak Walk, South Knoll, Columbine Hill, Prospect Hill, The Pines, etc. Miss Johnson said, "Many times a day Greenleaf would come out here. We in the house would say, 'Are you going out?' 'Yes, I must; Dick has ordered me,' was the reply." (Dick was the little terrier.)

The trees at Oak Knoll are more beautiful and of greater variety than we had ever before seen in one place. There are the fragrant pines with a circle of oaks at the right, the magnolias, the southern cypresses, the "painted beeches," as Whittier styled them, the chestnuts, larches, weeping beeches, where Phebe had her play-house, the mountain ash, the fruit trees, and many others. The large spruce tree back of the house which especially attracted our attention, was named by Dr. Holmes, "The Poet's Pagoda."

John Greenleaf Whittier.

Miss Mary entertained us with sprightly stories of her famous cousin. One day when he was seventy years of age and Phebe and he had been pelting each other with acorns out under the oaks, he remarked when he returned, "I didn't know whether Phebe was seventy and I seven, or she seven and I seventy; anyway we acted like sixty!"

We returned to the house by the way of the beautiful garden, with the sweet smelling hedge, and before luncheon was served one of the ladies read us Paul Hayne's poem which contains an excellent description of Whittier.

We were glad to learn from those who knew him best that our favorite poet never took any spiritous liquors except for medicinal purposes, and that smoking was disagreeable to him.

In speaking of Whittier's religious poems, Miss Johnson said, "Dr. Horder of London, who was here a few days ago, said, "I consider Whittier the greatest preacher the world ever knew."

We went away bearing in our hands beautiful flowers from the garden, and happy in the better knowledge of him who wore the white flower of a blameless life.

Bangor, Maine

Need of an Appropriation for Women at the St. Louis Fair.

By Helen M. Barker.

THERE seems to be some disappointment that there is to be no Woman's Building at the Louisiana Purchase Exposition at St. Louis.

Whether this shall be a detriment to woman's work in the exposition depends upon the use to which this building was to be devoted.

At the centennial in Philadelphia, in 1876, the first distinct woman's building was erected for fair purposes. Here was found all there was of woman's work in the fair, and we all remember how disappointed we were at the meagre display of embroideries, fancy work, carved work, etc.

When the Board of Lady Managers of the Columbian Exposition was appointed by act of congress "to have charge of all matters pertaining to the interests of women," congress in that act appropriated $200,000 for a Woman's Building. When the Board of Lady Managers met, one of the first resolutions adopted was that "there shall be no separate woman's exhibit," and that the woman's building shall not be used for exhibits but as a great national home for the women of the country. There was great unanimity in the sentiment that the time had come when woman should take her place beside her brother in all the exposition buildings; when her work should be judged upon its merit, and that it should claim award because it was worthy, rather than because it was the work of a woman. Hence woman's work was exhibited in the Fine Arts building, in Liberal Arts, in fact, in nearly every building on the grounds creditable exhibits of woman's work were installed.

As an illustration, I may say, that the committee on fine arts reported work exhibited by 1769 women artists. There were paintings in oil and water colors, 220 exhibits in sculpture, and in Liberal Arts their exhibits were almost countless. In the Manufacturers' Building the percentages given by manufacturers, representing the work of woman in these exhibits, was certainly astonishing. Perhaps the most surprising were the exhibits of women in mines and mining—not merely large collections of well classified metals and minerals, but exhibits by women who owned and operated their own mines and assayed their own metals.

While the Woman's Building was itself an exhibit (being designed and decorated by women) it was not intended for an exhibit building but for social and philanthropic purposes. Later, however, it did receive exhibits, of foreign women mostly, which were received too late for classification in the general exhibit. Displays of woman's work not placed for award were found there.

In view of the great advance from 1876 to 1893, we could not believe that the board of managers at St. Louis would for a moment think of utilizing a Woman's Building for exhibits, but if they chose to exercise one of the recognized prerogatives of woman, namely, home-maker, it would be fitting that they should have control of one building for headquarters and where they could invite the thousands of women who will visit the fair, where quiet resting and reading rooms would furnish tired women with a more private resort than could be provided in any of the more public exhibition buildings.

It would seem but just, if a board of women are deemed essential to the success of the fair, that they should have an adequate portion of the five million appropriated by congress for the expenses of the great exposition. We feel sure that the commissioners of the Louisiana Purchase Exposition will see that the able women who are appointed to help in this work will not be left empty-handed, for certainly without adequate means they can accomplish little. If, however, the work of women were to be judged by the display in a Woman's Building alone, it would be no misfortune if no building were provided. I may say, in closing, that the notable work done by women in the Columbian Exposition was largely due to the very generous appropriation made by congress for their use.

Evanston, Ill.

U. OF MD. LIBRARY

The Tuning.

By James Buckham.

THE tuning of life's harpstring
Must even here commence;
But God is loving, yearning,
The while He draws it tense.

O Father! make me patient
To bear life's stress and strain—
This gradual ascension
Of character through pain.

I would not flinch the process,
Though it were anguish fine.
Tune Thou my soul, O Master,
Unto Thy song divine!

Melrose, Mass.

Hugh Brotherton, Curate.*

By Frances Home.

Author of "Against The Odds," "The Experience of Dorothy Leigh."

American serial rights reserved by Woman's Temperance Publishing Association.

Chapter I.

THE ancient city of Barminster nestled smilingly in the shelter of protecting hills, a haven of peace and rest.

It was Sunday morning. From an early hour the bells of venerable churches, scattered plentifully almost within a stone's throw of each other, had been vociferously proclaiming the fact. That it was no ordinary Sunday the throng of well-dressed strangers bore witness. Ordinarily, save for the hurried footfall of some early worshipper, the quiet High street lay silent and deserted at this hour. To-day a small crowd streamed slowly up the roadway, throwing interested glances over the quaint old houses that bordered the narrow pavements. Now and again one of the numerous family groups would pause, as if purposely to stare into the face of some adventurous maiden, whose curiosity had drawn her too near to the low, heavily-framed window that overlooked the street. She need not have retreated, blushing hotly, as she invariably did retreat. It was not the guileless face of the maiden, but the quaint frontage of her home, that had attracted a passing attention, and with a brief comment, the strangers would walk on, leaving the unsophisticated heart of the girl to beat the faster because of a pair of solemn young eyes that, momentarily, had been lifted to hers. For, almost without exception, to each group of these early worshippers was attached a clerically attired son or brother, whose self-conscious air betrayed the fact that his habits of body and of mind had not yet adapted themselves to the severities of his clerical collar and long coat. Noticeable among the rest, by reason of his independent bearing and his liberal endowment of good looks, was one who strode alone rapidly up the steep street. To the residents he was well known as a native of Barminster, and the son of one of its leading lawyers. To these it was no surprise that he lacked the support of his family at the early service, for, in this obsequiously devout cathedral town, it was a notorious fact that the Brothertons were not religious people. On the present occasion, the fact did but lend an additional interest to their only son, and from behind the safe shelter of the window-curtains, more than one pair of girlish eyes followed him with admiring sympathy. Their admiration was not without excuse, for among the candidates for the ordination to be held that morning by the bishop of the diocese in his cathedral, there was not one goodlier to look upon than Hugh Brotherton. Nor did the young candidate's character belie the promise of his looks. If the lawyer shrewdly conjectured that certain youthful gifts of oratory were the mainspring of his son's religious convictions, he was wrong or, at any rate, he was not wholly right. If Hugh had his secret ambitions, he had his aspirations too, and if it was his firm determination to climb, as speedily as might be, to the top of the tree, it was at the same time his earnest desire to use that commanding elevation for the furtherance of the glory of God as well as of his own. Secretly he was conscious of his gifts, and by the help of those gifts, and, of course, by the help of God, he meant to rise; and in rising, he meant to benefit the world. At this moment his intention was expressing itself in every purposeful stride, and to his alert self-consciousness there was something pleasantly prophetic in the fact that, one by one, he outstripped each of his fellow-candidates in his progress up the hill. Presently, leaving the more leisurely groups of strangers far behind, he turned out of the High Street, and ten minutes' rapid walking brought him to a pleasant, roomy house standing in small, well-kept grounds on the outskirts of the city. Swinging in at the open gate, he strode round the smooth lawn and up the steps into the hall. When, a moment later, he entered the breakfast-room, he found the greater part of the family already at the table. A dignified, careworn man sat at the head, facing him his handsome, imperious wife, and a pretty daughter at either side.

"We didn't wait, Hugh, for fear of being too late for a good place," said the elder daughter, as the son of the house went round the table with his greetings.

For, religiously disposed or not, the entire family purposed witnessing the ceremony of Hugh's ordination.

"You are quite right; I meant to ask you not to do so. I knew I should be late," said her brother, as he took his place, and tried to look unconscious of the undisguised admiration of his womenkind.

"That ridiculous get-up suits him well enough, doesn't it, mother?" remarked his father good-humoredly.

A smile, and a glance from him to Hugh, was sufficient answer.

"How is grandad?" asked Hugh, by way of changing the subject.

"The same ever," replied his father shortly.

The cloud that instantly overshadowed his face, and that of his wife, remained there long after the conversation had turned upon the approaching ceremony. Perhaps the cause of it was still in his mind when he and Hugh stood waiting in the hall for the mother and her girls.

"It may strike you as coming oddly from me," he said abruptly, "but don't forget that we Brothertons were religious folks at one time. For good or ill, religion isn't of much account among us now. Still, I should be none the less disappointed to see you turning traitor to the faith you profess; mind that!"

"I trust, indeed, that you never will see me so far forget myself," said his son, much shocked. He was not exactly offended at the implied warning, but he thought the remark not only uncalled for, but entirely out of place. Still, he knew that his choice of a profession had escaped the serious opposition of his family, mainly from considerations of policy, and was all the more resolved to justify that choice. Mingled with his self-confidence were other convictions with which his family could scarcely sympathize, though, as they watched him through the service, some perception of what it meant to him dawned upon each of their minds.

"So much the better for him, and the safer," thought Mr. Brotherton grimly, while the mother and sisters of the young candidate felt their eyes grow dim with tears of vague regret for their own lack of spiritual sympathy.

For, temporarily, Hugh had forgotten all lesser considerations as, with rapt earnestness, he made his vows to God in the face of the Church. In the past there had been moments—rare moments of insight and self-distrust—when, looking forward to this hour, he had shrunk from it; but the time of indecision was behind him now, the chosen future before, and as he took the irrevocable step, his soul exulted in the prospect of triumphant victory. At the solemn moment when the grey-haired bishop, looking with a certain sad earnestness along the rows of steadfast young faces, asked of the candidates a pledge that they would use their diligence to order their lives, and the lives of their families, so that they might be wholesome examples to the flock, Hugh Brotherton's vigorous tones led the answering promise with a fervor that brought fresh tears to his mother's eyes. Doubtless the intensity of the moment increased the fervor of the pledge, but, so far as he knew himself, it was with an honest and true heart that the young deacon knelt to take orders, and went forth with his face steadfastly set towards a life of self-denying work, and of assured success. He listened, as humbly and dutifully as could be expected of his youth, to the bishop's counsel and exhortations, and, on reaching home, went straight to his room, and did not appear again until the gong summoned him to early Sunday dinner. Then he came slowly down the stairs with the look of earnest purpose still upon his face, and as he entered the room in which the rest of the family were already assembled, a limp, paralytic figure, in an arm-chair near the window, stirred, and a pair of bleared eyes turned vacantly towards him.

"Well, grandad, how are you?' asked the young clergyman, with the careful tolerance that was grandad's choicest portion in this life.

The old man's lustreless eyes peered inquisitively into the handsome young face, while his loose, jabbering mouth strove to enunciate something intelligible.

Out of the fullness of his present goodwill towards all mankind, Hugh bestowed a kindly pat on the back of one palsied hand, and turned away without troubling himself to interpret the confused mumblings. The action was not entirely due to indifference. Often there was wisdom in not seeking to interpret grandad's attempts at speech; but the dim eyes followed the clerically-attired figure round the table; and throughout the dinner-hour, amidst all the pleasant homage of his mother and the girls, Hugh was conscious of their senile leer. "The old sinner," he inwardly commented. For although grandad's history had been sedulously hidden from his grandchildren, his everyday character had at no time been one that they could hold in high esteem. His own specially-prepared dinner had been administered to him an hour ago, and his sorely-tired attendant had gladly handed over her charge to the family, in order to avail herself of the privilege of her "afternoon out." Hence his unwonted presence in the dining-room. While the rest dined, grandad continued to amuse himself with his own thoughts. For some time his jabberings and mouthings were studiously left unnoticed; but the old man was manifestly anxious to make himself understood, and losing patience at last, Mrs. Brotherton availed herself of the temporary absence of the parlourmaid to take action in the interests of peace.

"Madge, he does not intend to be ignored, so you may as well try to find out what it is that he wants to say."

Somewhat distastefully, grandad's favorite left the table, and standing before the old man's chair, applied herself to the task of sorting out the jumbled syllables. It proved a sore trial to her patience.

"I can't make it out," she said at last pettishly. "If he means anything at all, it sounds like 'a parson! just such another as his grandad; he, he, he!'"

"He, he, he!" gurgled grandad triumphantly.

This time there was no mistaking his meaning, and forsaking their dinner, the startled family stared with one accord at the chuckling, leering old reprobate by the window. The faces of his grandchildren expressed angry bewilderment; those of their parents a mixture of annoyance and dismay. After the first shock, it was at them that Hugh gazed, while a hundred half-understood incidents and recollections sprang to new meaning in his mind.

"Father," he said impetuously, as a sudden conviction sent the hot blood flaming into his face, "grandad was not—is not—a clergyman, is he?"

For a moment, save for the senile chuckling in the background, there was dead silence in the room.

"Unfortunately, he is. Now, perhaps, you can understand why I was not particularly well pleased to see you bent on the same profession," said Mr. Brotherton drily.

The girls looked frightened, Mrs. Brotherton's lips trembled, and a cloud of horror settled over Hugh's face. The maid returned at the moment, and the meal was concluded almost in silence. As they left the table, Mr. Brotherton called his son aside.

"Your mother wished, and hoped, to have kept the knowledge from you," he said kindly; "but, as I have often told her, such unhappy truths will out. We had begun at last to hope that he had really forgotten what he once was, but your dress must have quickened his memory."

"I may as well know the worst of it now," said Hugh gloomily; but his father shook his head decisively.

"To what end? It is a miserable story, that is best left to be forgotten. He was a disgrace to his church; let that be enough for you to know. See to it that things turn out very different with you."

There was that in his manner that prohibited further inquiry, and Hugh joined the rest of his family with the cloud still overshadowing his face. The shaking, slobbering figure of his grandfather had always been distasteful to him; within the last hour it had become utterly abhorrent. It was greatly to his relief that grandad disappeared from the family circle for the remainder of the day.

Neither Mr. nor Mrs. Brotherton attended the afternoon service, but both the girls went, escorted by Hugh. The eloquent bishop of the diocese was to preach in aid of some local rescue agency, and the vast cathedral was crowded to the doors. Hugh found standing-room for his two sisters before joining the rest of the newly-ordained in their robing-room. When he again entered the choir with the procession, all traces of perturbation seemed to have passed away, and many sympathetic eyes followed his steadfast face and stalwart form approvingly.

The bishop more than realised the general expectation, and the most sermon-hardened shared in the universal thrill when, following a characteristic impulse, he turned with an impassioned gesture from the general congregation to drive his warnings home to the hearts of the white-robed priests and deacons on whom he had so recently laid his hands. Once more reminding them of the life-long warfare to which they stood pledged, he solemnly named the flagrant vices by which they would be confronted on every hand.

"Ay! perhaps in the secret places of your own hearts, for you are but men, and which man among us knows of what vileness he is capable until temptation puts him to the test?"

With few exceptions, all eyes were riveted on the preacher's face; but at that moment Connie Brotherton furtively pulled her sister's sleeve.

"Madge, look at Hugh! Isn't he horribly like grandad? I never noticed it before, but do look at him now!"

Hugh was glowering sullenly at the bishop, while his lips twitched.

"Be quiet! How horrid you are!" whispered Madge, all the more sharply for having recognized at a glance what her sister meant.

Happily, the sermon ended with words of encouragement and cheer, and by degrees the cloud passed from Hugh's face. He and his grandfather did not again meet, for, duly warned by her mistress, grandad's attendant took care to delay his first appearance on the following morning until after "Mr. Hugh's" departure for his curacy.

(To be continued.)

*Copyrighted by Ward, Lock & Co., London.

Children's Cozy Corner

With Louisa Alcott. By Olive Clark.

I WAS one of Miss Alcott's many girl-lovers, and when Mrs. G.—, my hostess of that Boston visit, told me that I was really to meet Louisa M. Alcott and be under the same roof, my delight was almost unbounded.

Were you ever introduced to one you had idealized? Did you know what to say? And didn't you forget the nice little speech you had repeated to yourself over and over? I remember that I said something about my love for "The Old-Fashioned Girl," how I had read it again and again, and kept it on the table beside my Bible. I must have said it awkwardly, for in a reassuring manner, Miss Alcott put her arm round my waist and sweetly replied, "I like these new-fashioned girls a great deal better."

She looked like her pictures, except that none can portray her sweetness of expression—that indescribable sweet sadness which shines from the face of one who has by suffering risen to the heights of soul-peace.

I was a good deal of a hero-worshipper then, and the chats we had in those few days seemed as sacred as oracles. The Boston that was to me almost a place of enchantment, had been the scene of many childhood days and of later hardships and successes. I never, in after life, passed the old United States hotel without recalling her story of how she used to go there with her band-box for the pie and cake a kind lady saved for her, for the little Alcotts rebelled against their father's prescribed diet for them —boiled rice, minus sugar, or plain graham mush.

Boston Common was Miss Alcott's play-ground, and in "Poppy's Pranks" she tells of the lively scenes in which she was chief actor. With a smile she recalled her fall into the frog pond—and she even ran away. She had been playing on the Common and wandered off with some children; night coming on, the weary little runaway sat on a door-step and rested her head on the back of a big shaggy dog, who seemed very friendly. The town-crier came along, crying out the loss of "a little girl, six years old, in a pink frock, white hat and new green shoes;" she quickly informed him, "Why, dat's me." She atoned for the afternoon's experience by spending the next day tied to the arm of a big sofa. Louisa was considered an unusually sunny child, and yet she said she had "sad spells" even when quite young.

Out-of-door life she loved; she said laughingly that if the theory of the transmigration of souls is true, in some previous existence she must have been a horse because she liked to run and race so well. On her seventh birthday her mother gave her a doll, saying, "Here is a quiet playmate, for my active little Louisa."

I was greatly interested in the plays the Alcott children had. Many of them are described in Miss Alcott's books. She called the Concord days the happiest of her life, but some features would seem severe to a girl now-a-days: for instance, for a ten-year-old to rise at five o'clock in the morning and take a cold water bath.

I almost envied her having known Emerson. When she was fifteen she said she read Goethe's "Correspondence with a Child," and straightway she decided to be another Bettine with Emerson for her Goethe. She wrote letters to him, which she never sent, and sentimentally laid flowers on his doorstep. Years afterwards she told Emerson about it, to his great amusement. Her mother, who was, in my opinion, the real philosopher of the family—since her philosophy was practical, while Mr. Alcott's was only theoretical—gave her these life rules:

"Rule yourself. Love your neighbor. Do the duty that lies nearest you."

These rules were observed, for certainly no life was more self-sacrificing. In her hard struggle with poverty, she went out to service, taught school during the day and served for money in the evening and wrote stories, always planning and saving for a warm garment for her mother, a new dress or bonnet for one of the sisters or something for her father. She often found it hard, she said, to wear old clothes and be cheerful about it, when so many other people had so much.

Once when friends invited her to visit them, she refused the invitation because she had "only a dollar in money, no good clothes, and a discontented mind." But she was to make thousands of dollars from her books.

Success, money and admiring friends came to her, sorrow and ill health were also hers, but through these she was as brave as when in girlhood days, she said "a boy's spirit" was in her.

When she had youth and health, she said she had no money for enjoyment, and when she had money, youth and health were gone. Worn out with her struggles for others, she died March 6, 1888.

One of her most pathetic utterances was that written to a friend a few months before her death:

"The learning not to do is so hard after being the hub of the family wheel so long. My verse lately has been:

> 'I am no longer eager, bold and strong,—
> All that is past;
> I am ready not to do, at last—at last.
> My half-day's work is done,
> And this is all my part,
> I give a patient God a patient heart.'"

A touch of life with Louisa Alcott was an inspiration to the true, the lovely and the heroic, which comes back now and then like an invigorating breeze.

I wonder if she guessed how that young girl visitor treasured her every word and how the memory of those days would shine out over her after-life, making the dark days brighter and the glad days lighter.

Chicago, Ill.

PUZZLERS' PACKET.

Puzzles marked (*) are protected by copyright. Contributors will please keep matter intended for this department distinct from other correspondence, and address same to Puzzlers' Packet, The Union Signal, Chicago.

1.—*We All Like It.

My first in crystal stream is found;
My second rests within the ground;
My third on yon high mount is seen;
My fourth,—it runs in pastures green;
My last is found up in the sky.
My whole keeps traffic moving by.

P. F.

2.—Duplex Transposition.

(Two separate answers.)

I am a word you often see,
The cause of untold misery.
Transpose me, and at once behold
A priest of God in times of old.

Adā.

3.—*A Lesson in Arithmetic.

1. Take 101 from harmony of sound, transpose the remainder, and you will have the full amount.
2. Take 54 from a part of the body, transpose the remainder and have a syllable of the musical scale.
3. Take 104 from politely, and leave poorly.
4. Take 51 from making lists, and leave a sharp pain.
5. Take 500 from a poet, and leave a barrier.
6. Take 400 from propped, transpose the remainder and have a wild animal.

Answers to Puzzles of Feb. 12.

1. Moonlight.
2. Springfield.
3. 1, Upset the coffee pot. 2, Large feet. 3, A novel without a wedding. 4, A baker; he always has his hour of knead. 5, "What o'clock is it?" 6, When he has the rheumatism he is every inch aching.
4. Disproportionableness. (Said to be the longest word in the language.)
5. 1, plate, late. 2, Late, ate. 3, Otis, 'tis. 4, True, rue. 5, Upraise, praise. 6, Hair, air. 7, Rice, ice.

```
P L O T          T
L O T H        O U T
O T T O      T U T O R
T H O U        T O P
               R
```

A Little Helper.

"My father says I'm a great helper,"
Said little Miss Dorothy Gay.
"There's just only us and our Bridget,
So I have to work ev'ry day.
On Monday I help do the washing
By wiping the plates dry and bright;
On Tuesday I help Bridget iron.
By folding the towels just right;
On Wednesday I help do the mending
By threading the needle up fast.
And Thursday I help clean the silver
By counting it over at last;
And Friday I help with the sweeping
By dusting as hard as I can.
And Sat'day I 'most do the baking
By buttering every pan;
And Sunday—well Sunday, my father
Says he doesn't actu'ly know
But he'd break right down in his sermon
At meeting if I didn't go!"

—Elizabeth Lincoln Gould.

FOR GOD AND HOME AND EVERY LAND

The UNION SIGNAL AND WORLD'S WHITE RIBBON

NATIONAL and WORLD'S WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION

Official Organ of the WORLD'S AND NATIONAL WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION.

Published Weekly by the Woman's Temperance Publishing Association, Chicago.

EDITOR-IN-CHIEF, - - - - - - MRS. LILLIAN M. N. STEVENS.
CORRESPONDING EDITOR, - - - LADY HENRY SOMERSET.
MANAGING EDITOR - - - - - MRS. CORNELIA T. JEWETT.

CONTRIBUTING EDITORS:

MRS. SUSANNA M. D. FRY. MRS. KATHARINE L. STEVENSON.
MRS. CLARA C. CHAPIN. MRS. ISABELLA WEBB PARKS.

Address all letters and manuscript intended for the editors to, The Editorial Department, UNION SIGNAL. Unavailable manuscripts will be returned only when sufficient postage accompanies the request.

SUBSCRIPTIONS.

Subscriptions may commence with any issue.
The date on the label indicates when your subscription ends.
Papers will be discontinued unless otherwise ordered.
Remittances should always be made in the safest manner available to the remitter. Register cash remittances.
Change of Address.—Give both your old and your new address when you desire a change.
Change of Date.—It takes at least three weeks to change the date, after your subscription is renewed.

PRICE $1.50 PER YEAR IN ADVANCE.
FOREIGN POSTAGE $1.04 ADDITIONAL.

Address all Business Communications to
The UNION SIGNAL, 184 La Salle St., CHICAGO.....

Chicago, March 5, 1903.

"The women that publish the tidings are a great host."

Our Official Organ.

(Reprinted from THE UNION SIGNAL of December 11, 1902, emphasizing, as it does, our latest announcement and promise of good things to come.)

IT is gratifying indeed to know that our readers appreciate the improvements made in THE UNION SIGNAL. The editors and publishers, on their side, are grateful for the many compliments and commendations which come to them from white-ribboners and from outsiders. So numerous these days are the letters of praise and appreciation that we find it impossible to reply personally to each, as we should like to do, hence we take this opportunity to say to our friends, one and all, that we are glad they are pleased and glad that so many of them take time to tell us so.

Only those familiar with the mysteries and the intricacies of the journalistic craft can understand just what these improvements mean both as regards mental and mechanical labor. And few even of such initiates can know what it means to edit and publish weekly a paper which goes out as the official voice of a world-wide organization with a do-everything policy. That THE UNION SIGNAL has taken a distinct step upward on the journalistic ladder is due not only to the carefully considered plans of editors and publishers, but also to the skilled and faithful execution of those plans by the toilers in the mechanical departments.

When the price was raised from a dollar to a dollar and a half, it meant that the paper would be worth at least half a dollar a year more to the subscriber. Only eleven months have elapsed since the change was made and who will say that the publishers have not abundantly proved this intention and their ability to carry it out.

At a dollar a year THE UNION SIGNAL was not and could not be, a thing of beauty or a joy to those who loved it. It bore the official messages, it had an able staff of contributors, but its outward appearance was not worthy of the one nor of the other, was not commensurate with the dignity of the great organization it represented. No one knew and deplored this more than the beloved leader whose name is linked indissolubly with the W. C. T. U., and who was wont quaintly and pathetically to refer to THE UNION SIGNAL as her "letter from home."

White ribboners demanded—and justly—that their official representative be better dressed. Why, it was asked, should not THE UNION SIGNAL be as well dressed (and "well dressed" means appropriately dressed) as the representatives of churches and other societies with which, in their homes, it associated? At a dollar a year it was impossible for the publishers to meet this demand. At that price it was necessary to use a cheap grade of paper, limiting the make-up in manner and matter to an extent which debarred enterprise. At one dollar, THE UNION SIGNAL, while splendid and progressive as to tone and character, was necessarily old-fashioned and shabby as to attire. Like a precious stone it lost much of its brilliancy and value by a cheap setting.

At a dollar and a half our official organ is printed on superior paper, has finely illustrated articles, secures up-to-date typographical effects, and in every way compares favorably with two-dollar and three-dollar weekly journals. No W. C. T. U. woman need hesitate now to lay it alongside her church or club paper on the library table. In short, THE UNION SIGNAL goes forth each week on its mission round the world appareled somewhat in keeping with its true worth and standing. And not only this, the extra fifty cents a year from each subscriber enables it to provide a feast in larger quantity as well as with finer appointments. Improvements, be it noted, are to continue. As has already been announced, the first issue of every month, beginning with January, will be a twenty-four page paper properly illustrated. Think of it! Twelve special numbers a year! Eight pages additional—half as much again—every four weeks! What with the gain in externals and the increase of helpful and interesting reading matter, it is easily seen that subscribers to THE UNION SIGNAL are now getting more, in proportion, for their money than they were getting before the price went up. If under the dollar policy our readers received full measure—and not one will claim that she (or he) did not thus receive—it may truly be said that under the dollar and a half plan they will get Scripture measure —"pressed down, shaken together and running over."

We might devote a paragraph or two here to exhortation and appeal in behalf of our paper, but we are mindful of the fact that those who read these words obviously do not need to be urged to take THE UNION SIGNAL. To do so would be to talk to the wrong audience, like the pastor who from the pulpit exhorts the people to go to church. But we do ask our readers, first, to appeal to those in our ranks who do not read these pages—to emphasize at conventions and other W. C. T. U. gatherings, the importance, the necessity, of a close acquaintance with the official organ; and, second, to see that their own subscriptions are promptly renewed.

To adopt the aphorism of a certain radical journal, the white ribboner who does not take THE UNION SIGNAL does not know how to take the W. C. T. U. It is the non-subscribing member who imagines that the anti-canteen law does away with the entire post exchange; who blames Mother National for this, that and the other thing. The woman who "belongs" because she really wants to help in the battle of the home against the saloon, never refuses to take THE UNION SIGNAL when she finds that it helps her to help. Such a woman does not subscribe in order to "support" the paper; she subscribes that she herself may derive support and inspiration for the work she has undertaken to do.

A Tribute to Our National President.

By Eva Kilbreth Foster.

IT was the great and good Phillips Brooks who bade his fellow-sufferers: "Hurry across the lowlands, that you may spend more time on the mountain," and it was a great and good woman, Lillian M. N. Stevens, who took her fellow-sufferers by the hand in an hour of sorest trial and sorest need and led them "across the lowlands," up and up and up to the noble heights of a noble victory—a victory over Death.

The sweetness and simplicity of a child, the strength and dignity of a woman, all are crowded into the words of Mrs. Stevens, spoken in the first hour of her leadership, when gently and tenderly she lifted the implements of office just laid down by Frances Willard's master hand: "Did I not believe she still lives I could not stand here." And the same faith which helped her to "stand" in that hour, makes her a mighty leader today.

It is no perfunctory greeting which the white ribboners of America offer their National President on this occasion. However faulty the utterance of tongue or pen, the hearts of her people beat with a love and loyalty that know no wavering.

Nobly and unfalteringly, this mighty leader of a mighty organization keeps on her way, undaunted by the sleet and the drifts encountered as she journeys along—the cold sleet of corrupt legislation and the heavy drifts of the many opposing forces.

With its tent-ropes ever widening, its tent-pegs ever more firmly intrenched in old and new soil, the Woman's Christian Temperance Union may well hail its chief on her natal day, may well count the first of March a Red Letter Day in white ribbon annals. Long may she live to lead us!

Newton Centre, Mass.

Prohibition Rally Day.

(Continued from page 9.)

constantly violated, liquor is sold to minors and to drunkards, and in many establishments liquor is drunk on the premises."

In view of all this it is not strange that some well-meaning people who a few months ago advocated the dispensary system are changing their minds somewhat. They recognize the force of the argument of temperance people that the municipality or the state should not be profit-sharers in the liquor business, and they now advocate using the profit from the sale of liquor for inebriates' homes, for places of recreation and amusement. This is a distinction without much of a difference. As a rule the town or the state has to care for a large share of the inebriates and in many places for their poverty-stricken families. It may sound well to some people to talk of using profit made from the sale of strong drink to provide places of amusement and recreation, but no self-respecting, well-informed man or woman would care to patronize places of amusement or recreation supported in such a way, at such a price.

One of the arguments being presented to the people of Vermont in the Battell bill in favor of a dispensary is the "financial results," stated as follows: "The profits of the sale of liquors are very great. A low estimate of these profits for Great Britain and Ireland, and also in the United States, based upon the known sales, gives about $3 per capita. Supposing these sales to be reduced by one-third by the state control system, there remains a profit of $1 per capita." The unreasonableness of presenting such a proposition, especially to a prohibition state, may be seen at a glance. In the state of Maine the entire revenue, according to the internal revenue reports of the general government, derived from the liquor traffic in Maine is only 4 cents per capita. Could any sane person who desires the promotion of the welfare of the people propose to substitute for the prohibitory law a system which in addition to carrying on the necessary expense attending places, however economically run, where liquor would be sold, would leave a profit of $1 per capita? The unreasonableness of such a statement is apparent, and yet, strange to say, there are some who are befogged and misled by just such statements which are being sent out in many ways, in various forms.

It may be easy for a liquor seller to make "an eight cent profit on a ten cent drink," but it will be impossible for the advocate of the state control system or for anybody else to find a way to make a one dollar profit out of four cents' income.

Even as all forms of license in the past have proved ineffectual as temperance measures, so all of those now being proposed with a new setting will prove quite as unsatisfactory. To those who desire the overthrow of the liquor traffic, the prohibition of the sale for beverage purposes of that which causes so much misery and crime is the only reasonable and sane method of dealing with this great question.

9. Address, "Our National President's Work for the Prohibitory Law of Maine."

As the observance of our Red Letter Day, March 1st, the birthday of Mrs. Stevens, is largely one of deeds in securing new subscriptions for our official organ, of which she is editor-in-chief, it is fitting in connection with the commemoration of Neal Dow's birthday, during the same month, to speak of the magnificent work our National President is doing for the maintenance of the prohibitory law of her native state, as well as her efforts in past years as a co-worker with Neal Dow.

For twenty-six years Mrs. Stevens has been president of the Maine Woman's Christian Temperance Union, and has done incalculable service on behalf of our two great principles, total abstinence and prohibition. Gen. Neal Dow and Mrs. Stevens were close counselors, and in Mr. Dow's later years Mrs. Stevens became his chief co-adjutor, conferring with him two and three times each week in regard to state and local work. When General Dow knew that his earthly work would soon be ended he turned to Mrs. Stevens as the one on whom he could most safely depend to carry forward the agitation and education necessary for the continuance and enforcement of the prohibitory law. Mrs. Stevens' unremitting fidelity to the best interests of her own state and her wise direction of the W. C. T. U. forces there, while carrying the heavy burden of duties as President of the National W. C. T. U., are beyond all praise.

Neal Dow said: "The Woman's Christian Temperance Union is today the largest, best organized and most influential temperance society in the country. It has attained this position by brains, conscience, true, persistent and sympathetic work. The temperance cause in all its departments is its only field of labor, and to this it devotes all its thoughts and energy. From a very small beginning the union has been brought up in a few years to its present commanding position in this country, only by the wisdom, prudence, singular devotedness and persistent work of the women who lead in its great endeavor to protect wives, mothers, children and homes from the brutal, murderous warfare upon them by the saloons."

10. Singing, "America."
11. Benediction.

Notes.

Decorate the platform with flags and a photograph of Neal Dow, and use evergreen boughs as a symbol of the Pine Tree State.

Enlist the ministers and the young people of the various church societies to co-operate in the meeting.

Give literature to those who attend the meetings. Nothing could be better than Mrs. Stevens' "Reply to Messrs. Rowntree and Sherwell Concerning Portland." Send to W. T. P. A. for this leaflet. 5 cents each, $3 per hunderd.

President's Letter.

My Dear Comrades:—We are glad to announce definitely the time and place of our next National convention—Cincinnati, Ohio, November 13-18, 1903.

Some weeks ago the Cincinnati papers stated that we were to meet in Cincinnati, mentioning that we planned to make a little pilgrimage to Hillsboro. Upon reading this statement Mrs. Thompson wrote to ask us what it all meant, for we had decided that it was best not to say anything to her of our plan until we were perfectly sure Cincinnati unions could provide a suitable building, and of this we were not assured until today. Mrs. Thompson is deeply touched by our plan to round out our third decade by holding our Convention as near to Hillsboro as possible. She is very fragile, and feels that there is great uncertainty about her staying here much longer, but she wants us all to come to Hillsboro to see the place, the church, the Memorial room, and her home. We fervently pray that we may see her also. We believe that we shall, and that we shall with grateful reverence walk the streets of Hillsboro, hold a service in the Presbyterian church, and in the Memorial room sing together, "Give to the Winds Thy Fears."

Plans are maturing for the World's Convention to meet at Geneva, June 9-12. An executive meeting will be held on the 9th, when important amendments to the Constitution will probably be adopted, to go into effect immediately or during the entire Convention. The effect of one of these amendments, which will undoubtedly carry, will be to do in the Convention the business which has heretofore been largely done in the executive committee. I earnestly hope that a large number of delegates will go from the United States. The present indications are that this will be so.

We are gladdened by reports from Lady Henry Somerset indicating that she is recovering from the severe illness that came upon her soon after her return from America. Today we have a cable from her regarding Vermont; and she, in common with every true, well-informed temperance person, regrets the defeat of prohibition in that state; but I feel even more confident than I did a week ago that so small a majority as 729 will not finally settle the matter for Vermont. I am sure it will not if the temperance people of the state do their best. We are pleased to read today an editorial in one of the leading daily papers, not outspoken for prohibition, that "It is not safe yet to reckon Vermont as one of the states that has gone over permanently to license."

The liquor fraternity is true to resolutions passed during the year at the Liquor Manufacturers and Liquor Dealers' conventions, and are, accordingly, doing everything possible through money and falsehood to secure the repeal of prohibition in Maine, New Hampshire, North Dakota and Kansas, and to prevent its spread in other states. There is one statement sent out by the liquor element which we are confident is correct: that the sentiment in favor of prohibition is fast increasing. Because they know this they are unusually alert. They are, of course, doing their best to break down prohibition everywhere, especially in Maine, but they will not succeed; and because we now hear so much about what a few clergymen (and, comparatively, they are very few) say against the prohibitory law, it should not be construed as a discouraging note. It is deplorable that the utterances of any preacher should be gleefully quoted in the papers published by the liquor advocates, and that several hundred copies of a paper which published an anti-prohibition sermon should be purchased by a liquor seller and by him sent to the members of the legislature where the question of prohibition against license was pending.

In the progress of every great reform there have always been a few who were gifted and brilliant and who, in the main, stood for the advancement of truth but acted as obstructionists in the progress of reform, and thus joined hands with the enemy. The temperance reform is no exception, and we have no cause for discouragement.

In the beginning of the resubmission campaign here in Maine there were some honest temperance men who believed that it would be well to give the voters of Maine an opportunity to again reaffirm their belief in the prohibitory law, but their numbers are growing fewer and they are joining the anti-resubmissionists, for the reason given by Charles Dunn, Jr., Samuel F. Pearson's successor as High Sheriff of Cumberland county. Mr. Dunn recently said that six months ago he thought perhaps the agitation and education of resubmission would be a good thing for the temperance cause, but he was obliged to change his mind when he saw the law-breaking, law-defying and altogether the worst element of society clamoring for resubmission; he said he did not wish to train in that company. Some day there will be a combination of clearness of vision and honesty of purpose, a desire to promote that which is highest and best, and then our cause will go more rapidly forward towards the victory which is sure to come.

Truly and affectionately yours,

Portland, Maine, Feb. 23, 1903.

Monthly Bible Reading.

TOPIC: Stewards, or Thieves?

By Rev. Frances E. Townsley.

WHAT IS STEWARDSHIP? I. COR. IV: 2.

We make the idea of stewardship so broad and general as often to destroy its very purpose. We say we are "all consecrated to God," that "All we have is His," and then we absolutely do as we please with most of our time, strength and money.

"Will a man rob God?" (Malachi 3:8.) Certainly, and a woman, too. How? "In tithes and offerings." If you do not feel the obligation of tithing, you certainly cannot evade that of stewardship, and as a steward is "one entrusted with another's goods or estate to use for that other," you certainly must accept three facts:

1. A steward must be regular in carrying out his obligations.

A good steward must not return profits to the owner simply when he feels like it, nor in as large or small a degree as he chooses.

System and proportion are absolutely required of a steward, but alas for the churches who wait till stirred up by an agent to return to God his own, for any benevolent cause! Alas for the local union which only pays dues when visited and revisited, scolded and re-scolded by some wornout treasurer!

II. or., 9:5. (R. V.) Paul asks that "the same might be ready, as a matter of bounty and not of extortion." So Paul plans system.

I. Cor., 16:1-2. A regular time to offer, and next the right proportion in offering. "As God has prospered him," is the New Testament rule, and, be sure, with some that means more than one-tenth of net income. For next, a steward must account to his employer for the use of all entrusted to him. A Christian steward must be a correct book-keeper. Retaining what he needs, he must return all other profits.

I knew a lovely young woman who, having no room-rent to pay, gives to her Lord's Box one-third of every dollar earned as a music teacher. I know pastors who hand back to God's cause in different departments one-fourth of their salaries. I know working men with large families who can give only one-tenth of their wages to God, but all are happy in doing "as they are prospered." There is hardly any other gladness, after conversion, equal to that of systematic beneficence, save the joy of winning a soul to Christ. I firmly believe that, as a rule, temporal prosperity follows.

At length we have not to set aside a small part of our income to God, but to take out what we must have for our own needs, and, making a list of our un-necessaries, we hand over to our Lord with joy the amount of their money value.

So it is easy to see how a stenographer sets aside from her earnings enough to preach the gospel, through a substitute, to 1,000 souls in a distant land. So a school-teacher, out of a salary of $1,000 sends $500 to a far-away worker, using the other $500 for himself and the cause nearer home.

Two friends of mine are supporting from small incomes a Bible-woman in India, and a Sunday school class is working by proxy in the Philippines. Ah! they were loyal Chinese converts who, being reproved for sending so much to a needy province, answered, "We can live on rats, but they cannot live without the Gospel."

It is many a person's duty to make money honestly for God. Deut. 8:18, "He it is that giveth thee power to get wealth." Spiritual enlargement comes just as surely in response to temporal benevolence. Starving spiritually, many a one needs only to open his pocket-book as unto the Lord, to realize that the Christian who opens the broadest outlet, in proportion to his means, for beneficence, secures the widest entrance-way for the Holy Spirit which he ever knew.

Chicago.

We are always wanting to be doing, to be giving, to be planning for the future, to be mapping out all our life; instead of resting and receiving day by day, leaving the morrow to our God, and rejoicing in Jesus Christ amidst all our falls and failures. Instead of going on rejoicing in Jesus, we are tempted to despond, and to go on desponding, after every failure, negligence and sin.—George H. Wilkinson.

OFFICIAL COMMUNICATIONS

REST COTTAGE. THE WILLARD.

GENERAL OFFICERS:

President,
MRS. LILLIAN M. N. STEVENS, Portland, Me.
Vice-President-at-Large,
MISS ANNA A. GORDON, Evanston, Ill.
Corresponding Secretary,
MRS. SUSANNA M. D. FRY, Evanston, Ill.
Recording Secretary,
MRS. CLARA C. HOFFMAN, Kansas City, Mo.
Asst. Recording Secretary,
MRS. FRANCES E. BEAUCHAMP, Lexington, Ky.
Treasurer,
MRS. HELEN M. BARKER, Evanston, Ill.

Headquarters National W. C. T. U., Evanston, Ill.

Organizers.

DEAR COMRADES:—From our wonderful convention at Portland I came to Boston and spent a few delightful hours in the home of our old friend, Mrs. Clara C. Chapin, and had the pleasure of having a visit with Mrs. Fry also, who was spending a few days there. Then on to Westchester county, New York, where I remained two weeks, addressing public meetings and organizing two W's and one Y. I found the union at Yonkers carrying on a coffee house, one of the very few that have proved a financial success. They have in connection with it a fine reading room and a nice public hall, in which they hold their meetings. Besides providing a temperance restaurant and reading room, they clear about one thousand dollars each year for their work.

As our state convention immediately preceded the National, I was very weary when I had finished the work in this county, and having taken a severe cold, rejoiced that my next point was my native town for a week's rest with friends, but alas, for the hopes of an organizer! Upon my arrival at 7 p. m., my friends met me at the train, saying, "Our union has arranged a parlor meeting to-night and advertised you to speak." Of course, there was nothing else to do but to hasten to the home of the hostess and make a hurried toilet for the evening. With the consolation of helping those faithful women and adding a few new members I was sustained and glad that His strength is sufficient for us when we put our trust in Him.

After reaching home I prepared the literature for my Purity department, gave a parliamentary drill in our city union, spoke in one of the Sunday-schools on World's Temperance Sunday, securing a large number of pledges, and made ready for an organizing trip in Seneca county, New York. During my two weeks there I spoke at twenty meetings, organized three new unions and secured 109 active and honorary members. I have spent the last two months with my family, but have not been idle. Aside from a two weeks' illness I have been at my desk, speaking in our city churches, at parlor meetings, conducting parliamentary drills in the Senior L. T. L.'s, and in various ways trying to help the local work.

I expect to begin Institute work in this state in April. This is the first year that New York has, to any great extent, carried on this work, but these meetings have been remarkably successful and have interested the outside public much more than our conventions have ever done. Our state president, who is conducting many of them, is greatly encouraged by the results. In nearly every county these two-day Institutes are taking the place of the winter convention, and two speakers go together, taking them in line, so as to reduce expenses. I would certainly recommend the Institutes in every state.

From March 1 to April 8 I can accept engagements wherever most needed. I am now hoping, God willing, to attend the World's Convention, but expect to be at my post in Chautauqua W. C. T. U. headquarters by July 4, and shall be glad to greet any of our white-ribboners and aid them in their work as best I can. If any wish to secure good but inexpensive board, I will gladly give them all the information in my power. I believe there is no place where one can spend a more delightful and helpful vacation at a reasonable price. Hoping to meet many of you there, I am sincerely yours for the upbuilding of our beloved organization.

HELEN L. BULLOCK.

Elmira, N. Y.

Superintendents.

Scientific Temperance Instruction.

"TOO bad we have lost Vermont," the temperance people are saying to each other all over the country.

"The real reason for that majority against prohibition is the love of liquor," said a gentleman, a close observer, who had spoken several times against license in that state during the late campaign.

How does it happen that the people of Vermont, the first state to enact a Scientific Temperance Instruction law had not learned better than to vote for liquor? I am asked.

It is true that Vermont, in 1882, passed the first law ever enacted requiring the public school study of the nature and effects of alcoholic drinks and other narcotics as a part of physiology and hygiene, but it was a very weak law, which practically resulted in putting the study into the high schools only, thus reaching a mere fraction of the pupils, the voters of to-day.

Four years later the Woman's Christian Temperance Union of that state, led by their president, Mrs. A. J. Perkins, realizing that the scientific temperance education of only about five per cent of the coming voters (the number reached by the high schools) would not educate a majority of Vermont's future voters to personal prohibition and thus strengthen legal prohibition in that state, petitioned for and secured, in 1886, a stronger Scientific Temperance Instruction law. This new law required the branch in question to be taught orally to all pupils unable to read, and with graded textbooks in the hands of all pupils who had books in other subjects, with a penalty for non-enforcement.

The same forces, that were then and always have been working against Vermont's prohibitory law, opposed with utmost venom the passage of this strong temperance education law. The opponents evidently foresaw that it meant prohibition for the state forever. Nevertheless, the law passed.

Two years later the defeat of this measure, which open opposition could not accomplish, was secured through accident, mistake, or ————. The legislative bill for the consolidation of the school laws of the state, through mistake or otherwise failing to enumerate the new Scientific Temperance Instruction law with those to be retained with the other codified laws, at the end of the bill specially cited the number of this new law as one of those which "are hereby repealed." Not a member of the legislature heard from nor the governor who signed the bill knew that the new temperance education law was thus repealed until months after, so it was said.

The next legislature restored the first old law, with no requirements of the study in the lower grades, of textbooks for pupils' use, and no penalty for non-enforcement. The sequel to all this recorded itself on the ballots that were cast on February 3, 1903, which made the Green Mountain State a commonwealth that gives its towns and cities the right, if they so choose, to make "a covenant with sin and death in licensing the sale of the greatest of all causes of degeneracy and crime."

Blackstone says, "Law is embodied sentiment." Prohibitory law is embodied sentiment against alcohol. Such sentiment must be made by education before it can be embodied into statutes, and when once secured, if prohibitory statutes are to be perpetuated, the same sentiment must be maintained by education that will teach each succeeding generation coming upon the stage of action that alcohol is by nature an outlaw that should be outlawed. The stream will not rise higher than its source. The chief source for anti-alcohol sentiment in the twentieth century is the schoolhouse. The states that year after year are teaching as a progressive study all their public school children, especially in the lower grades, where alone the largest class can be reached, the physiological reasons for obeying the laws of health, including those that teach total abstinence from alcoholic drinks and other narcotics, are, other things being equal, the nearest to the overthrow of the awful dominion of alcohol within their borders.

MARY H. HUNT.

23 Trull street, Boston, Mass.

Health and Heredity.

NOTE.—The following is from the report of this department for 1902. The National Superintendent trusts that the Practical Hints, and New Hampshire object lesson, may be of value as supplementary to the March, 1902, Responsive Reading—a Plan of Work with programs, etc., in this department.

PROGRESS in this department is written everywhere. Every report received and every communication is significant of the growing interest. We not only live better—i. e., healthier (statistics show that)—but we live longer. The United States census shows an increase in population from decade to decade; the medium age in 1899 was 21.8, in 1900, 22.8, and all because of the rapid progress in medical and sanitary science. The change is so marked that the close of the old century and the beginning of the new reaches the dimensions of a health epoch.

Practical Hints.

